This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

Digitized by Google

University of Michigan-Flint Library
4 9015 00289 1126

Non-Circulating

PROPERTY OF
University of Michigan
Libraries
1817
PRINT

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

231, 232, 233, 234, U. S.

BOOK 58,

LAWYERS' EDITION,

CITED "LAW. ED."

COMPLETE WITH HEAD LINES, HEAD NOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOT NOTES AND PARALLEL REFERENCES.

BY

THE PUBLISHERS' EDITORIAL STAFF

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.
1926.

Digitized by Google

COPYRIGHT © 1913 BY
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.

Digitized by Google

JUSTICES

OF THE

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,

HON. EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. JOSEPH MCKENNA,
HON. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
HON. WILLIAM R. DAY,
HON. HORACE H. LURTON,
HON. CHARLES EVANS HUGHES,
HON. WILLIS VAN DEVANTER,
HON. JOSEPH RUCKER LAMAR,
HON. MAHLON PITNEY.

ATTORNEY GENERAL,

HON. JAMES CLARK MCREYNOLDS.

SOLICITOR GENERAL,

HON. WILLIAM MARSHALL BULLITT.
HON. JOHN W. DAVIS.[1]

CLERK,

JAMES HALL MCKENNEY, ESQ.[2]
JAMES D. MAHER, ESQ.[3]

REPORTER,

HON. CHARLES HENRY BUTLER.

MARSHAL,

JOHN MONTGOMERY WRIGHT, ESQ.

[1] Commission ordered recorded October 13, 1913.
[2] Died October 13, 1913.
[3] Appointed October 20, 1913.

Digitized by Google

ALLOTMENT, ETC., OF THE

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

March 18, 1912.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

For Order of Court Making Allotment, see 56 L. ed. Appendix XL., p. 1208.

Names of Justices, and Whence Appointed.	By Whom Appointed.	Circuits. 1902–1903.	Commissioned.	Sworn in.
Associate Justice OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President Roosevelt.	First. Me., N. H., Mass., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
Associate Justice CHARLES E. HUGHES, New York.	President Taft.	Second. Vermont, Conn., New York.	1910. (May 2.)	1910. (Oct. 10.)
Associate Justice MAHLON PITNEY, New Jersey.	President Taft.	Third. New Jersey, Pa., Del.	1912. (Mar. 13.)	1912. (Mar. 18.)
Chief Justice EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President Taft.	Fourth. Md., Va., N. C., W. Va., S. C.	1910. (Dec. 12.)	1910. (Dec. 19.)
Associate Justice JOSEPH R. LAMAR, Georgia.	President Taft.	Fifth. Ga., Ala., Fla., Miss., La., Tex.	1910. (Dec. 17.)	1911. (Jan. 3.)
Associate Justice WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President Roosevelt.	Sixth. Ky., Tenn., Ohio, Mich.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
Associate Justice HORACE H. LURTON, Tennessee.	President Taft.	Seventh. Ind., Ill., Wis.	1909. (Dec. 20.)	1910. (Jan. 3.)
Associate Justice WILLIS VAN DEVANTER, Wyoming.	President Taft.	Eighth. Minn., Iowa, Mo., Kan., Ark., Neb., Colo., N. D., S. D., Utah, Wyo., Oklahoma, New Mex.	1910. (Dec. 16.)	1911. (Jan. 3.)
Associate Justice JOSEPH McKENNA, California.	President McKinley.	Ninth. Cal., Or., Nev., Mont., Wash., Idaho, Alaska,* Arizona, Hawaii.*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

Digitized by Google

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 231, 232, 233, 234.

A.

Abril v. Sucrerie Centrale Coloso (Mem.) (231 U. S. 768) 473
Adams, Singer Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.)
Adams Exp. Co. v. Mellichamp (Mem.) (232 U. S. 730) 818
v. New York. See BARRETT v. NEW YORK.
v. Solomon (Mem.) (231 U. S. 758) 469
v. Windolph use of Weiner (Mem.) (234 U. S. 768) 1583
Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Moore (231 U. S. 543) 356
Aiton v. Board of Medical Examiners (Mem.) (232 U. S. 733) 819
Alabama v. Schmidt (232 U. S. 168) 555
Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Morris (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) 1582
Albers Commission Co. See C. H. ALBERS COMMISSION CO.
Alder v. Edenborn (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745) 463
Alexander, Barnes v.
Allegar v. American Car & Foundry Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 747) 464
Allen v. Oliver (Mem.) (232 U. S. 728) 817
Allen & Wheeler Co. v. Hanover Star Milling Co. (Mem.) 1584
Alzua v. Johnson (231 U. S. 106) .. 142
American Baptist Home Mission Soc., Garrett v. (Mem.)
American Bell Teleph. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 753) 467
American Car & Foundry Co., Allegar v. (Mem.)
American Ice Co. v. Porreca (Mem.) (234 U. S. 760) 1580
American Iron & Steel Mfg. Co. v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. (233 U. S. 261) 949
American Nat. Bank v. Still (Mem.) (232 U. S. 723) 815
American Publishers Asso., Straus v.
American Tie & Timber Co., Texas & P. R. Co. v.
American Woolen Co., Ludvigh v.
Amoskeag Sav. Bank, New York ex rel., v. Purdy (231 U. S. 373) 274
Amoskeag Sav. Bank v. Purdy. See NEW YORK ex rel. AMOSKEAG SAV. BANK v. PURDY.
Anderson, Kansas City S. R. Co. v.
v. Moyer (Mem.) (231 U. S. 734) 459
Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. (Mem.)
Sands v. (Mem.)
Taylor v.
Antikamnia Chemical Co., United States v.
Apapas v. United States (233 U. S. 587) 1104
Archer v. Greenville Sand & Gravel Co. (233 U. S. 60) 850
v. Imperial Machine Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 754) 467
Arizona ex rel. Gaines v. Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. (233 U. S. 87) 863
Arizona & C. R. Co., Denver & R. G. R. Co. v.
Armstrong Cork Co., Camden v. (Mem.)
Arnold, Bartlett v. (Mem.)
Arnott v. Southern R. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 717) 812
Arsuaga, Van Syckel v.
Assets Collecting Co., Ex parte (Mem.) (231 U. S. 734) 459
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v.
v. Louisiana & P. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
v. Mansfield R. & Transp. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
v. Moore (233 U. S. 182) 906
v. Robinson (233 U. S. 173) 901

Digitized by Google

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Star Grain & Lumber Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 762 .. 471
v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 736) 460
v. United States (232 U. S. 199) 568
United States v.
v. Victoria, F. & W. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
v. Woodworth & L. C. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Georgia (234 U. S. 280) 1312
v. Goldsboro (232 U. S. 548) 721
v. Miller (Mem.) (231 U. S. 741) 462
Atlantic Transport Co. v. Imbrovek (234 U. S. 52) 1208
v. Maryland use of Szczesek (234 U. S. 63) 1213
Atlas Mfg. Co., Street & Smith v. (Mem.)
Street & Smith v.
Attorney General, Missouri ex rel., International Harvester Co. v.
Aurora v. Gates (Mem.) (232 U. S. 722) 814
v. Wilder (Mem.) (232 U. S. 722) 814
Axman, United States v.

B.

Baccus v. Louisiana (232 U. S. 334) 627
Backus, Choy Gum v. (Mem.)
Dupuis v. (Mem.)
Leong Toe v. (Mem.)
Marequa v. (Mem.)
Bacon v. Rutland R. Co. (232 U. S. 134) 538
Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. (233 U. S. 479) 1055
Baetz v. Schoenlau-Kuckkuck Trunk Top & Veneer Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 746) 464
Baker v. Warner (231 U. S. 588) .. 384
Baltic Min. Co. v. Massachusetts (231 U. S. 68) 127
Baltimore & O. R. Co., United States v.
Banca Territorial y Agricola, Ex parte (Mem.) (231 U. S. 740) 462
Bank, American Nat., v. Still (Mem.) (232 U. S. 723) 815
Amoskeag Sav., New York ex rel., v. Purdy (231 U. S. 373) 274
Century Sav., Moody v. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725) 816
Clement Nat., v. Vermont (231 U. S. 120) 147
Bank, Crawfordsville State, Springstead v. (231 U. S. 541) 354
Farmers & M. Sav., v. Minnesota (232 U. S. 516) 706
First Nat., v. Fox (Mem.) (231 U. S. 751) 466
First Nat., United States v. (234 U. S. 245) 1298
Mechanics & M. Nat., v. Ernst (231 U. S. 60) 121
National City, Hotchkiss v. (231 U. S. 50) 115
National City, v. Hotchkiss (231 U. S. 50) 115
National, Kershaw Oil Mill v. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725 816
Penn Nat., Taney v. (232 U. S. 174) 558
Ravenna Nat., Citizens Bkg. Co. v. (234 U. S. 360) .. 1352
Bank & T. Co., Germania Sav., Loeb v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 761) 470
Bank of Arizona v. Thomas Haverty Co. (232 U. S. 106) 526
Bank of Commerce, Schmidt & Story v.
Barnes v. Alexander (232 U. S. 117) 530
Barrett, New York v.
v. New York (232 U. S. 14) .. 483
Bartlett v. Arnold (Mem.) (232 U. S. 736) 820
Beach Front Hotel Co. v. Sooy (Mem.) (234 U. S. 755) 1578
Beatty, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
United States v.
Beauchamp, Sturges & B. Mfg. Co. v.
Beaumont Rice Mills v. Port Arthur Rice Milling Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 731) 818
Beddow v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 759) 470
Behrens, Illinois C. R. Co. v.
Belt Line R. Co. v. Montgomery (Mem.) (232 U. S. 733) .. 819
Bennett, Southern R. Co.—Carolina Division v.
United States v.
Benson, United States v.
Bergere, Chavez v.
Bicknell, Herbert v.
Billings, United States v.
v. United States (232 U. S. 289) 608
v. United States (232 U. S. 261) 596
Birdsall, United States v.
Birge Forbes Co. v. Heye (Mem.) (234 U. S. 759) 1580
Blackstone v. Everybody's Store (Mem.) (231 U. S. 752) .. 467

Digitized by Google

Blackwell v. Newkirk (Mem.) (232 U. S. 718) 813
Blanco v. Fernandez y Perez (Mem.) (231 U. S. 762) 470
Bleached Flour Case. See UNITED STATES v. LEXINGTON MILL & ELEVATOR CO.
Blick, Cockins v. (Mem.)
Bliss v. Washoe Copper Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 764) 471
Bluefields S. S. Co. v. Steele (Mem.) (232 U. S. 735) 820
Board of Chosen Freeholders, Port Richmond & B. P. Ferry Co. v.
Board of Directors St. Francis Levee Dist., Chapman & D. Lumber Co. v.
Board of Medical Examiners, Aiton v. (Mem.)
Board of Trustees, Priest v.
Boarts v. J. M. Selden & Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 766) 472
Bolens, Wisconsin ex rel., v. Frear (231 U. S. 616) 400
Bonynge, Lake v. (Mem.)
Booth Fisheries Co. v. Illinois (Mem.) (231 U. S. 763) 471
Boston, Paris & G. N. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Boston & M. R. Co. v. Hooker (233 U. S. 97) 868
Botsford v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 763) 1581
Bowe v. Scott (233 U. S. 658) 1141
Bowling v. United States (233 U. S. 528) 1080
Brents, United States v.
Brewer, Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v.
Brickell, Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v.
Brown v. Fletcher (Mem.) (231 U. S. 752) 466
v. Holtz (Mem.) (231 U. S. 760) 470
National Counsel J. O. U. A. M. v. (Mem.)
United States ex rel., v. Lane (232 U. S. 598) 748
Western U. Teleg. Co. v.
Browning v. Waycross (233 U. S. 16) 828
Brown Shoe Co. v. Hume (Mem.) (234 U. S. 767) 1583
Buchanan, United States v.
Buchser, Buchser v.
v. Buchser (231 U. S. 157).. 166
Buffalo Pitts Co., United States v.
Bulger, Prenica v. (Mem.)
Bullowa v. Thurston (Mem.) (234 U. S. 756) 1578
Burbank v. Ernst (232 U. S. 162) 551
Burho, Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Burke v. Southern Pacific R. Co. (234 U. S. 669) 1527
Burr, Hull v.
Buskirk, King v. (Mem.)
Butler County R. Co., United States v.
Butler, W. S., & Co. See PALMENBERG v. W. S. BUTLER & CO.

C.

Cade, Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v.
Cadillac Motor Car Co. v. Ray (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745).. 464
Cain v. Commercial Pub. Co. (232 U. S. 124) 534
Calaf y Fugurul v. Calaf y Rivera (232 U. S. 371) 642
Calaf y Rivera, Calef y Fugurul v.
Caldentey, Piza Hermanos S. en C. v.
Caldwell & Drake v. Jobe (Mem.) (232 U. S. 729) 817
Camacho, Gomez v. (Mem.)
Camden v. Armstrong Cork Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725) .. 816
Cameron v. United States (231 U. S. 710) 448
Campagnie Générale Transatlantique v. Rivers (Mem.) (232 U. S. 727) 817
Capo, Ex parte (Mem.) (231 U. S. 739) 461
Carborundum Co. v. Electric Smelting & Aluminum Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 754) 467
Carlesi v. New York (233 U. S. 51) 843
Carlson v. Washington ex rel. Curtiss 234 U. S. 103 1237
Carlton, Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. (Mem.)
Carolina Division, Southern R. Co. See SOUTHERN R. CO.—CAROLINA DIVISION v. BENNETT.
Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. Louisiana (233 U. S. 362) 1001
Carroll, Mitchell Store Bldg. Co. v.
Carter, United States v.
Cedar Rapids, Majestic Theater Co. v. (Mem.)
Central R. Co. of N. J., Young v.
Central Trust Co., Havana C. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Century Sav. Bank, Moody v. (Mem.)
C. H. Albers Commission Co. v. Spencer (Mem.) (232 U. S. 719) 813
Chamberlain, Lewiston v. (Mem.)
Chapman & D. Lumber Co. v. Board of Directors St. Francis Levee Dist. (234 U. S. 667) 1526
v. St. Francis Levee Dist. (232 U. S. 186) 564
Charleston & W. C. R. Co. v. Thompson (234 U. S. 576) 1476

Digitized by Google

Charlton Hall, The, E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Powder Co. v. (Mem.)
Chaumet, de Bearn v. (Mem.)
Chavez v. Bergere. See CHAVEZ v. DE BERGERE.
v. De Bergere (231 U. S. 482) 325
v. Luna De Bergere. See CHAVEZ v. DE BERGERE.
Cherokee Tanning Extract Co. v. Leonard (Mem.) (231 U. S. 748) 405
Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Cockrell (232 U. S. 146) 544
Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Union Lime Co. v.
Chicago Hotel Co., Easton v. (Mem.)
Chicago House Wrecking Co., St. Louis v. (Mem.)
Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Iowa (233 U. S. 334) 988
v. Kennedy (232 U. S. 626) .. 762
Le Roy Fibre Co. v.
v. Minneapolis (232 U. S. 430) 671
v. Polt (232 U. S. 165) 554
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Beatty (Mem.) (234 U. S. 753) 1577
v. Cramer (232 U. S. 490) .. 697
v. Pine Tree Lumber Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 748).. 1575
Chillicothe, City Water Co. v. (Mem.)
Chino Lee v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 735) 459
Choy Gum v. Backus (Mem.) (232 U. S. 735) 819
Cincinnati, N. R. Co. v. Dillon (Mem.) (234 U. S. 753) 1578
Citizens Bkg. Co. v. Ravenna Nat. Bank (234 U. S. 360) .. 1352
City Water Co. v. Chillicothe (Mem.) (231 U. S. 753) 467
Clement Nat. Bank v. Vermont (231 U. S. 120) 147
Cleveland Grain Co., Taylor v. (Mem.)
Clinchfield Coal Corp. v. Maness (Mem.) (234 U. S. 748).. 1575
Coal & Coke R. Co., Nease v. (Mem.)
Coal & Iron R. Co., Reherd v. (Mem.)
Cobian v. Larrinaga. See VALDES v. LARRINAGA.
Cockins v. Blick (Mem.) (231 U. S. 744) 463
Cockrell, Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v.
Coffin, Perkins v. (Mem.)
Cohen, Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v.
Collins v. Kentucky (234 U. S. 634).. 1510
v. Scharff. See KINDER v. SCHARFF.
Colman, Field v. (Mem.)
Colorado & S. R. Co. v. State Railroad Commission (Mem.) (234 U. S. 767) 1583
Comfort, Waldin v. (Mem.)
Commercial Pub. Co., Cain v.
Connelley v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 764).. 472
Connolley v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 752) .. 466
Continental L. Ins. & Invest. Co. v. Hattabaugh (Mem.) (234 U. S. 765) 1582
Copper Belle Min. Co., Paine v.
Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co., Arizona ex rel. Gaines v.
Cordova Copper Co., Van Dyke v.
Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Phœnix Constr. Co. (233 U. S. 593) 1107 Craig v. Jarrett (Mem.) (234 U. S. 752) 1577
v. Parish (Mem.) (231 U. S. 754 467
Cramer, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v.
Parker-Washington Co. v. (Mem.)
Crawfordsville State Bank, Springstead v.
Creamer, Marietta, C. & C. R. Co. v.
Creamery Package Mfg. Co. v. Minnesota (Mem.) (231 U. S. 764) 471
Crockett, Southern R. Co. v.
Croom, Pullman Co. v.
Cross v. Gray's Harbor Boom Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 764). 471
Cudahy Packing Co. v. Grand Trunk W. R. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 764)..... 1582
Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co., Louisville v.
Cunningham v. Louisiana (Mem.) (232 U. S. 734) 819
Curriden v. Middleton (232 U. S. 633) 765
Curtis, Stead v. (Mem.) .....
Curtiss, Washington ex rel., Carlson v.

D.

Dale v. Pattison (234 U. S. 399) 1370
Daniels, United States ex rel. Goldberg v.
Darsey v. Georgia (Mem.) 231 U. S. 741) 462
Davey v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 747) 464
Davids, Thaddeus Davids Co. v.
Davidson Steamship Co. v. Western Transit Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 764) 1582
Davis, Logan v.
United States v.
Day, Ross v.
de Bearn v. Chaumet (Mem.) (231 U. S. 741) 462
v. de Bearn (Mem.) (231 U. S. 741) 462
v. Safe Deposit & T. Co. (233 U. S. 24) 833

Digitized by Google

de Bearn v. Winans (Mem.) (232 U. S. 719) 813
De Bergere, Chavez v.
Deer Lodge County, New York, L. Ins. Co. v.
D. E. Foote & Co. v. Stanley (232 U. S. 494) 698
de Jesus, Villamil v. (Mem.)
Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. United States (231 U. S. 363) .. 269
Dellevie v. Fechheimer-Fishel Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 760) 1580
Dennett, Ex parte (Mem.) (234 U. S. 750) 1576
Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Arizona & C. R. Co. (233 U. S. 601) .. 1111
Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v.
Denver, L. & N. W. R. Co., Union P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
De Palma, Weinman v.
Detroit Steel Cooperage Co. v. Sistersville Brewing Co. (233 U. S. 712) 1166
Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v. United States (233 U. S. 236).. 936
Diederich, W. Schneider Wholesale Wine & Liquor Co. v.
Dillon, Cincinnati, N. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
District of Columbia v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 716) 812
Dittey, Ohio River & W. R. Co. v.
Dockendorff, Greey v.
Dowman v. Texas (231 U. S. 353) .. 264
Dulany, Morse v. (Mem.) .....
Dunne, Illinois ex rel., v. Economy Light & Power Co. (234 U. 407) 1429
Dupuis v. Backus (Mem.) (231 U. S. 762) 470
Dye, Marshall v.

E.

Earnhart v. Switzler (Mem.) (231 U. S. 766) 472
Eastern Extension, Australasia & China Teleg. Co. v. United States (231 U. S. 326) .. 250
Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Willow River Land & Irrig. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 761) 1581
Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Asso. v. United States (234 U. S. 600) 1490
Easton v. Chicago Hotel Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 738) 461
Eberle v. Michigan (232 U. S. 700) 803
Economy Light & Power Co., Illinois ex rel. Dunne v.
Edenborn, Alder v. (Mem.)
Sim v. (Mem.)
Edwards v. Fox (Mem.) (231 U. S. 751) 466
Edwards v. McCoy (Mem) (234 U. S. 767) 1583
Egan v. New Jersey (Mem.) (234 U. S. 751) 1576
E. I. Du Pont Nemours Powder Co. v. The Charlton Hall (Mem.) (232 U. S. 723) 815
Electrical Installation Co., Moore-Mansfield Constr. Co. v.
Electric Smelting & Aluminum Co., Carborundum Co. v. (Mem.)
Elkins, Heavner v. (Mem.)
El Paso Brick Co. v. McKnight (233 U. S. 250) 943
Engelhard & Sons Co., Re (231 U. S. 646) 416
Ennis, Ennis Waterworks v.
Ennis Waterworks v. Ennis (233 U. S. 652) 1139
Equitable Surety Co. v. United States use of McMillan (234 U. S. 448) 1394
Erie R. Co. v. New York (233 U. S. 671) 1149
v. Williams (233 U. S. 685) 1155
Ernst, Burbank v.
Mechanics & M. Nat. Bank v.
Evans, Ex parte (Mem.) (234 U. S. 750) 1576
Everybody's Store, Blackstone v. (Mem.)
Ex parte Assets Collecting Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 734) 459
Banco Territorial y Agricola (Mem.) (231 U. S. 740) 462
Capo (Mem.) (231 U. S. 739) 461
Dennett (Mem.) (234 U. S. 750) 1576
Evans (Mem.) (234 U. S. 750) 1576
G. & C. Merriam Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 748) 1575
Grimsinger (Mem.) (232 U. S. 721 814
Grimsinger (Mem.) (231 U. S. 743) 463
Jones (Mem.) (231 U. S. 743) 463
Roe (234 U. S. 70) 1217
Strub (Mem.) (234 U. S. 752) 1577
Veve y Diaz (Mem.)
Young, Smythe, Field Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 734) 459

F.

Fahringer v. Wisconsin (Mem.) (232 U. S. 736) 820
Farmers & M. Sav. Bank v. Minnesota (232 U. S. 516) 706
Farrugia v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (233 U. S. 352) 996
Fechheimer-Fishel Co., Dellevie v. (Mem.)
Felix, O'Sullivan v.

Digitized by Google

Fernandez y Perez, Blanco, v. (Mem.)
Field v. Colman (Mem.) (231 U. S. 747) 465
Finnes, Selover, Bates & Co. v. (Mem.)
First Nat. Bank v. Fox (Mem.) (231 U. S. 751) 466
United States v.
Fisher, United States ex rel. Grand Rapids Timber Co. v. (Mem.)
Fletcher Brown v. (Mem.)
Florida East Coast R. Co., Gallagher v. (Mem.)
v. United States (234 U. S. 167) 1267
Foley, Harrison v. (Mem.)
Foote & Co. v. Stanley. See D. E. Foote & Co. v. Stanley.
Foreign Built Yacht Tax Cases. See Billings v. United States.
Foster, United States v.
Fox, Edwards v. (Mem.)
First Nat. Bank v. (Mem.)
Foxworth, Straus v.
Franklin v. Lynch (233 U. S. 269) 954
Frear, Wisconsin ex rel. Bolens v.
French Mut. General Soc. of Mut. Ins. v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 758) 1579
Frick, Lewis v.
Friday, Santa Fe Central R. Co. v.
Friedrichs, Williams v. (Mem.)

G.

Gadd, Southern R. Co. v.
Gaines, Arizona ex rel. v. Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. (233 U. S. 87) 863
Gaines & Co. See W. A. Gaines & Co. v. Turner-Looker Co.
Gallagher v. Florida East Coast R. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 753) 1577
G. & C. Merriam Co., Ex parte (Mem.) (234 U. S. 748) 1575
v. Syndicate Pub. Co. (Mem.) 1584
Garland v. Washington (232 U. S. 642) 772
Garrett v. American Baptist Home Mission Soc. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 766) 472
Louisville & N. R. Co., v.
Gates, Aurora v. (Mem.)
Gauthier v. Morrison (232 U. S. 452) 680
Gearlds, Johnson v.
General Electric Co., Steinberger v. (Mem.)
United States use of Title Guaranty & S. Co. v. (Mem.)
George, Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. v.
George W. Elder, The, v. Portland (Mem.) (232 U. S. 722) 815
Georgia, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.
Darsey v. (Mem.)
Kirkpatrick v. (Mem.)
Georgia Cotton Oil Co., M. C. Kiser Co. v. (Mem.)
German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Lewis (233 U. S. 389) 1011
Germania Sav. Bank & T. Co., Loeb v. (Mem.)
Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v. Hall (232 U. S. 94) 521
Gilbert, Hopkins v. (Mem.)
Gilpin, Grand Trunk W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Gilson v. United States (234 U. S. 380) 1361
Glenwood Light & Water Co. v. Glenwood Springs (Mem.) (231 U. S. 735) 459
v. Glenwood Springs (Mem.) (231 U. S. 751) 466
Glenwood Springs, Glenwood Light & Water Co. v. (Mem.)
Glos v. O'Connell (Mem.) (231 U. S. 740) 462
Gobin, Illinois use of, May v. (Mem.)
Goelet, United States v.
Goldberg, United States ex rel., v. Daniels (231 U. S. 218) .. 191
Goldsboro, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v.
Gomez v. Camacho (Mem.) (234 U. S. 769) 1583
Gompers v. United States (233 U. S. 604) 1115
Gonzales, Montoya v.
Goodrich v. Houston Oil Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 761) 1580
Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v.
Graham v. United States (231 U. S. 474) 319
Grand Lodge K. of P. v. Supreme Lodge K. of P. (231 U. S. 768) 473
Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 762) 1581
Grand Rapids Timber Co., United States ex rel., v. Fisher (Mem.) (231 U. S. 763) .. 471
Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Michigan Railroad Commission (231 U. S. 457) 310
Grand Trunk W. R. Co., Cudahy Packing Co. v. (Mem.)
v. Gilpin (Mem.) (231 U. S. 751) 466
v. Lindsay, (233 U. S. 42) 838

Digitized by Google

Granger, Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)
Grannis v. Ordean (234 U. S. 385 .. 1363
v. Whiteside (234 U. S. 385) 1363
Grant Bros. Constr. Co. v. United States (232 U. S. 647) .. 776
Gray's Harbor Boom Co., Cross v. (Mem.)
Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor (232 U. S. 508) 703
v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 760) 1580
Greeley, Union P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Green v. Menominee Tribe of Indians (233 U. S. 558) 1093
Greenville Sand & Gravel Co., Archer v.
Greey v. Dockendorff (231 U. S. 513) 339
Grimsinger, Ex parte (Mem.) (231 U. S. 743) 463
Ex parte (Mem.) (232 U. S. 721) 814
Gye v. Hamburg Americanische Packetsahrt Aktiem Geselschafft (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755) 468

H.

Hachiroyemon Mitsui, St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)
Hall, Gila Valley, G. & N. R. Co. v.
Hamburg Americanische Packetsahrt Aktiem Geselschafft, Gye v. (Mem.)
Hamilton, Selig v.
Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Wolf Bros. & Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 756) 468
Hammond Packing Co. v. Montana (233 U. S. 331) 985
Hanover Star Milling Co., Allen & Wheeler Co. v. (Mem.)
v. Metcalf (Mem.) (231 U. S. 756) 468
Harnesberger, Kirkpatrick v. (Mem.)
Harris, Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v.
Harrison v. Foley (Mem.) (231 U. S. 750) 466
v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (232 U. S. 318) 621
Hattabaugh, Continental L. Ins. & Invest. Co. v. (Mem.)
Hauser, Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Havana C. R. Co. v. Central Trust Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 755) .. 1578
Hawaii, Kapiolani Estate v. (Mem.)
Hawley v. Malden (232 U. S. 1) 477
v. Walker (Mem.) (232 U. S. 718) 813
Hayes, Wabash R. Co. v.
Head, New York L. Ins. Co. v.
Head & Dowst Co., Hobbs v.
Heavner v. Elkins (Mem.) (231 U. S. 743) 463
Hecox v. Teller County (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) 1582
Henley, Holt v.
Henry Hentz & Co., Lovell v. (Mem.)
Henson, Vicksburg v.
Herbert v. Bicknell (233 U. S. 70) .. 854
v. Wagg (Mem.) (231 U. S. 765) 472
Herold v. Mutual Benefit L. Ins. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755) .. 468
Heye, Birge Forbes Co. v. (Mem.)
Higdon, Louisville & N. R. Co. v.
Hilton-Green, Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)
Hinchman, Ripinsky v. (Mem.)
Hirstius, Yee Ting Woh v. (Mem.)
Hobbs v. Head & Dowst Co. (231 U. S. 692) 440
Hocking Valley R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 757) 1579
Holden Land & Live Stock Co. v. Interstate Trading Co. (233 U. S. 536) 1083
Hollerbach v. United States (233 U. S. 165) 898
Holt v. Henley (232 U. S. 637) 767
Holtz, Brown v. (Mem.)
Hooker, Boston & M. R. Co. v.
Hopkins v. Gilbert (Mem.) (2 Cases) (232 U. S. 727) 816
Horton, Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v.
Hotchkiss v. Lynn (Mem.) (234 U. S. 763) 1581
National City Bank v.
v. National City Bank (231 U. S. 50) 115
Houston, Northern P. R. Co. v.
Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v. United States (234 U. S. 342) .. 1341
Houston Oil Co., Goodrich v. (Mem.)
v. Middlesworth (Mem.) (232 U. S. 723) 815
Howbert, Stratton's Independence v.
Hoy, Swift, v. (Mem.)
Hull v. Burr (234 U. S. 712) 1557
Hume, Brown Shoe Co. v. (Mem.)
Hurd, Seim v.
Woodward Co. v.
Hyams v. Old Dominion Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 726) 816
Hyman, H. & Co. v. Veith (Mem.) (232 U. S. 735) 820

I.

Illinois, Booth Fisheries Co. v. (Mem.)
Northern Trust Co. v. (Mem.)

Digitized by Google

Illinois ex rel. Deneen v. Economy Light & Power Co. See ILLINOIS EX REL. DUNNE v. ECONOMY LIGHT & POWER Co.
Dunne v. Economy Light & Power Co. (234 U. S. 497) 1429
Illinois use of Gobin, May v. (Mem.)
Illinois C. R. Co. v. Behrens (233 U. S. 473) 1051
v. Union R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 754) 467
Imbrovek, Atlantic Transport Co. v.
Imperial Machine Co., Archer v. (Mem.)
Ins. Co., Ætna L., v. Moore (231 U. S. 543) 356
French Mut. General Soc. of Mut., v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 758) 1579
German Alliance, v. Lewis (233 U. S. 389) 1011
Manhattan L., v. Cohen (234 U. S. 123) 1245
Mutual Benefit L., Herold v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755).. 468
Mutual L., v. Hilton-Green (Mem.) (234 U. S. 759).. 1580
New York, L., v. Deer Lodge County (231 U. S. 495) .. 332
New York L., v. Head (234 U. S. 149) 1259
New York L., v. Head (234 U. S. 166) 1266
Providence Washington, v. Granger (Mem.) (232 U. S. 721) 814
Prudential, v. Moore (231 U. S. 560) 367
St. Paul F. & M., v. Hachiroyemon Mitsui (Mem.) (231 U. S. 749) 465
Ins. & Invest. Co., Continental L., v. Hattabaugh (Mem.) (234 U. S. 765) 1582
Intermela v. Perkins (Mem.) (231 U. S. 757) 468
Intermountain Rate Cases. See UNITED STATES v. ATCHISON, T. & S. F. R. Co.
International Curtis Marine Turbine Co., William Cramp & Sons Ship & E. Bldg. Co. v. (Mem.)
International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky (234 U. S. 216) 1284
v. Kentucky (234 U. S. 579).. 1479
v. Kentucky (234 U. S. 589).. 1484
v. Missouri ex rel. Atty. Gen. (234 U. S. 199) 1276
International Transit Co., Sault Ste. Marie v.
International Trust Co., Nowell v. (Mem.)
Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison T. & S. F. R. Co. (234 U. S. 294) 1319
v. Southern P. Co. (234 U. S. 315) 1329
Interstate Trading Co., Holden Land & Live Stock Co. v.
Iowa, Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v.
Iowa C. R. Co., Walker v. (Mem.)
Island Transp. Co., White v.
Itow v. United States (233 U. S. 581) 1102

J.

Jackson, Texas & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Jarrett, Craig v. (Mem.)
J. M. Pace Mule Co., Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. (Mem.)
J. M. Selden & Co., Boarts v. (Mem.)
Jobe, Caldwell & Drake v. (Mem.)
John v. Paullin (231 U. S. 583)... 381
Johnson, Alzua v.
v. Geralds (234 U. S. 422) ... 1383
Norris v. (Mem.)
Joline, United States v.
Jones, Ex parte (Mem.) (231 U. S. 743) 463
v. Jones (234 U. S. 615) 1500
v. Mould (Mem.) (231 U. S. 765) 472
v. St. Louis Land & Cattle Co. (232 U. S. 355) 636
Jordan, Pacific Coast Co. v. (Mem.)

K.

Kahn v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 763) 1581
Kansas, Meyer v. (Mem.)
Tillotson v. (Mem.)
Kansas ex rel. Marshall, Wyandotte County Gas Co. v.
Kansas City, Kansas City Gunning Advertising Co. v. (Mem.)
Kansas City Gunning Advertising Co. v. Kansas City (Mem.) (2 Cases) (232 U. S. 732).. 818
Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Anderson (233 U. S. 325) 983
v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. (233 U. S. 75) 857
v. Maynor (Mem.) (234 U. S. 757) 1579
v. United States (231 U. S. 423) 296
Kansas City Terminal R. Co. v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. (233 U. S. 75) 857
Kapiolani Estate v. Hawaii (Mem.) (231 U. S. 766) 472
Kaplan v. Leech (Mem.) (234 U. S. 765) 1582

Digitized by Google

Kaw Valley Drainage Dist., Kansas City S. R. Co. v.
Kansas City Terminal R. Co. v.
Keene, Waltham Watch Co. v. (Mem.)
Kelly, Keokee Consol. Coke Co. v.
Kemp v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 756) 1579
Kener v. La Grange Mills (231 U. S. 215) 189
Kennedy, Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v.
Kentucky, Collins v.
Malone v.
International Harvester Co. v.
United States Fidelity & G. Co. v.
Keokee Consol. Coke Co. v. Kelly (234 U. S. 224) 1288
v. Taylor (234 U. S. 224) 1288
Kershaw Oil Mill v. National Bank (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725).. 816
Kinder v. Scharff (231 U. S. 517).. 343
King v. Buskirk (Mem.) (231 U. S. 735) 460
King County, Northern P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Kirkpatrick v. Georgia (Mem.) (234 U. S. 767) 1583
v. Harnesberger (Mem.) (231 U. S. 736) 460
Kiser Co. See M. C. Kiser Co.
Klock, New Mexico ex rel., Mann v. (Mem.)
Kramer v. Kramer (Mem.) (231 U. S. 753) 467

L.

La Grange Mills, Kener v.
Lake v. Boynge (Mem.) (232 U. S. 715) 812
v. Superior Court (Mem.) (232 U. S. 716) 812
Lamprecht v. Southern Pacific R. Co. (234 U. S. 669) 1527
Landis, Phœnix R. Co. v.
Lane, United States ex rel. Brown v.
v. Watts (234 U. S. 525) 1440
Lansburgh v. Parker (Mem.) (234 U. S. 758) 1570
Lapina v. Williams (232 U. S. 78).. 515
Larabee, Missouri P. R. Co. v.
Laramie Stock Yards Co., Union P. R. Co. v.
Larrinaga v. Valdes
Lauenstein, Miedreich v.
Lazarus, Michel & Lazarus v. Prentice (234 U. S. 263) 1305
Ledbetter v. Mandell (Mem.) (234 U. S. 752) 1577
Leech, Kaplan v. (Mem.)
Leecy, United States v. (Mem.)
Lehigh Valley R. Co., Meeker v. (Mem.)
Lennox Land Co. v. Oakdale (Mem.) (231 U. S. 739) 461
Leonard, Cherokee Tanning Extract Co. v. (Mem.)
Leong Toe v. Backus (Mem.) (232 U. S. 735) 819
Le Roy Fibre Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (232 U. S. 340) 631
Letot, Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Lewis v. Frick (233 U. S. 291) 967
German Alliance Ins. Co. v.
Lewiston v. Chamberlain (Mem.) (234 U. S. 751) 1576
Lexington Mill & Elevator Co., United States v.
Liberty Bell Gold Min. Co. v. Smuggler Union Min. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 747) 464
Lindsay, Grand Trunk W. R. Co. v.
Linhoff, Washington ex rel., Seattle R. & S. R. Co. v.
Little v. Williams (231 U. S. 335) .. 256
Littlefield, Schuyler v.
Lockwood v. Rucker (Mem.) (231 U. S. 753) 467
Loeb v. Germania Sav. Bank & T. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 761) .. 470
Logan v. Davis (233 U. S. 613) 1121
Lo King v. Backus. See Choy Gum v. Backus.
Lord, Munsuri v. (Mem.)
Los Angeles Switching Case. See Interstate Commerce Commission v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co.
Lothrop, Luce & Co., Zayas v.
Louisiana, Baccus v.
Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v.
Cunningham v. (Mem.)
v. McAdoo (234 U. S. 627) 1506
Musica v. (Mem.) (2 Cases)
Rabb v. (Mem.)
Louisiana & P. R. Co., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
United States v.
Louisville, Re (231 U. S. 639) 413
v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. (231 U. S. 652) 419
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Garrett (231 U. S. 298) 229
v. Higdon (234 U. S. 592) 1484
v. Ohio Valley Tie Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 737) 820
v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (234 U. S. 369) 1356
v. Woodford (234 U. S. 46) .. 1202
Wright v. (Mem.)
Lovell v. Henry Hentz & Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 738) 461
Ludlow Valve Mfg. Co., Niles v. (Mem.)

Digitized by Google

Ludvigh v. American Woolen Co. (231 U. S. 522) 345
Lumber Underwriters v. Rife (Mem.) (231 U. S. 748) 465
Luna de Bergere, Chavez v.
Luria v. United States (231 U. S. 9) .. 101
Lynch, Franklin v.
Lynn, Hotchkiss v. (Mem.)
Lytle Logging & Mercantile Co. v. Sandberg (Mem.) (232 U. S. 737) 820

M.

McAdoo, Louisiana v.
McBride v. United States (234 U. S. 600) 1490
McClintock v. Pawtucket (Mem.) (234 U. S. 761) 1580
McCord, United States ex rel. Texas Portland Cement Co. v.
McCoy, Edwards v. (Mem.)
McDonald v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. (233 U. S. 665) 1145
v. Pless (Mem.) (231 U. S. 749) 465
McKay v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 758) 469
v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 759) 469
McKnight, El Paso Brick Co. v.
McMillan, United States use of, Equitable Surety Co. v. (234 U. S. 448) 1394
McPherson, Swift v.
Maibaum v. United States (Mem.) (232 U. S. 714) 811
Majestic Theater Co. v. Cedar Rapids (Mem.) (232 U. S. 730) .. 818
Malden, Hawley v.
Malone v. Kentucky (234 U S. 639) 1512
Mandell, Ledbetter v. (Mem.)
Maness, Clinchfield Coal Corp. v. (Mem.)
Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Cohen (234 U. S. 123) 1245
Mann v. New Mexico ex rel. Klock (Mem.) (232 U. S. 733) .. 819
Mansfield, Yoshiro Nakayama v. (Mem.)
Mansfield R. & Transp. Co., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
United States v.
Marequa v. Backus (Mem.) (232 U. S. 731) 818
Marietta, C. & C. R. Co. v. Creamer (232 U. S. 576) 737
Marshall v. Dye (231 U. S. 250) 206
Kansas ex rel., Wyandotte County Gas Co. v. (231 U. S. 622) 404
Martinez v. Texas (Mem.) (232 U. S. 714) 811
Maryland use of Szczesek, Atlantic Transport Co. v.
Massachusetts, Baltic Min. Co. v.
Riley v.
S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v.
Matthiessen, Thomas v.
May v. Illinois use of Gobin (Mem.) (232 U. S. 720) 814
Nadal v.
Maynor, Kansas City S. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
M. C. Kiser Co. v. Georgia Cotton Oil Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 756) 1579
Mechanics & M. Nat. Bank v. Ernst (231 U. S. 60) 121
Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (Mem.) (2 Cases) (234 U. S. 749) 1576
Meere, Northern P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Mellichamp, Adams Express Co. v. (Mem.)
Mellor, Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v.
Menominee Tribe of Indians, Green v.
Merriam Co. See G. & C. Merriam Co., Ex parte.
Metcalf, Hanover Star Milling Co. v. (Mem.)
Metzger Motor Car Co. v. Parrott (233 U. S. 36) 837
Meyer v. Kansas (Mem.) (232 U. S. 734) 819
Michigan, Eberle v.
Stewart v.
Swensen v. (Mem.)
Michigan Railroad Commission, Grand Trunk, R. Co. v.
Middlesworth, Houston Oil Co. v. (Mem.)
Middleton, Curriden v.
Midland Valley Mercantile Co., Tinker v.
Miedreich v. Lauenstein (232 U. S. 236) 584
Miller, Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. (Mem.)
v. United States (233 U. S. 1) 823
v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755) 468
Minneapolis, Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v.
Minneapolis & St. L. R Co. v. Burho (Mem.) (232 U. S. 732) .. 818
Minnesota, Creamery Package Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.)
Farmers & M. Sav. Bank v.
Minnesota ex rel. St. Paul, St. Paul City R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Missouri ex rel. Atty. Gen., International Harvester Co. v. .. 1276
Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade (233 U. S. 642) 1135
v. Goodrich (Mem.) (234 U. S. 754) 1578

Digitized by Google

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Harris (234 U. S. 412) 1377
v. Letot (Mem.) (231 U. S. 738) 461
v. United States (231 U. S. 112) 144
v. West (232 U. S. 682) 795
Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee (234 U. S. 459) 1398
Mitchell Store Bldg. Co. v. Carroll (232 U. S. 379) 650
Moist, United States v.
Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. v. River & Rail Storage Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 761) 1581
Monson v. Simonson (231 U. S. 341) 260
Montana, Hammond Packing Co. v.
Montgomery, Belt Line R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Montoya v. Gonzales (232 U. S. 375) 645
Moody v. Century Sav. Bank (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725) 816
Moore, Ætna L. Ins. Co. v.
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
Prudential Ins. Co. v.
Moore-Mansfield Constr. Co. v. Electrical Installation Co. (234 U. S. 619) 1503
Morris, Alabama & V. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Morrison, Gauthier v.
Morse v. Dulany (Mem.) (234 U. S. 768) 1583
Mould, Jones v. (Mem.)
Moyer, Anderson v. (Mem.)
Moy Guey Lum v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 756) .. 1578
Mulcrevy v. San Francisco (231 U. S. 669) 425
Mullen v. Simmons (234 U. S. 192) .. 1274
Munsey v. Webb (231 U. S. 150) 162
Munsuri v. Lord (Mem.) (232 U. S. 728) 817
Murray, Roller v.
Musica v. Louisiana (Mem.) (2 Cases) (231 U. S. 759) 469
Mutual Benefit L. Ins. Co., Herold v. (Mem.)
Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hilton-Green (Mem.) (234 U. S. 759) .. 1580
Myers v. Pittsburgh Coal Co. (233 U. S. 184) 906
v. Pittsburgh Coal Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 756) 468
Radford v.

N.

Nadal v. May (233 U. S. 447) 1040
National Bank, Kershaw Oil Mill v. (Mem.)
National City Bank, Hotchkiss v.
v. Hotchkiss (231 U. S. 50) .. 115
National Counsel J. O. U. A. M. v. Brown (Mem.) (234 U. S. 768) 1583
National Electric Signaling Co. Telefunken Wireless Teleg. Co. v. (Mem.) .....
National Rice Milling Co., New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v.
National Safe Deposit Co. v. Stead (232 U. S. 58) 504
National Savings & T. Co., United States Trust Co. v. (Mem.)
National Surety Co., St. Louis v. (Mem.) .....
Nease v. Coal & Coke R. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725) 816
New Jersey, Egan v. (Mem.)
Zeller v. (Mem.) .....
Newkirk, Blackwell v. (Mem.) ....
New Louisville Jockey Club v. Oakdale (Mem.) (231 U. S. 739) 461
New Mexico ex rel. Klock, Mann v. (Mem.) .....
New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. National Rice Milling Co. (234 U. S. 80) 1223
New York, Barrett v.
v. Barrett (232 U. S. 14) 483
Carlesi v.
Erie R. Co. v.
Platt v.
v. Platt (232 U. S. 35) 492
v. Sage (Mem.) (231 U S. 756) 468
New York ex rel. Amoskeag Sav. Bank v. Purdy (231 U. S. 373) 274
New York, L. Ins. Co. v. Deer Lodge County (231 U. S. 495) .. 332
v. Head (234 U. S. 149) 1259
v. Head (234 U. S. 166) 1266
New York Times Co. v. Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. (234 U. S. 758) 1579
Nichols & C. Lumber Co. v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 762) 1581
Nichols-Chisholm Lumber Co., United States v.
Niles v. Ludlow Valve Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 748) .. 465
Nipissing Mines Co., United States v. (Mem.)
Noel Constr. Co. v. Smith (Mem.) (232 U. S. 729) 817
Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Hauser (Mem.) (231 U. S. 749) 465
Norris v. Johnson (Mem.) (232 U. S. 715) 811
v. Johnson (Mem.) (232 U. S. 723) 815
North Carolina R. Co. v. Zachary (232 U. S. 248) 597

Digitized by Google

Northern P. R. Co. v. Houston (231 U. S. 181) 176
v. King County (Mem.) (231 U. S. 758) 469
v. Meese (Mem.) (234 U. S. 758) 1579
Wisconsin C. . '. Co. v. (Mem.)
Northern Trust Co. v. Illinois (Mem.) (234 U. S. 748) 1575
Northwestern P. R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 757) 469
Norton v. Whiteside (Mem.) (232 U. S. 726) 816
Nowell v. International Trust Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 724) .. 815
Noxon, O'Reilly, v. (Mem.)

O.

Oakdale, Lennox Land Co. v. (Mem.)
New Louisville Jockey Club v. (Mem.)
Ocampo v. United States (234 U. S. 91) 1231
Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Mellor (233 U. S. 718) 1171
O'Connell, Glos v. (Mem.)
O'Connor, Great Northern R. Co. v.
Ohio Oil Co., United States v.
Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey (232 U. S. 576) 737
Ohio Tax Cases (232 U. S. 576).... 737
Ohio Valley Tie Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Old Dominion Co., Hyams v. (Mem.)
Oliver, Allen v. (Mem.)
v. Texas (Mem.) (231 U. S. 734) 459
Ommen, Talcott v. (Mem.)
v. Talcott (Mem.) (231 U. S. 761) 470
Orama, Oyanguren v. (Mem.)
Ordean, Grannis v.
Order of St. Benedict v. Steinhauser (234 U. S. 640) 1512
Oregon R. & Nav. Co., McDonald v.
O'Reilly v. Noxon (Mem.) (231 U. S. 767) 472
Osage Nation of Indians, Rogers v. (Mem.)
Osenton, Williamson v.
O'Sullivan v. Felix (233 U. S. 318).. 980
Oyanguren v. Orama (Mem.) (232 U. S. 736) 820

P.

Pacific Coast Co. v. Jordan (Mem.) (231 U. S. 750) 466
Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Anderson (Mem.) (231 U. S. 750) 466
Pacific Creosoting Co. v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 737) .. 460
Pacific Exp. Co. v. Rudman (Mem.) (234 U. S. 752) 1577
Pacific Livestock Co. v. Silvies River Irrig. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 746) 464
Paine v. Copper Belle Min. Co. (232 U. S. 595) 746
Pajarillo v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) 1582
Palmenberg v. W. S. Butler & Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 752).. 467
Paris & G. N. R. Co. v. Boston (Mem.) (231 U. S. 742) .. 462
Parish, Craig v. (Mem.)
Parker, Lansburgh v. (Mem.)
Parker-Washington Co. v. Cramer (Mem.) (231 U. S. 744) .. 463
Parrott, Metzger Motor Car Co. v.
Patsone v. Pennsylvania (232 U. S. 138) 539
Pattison, Dale v.
Paullin, John v.
Pawtucket, McClintock v. (Mem.)
Peabody v. United States (231 U. S. 530) 351
Peccarich, Victor-American Fuel Co. v. (Mem.)
Pecos Valley & N. E. R. Co., Price v. (Mem.)
Pelican, United States v.
Pennell v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (231 U. S. 675) 430
Pennington v. United States (231 U. S. 631) 410
Penn Nat. Bank, Taney v.
Pennsylvania, Patsone v.
Plymouth Coal Co. v.
v. York Silk Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 718) 813
v. York Silk Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 724) 815
Pennsylvania R. Co., Connelley v. (Mem.)
Perenchio, Toledo, St. L. & W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Perkins v. Coffin (Mem.) (231 U. S. 769) 473
Intermela v. (Mem.)
Perrin v. United States (232 U. S. 478) 691
Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Farrugia v.
Pennell v.
Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co., District of Columbia v. (Mem.)
v. Southern Transp. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 750) 466
Phœnix Constr. Co., Cornell Steamboat Co. v.
Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis (231 U. S. 578) 377

Digitized by Google

Pierce, United States v.
v. United States (232 U. S. 290) 609
v. United States (232 U. S. 292) 610
Pine Tree Lumber Co., Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Pipe Line Cases. See UNITED STATES v. OHIO OIL CO.
Pitcock, Rhea v. (Mem.)
Pittsburgh Coal Co., Myers v.
Myers v. (Mem.)
Piza Hermanos S. en C. v. Caldentey (231 U. S. 690) 439
Platt, New York v.
v. New York (232 U. S. 35) .. 492
Pless, McDonald v. (Mem.)
Plymouth Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania (232 U. S. 531) 713
Polt, Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v.
Pons v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 720) 814
Porreca, American Ice Co. v. (Mem.)
Port Arthur Rice Milling Co., Beaumont Rice Mills v. (Mem.)
Portland, The George W. Elder v. (Mem.)
Porto Rico v. Ramos (232 U. S. 627) 763
Port Richmond & B. P. Ferry Co. v. Board of Chosen Freeholders (234 U. S. 317) 1330
Prairie Oil & Gas Co., United States v.
Prenica v. Bulger (Mem.) (234 U. S. 750) 1576
Prentice, Lazarus, Michel & Lazarus v.
Price v. Pecos Valley & N. E. R. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 767).. 1583
Priest v. Board of Trustees (232 U. S. 604) 751
Pronovost v. United States (232 U. S. 487) 696
Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Granger (Mem.) (232 U. S. 721) 814
Prudential Ins. Co. v. Moore (231 U. S. 560) 367
Pullman Co. v. Croom (231 U. S. 571) 375
v. Knott. See PULLMAN CO. v. CROOM.
Purdy, Amoskeag Sav. Bank v.
New York ex rel. Amoskeag Sav. Bank v.

R.

Rabb v. Louisiana (Mem.) (231 U. S. 740) 462
Radford v. Myers (231 U. S. 725).. 454
Railroad & Nav. Co., Oregon, McDonald v. (233 U. S. 665) 1145
Railroad Commission, Texas & P. R. Co. v.
Railroad Co., Arizona & C., Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. (233 U. S. 601) 1111
Atlantic Coast Line, v. Georgia (234 U. S. 280) 1312
Atlantic Coast Line, v. Goldsboro (232 U. S. 548) 721
Atlantic Coast Line, v. Miller (Mem.) (231 U. S. 741).. 462
Baltimore & O., United States v. (231 U. S. 274)..... 218
Boston & M., v. Hooker (233 U. S. 97) 868
Butler County, United States v. (234 U. S. 29) 1196
Central of N. J., Young v. (232 U. S. 602) 750
Delaware, L. & W., v. United States (231 U. S. 363) .. 269
Denver & R. G., v. Arizona & C. R. Co. (233 U. S. 601) ... 1111
Denver & R. G., Baer Bros. Mercantile Co. v. (233 U. S. 479) 1055
Erie, v. New York (233 U. S. 671) 1149
Erie, v. Williams (233 U. S. (685) 1155
Havana C., v. Central Trust Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 755).. 1578
Illinois C., v. Behrens (233 U. S. 473) 1051
Illinois C., v. Union R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 754).. 467
Lehigh Valley, Meeker v. (Mem.) (2 Cases) (234 U. S. 749) 1576
Louisville & N., v. Garrett (231 U. S. 298) 229
Louisville & N., v. Higdon (234 U. S. 592) 1484
Louisville & N., v. Ohio Valley Tie Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 737) 820
Louisville & N., v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (234 U. S. 369) 1356
Louisville & N., v. Woodford (234 U. S. 46) 1202
Louisville & N., Wright v. (Mem.) 1584
Marietta, C. & C., v. Creamer (232 U. S. 576) 737
Minneapolis & St. L., v. Burho (Mem.) (232 U. S. 732).. 818
Missouri, K. & T., v. Cade (233 U. S. 642) 1135
New Orleans & N. E., v. National Rice Milling Co. (234 U. S. 80) 1223
North Carolina, v. Zachary (232 U. S. 248) 591
Northwestern P., v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 757) 469

Digitized by Google

Railroad Co., Paris & G. N., v. Boston (Mem.) (231 U. S. 742) .. 462
Pennsylvania, Connelley v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 764) .. 472
Pennsylvania, Connolley v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 752) .. 466
Philadelphia, B. & W., District of Columbia v. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 716) 812
Philadelphia, B. & W., v. Southern Transp. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 750) 466
Richmond F. & P., v. Virginia (Mem.) (231 U. S. 769) .. 473
Rutland, Bacon v. (232 U. S. 134) 538
St. Louis & S. F., Harrison v. (232 U. S. 318) 621
St. Louis & S. F., Rutland v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755) .. 468
Southern Pacific, Burke v. (234 U. S. 669) 1527
Southern Pacific, Lamprecht v. (234 U. S. 669) 1527
Tennessee Coal, I. &, v. George (233 U. S. 354) 997
Toledo, St. L. & W., v. Perenchio (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745) 464
Union P., v. Denver, L. & N. W. R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 760) 470
Union P., v. Greeley (Mem.) (231 U. S. 757) 469
Union P., v. Laramie Stock Yards Co. (231 U. S. 190) 179
Union P., v. Sides (231 U. S. 213) 189
Union P., v. Snow (231 U. S. 204) 184
Union P., United States v. (234 U. S. 495) 1426
Vandalia, Wood v. (231 U. S. 1) 97
Victoria, F. & W., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Victoria, F. & W., United States v. (234 U. S. 1) .. 1185
Wabash, v. Hayes (234 U. S. 86) 1226
Yazoo & M. V., v. Brewer (231 U. S. 245) 204
Yazoo & M. V., Pons v. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 720) 814
Railway & Transp. Co., Mansfield, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Mansfield, United States v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Railway Co., Alabama & V., v. Morris (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) .. 1582
Railway Co., Atchison, T. & S. F., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (234 U. S. 294) 1319
Atchison & T. S. F., v. Louisiana & P. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Mansfield R. & Transp. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Moore (233 U. S. 182) 906
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Robinson (233 U. S. 173) 901
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Star Grain & Lumber Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 762) .. 471
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 736) 460
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. United States (232 U. S. 199) 568
Atchison, T. & S. F., United States v. (234 U. S. 476) 1408
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Victoria F. & W. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Woodworth & L. C. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Belt Line, v. Montgomery (Mem.) (232 U. S. 733) 819
Carolina Division. See SOUTHERN R. Co.—CAROLINA DIVISION v. BENNETT.
Charleston & W. C., v. Thompson (234 U. S. 576) 1476
Chesapeake & O., v. Cockrell (232 U. S. 146) 544
Chicago & N. W., Union Lime Co. v. (233 U. S. 211) .. 924
Chicago, M. & St. P., v. Iowa (233 U. S. 334) 988
Chicago, M. & St. P., v. Kennedy (232 U. S. 626) 762
Chicago, M. & St. P., Le Roy Fibre Co. v. (232 U. S. 340) 631
Chicago, M. & St. P., v. Minneapolis (232 U. S. 430) 671
Chicago, M. & St. P., v. Polt (232 U. S. 165) 554
Chicago, R. I. & P., v. Beatty (Mem.) (234 U. S. 753) .. 1577
Chicago, R. I. & P., v. Cramer (232 U. S. 490) 697
Chicago, R. I. & P., v. Pine Tree Lumber Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 748) 1575
Cincinnati, N., v. Dillon (Mem.) (234 U. S. 753) 1578
Coal & Coke, Nease v. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 725) 816
Coal & Iron, Reherd v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745) 464

Digitized by Google

Railway Co., Colorado & S., v. State Railroad Commission (Mem.) (234 U. S. 767) .. 1583
Denver, L. & N. W., Union P. R. Co. v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 760) 470
Florida East Coast, Gallagher v. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 753) 1577
Florida East Coast, v. United States (234 U. S. 167) .. 1267
Gila Valley, G. & N., v. Hall (232 U. S. 94) 521
Grand Rapids & I., v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 762) 1581
Grand Trunk, v. Michigan Railroad Commission (231 U. S. 457) 310
Grand Trunk W., Cudahy Packing Co. v. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 764) 1582
Grand Trunk W., v. Gilpin (Mem.) (231 U. S. 751) .. 466
Grank Trunk W., v. Lindsay (233 U. S. 42) 838
Great Northern, v. O'Connor (232 U. S. 508) 703
Great Northern, v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 760) 1580
Hocking Valley, v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 757) 1579
Houston, E. & W. T., v. United States (234 U. S. 342)... 1341
Iowa C., Walker v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 746) 464
Kansas City S., v. Anderson (233 U. S. 325) 983
Kansas City S., v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. (233 U. S. 75) 857
Kansas City S., v. Maynor (Mem.) (234 U. S. 757).. 1579
Kansas City S., v. United States (231 U. S. 423) 206
Kansas City Terminal, v. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. (233 U. S. 75) 857
Louisiana & P., Atchison & T. S. F. R. Co. v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Louisiana & P., United States v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Missouri, K. & T., v. Goodrich (Mem.) (234 U. S. 754) 1578
Missouri, K. & T., v. Harris (234 U. S. 412) 1377
Missouri, K. & T., v. Letot (Mem.) (231 U. S. 738).. 461
Missouri, K. & T., v. United States (231 U. S. 112)... 144
Railway Co., Missouri, K. & T., v. West (232 U. S. 682).... 795
Missouri P., v. Larabee (234 U. S. 459) 1398
Norfolk & W., v. Hauser (Mem.) (231 U. S. 749) .. 465
Northern P., v. Houston (231 U. S. 181) 176
Northern P., v. King County (Mem.) (231 U. S. 758) .. 469
Northern P., v. Meese (Mem.) (234 U. S. 758) 1579
Northern P., Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) 1583
Ohio River & W., v. Dittey (232 U. S. 576) 737
Pecos Valley & N. E., v. Price (Mem.) (234 U. S. 767) .. 1583
Philadelphia & R., Farrugia v. (233 U. S. 352) 996
Philadelphia & R., Pennell v. (231 U. S. 675) 430
Phœnix, v. Landis (231 U. S. 578) 377
St. Paul City, v. Minnesota ex rel. St. Paul (Mem.) (232 U. S. 730) 818
Santa Fe Central, v. Friday (232 U. S. 694) 802
Seaboard Air Line, American Iron & Steel Mfg. Co. v. (233 U. S. 261) 949
Seaboard Air Line, v. Horton (233 U. S. 492) 1062
Seaboard Air Line, v. J. M. Pace Mule Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 751) 1576
Seattle, R. & S., v. Washington ex rel. Linhoff (231 U. S. 568) 372
Southern, Arnott v. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 717) 812
Southern,—Carolina Division, v. Bennett (233 U. S. 80) 860
Southern, v. Crockett (234 U. S. 725) 1564
Southern, v. Gadd (233 U. S. 572) 1099
Southern, v. Simon (Mem.) (232 U. S. 732) 818
Texas & P., v. American Tie & Timber Co. (234 U. S. 138) 1255
Texas & P., v. Jackson (Mem.) (232 U. S. 730) 817
Texas & P., v. Railroad Commission (232 U. S. 338) 630
Texas & P., v. United States (234 U. S. 342) 1341
Union, Illinois C. R. Co. v. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 754).. 467
Wisconsin C., v. Northern P. R. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) 1583

Digitized by Google

Railway Co., Woodworth & L. C., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Woodworth & L. C., United States v. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Rainey, United States v.
v. United States (232 U. S. 310) 617
v. W. R. Grace & Co. (231 U. S. 703) 445
Ramos, Porto Rico v.
Ravenna Nat. Bank, Citizens Bkg. Co. v.
Ray, Cadillac Motor Car Co. v. (Mem.)
Re Engelhard & Sons Co. (231 U. S. 646) 416
Louisville (231 U. S. 639) .. 413
Regan, United States v.
Reherd v. Coal & Iron R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745) 464
Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. Carlton (Mem.) (232 U. S. 729) .. 817
Rhea v. Pitcock (Mem.) (232 U. S. (734) 819
Richards v. Washington Terminal Co. (233 U. S. 546) 1088
Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Virginia (Mem.) (231 U. S. 769) .. 473
Rife, Lumber Underwriters v. (Mem.)
Riley v. Massachusetts (232 U. S. 671) 788
Welsch v. (Mem.)
Ripinsky v. Hinchman (Mem.) (234 U. S. 759) 1580
Rittersbusch, Shultz v. (Mem.)
River & Rail Storage Co., Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. v. (Mem.)
Rivers, Campagnie Générale Transatlantique v. (Mem.)
Riverside Heights Orange Growers' Asso. v. Stebler (Mem.) (231 U. S. 748) 465
Robinson, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
Roe, Ex parte (234 U. S. 70) 1217
Roehrig v. Smith (Mem.) (232 U. S.) 729) 817
Rogers v. Osage Nation of Indians (Mem.) (232 U. S. 733) .. 819
Roller v. Murray (234 U. S. 738) 1570
Roney v. Van Ness (Mem.) (231 U. S. 737) 460
Rosen v. Williams (Mem.) (232 U. S. 722) 814
Ross v. Day (232 U. S. 110) 528
Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (232 U. S. 413) 663
Rucker, Lockwood v. (Mem.)
Rudman, Pacific Exp. Co. v. (Mem.)
Russell v. Sebastian (233 U. S. 195) 912
Rutland v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755) 468
Rutland R. Co., Bacon v.
Ryan, Tevis v.
Tevis v. (Mem.)
v. United States (Mem.) (232 U. S. 726) 816

S.

Safe Deposit & T. Co., De Bearn v.
Sage, New York v. (Mem.)
St. Benedict, Order of, v. Steinhauser (234 U. S. 640) 1512
St. Francis Levee Dist., Chapman & D. Lumber Co. v.
St. Paul, Minnesota ex rel., St. Paul City R. Co. v. (Mem.)
St. Paul City R. Co. v. Minnesota ex rel. St. Paul (Mem.) (232 U. S. 730) 818
St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Hachiroyemon Mitsui (Mem.) (231 U. S. 749) 465
St. Louis v. Chicago House Wrecking Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 750) 465
St. Louis Gunning Advertising Co. v. (Mem.)
v. National Surety Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 749) 465
St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., Harrison v.
Rutland v. (Mem.)
St. Louis Gunning and Advertising Co. v. St. Louis (Mem.) (231 U. S. 761) 470
St. Louis Land & Cattle Co., Jones v.
Sandberg, Lytle Logging & Mercantile Co. v. (Mem.)
Sandoval, United States v.
Sands v. Anderson (Mem.) (231 U. S. 746) 464
San Francisco, Mulcrevy v.
San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irrig. Co. v. Stanislaus County (233 U. S. 454) 1041
Santa Fe Central R. Co. v. Friday (232 U. S. 694) 802
Sault Ste. Marie v. International Transit Co. (234 U. S. 333) ... 1337
Scharff, Collins v.
Kinder v.
Schmidt, Alabama v.
Schmidt & Story v. Bank of Commerce (234 U. S. 64) 1214
Schneider Wholesale Wine & Liquor Co. See W. Schneider Wholesale Wine & Liquor Co.
v. Diederich. See W. Schneider Wholesale Wine & Liquor Co.
Schoenlau-Kuckkuck Trunk Top & Veneer Co., Baetz v. (Mem.)
Schuyler v. Littlefield (232 U. S. 707) 806

Digitized by Google

Scott, Bowe v.
Seaboard Air Line R. Co., American Iron & Steel Mfg. Co. v.
v. Horton (233 U. S. 492) .. 1002
v. J. M. Pace Mule Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 751) 1571
Seattle, Trimble v.
Seattle, R. & S. R. Co. v. Washington ex rel. Linhoff (231 U. S. 568) 372
Sebastian, Russell v.
Seim v. Hurd (232 U. S. 420) 667
Selden, J. M., & Co. See BOARTS v. J. M. SELDEN & Co.
Selig v. Hamilton (234 U. S. 652) .. 1518
Selover, Bates & Co. v. Finnes (Mem.) (231 U. S. 765) 472
Shultz v. Ritterbusch (Mem.) (232 U. S. 719) 813
Sides, Union P. R. Co. v.
Sim v. Edenborn (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745) 463
Simmons, Mullen v.
Simon, Southern R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Simonson, Monson v.
Silvies River Irrig. Co., Pacific-Livestock Co. v. (Mem.)
Singer Mfg. Co. v. Adams (Mem.) (231 U. S. 761) 470
Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Brickell (233 U. S. 304) 974
Sistersville Brewing Co., Detroit Steel Cooperage Co. v.
Smith, Noel Constr. Co. v. (Mem.)
Roehrig v. (Mem.)
v. Texas (233 U. S. 630) 1129
Smith Incandescent Light Co. v. Welsbach Gas Lamp Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 728) 817
Smuggler Union Min. Co., Liberty Bell Gold Min. Co. v. (Mem.)
Snow, Union P. R. Co. v.
Sohmer, Wheeler v.
Solomon, Adams Exp. Co. v. (Mem.)
Sooy, Beach Front Hotel Co. v. (Mem.)
South Butte Min. Co., Thomas v. (Mem.)
Southern P. Co., Interstate Commerce Commission v.
v. United States (Mem.) (232 U. S. 736) 820
Southern Pacific R. Co., Burke v.
Lamprecht v.
Southern R. Co., Arnott v. (Mem.)
v. Crockett (234 U. S. 725) .. 1564
v. Gadd (233 U. S. 572) 1099
v. Simon (Mem.) (232 U. S. 732) 818
Southern R. Co.-Carolina Division v. Bennett (233 U. S. 80) .. 860
Southern Transp. Co., Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Spencer, C. H. Albers Commission Co. v. (Mem.)
Springstead v. Crawfordsville State Bank (231 U. S. 541) .. 354
S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts (231 U. S. 68) .. 127
Standard Oil Co., United States v.
Stanislaus County, San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irrig. Co. v.
Stanley, D. E. Foote & Co. v.
Star Chronicle Pub. Co. v. United Press Asso. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 714) 811
v. United Press Asso. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 721) 814
Star Grain & Lumber Co., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
State Railroad Commission, Colorado & S. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Stayton v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 764) 1582
Stead v. Curtis (Mem.) (234 U. S. 759) 1580
National Safe Deposit Co. v.
Stebler, Riverside Heights Orange Growers' Asso. v. (Mem.)
Steele, Bluefields S. S. Co. v. (Mem.)
Steinberger v. General Electric Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 762) 1581
Steinhauser, Order of St. Benedict v.
Stewart v. Michigan (232 U. S. 665) 786
Still, American Nat. Bank v. (Mem.)
Stone, Sand & Gravel Co. v. United States (234 U. S. 270) ... 1308
Stratton's Independence v. Howbert (231 U. S. 399) 285
Straus v. American Publishers Asso. (231 U. S. 222) 192
v. Foxworth (231 U. S. 162) 168
Street & Smith v. Atlas Mfg. Co. (231 U. S. 348) 262
v. Atlas Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 755) 468
v. Atlas Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (232 U. S. 724) 815
Strub, Ex parte (Mem.) (234 U. S. 752) 1577
Sturges & B. Mfg. Co. v. Beauchamp (231 U. S. 320) 245
Sucrerie Centrale Coloso, Abril v. (Mem.)
Sugar Lighterage Case. See UNITED STATES v. BALTIMORE & O. R. Co.
Sullivan v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 755) 1578
Summers v. United States (231 U. S. 92) 137
Sunday Creek Co. v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 757) 1579
Sun Printing & Pub. Asso., New York Times Co. v. (Mem.)
Superior Court, Lake v. (Mem.)

Digitized by Google

Supreme Lodge K. of P., Grand Lodge K. of P. v. (Mem.)
Swensen v. Michigan (Mem.) (231 U. S. 767) 473
Swift v. Hoy (Mem.) (231 U. S. 767) 473
v. McPherson (232 U. S. 51) .. 499
Switzler, Earnhart v. (Mem.)
Syndicate Pub. Co., G. & C. Merriam Co. v. (Mem.)
Synnott v. Tombstone Consolidated Mines Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 749) 1575
Szczesek, Maryland use of, Atlantic Transport Co. v.

T.

Talbert v. United States (Mem.) (234 U. S. 762) 1581
Talbott v. United States (Mem.) (232 U. S. 722) 815
Talcott, Ommen v. (Mem.)
v. Ommen (Mem.) (231 U. S. 761) 470
Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank (232 U. S. 174) 558
Tap Line Cases. See UNITED STATES v. LOUISIANA & P. R. Co.
Taylor v. Anderson (234 U. S. 74) .. 1218
v. Cleveland Grain Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 757) 1579 Keokee Consol. Coke v.
v. Taylor (232 U. S. 363) 638
Tearney, Washington v. (Mem.)
Telefunken Wireless Teleg. Co. v. National Electric Signaling Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 760) 1580
Teller County, Hecox v. (Mem.)
Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. v. George (233 U. S. 354) 997
Tevis v. Ryan (233 U. S. 273) 957
v. Ryan (Mem.) (231 U. S. 762) 471
Texas, Downman v.
Martinez v. (Mem.)
Oliver v. (Mem.)
Smith v.
Texas & P. R. Co. v. American Tie & Timber Co. (234 U. S. 138) 1255
v. Jackson (Mem.) (252 U. S. 730) 817
v. Railroad Commission (232 U. S. 338) 630
v. United States (234 U. S. 342) 1341
Texas Portland Cement Co., United States ex rel., v. McCord (233 U. S. 157) 893
Thaddeus Davids Co. v. Davids (233 U. S. 461) 1046
Thomas v. Matthiessen (232 U. S. 221) 577
Thomas v. South Butte Min. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 754) .. 1578
Thomas Haverty Co., Bank of Arizona v.
Thompson, Charleston & W. C. R. Co. v.
Thurston, Bullowa v. (Mem.)
v. United States (232 U. S. 469) 688
Tillotson v. Kansas (Mem.) (232 U. S. 728 817
Tinker v. Midland Valley Mercantile Co. (231 U. S. 681) 434
Titanic, The. See OCEANIC STEAM NAV. CO. v. MELLOR.
Title Guaranty & S. Co. v. United States use of General Electric Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 758) 469
Toledo, St. L. & W. R. Co. v. Perenchio (Mem.) (231 U. S. 745) .. 464
Tombstone Consolidated Mines Co., Synnott v. (Mem.)
Torres v. Lothrop, L. & Co. See ZAYAS v. LOTHROP, L. & Co.
Trapp, Western U. Teleg. Co. v. (Mem.)
Trimble v. Seattle (231 U. S. 683) 435
Turner-Looker Co., W. A. Gaines & Co. v. (Mem.)
Twenty-Five Packages Panama Hats, United States v.

U.

Uncle Sam Oil Co., United States v.
Union Lime Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (233 U. S. 211) 924
Union P. R. Co. v. Denver, L. & N. W. R. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 760) 470
v. Greeley (Mem.) (231 U. S. 757) ..... 4.
v. Laramie Stock Yards Co. (231 U. S. 190) ..... 1.
v. Sides (231 U. S. 213) 189
v. Snow (231 U. S. 204) 184
United States v.
Union R. Co., Illinois C. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
United Engineering & Contracting Co., United States v.
United Globe Mines, Work v.
United Press Asso., Star Chronicle Pub. Co. v. (Mem.) (2 Cases)
United States v. Antikamnia Chemical Co. (231 U. S. 654) 419
Apapas v.
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (234 U. S. 476) 1408
v. Axman (234 U. S. 36) 1198

Digitized by Google

United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (231 U. S. 274) 218
v. Beatty (232 U. S. 463) 686
Beddow v. (Mem.)
v. Bennett (232 U. S. 299) 612
v. Bennett (232 U. S. 308) ... 616
v. Benson (234 U. S. 548) 1459
Billings v.
v. Billings (232 U. S. 261) .. 596
v. Billings (232 U. S. 289) 608
v. Birdsall (233 U. S. 223) 930
Botsford v. (Mem.)
Bowling v.
v. Brents (233 U. S. 223) 930
v. Buchanan (232 U. S. 72) ... 511
v. Buffalo Pitts Co. (234 U.) S. 228) 1290
v. Butler County R. Co. (234 U. S. 29) 1196
Cameron v.
v. Carter (231 U. S. 492) .. 330
Chino Lee v. (Mem.)
Davey v. (Mem.)
v. Davis (231 U. S. 183) 177
Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v.
Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v.
Eastern Extension, Australasia & China Teleg. Co. v.
Eastern States Retail Lumber Dealers' Asso. v.
v. First Nat. Bank (234 U. S. 245) 1298
Florida East Coast R. Co. v.
v. Foster (233 U. S. 515) 1074
Gilson v.
v. Goelet (232 U. S. 293) 610
Gompers v.
Graham v.
Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Grant Bros. Constr. Co. v.
Great Northern R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Hocking Valley R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Hollerbach v.
Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v.
Itow v.
v. Joline (231 U. S. 144) 159
Kahn v. (Mem.)
Kansas City S. R. Co. v.
Kemp v. (Mem.)
v. Leecy (Mem.) (232 U. S. 731) 818
v. Lexington Mill & Elevator Co. (232 U. S. 399) 658
v. Louisiana & P. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Luria v.
McBride v.
McKay v. (Mem.) (2 Cases)
Maibaum v. (Mem.)
v. Mansfield R. & Transp. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
United States, Miller v.
Miller v. (Mem.)
Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v.
v. Moist (231 U. S. 701) 444
Moy Guey Lum v. (Mem.)
Nichols & C. Lumber Co. v. (Mem.)
v. Nichols-Chisholm Lumber Co. (234 U. S. 245) 1298
v. Nipissing Mines Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 744) 463
v. Nipissing Mines Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 765) 1582
Northwestern P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
Ocampo v.
v. Ohio Oil Co. (234 U. S. 548) 1459
Pacific Creosoting Co. v. (Mem.)
Pajarillo v. (Mem.)
Peabody v.
v. Pelican (232 U. S. 442) .. 676
Pennington v.
Perrin v.
Pierce v.
v. Pierce (232 U. S. 290) 609
v. Pierce (232 U. S. 292) 610
v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co. (234 U. S. 548) 1459
Pronovost v.
Rainey v.
v. Rainey (232 U. S. 310) 617
v. Regan (232 U. S. 37) 494
Ryan v. (Mem.)
v. Sandoval (231 U. S. 28) .. 107
v. Southern P. Co. v. (Mem.)
v. Standard Oil Co. (234 U. S. 548) 1459
Stayton v. (Mem.)
Stone, Sand & Gravel Co. v.
Sullivan v. (Mem.)
Summers v.
Sunday Creek Co. v. (Mem.)
Talbert v. (Mem.)
Talbott v. (Mem.)
Texas & P. R. Co. v.
Thurston v.
v. Twenty-Five Packages Panama Hats (231 U. S. 358) .. 267
v. Uncle Sam Oil Co. (234 U. S. 548) 1459
v. Union P. R. Co. (234 U. S. 495) 1426
v. United Engineering & Contracting Co. (234 U. S. 236) 1294
United States Fidelity & G. Co. v.
v. Van Wert (233 U. S. 223) 930
v. Victoria, F. & W. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
v. Vulte (233 U. S. 509) 1071
Washington Securities Co. v.
Weeks v.

Digitized by Google

United States, Whitridge (231 U. S. 144) 159
Wilson v.
Wood v. (Mem.)
v. Woodworth & L. C. R. Co. (234 U. S. 1) 1185
Yancey v. (Mem.)
v. Young (232 U. S. 155) 548
United States ex rel. Goldberg v. Daniels (231 U. S. 218) .. 191
Grand Rapids Timber Co. v. Fisher (Mem.) (231 U. S. 763) 471
Brown v. Lane (232 U. S. 598) 748
Texas Portland Cement Co. v. McCord (233 U. S. 157) 893
United States use of General Electric Co., Title Guaranty & S. Co. v. (Mem.)
McMillan, Equitable Surety Co. v.
United States Fidelity & G. Co., French Mut. General Soc. of Mut. Ins. v. (Mem.)
v. Kentucky (231 U. S. 394) 283
v. United States (231 U. S. 237) 200
United States Trust Co. v. National Savings & T. Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 768) 473

V.

Valdes v. Larrinaga (233 U. S. 705) 1163
Vandalia R. Co., Wood v.
Van Dyke v. Cordova Copper Co. (234 U. S. 188) 1273
Van Ness, Roney v. (Mem.)
Van Syckel v. Arsuaga (231 U. S. 601) 393
Van Wert, United States v.
Veith, Hyman, H. & Co. v. (Mem.)
Vermont, Clement Nat. Bank v.
Veve y Diaz, Ex parte (Mem.) 1584
Vicksburg v. Henson (231 U. S. 259) .. 209
v. Vicksburg Water Works Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 739) .. 461
Vicksburg Water Works Co., Vicksburg v. (Mem.)
Victor-American Fuel Co. v. Peccarich (Mem.) (232 U. S. 727) .. 817
Victoria F. & W. R. Co., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
United States v.
Villamil v. de Jesus (Mem.) (234 U. S. 768) 1583
Virginia, Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.)
v. West Virginia (231 U. S. 89) 135
v. West Virginia (234 U. S. 117) 1243
Vulte, United States v.

W.

Wabash R. Co. v. Hayes (234 U. S. 86) 1226
W. A. Gaines & Co. v. Turner-Looker Co. (Mem.) (231 U. S. 769) 473
Wagg, Herbert v. (Mem.)
Waldin v. Comfort (Mem.) (234 U. S. 764) 1582
Walker, Hawley v. (Mem.)
v. Iowa C. R. Co (Mem.) (231 U. S. 746) 464
Waltham Watch Co. v. Keene (Mem.) (232 U. S. 724) 815
Warner, Baker v.
Washington, Garland v.
v. Tearney (Mem.) (232 U. S. 717) 812
Washington Dredging & Improv. Co. v. (Mem.)
Washington ex rel. Curtiss, Carlson v.
Linhoff, Seattle, R. & S. R. Co. v.
Washington Dredging & Improv. Co. v. Washington (Mem.) (231 U. S. 742) 463
Washington Securities Co. v. United States (234 U. S. 76) 1220
Washington Terminal Co., Richards v.
Washoe Copper Co., Bliss v. (Mem.)
Watts, Lane v.
Waycross, Browning v.
Webb, Munsey v.
Weeks v. United States (232 U. S. 383) 652
Weiner, Windolph use of, Adams Express Co. v. (Mem.)
Weinman v. De Palma (232 U. S. 571) 733
Welsbach Gas Lamp Co., Smith Incandescent Light Co. v. (Mem.)
Welsch v. Riley (Mem.) (231 U. S. 760) 470
West, Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v.
Western Transit Co., Davidson Steamship Co. v. (Mem.)
Western U. Teleg. Co., American Bell Teleph. Co. v. (Mem.)
v. Brown (234 U. S. 542) 1457
Louisville & N. R. Co. v.
v. Trapp (Mem.) (231 U. S. 763) 471
West Virginia, Virginia v.
Wheeler v. Sohmer (233 U. S. 434) .. 1030
White v. Island Transp. Co. (233 U. S. 346) 993
White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts. See S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts.
Whiteside, Grannis v.
Norton v. (Mem.)
Whitridge, United States v.
Wilder, Aurora v. (Mem.)

Digitized by Google

William Cramp & Sons Ship & E. Bldg. Co. v. International Curtis Marine Turbine Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 755) 1578
Williams, Erie R. Co. v.
v. Friedrichs (Mem.) (234 U. S. 763) 1581
Lapina v.
Little v.
Rosen v. (Mem.)
Williamson v. Osenton (232 U. S. 619) 758
Willow River Land & Irrig. Co., Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. (Mem.)
Wilson v. United States (232 U. S. 563) 728
v. United States (232 U. S. 563) 728
Winans, De Bearn v. (Mem.)
Windolph use of Weiner, Adams Express Co. v. (Mem.)
W. McMillan & Son. See EQUITABLE SURETY CO. v. UNITED STATES USE OF McMILLAN.
Wisconsin, Fahringer v. (Mem.)
Wisconsin ex rel. Bolens v. Frear (231 U. S. 616) 400
Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. (Mem.) (234 U. S. 766) 1583
Wolf Bros. & Co., Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. (Mem.)
Wood v. Vandalia R. Co. (231 U. S. 1) 97
v. United States (Mem.) (232 U. S. 731) 818
Woodford, Louisville & N. R. Co. v.
Woodward, Woodward Cotton Co. v. (Mem.)
Woodward Co. v. Hurd (232 U. S. 428) 670
Woodward Cotton Co. v. Woodward (Mem.))232 U. S. 716).. 812
Woodworth & L. C. R. Co., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.
United States v.
Work v. United Globe Mines (231 U. S. 595 389
W. R. Grace & Co., Rainey v.
Wright v. Louisville, & N. R. Co. (Mem.) 1584
W. S. Butler & Co., Palmenberg v. (Mem.)
W. Schneider Wholesale Wine & Liquor Co. v. Diederich (Mem.) (232 U. S. 720) 814
v. Diederich (Mem.) (232 U. S. 726) 816
Wyandotte County Gas Co. v. Kansas ex rel. Marshall (231 U. S. 622) 404

Y.

Yacht Tax Cases. See BILLINGS v. UNITED STATES.
Yancey v. United States (Mem.) (231 U. S. 768) 473
Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Brewer (231 U. S. 245) 204
Pons v. (Mem.)
Yee Ting Woh v. Hirstius (Mem.) (232 U. S. 734) 819
York Silk Mfg. Co., Pennsylvania v. (Mem.)
Yoshiro Nakayama v. Mansfield (Mem.) (231 U. S. 765).. 472
Young v. Central R. Co. of N. J. (232 U. S. 602) 750
Smythe, Field Co., Ex parte (Mem.) (231 U. S. 734) .. 459
United States v.

Z.

Zachary, North Carolina R. Co. v.
Zayas v. Lothrop, Luce, & Co. (231 U. S. 171) 172
Zeller v. New Jersey (Mem.) (231 U. S. 737) 460

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

Vol. 231.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1913,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 231,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION

Off. Rep. 231 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1–	Wood v. Vandalia R. Co.	97
2–3	" "	98
3–5	" "	99
5–8	" "	100
8	" "	101
9	Luria v. United States	101
17–18	" "	103
18–21	" "	104
21–23	" "	105
23–26	" "	106
26–28	" "	107
28	United States v. Sandoval	107
36–38	" "	110
38–40	" "	111
40–43	" "	112
43–45	" "	113
45–48	" "	114
48–49	" "	115
50	National City Bank v. Hotchkiss	115
54–56	" "	119
56–59	" "	120
59	" "	121
60	Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Ernst	121
65–67	" "	126
67	" "	127
68	Baltic Min. Co. v. Massachusetts	127
78–79	" "	131
79–82	" "	132
82–84	" "	133
84–87	" "	134
87–88	" "	135
89	Virginia v. West Virginia	135
90–91	" "	136
92	Summers v. United States	137
98	" "	138
98–100	" "	139
100–103	" "	140
103–105	" "	141
105–106	" "	142
106–107	Alzua v. Johnson	142
107–110	Alzua v. Johnson	143
110–112	" "	144
112	Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States	144
118–120	" "	146
120	Clement Nat. Bank v. Vermont	147
126–129	" "	152
129–131	" "	153
131–133	" "	154
133–135	" "	155
135–138	" "	156
138–141	" "	157
141–143	" "	158
143	" "	159
144	United States v. Whitridge	159
145–147	" "	161
147–149	" "	162
150	Munsey v. Webb	162
154–156	" "	165
156–157	" "	166
157	Buchser v. Buchser	166
161	" "	167
161–162	" "	168
162	Straus v. Foxworth	168
167–169	" "	171
169–171	" "	172
171	Zayas v. Lothrop, Luce, & Co.	172
173–175	" "	173
175–177	" "	174
177–180	" "	175
180–181	" "	176
181–182	Northern P. R. Co. v. Houston	176
182–183	" "	177
183	United States v. Davis	177
186–188	" "	178
188–190	" "	179
190	Union P. R. Co. v. Laramie Stock Yards Co.	179
196–198	" "	181
198–200	" "	182
200–203	" "	183
203–204	" "	184

Digitized by Google

Off. Rep. 231 U. S.	Title.	Herein.
204	Union P. R. Co. v. Snow	184
207–208	" "	186
208–210	" "	187
210–213	" "	188
213	" "	189
213–214	Union P. R. Co. v. Sides	189
215	Kener v. La Grange Mills	189
217	" "	190
217–218	" "	191
218–221	United States ex rel. Goldberg v. Daniels	191
221–222	" "	192
222	Straus v. American Pub. Asso.	192
229–230	" "	197
230–233	" "	198
233–235	" "	199
235–237	" "	200
237	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States	200
238–239	" "	201
242–244	" "	203
245–247	Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Brewer	204
247–249	" "	205
249	" "	206
250	Marshall v. Dye	206
254–256	" "	207
256–258	" "	208
258–259	" "	209
259	Vicksburg v. Henson	209
260–262	" "	213
262–265	" "	214
265–267	" "	215
267–270	" "	216
270–272	" "	217
272–274	" "	218
274	United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	218
280–283	" "	223
283–285	" "	224
285–288	" "	225
288–291	" "	226
291–293	" "	227
293–296	" "	228
296–298	" "	229
298	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Garrett	229
301–303	" "	238
303–305	" "	239
305–308	" "	240
308–311	" "	241
311–313	" "	242
313–315	" "	243
315–318	" "	244
318–320	" "	245
320	Sturges & B. Mfg. Co. v. Beauchamp	245
324–325	" "	249
325–326	" "	250
326	Eastern Extension, A. & C. Teleg. Co. v. United States	250
327–328	" "	253
328–331	" "	254
331–333	" "	255
333–335	" "	256
335	Little v. Williams	256
336–337	" "	258
337–340	" "	259
340–341	" "	260
341–342	Monson v. Simonson	260
342–345	Monson v. Simonson	261
345–347	" "	262
348	Street & Smith v. Atlas Mfg. Co.	262
349–351	" "	263
351–353	" "	264
353	Downman v. Texas	264
354–355	" "	265
355–357	" "	266
357	" "	267
358	United States v. Twenty-five Packages of Panama Hats	267
359–360	" "	268
360–362	" "	269
363	Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. United States	269
368–370	" "	272
370–373	" "	273
373	" "	274
373	New York ex rel. Amoskeag Sav. Bank v. Purdy	274
376–377	" "	275
377–381	" "	276
381–384	" "	277
384–385	" "	278
385–386	" "	279
386–388	" "	280
388–391	" "	281
391–393	" "	282
393–394	" "	283
394–396	United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Kentucky	283
396–398	" "	284
398–399	" "	285
399	Stratton's Independence v. Howbert	285
406	" "	288
406–413	" "	289
413	" "	290
413–414	" "	291
414–415	" "	292
415–418	" "	293
418–421	" "	294
421–423	" "	295
423	Kansas City S. R. Co. v. United States	296
425–426	" "	297
426–429	" "	298
429–432	" "	299
432	" "	300
437–439	" "	302
439–441	" "	303
441–443	" "	304
443–446	" "	305
446–449	" "	306
449–451	" "	307
451–454	" "	308
454–456	" "	309
456–457	" "	310
457	Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Michigan Railroad Commission	310
458–460	" "	313
460–461	" "	314
461–464	" "	315
464–467	" "	316
467–469	" "	317
469–472	" "	318
472–473	" "	319
474	Graham v. United States	319
475	" "	322

Digitized by Google

Off. Rep. 231 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
475–478	Graham v. United States	323
478–481	" "	324
481	" "	325
482	Chavez v. De Bergere	325
483–484	" "	327
484–486	" "	328
486–489	" "	329
489–491	" "	330
492	United States v. Carter	330
492–494	" "	331
494–495	" "	332
495	New York L. Ins. Co. v. Deer Lodge County	332
496–501	" "	334
501–503	" "	335
503–506	" "	336
506–508	" "	337
508–511	" "	338
511–512	" "	339
513	Greey v. Dockendorff	339
513–515	" "	342
515–517	" "	343
517	Kinder v. Scharff	343
520	" "	344
520–521	" "	345
522	Ludvigh v. American Woolen Co.	345
522–525	" "	348
525–527	" "	349
527–530	" "	350
530	Peabody v. United States	351
535–536	" "	352
536–539	" "	353
539–540	" "	354
541	Springstead v. Crawfordsville State Bank	354
541–543	" "	356
543	Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Moore	356
547–548	" "	362
548–551	" "	363
551–554	" "	364
554–556	" "	365
556–559	" "	366
559–560	" "	367
560	Prudential Ins. Co. v. Moore	367
561–563	" "	370
563–566	" "	371
566–568	" "	372
568	Seattle, R. & S. R. Co. v. Washington ex rel. Linhoff	372
568–570	" "	374
571–573	Pullman Co. v. Croom	375
573–575	" "	376
575–577	" "	377
578	Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis	377
579–581	" "	380
581–583	" "	381
583	John v. Paullin	381
584–585	" "	382
585–587	" "	383
588–589	Baker v. Warner	384
589–590	" "	385
591–593	" "	388
593–594	" "	389
595	Work v. United Globe Mines	389
597–599	" "	392
599–600	" "	393
601	Van Syckel v. Arsuaga	393
601–603	" "	395
603–606	" "	396

Off. Rep. 231 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
606–609	Van Syckel v. Arsuaga	397
609–611	" "	398
611–614	" "	399
614–615	" "	400
616	Wisconsin ex rel. Bolens v. Frear	400
617	" "	402
617–620	" "	403
620–622	" "	404
622	Wyandotte County Gas Co. v. Kansas ex rel. Marshall	404
625	" "	407
625–628	" "	408
628–630	" "	409
631	Pennington v. United States	410
632–634	" "	411
634–637	" "	412
637–638	" "	413
639	Re Louisville	413
641–643	" "	414
643–645	" "	415
645–646	" "	416
646	Re Engelhard & Sons Co.	416
647–649	" "	417
649–652	" "	418
652	" "	419
652–653	Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co.	419
654	United States v. Antikamnia Chemical Co.	419
659–661	" "	422
661–664	" "	423
664–666	" "	424
666–668	" "	425
669	Mulcrevy v. San Francisco	425
670	" "	428
670–672	" "	429
672–675	" "	430
675	Pennell v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co.	430
676	" "	432
676–679	" "	433
679–680	" "	434
681	Tinker v. Midland Valley Mercantile Co.	434
681–683	" "	435
683	Trimble v. Seattle	435
687	" "	437
687–690	" "	438
690	" "	439
690–692	Piza Hermance v. Caldentey	439
692	Hobbs v. Head & Dowst Co.	440
699	" "	443
699–701	" "	444
701	United States v. Moist	444
702–703	" "	445
703	Rainey v. W. R. Grace & Co.	445
704–706	" "	446
706–709	" "	447
709	" "	448
710	Cameron v. United States	448
714–717	" "	451
717–719	" "	452
719–722	" "	453
722–724	" "	454
725	Radford v. Myers	454
727–730	" "	456
730–732	" "	457
732–733	" "	458
734–769	Memorandum Decisions	459–473

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

---

[1] WILLIAM J. WOOD, John F. McClure, Frank E. Payne, et al., Appts.,
v.
VANDALIA RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1–8.)

Carriers — rate regulation — reasonableness — cost of operation.

The ratio of the total operating expenses of a railroad or of a railroad division to the entire receipts of such railroad or division affords in itself no sufficient basis, when testing the reasonableness of rates prescribed under state authority, for determining the cost of transportation of intrastate freight traffic moving on class rates between two points of such division. Before such ratio can properly be used for this purpose there must be evidence justifying the conclusion that the cost of transportation in proportion to revenue is substantially the same for the particular traffic in question as for the total business of the road or division, or, if there is a material difference, satisfactorily showing its nature and extent.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. d. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 11.]

Argued December 17, 1912. Decided October 20, 1913.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Indiana Railroad Commission, prescribing maximum freight rates. Reversed and remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill without prejudice.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James E. McCullough argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas M. Honan, Attorney General of Indiana, and Messrs. Bernard Korbly and Willard New, filed a brief for appellants:

The special master's report shows upon its face that the finding therein, touching material and controlling facts in the cause, is based upon an erroneous view of the law, and that in reality there is no evidence in the cause to support the finding as to such facts.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S.

NOTE.—On state regulation generally of tolls, rates, and prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 183.

On elements entering into a determination of reasonableness of railroad rates prescribed by state for local traffic—see notes to Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia County, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 108, and State ex rel. McCue v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1001.

On the reasonableness generally of state limitation of railroad rates—see note to Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 44 L. ed. U. S. 417.

Digitized by Google

19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

In cases of the character of the one in hand, the ordinary rule, that the findings of the master and court below are conclusive upon appeal, unless unsupported by the evidence, or made under an erroneous view of the law, does not obtain.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

Mr. Charles W. Smith also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry H. Hornbrook and Albert P. Smith, filed a brief for appellants:

Every presumption of fact stands for the validity of the order of the railroad commission. One who asserts the invalidity of the order must establish the alleged invalidity with certainty and precision by competent testimony.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 173, 44 L. ed. 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 264, 46 L. ed. 1156, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The general equity rule that the finding of the master, approved by the trial court, will not be reversed on appeal, does not apply to rate cases.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, supra; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 173, 44 L. ed. 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

No decision in a rate case determines the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the rate except for the particular case.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, 171 U. S. 361, 43 L. ed. 197, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 888.

The case for appellee is not made out, even if it has established—which these appellants deny—that the classified freight carried under the order could only be carried at a loss. It must go further and show—the burden of proof is upon it to show— that the entire business of its transportation of all persons, freight, and commodities, where such business is domestic or intrastate, under the rates prescribed by the state, cannot as a total, including the classified freight covered by the order of the commission, be transacted at a fair profit.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 267, 46 L. ed. 1151, 1157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398.

Mr. John G. Williams argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, D. P. Williams, and S. O. Pickens, filed a brief for appellee:

The decree as rendered is right in every respect, and should be in all things affirmed.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The bill in this suit was filed by the Vandalia Railroad Company, appellee, to restrain the enforcement of an order made by the Railroad Commission of Indiana, on December 14, 1906, prescribing maximum freight rates for certain intrastate traffic. The ground of attack was that the rates so fixed would not yield sufficient revenue to pay the actual cost of the transportation covered by the order, and, hence, that the order violated the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The case was referred to a special master, who made a report, sustaining the contention of the railroad company, which was confirmed by the circuit court. Decree was entered accordingly, setting aside the order, and permanently enjoining proceedings to enforce it. Members of the commission, and the shippers on whose petition this action was taken (who were made defendants below), prosecute this appeal.

The assignments of error are addressed to the single point that the evidence failed to warrant the conclusion that the prescribed rates were so unreasonably low that, if they were maintained, the company would be deprived of its property without due process of law.

The Vandalia Railroad Company is a consolidated corporation, organized on January 1, 1905, under the [3] laws of Indiana and Illinois, pursuant to an agreement made by five railroad companies. Of these the Terre Haute & Indianapolis Company owned a railroad extending from Indianapolis westward to the boundary between the states of Indiana and Illinois, and the St. Louis, Vandalia, & Terre Haute Company owned a railroad extending from that point to East St. Louis, Illinois. These two lines, forming a continuous route between Indianapolis and East St. Louis, constituted what was called the St. Louis division of the new company. The other lines entering into the consolidation were the Terre Haute & Logansport, from Terre Haute to Logansport and South Bend, Indiana; the Logansport and Toledo, from Logansport to Butler, Indiana; and the Indianapolis & Vincennes, from Indianapolis to Vincennes, Indiana.

Digitized by Google

The order applied to that portion of the Vandalia Company's road which lay between Indianapolis and the western boundary of Indiana, a distance of about 80 miles, which originally belonged to the Terre Haute & Indianapolis Company. The order was further limited to the freight traffic moving on "class rates;" that is, to the traffic, having its origin and destination on this part of the company's line, which was embraced in the six classes of the "official classification" as theretofore established by the company. The existing class rates were found by the commission to be unreasonably high, and the maximum rates in question were ordered to be substituted as just and reasonable.

There was no proof of the value of the complainant's property within the state of Indiana, or of the return it received from its entire intrastate business. Nor was there proof of the value of that portion of its road which was affected by the order, or of the return from all of its intrastate business upon that part of its lines. No attempt was made to supply proof of that sort. For all that appears, [4] the Vandalia Company might enjoy, notwithstanding the enforcement of the rates in question, ample revenue from its intrastate operations to give it a fair return both as to all its lines within the state and also as to that portion to which the order referred.

The total tonnage of all kinds of freight on the 80 miles of railroad from Indianapolis to the Illinois boundary cannot be ascertained from the evidence. The amount of traffic moving on commodity rates is not shown. It was found by the master, and it is undisputed, that the gross revenue from the transportation of that portion of the traffic which constituted the classified intrastate freight, on the described 80 miles of road, during the three years prior to the making of the order, was as follows: 1904, $79,803.80; 1905, $91,067.56; 1906, $102,241.15; and that the gross revenue from the same traffic, under the rates prescribed by the commission, would have been in 1904, $52,222.12; in 1905, $60,079.13; in 1906, $66,936.99. This would have been a large reduction in the gross revenue from that particular traffic, but it must not be overlooked that the commission found that the former rates were excessive; and the effect of this reduction upon the company's net return was to be satisfactorily proved, and could not be assumed.

The conclusion in the court below was reached in the following manner: The complainant showed, and the master found, that for the year 1904 the operating expenses upon the line between Indianapolis and the Illinois boundary were 74.50 per cent of the whole earnings upon that line from every source, and that after consolidation, in the years 1905 and 1906, the operating expenses of the entire St. Louis division were respectively 73.03 and 73.64 per cent of the entire earnings of that division. These ratios were then applied for the purpose of determining the expense of transporting that part of the freight which moved under class rates between stations on the road from [5] Indianapolis to the Illinois boundary. Thus, it was assumed that, as the gross revenue from this classified freight was $79,803.80 in 1904, the expense of transporting it was 74.50 per cent of that amount, or $59,453.83; that, in 1905, with a gross revenue of $91,067.56, the expense was 73.03 per cent thereof, or $66,506.64; and that in 1906, with a gross revenue of $102,241.15, the expense was 72.64 per cent, or $74,267.97. According to this method of calculation, the revenue which would have been received under the order of the commission would have been less than the expense of transportation.

It is plain, however, that it does not follow from the mere fact that the total operating expenses of a railroad, or of a division of a railroad, bear a given relation to the entire receipts of that road or division, that the cost of transportation in the case of a particular class of traffic bears the same relation to the revenue derived from that class. The ratio, in the first case, is found by bringing together a great variety of operations involving various rates and different outlays for different sorts of traffic. It is predicated of the whole volume of business considered as such, and may be far from true of some part of it considered separately. It does not purport to be an expression of the relative cost of any specified part, but simply of that of the entire traffic to which it applies.

How hazardous may be the use of such a ratio to determine the relative cost of a fragment of the business is apparent in this case. Thus it appeared that the total gross earnings of the complainant's St. Louis division in the year 1905 was $4,750,811.13. Of this, the entire gross receipts from the classified freight here in question were only $91,067.56, or less than two per cent. The expenses of the division for that year were $3,469,544.81, or 73.03 per cent of the total earnings as stated. In 1906, the earnings of the St. Louis division were $5,480,094.77, and the expenses were $3,980,906.90, or 72.64 per cent. These [6] amounts embrace interstate and intrastate traffic, freight and passenger, and all freight, whether moving on class or commodity rates. A large increase or reduction in the class rates on the particular intrastate freight in question, the volume of business being the same (as is the assumption), would have had a very slight effect upon the ratio of cost to earnings based on the entire operations. To illustrate: Had the rates on the small portion of freight here under consideration been 50 per cent higher than they actually were in 1905 and 1906, and had the gross revenue on this traffic been increased accordingly, the total receipts of the division would have been so little enlarged that the ratio of expenses to earnings for the entire division would still have been about 72.33 per cent and 71.97 per cent in those years, respectively. If, on the same amount of traffic, the gross revenue from this classified freight in 1905 had thus been $136,601.34 instead of $91,067.56, and the above ratio were applied to determine the cost of its transportation, that cost would be made to appear to be $98,803.74. On such a calculation, it would follow, of course, that a reduction of 30 per cent even in such rates would bring the revenue on the same amount of business below its cost. Again, it is to be observed that had the rates prescribed by the commission been in force in 1905 and 1906, and had other conditions been the same, the expense ratios for the whole volume of business of the St. Louis division would have been only 73.51 and 73.11 per cent, respectively.

Digitized by Google

In these circumstances, the ratio of total expense to total earnings affords, in itself, no sufficient basis for determining the cost of the transportation of the particular traffic covered by the order under review. It alone furnishes no ground for invalidating the finding of the commission that the existing rates were exorbitant and that the substituted rates would be fair. Before such a ratio could properly be used in setting forth the cost of a specified [7] portion of the traffic, it would be necessary to have evidence either justifying the conclusion that the cost in proportion to the revenue was substantially the same for that part of the traffic as for the whole, or, if there were a material difference, satisfactorily showing its nature and extent.

In defending the use of the method adopted below, appellee relies upon the case of Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. There, the legislature of Nebraska had established a classification for all intrastate freight carried by railroad, and had fixed the maximum rates to be charged therefor. With other evidence, the court had before it the testimony and exhibits furnished by one of the defendants in that case, a secretary of the state board of transportation, and a principal witness for that board, who gave the results of his investigations with respect to the traffic of each company within the state. The ratio of expense to earnings on all business done within the state was thus shown, but reliance was not placed upon that alone. This witness also testified that upon the local business the percentage of expense to earnings would be at least 10 per cent more. We need not follow the elaborate analysis of the exhibits in Smyth v. Ames, supra, by which the appellants undertake to elucidate the differences between the traffic conditions there disclosed and those here involved. It is sufficient to say that the case cited cannot be regarded as affording basis for a contention that a ratio of expense to earnings on the entire business of a railroad, or of a division, can be taken to show the cost of some particular item or class of traffic, in the absence of evidence with respect to that traffic which would warrant the conclusion that its cost in proportion to the revenue therefrom could properly be expressed.

Each case, as was pointed out in Smyth v. Ames, must depend upon its special facts; and the record in the present case is barren of the necessary proof. Attention is [8] called to the expense ratio for the former Terre Haute & Indianapolis Company in the year 1904, that is, prior to the consolidation. But this was based on the total business of the road, and no details are furnished showing that this ratio could rightly be applied to that part of it which made up the classified freight in question. There are certain statements with respect to the heavier cost of the operation of local as compared with through trains, but these statements are clearly inadequate. Local traffic may cost more per unit of freight movement than through traffic, but whether it costs more in proportion to revenue is another matter. That, of course, depends upon the rates charged, and is a fact to be proved. Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 462–465, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1567, 1568, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Missouri Rate Cases (Knott v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.) 230 U. S. 474, 505, 506, 57 L ed. 1571, 1593, 1594, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 975. There was testimony with respect to the cost of handling freight over the platform at the Indianapolis terminal, but this fell far short of the showing required, and it appeared that of the six classes of freight, to which the order applied, the fifth and sixth classes, constituting much more than one half in tonnage of the classified freight, always moved in carload lots loaded by the shipper.

Digitized by Google

The evidence showed that the class rates on local traffic on the line between Indianapolis and the Illinois boundary, which were maintained by the Vandalia Company, and condemned by the commission as unreasonable, were higher than the class rates for corresponding distances to local stations in Indiana on other lines (including one of the Vandalia Company's divisions) running out of Indianapolis to the east and south. It wholly failed to sustain the contention that the action of the commission in ordering the reduction complained of transcended the limits imposed by the 14th Amendment.

The decree is reversed and the case remanded, with direction to dismiss the bill without prejudice.

---

[9] GEORGE A. LURIA, Appt., v. UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 9–28.)

Appeal — question not raised below.

1. The sufficiency of the petition, in a proceeding under the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 596, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 124, 537), § 15, to cancel a naturalization certificate, to tender the issue of fraud on which the case was heard and determined below, cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — naturalization — impeaching certificate.

2. The express declaration in the act of June 29, 1906, § 15, making naturalization certificates impeachable when fraudulently or illegally procured, that the provisions of that section shall apply to certificates issued under prior laws as well as those issued under that act, makes applicable to certificates theretofore issued the provisions of the second paragraph of that section, dealing with the evidential effect of taking up a permanent residence in a foreign country within five years after securing the certificate, although this paragraph was inserted by way of amendment while the section was under consideration in the House of Representatives.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — naturalization — future residence.

3. The right to naturalization under U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2165–2170, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1329–1333, was by necessary implication conferred upon such aliens only as contemplated the continuance of a residence already established in the United States.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — naturalization — congressional control — impeaching certificate.

4. Congress did not exceed its power over the naturalization of aliens by providing in the act of June 29, 1906, § 15, for the orderly cancelation, after full notice and hearing, of naturalization certificates which have been procured fraudulently or illegally.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — legislative presumption — impeaching naturalization certificate — subsequent residence.

5. Constitutional rights are not invaded by the declaration in § 15 of the naturalization act of June 29, 1906, that taking up a permanent residence in a foreign country within five years after the issuance of a certificate of citizenship shall be considered prima facie evidence of the lack of intention to become a permanent citizen of the United States at the time of the application for citizenship, which, in the absence of countervailing evidence, shall be sufficient to warrant the cancelation of the certificate as fraudulent, since this provision prescribes a rule of evidence, not of substantive right.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 774–778, 799–803, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — retrospective laws — impeaching naturalization certificate — legislative presumption.

6. The retrospective feature of § 15 of the naturalization act of June 29, 1906, for the impeachment of certificates of citizenship fraudulently or illegally procured, which makes applicable to certificates issued under prior laws the declaration of that section that taking up permanent residence in a foreign country within five years after the issuance of the certificate shall be prima facie evidence of a lack of intention to become a permanent citizen of the United States at the time of the application for citizenship, which, in the absence of countervailing evidence, shall be sufficient to warrant the cancelation of the certificate as fraudulent, does not render such legislation invalid.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 948–1006, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the right to trial by jury, generally—see notes to Justices of Supreme Ct. v. United States, 19 L. ed. U. S. 658; Eilenbecker v. District Ct. 33 L. ed. U. S. 801; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Shane, 39 L. ed. U. S. 727; and Perego v. Dodge, 41 L. ed. U. S. 113.

Digitized by Google

Jury — right to trial by — impeaching naturalization certificate.

7. The proceeding under the act of June 29, 1906, § 15, for the cancelation of a naturalization certificate fraudulently or illegally procured, is a suit in equity, and not one at common law, within the meaning of U. S. Const. 7th Amend., preserving the right to trial by jury.

[For other cases, see Jury, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 27.]

Argued April 23, 1913. Decided October 20, 1913.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree setting aside and canceling a naturalization certificate as fraudulently and illegally procured. Affirmed.

See same case below, 184 Fed. 643.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Louis Marshall argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. M. Friedenberg, filed a brief for appellant:

For purposes of citizenship, persons born and persons naturalized in the United States are placed on an exact equality by the Constitution.

Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 165, 22 L. ed. 627; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. 642; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 109, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 15 L. ed. 691; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 101, 28 L. ed. 643, 645, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 825, 6 L. ed. 224; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 702, 703, 42 L. ed. 909, 910, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

While it is true that it is within the province of a legislature to enact that proof of one fact shall be prima facie evidence of another which is the main fact in issue, the inference must not be arbitrary, but there must be a rational relation between the two facts.

Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 55 L. ed. 191, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; People v. Cannon, 139 N. Y. 43, 36 Am. St. Rep. 668, 34 N. E. 759.

The law is invalid if construed to apply to persons naturalized under the prior act.

Woart v. Winnick, 3 N. H. 473, 14 Am. Dec. 384; Society for Propagation of Gospel v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. 139, Fed. Cas. No. 13,156; Conrad v. Smith, 6 N. D. 337, 70 N. W. 816.

A court may refer to the public history of the times, and to legislative documents, to ascertain the reason of an enactment as well as the meaning of particular provisions therein; and to that end may consider the evil which it is designed to remedy, contemporaneous events, and the existing situation with regard to the subject-matter of the legislation as it was pressed upon the attention of the legislative body.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 79, 23 L. ed. 224, 228; Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 60, 25 L. ed. 428; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 463, 36 L. ed. 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; The Delaware, 161 U. S. 472, 40 L. ed. 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 331, 42 L. ed. 1057, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 495, 48 L. ed. 1090, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 19, 49 L. ed. 370, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 539, 53 L. ed. 315, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Wadsworth v. Boysen, 78 C. C. A. 437, 148 Fed. 775; Tenement House Dept. v. Moeschen, 179 N. Y. 325, 70 L.R.A. 704, 103 Am. St. Rep. 910, 72 N. E. 231, 1 Ann. Cas. 439; Musco v. United Surety Co. 196 N. Y. 465, 134 Am. St. Rep. 851, 90 N. E. 171.

The appellant did not take up a permanent residence at Johannesburg, but continued to be a legal resident of the United States.

Dupuy v. Wurtz, 53 N. Y. 556; Moorhouse v. Lord, 10 H. L. Cas. 272, 1 New Reports, 555, 32 L. J. Ch. N. S. 295, 9 Jur. N. S. 677, 8 L. T. N. S. 212, 11 Week. Rep. 637; Huntly v. Gaskell [1906] A. C. 56, 75 L. J. P. C. N. S. 1, 94 L. T. N. S. 33, 22 Times L. R. 144; Re Newcomb, 192 N. Y. 238, 84 N. E. 950.

A bill of attainder is a legislative act which inflicts punishment without judicial trial.

Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 323, 18 L. ed. 363; Re Yung Sing Hee, 36 Fed. 437.

A statute belongs to the class of ex post facto laws which, by its necessary operation, and in its relation to the offense, or its consequences, alters the situation of the accused to his disadvantage.

Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L. ed. 356; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333, 18 L. ed. 366; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 351, 42 L. ed. 1066, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Green v. Shumway, 39 N. Y. 418.

The appellant was entitled to a trial by jury of the issues presented in the pleadings.

Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433, 446, 7 L. ed. 732, 736; Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Comstock, 16 Wall. 258, 21 L. ed. 493; Garnhart v. United States, 16 Wall. 162, 21 L. ed. 275; The Sarah, 8 Wheat. 391, 5 L. ed. 644; Morris's Cotton, 8 Wall. 507, 19 L. ed.

Digitized by Google

481; Elliott v. Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 47 L. ed. 200, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

Section 15 of the naturalization act of June 29, 1906, is constitutional, even as applied to certificates of naturalization procured under prior statutes.

Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 56 L. ed. 1066, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

The provisions of the second paragraph of the act of 1906, making the taking up of a permanent residence abroad within five years after an alien's naturalization prima facie evidence of a lack of intention on his part to become a permanent resident of the United States at the time of filing his application for citizenship, are valid and constitutional.

Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U. S. 35, 42, 55 L. ed. 78, 80, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 226, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 463, 2 N. C. C. A. 243; Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219, 238, 55 L. ed. 191, 200, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145.

The fact that the presumption applies to the trial of an issue to be determined by facts which occurred before the presumption existed is immaterial.

Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576, 15 L. ed. 35; Howard v. Moot, 64 N. Y. 262; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304.

This is only a species of the general regulation of procedure which the legislature may always change, even when, as in the case of criminal statutes passed by the states, it is subject to the prohibition against ex post facto legislation.

Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Thompson v. Missouri, 171 U. S. 380, 43 L. ed. 204, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922.

The evidence shows that Luria took up his permanent residence in South Africa under such circumstances as to justify the presumption that he had no intention of residing permanently in the United States at the time of his naturalization.

Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 422, 423, 14 L. ed. 482, 483; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 328, 32 L. ed. 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 706, 34 L. ed. 1082, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

A suit to cancel a certificate of naturalization on the ground of fraud in no wise differs from a suit to cancel a patent, and is clearly an equitable proceeding.

United States v. Mansour, 170 Fed. 671.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal brings under review a decree setting aside and canceling, under § 15 of the act of June 29, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 596, 601, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 124, 537, as fraudulently and illegally procured, a certificate of citizenship theretofore issued to George A. Luria by the court of common pleas of the city and county of New York. 184 Fed. 643.

The petition was not carefully prepared, and yet it doubtless was designed to charge that the certificate was fraudulently and illegally procured, in that Luria did not at the time intend to become a permanent citizen of the United States, but only to obtain the indicia of such citizenship in order that he might enjoy its advantages and protection, and yet take up and maintain a permanent residence in a foreign country. There was a prayer that the certificate be set aside and canceled because "procured illegally." The sufficiency of the petition was not challenged, and the case was heard and determined as if the issue just described were adequately tendered. In the opinion rendered by the district court it was said, after observing that the petition was subject to criticism: "That point, however, was not raised, and I suppose the defendant does not mean to raise it." This view of his attitude passed unquestioned then, and it is too late to question it now.

The case was heard upon an agreed statement and some accompanying papers, from all of which it indubitably appeared that Luria was born in Wilna, Russia, in 1865 or 1868, and came to New York in 1888; that he entered a medical college of that city the next year and was graduated therefrom in 1893; that he applied for and procured [18] the certificate of citizenship in July, 1894; that in the following month he sought and obtained a passport from the Department of State, and in November left the United States for the Transvaal, South Africa, arriving in December; that from that time to the date of the hearing, in December, 1910, he resided and practised his profession in South Africa; that he joined the South African Medical Association and served in the Boer war; that his only return to the United States was for four or five months in 1907, for the temporary purpose of taking a postgraduate course in a medical school in New York; and that when entering that school he gave as his address, Johannesburg, South Africa. From the facts so appearing the district court found and held that within a few months after securing the certificate of citizenship Luria went to and took up a permanent residence in South Africa, and that this, under § 15 of the act of 1906, constituted prima facie evidence of a lack of intention on his part to become a permanent citizen of the United States at the time he applied for the certificate. In the papers accompanying the agreed statement there were some declarations which, if separately considered, would tend to engender the belief that he had not taken up a permanent residence in South Africa, and was only a temporary sojourner therein; but the district court, upon weighing and considering those declarations in connection with all the facts disclosed, as was necessary, concluded that the declarations could not be taken at their face value, and that the residence in South Africa was intended to be, and was, permanent in character. We concur in that conclusion.

Digitized by Google

In his answer, Luria interposed the defense that his presence in the Transvaal was solely for the purpose of promoting his health, the implication being that when he went there his health was impaired in such a way that a residence in that country was necessary or advisable, [19] and therefore that taking up such a residence ought not to be accepted as indicating that when he was naturalized it was not his intention to become a permanent citizen of the United States. He does not appear to have been present at the hearing, and although there was ample time (ten months after filing his answer) to take his deposition, it was not taken, and there was substantially no attempt to sustain this defense, or to explain his permanent removal to the Transvaal so soon after he procured the certificate of citizenship. True, it appeared that in 1909 he filed at the United States Consulate in Johannesburg, in support of an application for registration as a citizen of the United States, two certificates from medical practitioners, stating, in effect, that his residence in the Transvaal was for purposes of health; but those certificates did not rise to the dignity of proof in the present case. Besides being ex parte, they were meager, not under oath, and not accepted by the consular officers as adequate or satisfactory. Thus, we think the district court rightly held that there was no countervailing evidence sufficient to overcome the evidential effect of taking up a permanent residence in the Transvaal so shortly following the naturalization.

Section 15 of the act of 1906, under which this suit was conducted, is as follows:

"Sec. 15. That it shall be the duty of the United States district attorneys for the respective districts, upon affidavit showing good cause therefor, to institute proceedings in any court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens in the judicial district in which the naturalized citizen may reside at the time of bringing the suit, for the purpose of setting aside and canceling the certificate of citizenship on the ground of fraud, or on the ground that such certificate of citizenship was illegally procured. In any such proceedings the party holding the certificate of citizenship alleged to have been fraudulently or illegally procured shall have [20] sixty days' personal notice in which to make answer to the petition of the United States; and if the holder of such certificate be absent from the United States or from the district in which he last had his residence, such notice shall be given by publication in the manner provided for the service of summons by publication, or upon absentees by the laws of the state or the place where such suit is brought.

"If any alien who shall have secured a certificate of citizenship under the provisions of this act shall, within five years after the issuance of such certificate, return to the country of his nativity, or go to any other foreign country, and take permanent residence therein, it shall be considered prima facie evidence of a lack of intention on the part of such alien to become a permanent citizen of the United States at the time of filing his application for citizenship, and, in the absence of countervailing evidence, it shall be sufficient in the proper proceeding to authorize the cancelation of his certificate of citizenship as fraudulent, and the diplomatic and consular officers of the United States in foreign countries shall from time to time, through the Department of State, furnish the Department of Justice with the names of those within their respective juirsdictions who have such certificates of citizenship, and who have taken permanent residence in the country of their nativity, or in any other foreign country, and such statements, duly certified, shall be admissible in evidence in all courts in proceedings to cancel certificates of citizenship.

"Whenever any certificate of citizenship shall be set aside or canceled, as herein provided, the court in which such judgment or decree is rendered shall make an order canceling such certificate of citizenship, and shall send a certified copy of such order to the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization; and in case such certificate was not originally issued by the court making such order, it shall direct the clerk of the court to transmit a copy of such order and judgment to the court out of which such certificate [21] of citizenship shall have been originally issued. And it shall thereupon be the duty of the clerk of the court receiving such certified copy of the order and judgment of the court to enter the same of record, and to cancel such original certificate of citizenship upon the records, and to notify the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization of such cancelation.

Digitized by Google

"The provisions of this section shall apply not only to certificates of citizenship issued under the provisions of this act, but to all certificates of citizenship which may have been issued heretofore by any court exercising jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings under prior laws."

One of the questions arising under this section is, whether the second paragraph, dealing with the evidential effect of taking up a permanent residence in a foreign country within five years after securing a certificate of citizenship, is confined to certificates issued under the act of 1906, or applies also to those issued under prior laws, as was Luria's. If that paragraph were alone examined, the answer undoubtedly would be that on v certificates under the act of 1906 are included. But the last paragraph also must be considered. It expressly declares that "the provisions of this section" shall apply not only to certificates issued under the act of 1906, but also to all certificates theretofore issued under prior laws. The words "the provisions of this section" naturally mean every part of it, one paragraph as much as another, and that meaning cannot well be rejected without leaving it uncertain as to what those words embrace. Counsel refer to the Congressional Record, which shows that the second paragraph was inserted by way of amendment while the section was being considered in the House of Representatives. But as the section was in its present form when it was finally adopted by that body, as also when it was adopted by the Senate and approved by the President, it would seem that the last paragraph, in view of its plain and unambiguous [22] language, must be accepted as extending the preceding paragraphs to all certificates whether issued theretofore under prior laws, or thereafter, under that act.

But it is said that it was not essential to naturalization under prior laws (Rev. Stat. §§ 2165–2170, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1329–1333) that the applicant should intend thereafter to reside in the United States; that, if he otherwise met the statutory requirements, it was no objection that he intended presently to take up a permanent residence in a foreign country; that the act of 1906, differing from prior laws, requires the applicant to declare "that it is his intention to reside permanently within the United States;" and therefore that Congress, when enacting the second paragraph of § 15, must have intended that it should apply to certificates issued under that act, and not to those issued under prior laws. It is true that § 4 of the act of 1906 exacts from the applicant a declaration of his intention to reside in the United States, and it is also true that the prior laws did not expressly call for such a declaration. But we think it is not true that under the prior laws it was immaterial whether the applicant intended to reside in this country, or presently to take up a permanent residence in a foreign country. On the contrary, by necessary implication, as we think, the prior laws conferred the right to naturalization upon such aliens only as contemplated the continuance of a residence already established in the United States.

Citizenship is membership in a political society, and implies a duty of allegiance on the part of the member and a duty of protection on the part of the society. These are reciprocal obligations, one being a compensation for the other. Under our Constitution, a naturalized citizen stands on an equal footing with the native citizen in all respects, save that of eligibility to the Presidency. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 165, 22 L. ed. 627; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 101, 28 L. ed. 643, 645, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 827, 6 L. ed. 204, 225. Turning to the naturalization laws preceding the act of 1906, being [23] those under which Luria obtained his certificate, we find that they required, first, that the alien, after coming to this country, should declare on oath, before a court or its clerk, that it was bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign sovereignty; second, that at least two years should elapse between the making of that declaration and his application for admission to citizenship; third, that as a condition to his admission the court should be satisfied, through the testimony of citizens, that he had resided within the United States five years at least, and that during that time he had behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; and, fourth, that at the time of his admission he should declare on oath that he would support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounced and abjured all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign sovereignty. These requirements plainly contemplated that the applicant, if admitted, should be a citizen in fact as well as in name,—that he should assume and bear the obligations and duties of that status as well as enjoy its rights and privileges. In other words, it was contemplated that his admission should be mutually beneficial to the government and himself, the proof in respect of his established residence, moral character, and attachment to the principles of the Constitution being exacted because of what they promised for the future, rather than for what they told of the past.

Digitized by Google

By the clearest implication those laws show that it was not intended that naturalization could be secured thereunder by an alien whose purpose was to escape the duties of his native allegiance without taking upon himself those of citizenship here, or by one whose purpose was to reside permanently in a foreign country, and to use his naturalization [24] as a shield against the imposition of duties there, while by his absence he was avoiding his duties here. Naturalization secured with such a purpose was wanting in one of its most essential elements,—good faith on the part of the applicant. It involved a wrongful use of a beneficent law. True, it was not expressly forbidden; neither was it authorized. But, being contrary to the plain implication of the statute, it was unlawful, for what is clearly implied is as much a part of a law as what is expressed. United States v. Babbit, 1 Black, 55, 61, 17 L. ed. 94, 96; McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 672, 42 L. ed. 614, 621, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; South Carolina v. United States, 199 U. S. 437, 451, 50 L. ed. 261, 265, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 4 Ann. Cas. 737.

Perceiving nothing in the prior laws which shows that Congress could not have intended that the last paragraph of § 15 of the act of 1906 should be taken according to the natural meaning and import of its words, we think, as before indicated, that it must be regarded as extending the preceding paragraphs of that section to all certificates of naturalization, whether secured theretofore under prior laws, or thereafter under that act.

Several contentions questioning the constitutional validity of § 15 are advanced, but all, save the one next to be mentioned, are sufficiently answered by observing that the section makes no discrimination between the rights of naturalized and native citizens, and does not in anywise affect or disturb rights acquired through lawful naturalization, but only provides for the orderly cancelation, after full notice and hearing, of certificates of naturalization which have been procured fraudulently or illegally. It does not make any act fraudulent or illegal that was honest and legal when done, imposes no penalties, and at most provides for the annulment, by appropriate judicial proceedings, of merely colorable letters of citizenship, to which their possessors never were lawfully entitled. Johannessen v. United States, 225 U. S. 227, 56 L. ed. 1066, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613. See also Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

[25] Objection is specially directed to the provision which declares that taking up a permanent residence in a foreign country within five years after the issuance of the certificate shall be considered prima facie evidence of a lack of intention to become a permanent citizen of the United States at the time of the application for citizenship, and that in the absence of countervailing evidence the same shall be sufficient to warrant the cancelation of the certificate as fraudulent. It will be observed that this provision prescribes a rule of evidence, not of substantive right. It goes no farther than to establish a rebuttable presumption which the possessor of the certificate is free to overcome. If, in truth, it was his intention at the time of his application to reside permanently in the United States, and his subsequent residence in a foreign country was prompted by considerations which were consistent with that intention, he is at liberty to show it. Not only so, but these are matters of which he possesses full, if not special, knowledge. The controlling rule respecting the power of the legislature in establishing such presumptions is comprehensively stated in Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U. S. 35, 42, 43, 55 L. ed. 78, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1026, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136, Ann. Cas. 1912 A, 463, 2 N. C. C. A. 243, as follows:

"Legislation providing that proof of one fact shall constitute prima facie evidence of the main fact in issue is but to enact a rule of evidence, and quite within the general power of government. Statutes, national and state, dealing with such methods of proof in both civil and criminal cases, abound, and the decisions upholding them are numerous. . . .

"That a legislative presumption of one fact from evidence of another may not constitute a denial of due process of law, or a denial of the equal protection of the law, it is only essential that there shall be some rational connection between the fact proved and the ultimate fact presumed, and that the inference of one fact from proof of another shall not be so unreasonable as to be a purely arbitrary [26] mandate. So, also, it must not, under guise of regulating the presentation of evidence, operate to preclude the party from the right to present his defense to the main fact thus presumed.

"If a legislative provision not unreasonable in itself, prescribing a rule of evidence, in either criminal or civil cases, does not shut out from the party affected a reasonable opportunity to submit to the jury in his defense all of the facts bearing upon the issue, there is no ground for holding that due process of law has been denied him."

Digitized by Google

Of like import are Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 729, 37 L. ed. 905, 918, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 599, 48 L. ed. 575, 581, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 218, 238, 55 L. ed. 191, 200, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 81, 55 L. ed. 369, 378, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912 C, 160; Reitler v. Harris, 223 U. S. 437, 441, 56 L. ed. 497, 499, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248.

Nor is it a valid objection to such legislation that it is made applicable to existing causes of action, as is the case here, the true rule in that regard being well stated in Cooley's Constitutional Limitations, 7th ed. 524, in these words:

"It must also be evident that a right to have one's controversies determined by existing rules of evidence is not a vested right. These rules pertain to the remedies which the state provides for its citizens; and generally in legal contemplation they neither enter into and constitute a part of any contract, nor can be regarded as being of the essence of any right which a party may seek to enforce. Like other rules affecting the remedy, they must therefore at all times be subject to modification and control by the legislature; and the changes which are enacted may lawfully be made applicable to existing causes of action, even in those states in which retrospective laws are forbidden. For the law as changed would only prescribe rules for presenting the evidence in legal controversies in the future; and it could not therefore be called retrospective, [27] even though some of the controversies upon which it may act were in progress before."

This court applied that rule in Webb v. Den, 17 How. 576, 578, 15 L. ed. 35, 36; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 590, 28 L. ed. 262, 268, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Thompson v. Missouri, 171 U. S. 380, 43 L. ed. 204, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922, and Reitler v. Harris, 223 U. S. 437, 441, 56 L. ed. 497, 499, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248.

That the taking up of a permanent residence in a foreign country shortly following naturalization has a bearing upon the purpose with which the latter was sought, and affords some reason for presuming that there was an absence of intention at the time to reside permanently in the United States, is not debatable. No doubt, the reason for the presumption lessens as the period of time between the two events is lengthened. But it is difficult to say at what point the reason so far disappears as to afford no reasonable basis for the presumption. Congress has indicated its opinion that the intervening period may be as much as five years without rendering the presumption baseless. That period seems long, and yet we are not prepared to pronounce it certainly excessive or unreasonable. But we are of opinion that as the intervening time approaches five years, the presumption necessarily must weaken to such a degree as to require but slight countervailing evidence to overcome it. On the other hand, when the intervening time is so short as it is shown to have been in the present case, the presumption cannot be regarded as yielding to anything short of a substantial and convincing explanation. So construed, we think the provision is not in excess of the power of Congress.

Lastly, it is urged that the district court erred in not according to the defendant a trial by jury. The claim is predicated upon the 7th Amendment to the Constitution, which declares that "in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved." This, however, was not a suit at common law. The right asserted and the remedy sought were essentially equitable, [28] not legal, and this, according to the prescribed tests, made it a suit in equity. Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433, 447, 7 L. ed. 732, 737; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 565, 15 L. ed. 994, 998; Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 189, 207, 26 L. ed. 975, 981. In this respect it does not differ from a suit to cancel a patent for public land or letters patent for an invention. See United States v. Stone, 2 Wall. 525, 17 L. ed. 765; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 450, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Finding no error in the record, the decree is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
FELIPE SANDOVAL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 28-49.)

States — effect of admission on congressional regulation.

1. Congressional regulations in an enabling act which a state is required to and does assent to as a condition to admission into the Union remain in force after such admission if, and only if, the subject is one within the regulating power of Congress.

[For other cases, see States, XI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Digitized by Google

Courts — relation to other departments — political questions — Indian tribes.

2. Whether, to what extent, and for what length of time, distinctly Indian communities within the borders of the United States shall be recognized and dealt with as dependent tribes, requiring the guardianship and protection of the United States, are questions to be determined by Congress, and not by the courts.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 2, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — congressional control — effect of citizenship.

3. Citizenship is not in itself an obstacle to the exercise by Congress of its power to enact laws for the benefit and protection of tribal Indians as a dependent people.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — congressional control — communal lands.

4. The lands of the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico, although held in communal fee-simple ownership by the Indians of each pueblo, are subject to the legislation of Congress, enacted in the exercise of the government's guardianship over such Indian communities and their affairs.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indians — congressional control — intoxicating liquors — pueblo lands.

5. Congress, in the exercise of its control over the Indian tribes, could validly prohibit, as it did by the act of January 30, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 506, chap. 109), as supplemented by § 2 of the New Mexico enabling act of June 20, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 310), the introduction of intoxicating liquors into the Indian pueblos in the state of New Mexico, the legislative and executive branches of the Federal government having by a uniform course of action long regarded and treated such pueblos as dependent communities, entitled to the aid and protection of the government like other Indian tribes.

[For other cases, see Indians, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 352.]

Argued February 27, 1913. Decided October 20, 1913.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of New Mexico to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing an indictment in a criminal prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquor into the Santa Clara pueblo. Reversed.

See same case below, 198 Fed. 539.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Bullitt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Louis G. Bissell, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Conditions imposed by Congress upon new states through their enabling acts are valid when they result from the exercise of powers conferred upon the Federal government.

Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

The Federal power over Indians is of this character.

Ibid.; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846; Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 56 L. ed. 1248, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769.

This power permits prohibition against the sale of intoxicants to the Indian wards of the United States, their introduction upon Indian lands, and the exemption of such lands from state taxation.

Choate v. Trapp, 224 U. S. 665, 56 L. ed. 941, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Kansas Indians (Blue Jacket v. Johnson County) 5 Wall. 737, 18 L. ed. 667; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L. ed. 182; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 23 L. ed. 846; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

The presumption is strong in favor of the original existence of Federal jurisdiction over all Indians, and against its subsequent voluntary relinquishment. The surrender of authority and control over the Indian which resides in the United States is not lightly to be presumed; and positive and unmistakable evidence is required to establish it.

United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 54 L. ed. 195, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587.

The Pueblo Indians are plainly "Indian tribes" within the meaning of the Constitution.

Papers, Archæological Inst. of America, Am. ser. 3–4 (1890–2); Report of Bandelier, pt. 1, pp. 50, 118, 130, 139, 140, 198, 201, 206, 228, 275, 276; Twenty-third Report, Bureau of American Ethnology (1901–2), Stevenson, 289.

A general supervisory and governmental authority over the Indians arises and is vested in the United States by necessary implication from their very weakness and dependence and need of protection.

United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. ed. 228, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 54 L. ed. 195, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 56 L. ed. 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.

Pueblo Indians require protection.

Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 254; United

Digitized by Google

States v. Pico, 5 Wall. 536, 18 L. ed. 695; United States v. Ritchie, 17 How. 525, 15 L. ed. 236.

Authorities in opposition to Federal jurisdiction (United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. ed. 295; United States v. Lucero, 1 N. M. 422; United States v. Santistevan, 1 N. M. 583) involved construction of a statute only, and did not involve the present paramount reason for the exercise of Federal jurisdiction over Indians; i. e., protection of Indians (Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 10, 44 L. ed. 53, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Rainbow v. Young, 88 C. C. A. 653, 161 Fed. 835; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. ed. 228, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478).

Their civilization is not inconsistent with their wardship.

Bandelier, Report to Archæological Inst. pt. 1.

Their citizenship is consistent with their wardship.

(a) The Pueblo Indians were citizens of New Mexico.

United States v. Ritchie, 17 How. 525, 15 L. ed. 236.

(b) Citizens may well be wards of the government.

Bowling v. United States, 111 C. C. A. 561, 191 Fed. 22; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; Rainbow v. Young, 88 C. C. A. 653, 161 Fed. 835; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 54 L. ed. 195, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; United States v. Logan, 105 Fed. 240; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116.

(c) Relinquishment of Federal jurisdiction is a political question.

Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 56 L. ed. 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 555, 47 L. ed. 300, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; United States v. Celestine, 215 U. S. 278, 54 L. ed. 195, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L. ed. 182.

Ownership of lands in fee by Indian pueblos is consistent with wardship.

(a) Pueblo ownership in fee is ownership in common.

United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. ed. 295.

(b) Federal governmental power over Indians does not depend upon property rights or title.

Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 56 L. ed. 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Peters v. Malin, 111 Fed. 244; United States v. Allen, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

The presumption against pure gratuities implies the wardship of the Indian beneficiaries.

Allen v. Smith, 173 U. S. 389, 43 L. ed. 741, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; United States v. Realty Co. 163 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 215, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1120.

Decisions by the territorial courts for New Mexico, denying the wardship of the Pueblo Indians, have immediately been nullified by Congress.

Territory v. Delinquent Taxpayers, 12 N. M. 139, 76 Pac. 307; United States v. Mares, 14 N. M. 1, 88 Pac. 1128.

There could have been no irrevocable abandonment by the government of its paternal powers prior to the statehood of New Mexico.

Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Wiggan v. Conolly, 163 U. S. 56, 41 L. ed. 69, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116.

Mr. A. B. Renehan argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Under the Spanish rule the Pueblo Indians were on an equality with European Spaniards and entitled to all the rights of European Spaniards, subject, however, to certain restrictions upon their rights of alienation of property. Under the Mexican government the Pueblo Indians were full-fledged citizens, upon an equality with all other citizens of the Mexican Republic. Being citizens of the Mexican Republic at the date of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, they became citizens of the United States, with all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizenship.

United States v. Ritchie, 17 How. 525, 15 L. ed. 236; United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. ed. 295; United States v. Lucero, 1 N. M. 422; United States v. Santistevan, 1 N. M. 583; United States v. Mares, 14 N. M. 1, 88 Pac. 1128; Territory v. Delinquent Taxpayers, 12 N. M. 139; United States v. Joseph, 1 N. M. 593; De La O v. Acoma, 1 N. M. 226.

The lands of the Pueblo Indians are not such lands as are known as "Indian Country," but are held by them in fee simple, segregated from the public domain, free from all conditions.

United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614,

Digitized by Google

24 L. ed. 295; Territory v. Delinquent Taxpayers, 12 N. M. 139.

The provisions of the enabling act (act of June 20, 1910), and of the Constitution of the state of New Mexico, attempting to bring the Pueblo Indians and their lands within the term of the "intercourse act," are a nullity.

Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; United States Exp. Co. v. Friedman, 112 C. C. A. 219, 191 Fed. 673; Mosier v. United States, 117 C. C. A. 162, 198 Fed. 54; Keller v. United States, 213 U. S. 147, 53 L. ed. 740, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 470, 16 Ann. Cas. 1066; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. ed. 244, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076; Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471; Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shin-Ca) 109 U. S. 556, 561, 27 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396.

If Congress had no power to impose these restrictions upon New Mexico, the state of New Mexico had no right to surrender any of the powers which are expressly reserved to the states by the Federal Constitution.

Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Permoli v. New Orleans, 3 How. 589, 11 L. ed. 739; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L. ed. 227; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. ed. 244, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a criminal prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquor into the Indian country; to wit, the Santa Clara pueblo, in the state of New Mexico. In the district court a demurrer to the indictment was sustained and the indictment dismissed upon the theory that the statute upon which it is founded is invalid, as applied to Indian pueblos in New Mexico, because usurping a part of the police power of the state, and encroaching upon its equal footing with the other states. 198 Fed. 539.

The indictment is founded upon the act of January 30, 1897, 29 Stat. at L. 506, chap. 109, as supplemented by § 2 of the act of June 20, 1910, 36 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 310, being the New Mexico enabling act. The first act makes it a punishable offense to introduce intoxicating liquor into the Indian country, and the second, in naming the conditions upon which New Mexico should be admitted into the Union, [37] prescribed,† in substance, that the lands then owned or occupied by the Pueblo Indians should be deemed and treated as Indian country within the meaning of the first act and of kindred legislation by Congress.

[38] Whether without this legislative interpretation the first act would have included the pueblo lands we need not consider. The territorial supreme court had but recently

†The pertinent portions of the enabling act are:

"Sec. 2. That . . . the said convention shall be, and is hereby, authorized to form a constitution and provide for a state government for said proposed state, all in the manner and under the conditions contained in this act. . . .

"And said convention shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said state—

"First. That . . . the sale, barter, or giving of intoxicating liquors to Indians and the introduction of liquors into Indian country, which term shall also include all lands now owned or occupied by the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, are forever prohibited.

"Second. That the people inhabiting said proposed state do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title . . . to all lands lying within said boundaries, owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes, the right or title to which shall have been acquired through or from the United States or any prior sovereignty, and that until the title of such Indian or Indian tribes shall have been extinguished the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition and under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States; . . . but nothing herein, or in the ordinance herein provided for, shall preclude the said state from taxing, as other lands and other property are taxed, any lands and other property outside of an Indian reservation, owned or held by any Indian, save and except such lands as have been granted or acquired as aforesaid, or as may be granted or confirmed to any Indian or Indians under any act of Congress; but said ordinance shall provide that all such lands shall be exempt from taxation by said state so long and to such extent as Congress has prescribed or may hereafter prescribe. . . .

"Eighth. That whenever hereafter any of the lands contained within Indian reservations or allotments in said proposed state shall be allotted, sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of, they shall be subject for a period of twenty-five years after such allotment, sale, reservation, or other disposal to all the laws of the United States prohibiting the introduction of liquor into the Indian country; and the terms 'Indian' and 'Indian country' shall include the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico and the lands now owned or occupied by them." held that it did not include them (United States v. Mares, 14 N. M. 1, 88 Pac. 1128), and Congress, evidently wishing to make sure of a different result in the future, expressly declared that it should include them. That this was done in the enabling act, and that the state was required to, and did, assent to it, as a condition to admission into the Union, in no wise affects the force of the congressional declaration, if only the subject be within the regulating power of Congress. As was said by this court in Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 574, 55 L. ed. 853, 860, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688: "It may well happen that Congress should embrace in an enactment introducing a new state into the Union, legislation intended as a regulation of commerce among the states, or with Indian tribes situated within the limits of such new state, or regulations touching the sole care and disposition of the public lands or reservations therein, which might be upheld as legislation within the sphere of the plain power of Congress. But in every such case such legislation would derive its force not from any agreement or compact with the proposed new state, nor by reason of its acceptance of such enactment as a term of admission, but solely because the power of Congress extended to the subject, and therefore would not operate to restrict the state's legislative power in respect of any matter which was not plainly within the regulating power of Congress." To the same effect are Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 224, 225, 229, 11 L. ed. 565, 571-574; Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 683, 690, 691, 56 L. ed. 1248, 1256, 1259, 1260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769.

Digitized by Google

The question to be considered, then, is whether the status of the Pueblo Indians and their lands is such that Congress competently can prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquor into those lands notwithstanding the admission of New Mexico to statehood.

There are as many as twenty Indian pueblos scattered [39] over the state, having an aggregate population of over 8,000. The lands belonging to the several pueblos vary in quantity, but usually embrace about 17,000 acres, held in communal, fee-simple ownership under grants from the King of Spain, made during the Spanish sovereignty, and confirmed by Congress since the acquisition of that territory by the United States. 10 Stat. at L. 309, chap. 103, § 8; 11 Stat. at L. 374, chap. 5. As respects six of the pueblos, one being the Santa Clara, adjacent public lands have been reserved by Executive orders for the use and occupancy of the Indians.

The people of the pueblos, although sedentary rather than nomadic in their inclinations, and disposed to peace and industry, are nevertheless Indians in race, customs, and domestic government. Always living in separate and isolated communities, adhering to primitive modes of life, largely influenced by superstition and fetichism, and chiefly governed according to the crude customs inherited from their ancestors, they are essentially a simple, uninformed, and inferior people. Upon the termination of the Spanish sovereignty they were given enlarged political and civil rights by Mexico, but it remains an open question whether they have become citizens of the United States. See treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, arts. 8 and 9, 9 Stat. at L. 922, 929; United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 618, 24 L. ed. 295, 297; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 28 L. ed. 643, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41. Be this as it may, they have been regarded and treated by the United States as requiring special consideration and protection, like other Indian communities. Thus,† public moneys have been expended in presenting them with farming implements and utensils, [40] and in their civilization and instruction; agents and superintendents have been provided to guard their interests; central training schools and day schools at the pueblos have been established and maintained for the education of their children; dams and irrigation works have been constructed to encourage and enable them to cultivate their lands and sustain themselves; public lands, as before indicated, have been reserved for their use and occupancy where their own lands were deemed inadequate; a special attorney has been employed since 1898, at an annual cost of $2,000, to represent them and maintain their rights; and when latterly the territory undertook to tax their lands and other property, Congress forbade such taxation, saying: "That the lands now held by the various villages or pueblos of Pueblo Indians, or by individual members thereof, within Pueblo reservations or lands, in the territory of New Mexico, and all personal property furnished said Indians by the United States, or used in cultivating said lands, and any cattle and sheep now possessed or that may hereafter be acquired by said Indians, shall be free and exempt from taxation of any sort whatsoever, including taxes heretofore levied, if any, until Congress shall otherwise provide." 33 Stat. at L. 1048, 1069, chap. 1479. An exempting provision was also inserted in § 2 of the enabling act.

†See, inter alia, 10 Stat. at L. 330, chap. 167; 17 Stat. at L. 165, chap. 233; 18 Stat. at L. 147, chap. 389; 21 Stat. at L. 130, chap. 85; 22 Stat. at L. 83, chap. 163; 26 Stat. at L. 337, 353, chap. 807; 30 Stat. at L. 594, chap. 545; 36 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 140; Reports Comr. Indian Affairs 1907, p. 58; 1908, p. 55; 1909, p. 48; 1 Kappler, 878, 880; Executive Orders relating to Indian Reservations (1912), 124-127, 129, 130.

Digitized by Google

The local estimate of this people is reflected by a New Mexico statute adopted in 1854, and carried into subsequent compilations, whereby they were "excluded from the privilege of voting at the popular elections of the territory" other than the election of overseers of ditches in which they were interested, and the election of the officers of their pueblos "according to their ancient customs." Laws 1853–4, p. 142, § 3; Comp. Laws 1897, § 1678.

With one accord the reports of the superintendents charged with guarding their interests show that they are [41] dependent upon the fostering care and protection of the government, like reservation Indians in general; that, although industrially superior, they are intellectually and morally inferior to many of them; and that they are easy victims to the evils and debasing influence of intoxicants. We extract the following from published reports of the superintendents:

Albuquerque, 1904: "While a few of these Pueblo Indians are ready for citizenship and have indicated the same by their energy and willingness to accept service from the railroad companies and elsewhere, and by accepting the benefits of schools and churches, a large per cent of them are unable, and not yet enough advanced along the lines of civilization, to take upon themselves the burden of citizenship. It is my opinion that in the event taxation is imposed, it will be but a short time before the masses of the New Mexico Pueblo Indians will become paupers. Their lands will be sold for taxes, the whites and Mexicans will have possession of their ancient grants, and the government will be compelled to support them or witness their extermination."

Sante Fe, 1904: "The Pueblo have little or no money, and they cannot understand why they should be singled out from all other Indians and be compelled to bear burdens [territorial taxes] which they are not able to assume. . . . They will not vote, nor are they sufficiently well informed to do so intelligently."

Zuni, 1904: "Last November when they had their Shaleco dance I determined to put a stop to the drunkenness. I wrote to the Indian Office asking for a detachment from Fort Wingate. I soon received a reply that my request had been granted. I said nothing to anyone. The afternoon the Shaleco arrived the detachment rode in, the Indians thinking they were passing through, and were making preparations to have a good time. When they were notified that a Navaho was celebrating, they [42] promptly arrested him and brought him over to the guardhouse, and during the evening two others were arrested with whisky in their possession, and also a Pueblo Indian. The detachment remained until the dance was over and the visiting Indians had left for their homes."

Sante Fe, 1905: "Until the old customs and Indian practices are broken among this people we cannot hope for a great amount of progress. The secret dance, from which all whites are excluded, is perhaps one of the greatest evils. What goes on at this time I will not attempt to say, but I firmly believe that it is little less than a ribald system of debauchery. The Catholic clergy is unable to put a stop to this evil, and know as little of same as others. The United States mails are not permitted to pass through the streets of the pueblos when one of these dances is in session; travelers are met on the outskirts of the pueblo and escorted at a safe distance around. The time must come when the Pueblos must give up these old pagan customs and become citizens in fact."

Santa Fe, 1906: "There is a greater desire among the Pueblo to live apart and be independent and have nothing to do with the white race than among any other Indians with whom I have worked. They really care nothing for schools, and only patronize them to please their agent and incidentally to get the issues given out by the teacher. The children, however, make desirable pupils, and if they could be retained in school long enough more might be accomplished. The return student going back to the pueblo has a harder task before him than any other class of returned students I know. It is easier to go back to the Sioux tepee and lead a white man's life than to go back to the pueblo and retain the customs and manners taught in the school.

"In pueblo life the one-man domination—the fear of the wrath of the governor of the pueblo—is what holds this people down. The rules of the pueblo are so strict that [43] the individual cannot sow his wheat, plant his corn, or harvest same in the autumn without the permission of the pueblo authorities. The pueblos under my jurisdiction that adhere religiously to old customs and rules are Taos, Picuris, Santo Domingo, and Jemez, tho there are none of them that have made much progress away from the ancient and pagan rites.

"Intemperance is the besetting sin of the Pueblo. . . . If the law against selling intoxicants to this simple and ignorant people is allowed to stand as now interpreted [act of 1897, as construed by territorial court], it simply means the ultimate extermination of the Pueblo and the survival of the fittest."

Digitized by Google

Santa Fe, 1909: "While apparently the Pueblo Indians are law-abiding, it has come to my notice during the past year that in the practice of the Pueblo form of government cruel and inhuman punishment is often inflicted. I have strongly advised the Indians against this, and your office has, through me, done likewise. The Pueblos, however, are very insistent upon retaining their ancient form of government. As long as they are permitted to live a communal life and exercise their ancient form of government, just so long will there be ignorant and wild Indians to civilize. The Pueblo form of government recognizes no other form of government and no other authority. While apparently they submit to the laws of the territory and the government, they do so simply because they are compelled to acquiesce. The returned student who has been five years at the boarding school is compelled to adopt the Indian dress upon his return to the pueblo; he is compelled to submit to all the ancient and heathen customs of his people. If he rebels, he is punished. He therefore lapses back and becomes like one who has never seen the inside of a school."

Zuni, 1909: "The Zunis, especially the old people, are very much opposed to sending their children to school, and [44] to every influence that tends to draw them away from their old ways and habits of living; but by persistent effort, and by appealing to their reason, we succeeded in filling the school with children. The children are happy and contented while at school, but when they go home for a visit, their mothers and older sisters talk with them and make them dissatisfied and they do not wish to return. This is especially true of the girls. . . . Immorality and a general laxness in regard to their family relations, together with their pagan practices, are the great curse of this tribe. They have no marriage ceremony that is binding, and a man will often live with two or three different women during one year. This custom is very demoralizing. In some cases the father will sell his daughters and the husband his wife for the purpose of prostitution. If marriage and divorce laws could be enforced, it would be a great blessing to these people. . . . We have had very little trouble with liquor on the reservation during the past year, and the Pueblo officers co-operate with me in trying to keep it from being brought on the reservation."

This view of Pueblo customs, government, and civilization finds strong corroboration in the writings of ethnologists, such as Bandelier and Stevenson, who, in prosecuting their work, have lived among the Pueblos and closely observed them. Papers Arch. Inst. Am. ser. vol. 3, pt. 1 (1890); Bureau Am. Ethn. Reports, vols. 11 (1889-'90) and 23 (1901-'02).

During the Spanish dominion the Indians of the pueblos were treated as wards requiring special protection, were subjected to restraints and official supervision in the alienation of their property, and were the beneficiaries of a law declaring "that in the places and pueblos of the Indians no wine shall enter, nor shall it be sold to them." Chouteau v. Molony, 16 How. 203, 237, 14 L. ed. 905, 919; Laws of the Indies, Bk. 6, title 1, laws 27 and 36, title 2, law 1; Bk. 5, [45] title 2, law 7; Bk. 4, title 12, laws 7, 9, 16-20; Cedulas and Decrees shown in Hall's Mexican Law, §§ 162-171. After the Mexican succession they were elevated to citizenship and civil rights not before enjoyed, but whether the prior tutelage and restrictions were wholly terminated has been the subject of differing opinions. United States v. Pico, 5 Wall. 536, 540, 18 L. ed. 695, 696; Suñol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 254, 279, 280, 291, 292; 1 Nuevo Febrero Mexicano, pp. 24, 25; Hall's Mexican Laws, § 161; United States v. Ritchie, 17 How. 525, 540, 15 L. ed. 236, 240. In the last case this court observed: "The improvement of the Indians, under the influence of the missionary establishments in New Spain, which had been specially encouraged and protected by the mother country, had, doubtless, qualified them in a measure for the enjoyment of the benefits of the new institutions. In some parts of the country very considerable advancement had been made in civilizing and christianizing the race. From their degraded condition, however, and ignorance generally, the privileges extended to them in the administration of the government must have been limited; and they still, doubtless, required its fostering care and protection." And in the Pico Case the court, referring to the status of an Indian pueblo and its inhabitants during the Mexican régime, said: "The disposition of the lands assigned was subject at all times to the control of the government of the country. The pueblo of Las Flores was an Indian pueblo, and over the inhabitants the government extended a special guardianship."

But it is not necessary to dwell specially upon the legal status of this people under either Spanish or Mexican rule, for whether Indian communities within the limits of the United States may be subjected to its guardianship and protection as dependent wards turns upon other considerations. See Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 225, 11 L. ed. 565, 571. Not only does the Constitution expressly authorize Congress to regulate commerce with the Indian tribes, but [46] long-continued legislative and executive usage and an unbroken current of judicial decisions have attributed to the United States as a superior and civilized nation the power and the duty of exercising a fostering care and protection over all dependent Indian communities within its borders, whether within its original territory or territory subsequently acquired, and whether within or without the limits of a state. As was said by this court in United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. ed. 228, 230, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109: "The power of the general government over these remnants of a race once powerful, now weak and diminished in numbers, is necessary to their protection, as well as to the safety of those among whom they dwell. It must exist in that government, because it never has existed anywhere else, because the theater of its exercise is within the geographical limits of the United States, because it has never been denied, and because it alone can enforce its laws on all the tribes." In Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 315, 55 L. ed. 738, 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, prior decisions were carefully reviewed and it was further said: "Taking these decisions together, it may be taken as the settled doctrine of this court that Congress, in pursuance of the long-established policy of the government, has a right to determine for itself when the guardianship which has been maintained over the Indian shall cease. It is for that body, and not the courts, to determine when the true interests of the Indian require his release from such condition of tutelage."

Digitized by Google

Of course, it is not meant by this that Congress may bring a community or body of people within the range of this power by arbitrarily calling them an Indian tribe, but only that in respect of distinctly Indian communities the questions whether, to what extent, and for what time they shall be recognized and dealt with as dependent tribes requiring the guardianship and protection of the United States are to be determined by Congress, and not by the courts. United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 419, 18 L. ed. 182, 186; [47] United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 443, 445, 47 L. ed. 522, 538, 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 499, 49 L. ed. 848, 853, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 315, 55 L. ed. 738, 749, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

As before indicated, by an uniform course of action beginning as early as 1854 and continued up to the present time, the legislative and executive branches of the government have regarded and treated the Pueblos of New Mexico as dependent communities entitled to its aid and protection, like other Indian tribes, and, considering their Indian lineage, isolated and communal life, primitive customs and limited civilization, this assertion of guardianship over them cannot be said to be arbitrary, but must be regarded as both authorized and controlling. As was said in United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 419, 18 L. ed. 182, 186: "In reference to all matters of this kind, it is the rule of this court to follow the action of the executive and other political departments of the government, whose more special duty it is to determine such affairs. If by them those Indians are recognized as a tribe, this court must do the same. If they are a tribe of Indians, then, by the Constitution of the United States, they are placed, for certain purposes, within the control of the laws of Congress. This control extends, as we have already shown, to the subject of regulating the liquor traffic with them. This power residing in Congress, that body is necessarily supreme in its exercise." In that case the congressional enactment prohibiting the sale of liquor to Indian wards, and forbidding its introduction into the Indian country, was applied to a sale in the state of Michigan to an Indian who had and exercised the right to vote under the laws of the state, and other applications of the statute to Indians and Indian lands in other states are shown in United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 197, 23 L. ed. 846, 848; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; United States v. Sutton, 215 U. S. 291, 54 L. ed. 200, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 1160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630.

It is said that such legislation cannot be made to embrace [48] the Pueblos, because they are citizens. As before stated, whether they are citizens is an open question, and we need not determine it now, because citizenship is not in itself an obstacle to the exercise by Congress of its power to enact laws for the benefit and protection of tribal Indians as a dependent people. Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 308, 47 L. ed. 183, 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 445, 47 L. ed. 532, 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; United States v. Celestine, 215

Digitized by Google

U. S. 278, 290, 54 L. ed. 195, 199, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587.

It also is said that such legislation cannot be made to include the lands of the Pueblos, because the Indians have a fee-simple title. It is true that the Indians of each pueblo do have such a title to all the lands connected therewith, excepting such as are occupied under Executive orders, but it is a communal title, no individual owning any separate tract. In other words, the lands are public lands of the pueblo, and so the situation is essentially the same as it was with the Five Civilized Tribes, whose lands, although owned in fee under patents from the United States, were adjudged subject to the legislation of Congress enacted in the exercise of the government's guardianship over those tribes and their affairs. Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 488, 43 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 308, 47 L. ed. 183, 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 56 L. ed. 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Gritts v. Fisher, 224 U. S. 640, 56 L. ed. 928, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; United States v. Wright, 229 U. S. 226, 57 L. ed. 1160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630. Considering the reasons which underlie the authority of Congress to prohibit the introduction of liquor into the Indian country at all, it seems plain that this authority is sufficiently comprehensive to enable Congress to apply the prohibition to the lands of the Pueblos.

We are not unmindful that in United States v. Joseph, 94 U. S. 614, 24 L. ed. 295, there are some observations not in accord with what is here said of these Indians, but as that case did not turn upon the power of Congress over them or their property, but upon the interpretation and purpose of a statute not nearly so comprehensive as the legislation [49] now before us, and as the observations there made respecting the Pueblos were evidently based upon statements in the opinion of the territorial court, then under review, which are at variance with other recognized sources of information, now available, and with the long-continued action of the legislative and executive departments, that case cannot be regarded as holding that these Indians or their lands are beyond the range of congressional power under the Constitution.

Being a legitimate exercise of that power, the legislation in question does not encroach upon the police power of the state, or disturb the principle of equality among the states. United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 419, 18 L. ed. 182, 186; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 188, 197, 23 L. ed. 846, 848; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. ed. 228, 230, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; Hallowell v. United States, 221 U. S. 317, 55 L. ed. 750, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587, and Ex parte Webb, 225 U. S. 663, 683, 690, 691, 56 L. ed. 1248, 1256, 1259, 1260, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769.

The judgment is accordingly reversed, with directions to overrule the demurrer to the indictment, and to proceed to the disposition of the case in regular course.

Reversed.

---

[50] NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK, Appt.,
v.
HENRY D. HOTCHKISS, as Trustee in Bankruptcy of Henry S. Haskins et al. (No. 459.)

HENRY D. HOTCHKISS, as Trustee in Bankruptcy of Henry S. Haskins et al., Appt.,
v.
NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK. (No. 460.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 50-59.)

Bankruptcy — voidable preference.

1. A bank which credits to the general deposit account of a firm of stock brokers the amount of a clearance loan made with the understanding that it was to be used solely to clear securities, and was to be repaid later in the day, and which does not require the securities released to be kept separate, or that any separate account be kept of money received from deliveries of stock so released, obtains a preference voidable by the brokers' trustee in bankruptcy, where, after the brokers' suspension, it demanded and received from them securities without regard to their source, to make good the brokers' obligation to the bank, with notice in terms that it was thereby receiving a preference, and that the brokers were going into bankruptcy.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 147-222, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — inconsistent claims in judicial proceeding.

2. A trustee in bankruptcy who has sued in equity to recover certain securities alleged to have been transferred to the defendant by way of preference cannot claim the right to elect damages instead of a return of such securities, where they have depreciated in value, because defendant, who was authorized by a stipulation between the parties to sell the securities in its discretion, at the best price obtainable, and hold the proceeds in lieu thereof, exercised its judgment not to sell.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Estoppel, 276–286, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 459 and 460.]

Argued October 17 and 20, 1913. Decided November 3, 1913.

CROSS APPEALS from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, in favor of a trustee in bankruptcy in a suit to recover an alleged preference. Affirmed.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 92, 201 Fed. 664.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John A. Garver argued the cause and filed a brief for the National City Bank:

It must be presumed that everyone has conformed to the law, unless the contrary is affirmatively shown.

Jones, Ev. 2d ed. § 85; Rex v. Hawkins, 10 East, 211; Curtis v. Gokey, 68 N. Y. 304; Ormes v. Dauchy, 82 N. Y. 443, 37 Am. Rep. 583; Getts v. Janesville Wholesale Grocery Co. 163 Fed. 417; Re Neill-Pinckney-Maxwell Co. 170 Fed. 484; Re Leech, 96 C. C. A. 424, 171 Fed. 622; Sexton v. Kessler, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 639, 97 C. C. A. 161, 172 Fed. 535.

The right to recover a preference is exclusively statutory.

Tompkins v. Hunter, 149 N. Y. 122, 43 N. E. 532; Dodge v. McKechnie, 156 N. Y. 520, 51 N. E. 268; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 U. S. 527, 532, 38 L. ed. 540, 542, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Townsend's Case, 1 Plowd. 113; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 371; Atkins v. Kinnan, 20 Wend. 250, 32 Am. Dec. 534; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Southern Teleg. Co. 112 U. S. 306, 310, 28 L. ed. 746, 747, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Campbellsville Lumber Co. v. Hubbert, 50 C. C. A. 435, 112 Fed. 724, affirmed in 191 U. S. 70, 48 L. ed. 101, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Re Bryce, 16 Daly, 443, 12 N. Y. Supp. 284; Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 588, 32 L. ed. 543, 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 327, 44 L. ed. 486, 489, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; North American Transp. & Trading Co. v. Morrison, 178 U. S. 267, 44 L. ed. 1063, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Riggs v. Cragg, 89 N. Y. 479.

A transaction which does not have the effect of diminishing the fund that is distributable among the creditors is not repugnant to the statute.

New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 380, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; National Bank v. Herkimer County Bank, 225 U. S. 178, 184, 56 L. ed. 1042, 1046, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 25, 57 L. ed. 1047, 1050, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Continental & C. Trust & Sav. Bank v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 229 U. S. 435, 57 L. ed. 1268, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Re Sagor, 57 C. C. A. 412, 121 Fed. 658; Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Yaple v. Dahl-Millikan Grocery Co. 193 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 776, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Wild v. Provident Life & Trust Co. 214 U. S. 292, 296, 53 L. ed. 1003, 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619.

A payment is objectionable under § 60 of the bankrupt act only when it has the effect of enabling one creditor to obtain a greater percentage of his claim than other creditors of the same class.

Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 C. C. A. 387, 117 Fed. 1; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 46 App. Div. 335, 61 N. Y. Supp. 604; Re Harpke, 54 C. C. A. 97, 116 Fed. 297; Re Denning, 114 Fed. 221; Gomila v. Wilcombe, 81 C. C. A. 268, 151 Fed. 470.

Prior to the amendment of 1910, the trustee in bankruptcy was required to prove, in a suit of this kind, that the creditor knew that the bankrupt actually intended to give a preference.

Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Re First Nat. Bank, 84 C. C. A. 16, 155 Fed. 100; Rutland County Nat. Bank v. Graves, 156 Fed. 168; Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 960, 91 C. C. A. 200, 165 Fed. 166; Re Leech, 96 C. C. A. 424, 171 Fed. 622; Re Sayed, 185 Fed. 962; Kimmerle v. Farr, 111 C. C. A. 27, 189 Fed. 295; Debus v. Yates, 193 Fed. 435.

Defendant did not have reasonable cause to believe it was obtaining a preference.

Irish v. Citizens' Trust Co. 163 Fed. 880.

The tendency of the courts has been to extend the doctrine of subrogation to every possible case for the protection of one who has advanced money which is used in the discharge of an obligation carrying with it some form of security. Formerly, the courts declined to recognize this right unless the money was paid under a definite agreement, or for the purpose of protecting a junior interest in the security held by the principal creditor; but that limitation is no longer recognized, because the true basis of the doctrine is "the natural justice of placing the burden where it ought to rest."

Matthews v. Fidelity Title & T. Co. 52 Fed. 689.

The courts, and especially those of New York, now apply the doctrine in every instance in which one party pays a debt for which another party is primarily liable, and which, in equity and good conscience, should have been discharged by the latter.

Digitized by Google

Stevens v. King, 84 Me. 291, 24 Atl. 850; Dunlop v. James, 174 N. Y. 416, 67 N. E. 69; Atlantic Trust Co. v. Kinderhook & H. R. Co. 17 App. Div. 212, 45 N. Y. Supp. 492; Louis v. Bauer, 33 App. Div. 293, 53 N. Y. Supp. 985; Peters v. Meyer, 72 App. Div. 587, 76 N. Y. Supp. 1028; Gans v. Thieme, 93 N. Y. 225; Pease v. Egan, 131 N. Y. 273, 30 N. E. 102; Morehouse v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 185 N. Y. 524, 78 N. E. 179, 7 Ann. Cas. 377; Title Guarantee & T. Co. v. Haven, 196 N. Y. 487, 25 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1308, 89 N. E. 1082, 1085, 17 Ann. Cas. 1131; Lidderdale v. Robinson, 2 Brock. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 8,337.

The only exception to the liberal rule recognized by the New York courts is that it will not be applied to defeat the superior or equal equities of third persons.

4 Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. § 1419, note; Union Trust Co. v. Monticello & P. J. R. Co. 63 N. Y. 314, 20 Am. Rep. 541.

The bankruptcy courts should apply the doctrine recognized in the state courts.

Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 93, 49 L. ed. 958, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Sabin v. Camp, 98 Fed. 974, 2 N. B. N. Rep. 375.

Courts of equity will not permit technicalities or even serious obstacles to stand in the way of the enforcement of the principle of subrogation; and they will, if necessary to do justice, even revive a mortgage that has been discharged of record.

Peters v. Meyer, 72 App. Div. 585, 76 N. Y. Supp. 1028; Gans v. Thieme, 93 N. Y. 225; Pease v. Egan, 131 N. Y. 262, 30 N. E. 102; Cobb v. Dyer, 69 Me. 494.

It is not necessary that the person to be subrogated should pay the creditor directly. It is sufficient if he advances the money for the purpose of enabling the debtor to pay the debt.

Tradesmen's Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Thompson, 32 N. J. Eq. 133; Merchants' & M. Bank v. Tillman, 106 Ga. 55, 31 S. E. 794; Sgobel v. Cappadonia, 8 App. Div. 303, 40 N. Y. Supp. 946; Peters v. Meyer, 72 App. Div. 585, 76 N. Y. Supp. 1028.

The exercise of a pre-existing right, well founded in equity, is not a preference.

Sexton v. Kessler, 40 L.R.A. (N.S.) 639, 97 C. C. A. 161, 172 Fed. 535.

Where the transaction is valid under the state law, as between the parties, and could not have been attacked by the other creditors, the trustee in bankruptcy will not be permitted to question it.

Sexton v. Kessler, 225 U. S. 90, 56 L. ed. 995, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 53 L. ed. 729, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Mills v. Virginia-Carolina Lumber Co. 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 901, 90 C. C. A. 154, 164 Fed. 168.

A general custom is the common law itself, or a part of it; and even written contracts will yield to such custom.

Walls v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. 471, 10 Am. Rep. 407; Elkus, Secret Liens, 83, § 150.

Counsel for the appellee has laid emphasis on the fact that the proceeds of the clearance loan were placed to the credit of the borrowers in their general deposit account, and that there was thus a mingling of credits; but that made no difference in the equities (Fourth Street Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 41 L. ed. 855, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439), and it was well understood that no part of the deposit account represented by the clearance loan was to be used for any except clearance purposes.

There was thus a special fund held by the bankrupts for a specific purpose, to be used in protecting and enhancing the value of the general assets, and having, consequently, such character that no general creditor could claim any right to share in it.

Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 25, 57 L. ed. 1047, 1050, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

Mr. Abram I. Elkus argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Wesley S. Sawyer and William A. Barber, filed a brief for Hotchkiss:

The transfer of securities by Lathrop, Haskins, & Company to defendant was within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and was without a present fair and valuable consideration. The defendant thus obtained a greater percentage of its claim than any other general creditor of Lathrop, Haskins, & Company.

Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 46 App. Div. 335, 61 N. Y. Supp. 604.

The bank had actual knowledge that Lathrop, Haskins, & Company were insolvent, yet the statute does not require actual knowledge, but only that the creditor shall have reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended.

Loveland, Bankr. 3d ed. p. 561; Remington, Bankr. §§ 1398, 1399; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 122 Iowa, 443, 98 N. W. 284, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 771; Sundheim v. Ridge Ave. Bank, 138 Fed. 951, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; Parker v. Black, 143 Fed. 560, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Re Hines, 144 Fed. 543, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495; Wetstein v. Franciscus, 67 C. C. A. 62, 133 Fed. 900, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326; Pratt v. Columbia Bank, 157 Fed. 137, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

The existence of a general financial crisis should put a prudent man upon inquiry with reference to doubtful debtors.

Digitized by Google

Re Clarke, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 21.

Intent on the part of the debtor to give a preference need not be shown by affirmative proof, but flows from the knowledge of insolvency on the part of the debtor.

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 454, 45 L. ed. 1171, 1179, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Benedict v. Deshel, 177 N. Y. 1, 68 N. E. 999; Alexander v. Redmond, 103 C. C. A. 446, 180 Fed. 92, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

A custom or usage must be proved by facts and instances, and not by opinion and understanding.

Home Ins. Co. v. Weide, 11 Wall. 438, 20 L. ed. 197; The John H. Cannon, 51 Fed. 46; Ames Mercantile Co. v. Kimball S. S. Co. 125 Fed. 332; Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. 223, 34 Am. Dec, 289; Mills v. Hallock, 2 Edw. Ch. 652.

It is clear that no two banks consider the custom or usage the same. Each bank has a different agreement, and beyond the hope and belief that the money loaned is to be repaid from some source, each bank has a different expectation.

Adams v. Otterback, 15 How. 539, 14 L. ed. 805.

The law is clear that he who desires security must have possession, constructive or actual, of the securities. A vague agreement to secure is never enforced where bankruptcy intervenes. No reason is shown here why the rule of law should not apply.

Corn Exch. Bank v. Nassau Bank, 91 N. Y. 74, 43 Am. Rep. 655.

Any custom or usage for the bank to have a lien on securities in the possession of Lathrop, Haskins, & Company is inadmissible and incompetent, as tending to change and vary the terms of the written agreement between the parties (the demand notes).

The Reeside, 2 Sumn. 567, Fed. Cas. No. 11,657; Hopper v. Sage, 112 N. Y. 530, 8 Am. St. Rep. 771, 20 N. E. 350; Covington v. Kanawha Coal & Coke Co. 121 Ky. 681, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 248, 123 Am. St. Rep. 219, 89 S. W. 1126, 12 Ann. Cas. 311; Boruszweski v. Middlesex Mut. Assur. Co. 186 Mass. 589, 72 N. E. 250; O'Donohue v. Leggett, 134 N. Y. 40, 31 N. E. 269; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534; Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. 383, 19 L. ed. 987; Selchow v. Stymus, 26 Hun, 145; Coleman v. First Nat. Bank, 53 N. Y. 388; 4 Wigmore, Ev. § 2446.

The securities were not separated or marked, but were mixed with the general mass of securities in the bankrupt's possession. There was no agreement to separate or distinguish them in any way. The bankrupts drew from the mass indiscriminately. When the securities were delivered they were withdrawn from the mass without any reference to their source or to any substitution. Part of the mass had been cleared from loans and part had not, and those that had been so cleared were cleared by checks drawn against an account representing moneys from all sources.

Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L. ed. 779; Torrance v. Winfield Nat. Bank, 66 Kan. 177, 71 Pac. 235, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185; Long v. Farmers' State Bank, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 585, 77 C. C. A. 538, 147 Fed. 360; Johnston v. Hoff, A. & M. Co. 66 C. C. A. 534, 133 Fed. 704; Pollock v. Jones, 61 C. C. A. 555, 124 Fed. 163, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; First Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 208; Ryttenberg v. Schefer, 131 Fed. 313; Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462.

Where a lien on goods sold and delivered as security for the purchase price is expressly contracted for, and fails for want of possession or separation, or because the purchaser was permitted to consume or sell the goods, the seller is entitled to no equitable lien upon the goods remaining in the hands of the buyer, or upon proceeds thereof. And where in such case possession or separation comes within the four months' period, the transfer takes place as of that date.

Re Liberty Silk Co. 152 Fed. 844; Sexton v. Kessler, 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 639, 97 C. C. A. 161, 172 Fed. 535; Pontiac Buggy Co. v. Skinner, 158 Fed. 858; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co's Trustee, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 552, 96 C. C. A. 629, 172 Fed. 177; Re Faulhaber Stable Co. 95 C. C. A. 344, 170 Fed. 68; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Re Dismal Swamp Contracting Co. 135 Fed. 415; Re Klingaman, 101 Fed. 691, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

An express promise to pay out of a given fund is not an equitable assignment of that fund, and is not effective against the trustee in bankruptcy of the promisor.

Christmas v. Russell (Christmas v. Gaines) 14 Wall. 69, 20 L. ed. 762; Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 430, 22 L. ed. 673; Smedley v. Speckman, 85 C. C. A. 179, 157 Fed. 815.

The doctrine of subrogation requires: First. That the person seeking its benefit must have paid a debt to a third party before he can be substituted to another's rights. Second. That in doing this he must not act as a volunteer, but on compulsion to save himself from loss by reason of a superior lien or claim on the part of the person to whom he pays the debt, as in the case of a surety or a prior mortgagee.

Digitized by Google

Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Middleport, 124 U. S. 534, 31 L. ed. 537, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Shinn v. Budd, 14 N. J. Eq. 234; Sandford v. McLean, 3 Paige, 117, 23 Am. Dec. 773.

In order that one having no interest to protect, who pays the debt of another or advances money for the purpose, may be entitled to succeed to the rights of the creditor in respect to the debts so paid, there must be a convention or agreement to that effect.

Browder v. Hill, 69 C. C. A. 499, 136 Fed. 821.

The statute gives the trustee the right to recover the value of the securities or the securities themselves, at his election.

Collier, Bankr. 8th ed. 1910, p. 675; Re Phelps, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

The complainant cannot be made to suffer, nor can the creditors of the bankrupt's estate be made to suffer because the defendant wrongfully took securities to which it had no right or claim.

Ommen v. Talcott, 175 Fed. 261; Houghton v. Stiner, 92 App. Div. 171, 87 N. Y. Supp. 10; Crampton v. Valido Marble Co. 60 Vt. 291, 1 L.R.A. 120, 15 Atl. 153.

The bankruptcy act of 1867, § 35, was, as to the point involved, substantially identical; and therefore the decisions under that act are applicable here.

First Nat. Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. 325, 22 L. ed. 542; Shuman v. Fleckenstein, 4 Sawy. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 12,826.

Where the trustee sues the preferred creditor at law for conversion it is well settled that the measure of damages is the value of the property at the time of taking.

Stern v. Mayer, 99 App. Div. 427, 91 N. Y. Supp. 292; Merritt v. Halliday, 107 App. Div. 596, 95 N. Y. Supp. 331.

The value of the securities should be taken as of the date of the taking.

Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 204 U. S. 522, 524, 51 L. ed. 596, 598, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover certain securities alleged to have been transferred to the [55] defendant bank by way of preference. The plaintiff had a judgment in the district court (200 Fed. 287, 299) and in the circuit court of appeals (120 C. C. A. 92, 201 Fed. 664). Both parties appeal; the plaintiff, upon a subordinate question as to its right to elect damages instead of a return of the securities.

The case arose upon what is known in New York as a clearance loan. Brokers need large sums to clear or pay for the stocks that they receive in the course of the day, and as the stocks must be paid for before they are received and can be pledged to raise the necessary funds, these sums are advanced by the banks. They are returned later on the same day by making deposits to the borrower's account and drawing a check to the order of the bank. Perhaps such a general course of dealing might be arranged so as to give a lien on the loan or its proceeds until payment, but the question whether such a lien has been created rarely, if ever, has arisen, the whole business being finished in a few hours. It is, however, the main issue in this case.

The bankrupts were brokers in partnership, and at 10 o'clock on January 19, 1910, had assets exceeding their liabilities by nearly half a million dollars. These assets consisted largely in the stock of a coal and iron company in which there was a pool. Before 12, there was a break in the market, the stock went down, and at about noon the suspension of the firm was announced. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed at 10 minutes after 4 on the same day. At about 10, the bank made a clearance loan to the bankrupts of $500,000 in the usual way, to enable them to meet their current obligations and to get the stocks deliverable on that day, the bank receiving demand notes, and both parties acting in good faith. The sum was credited in the deposit account of the firm, in addition to $54,319.98 already there, and soon after the bank certified and subsequently paid checks amounting [56] to $535,920.74. During the day the firm made deposits which are not in question, but there remained due upon the loan $166,166.69. Officers of the bank, noticing the drop in the stock, went to the firm, demanded payment or securities to make good the obligations to the bank, and were told of the suspension and that a petition in bankruptcy would be filed. After two hours' discussion the securities in question were delivered between 2 and 3 P. M., but the officers were told that the delivery was a preference. Some of the securities bore no relation to the loan; others, and it may be assumed for purposes of argument, most, had been released by the money thus obtained.

In dealing with transactions of this kind we may go far in giving them any form that will carry out the mutually understood intent. Sexton v. Kessler, 225 U. S. 90, 96, 97, 56 L. ed. 995, 999, 1000, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657. But if the intent was doubtful or inconsistent with the legal effect of dominant facts, it must fail. For instance, apart from possible exceptions, a man cannot retain a domicil in one place when he has moved to another, and intends to reside there for the rest of his life, by any wish, declaration, or intent inconsistent with the dominant facts of where he actually lives and what he actually means to do. Dickinson v. Brookline, 181 Mass. 195, 92 Am. St. Rep. 407, 63 N. E. 331. In the present case it is agreed that it was expected and understood that no portion of the clearance loan was to be used for any purpose other than to clear securities. But, on the other hand, by consent of the bank, as it seems, the loan was put into the general deposit account, which was drawn upon for general purposes; at least, to the extent of the balance above the loan; the securities released were not kept separate, but were used like any other; and no separate account was kept of money received from deliveries of stock so released. What happened as between these parties was simply that all moneys received in the course of the day, from whatever source, went into the firm's [57] deposit account with the bank. So that, even if we take it, as a corollary of what was understood, that the use of the clearance loan was expected to enable the firm to repay the loan, it does not appear to have been expected that the proceeds should be appropriated specifically to that end, but simply that the addition of such proceeds to the general funds of the firm would enable the latter to pay within the time allowed. This is the view of the facts taken by the master and both of the courts below. They also found that an attempt to give the matter a different complexion by custom had failed; and if we went behind their findings we should take the same view.

Digitized by Google

A trust cannot be established in an aliquot share of a man's whole property, as distinguished from a particular fund, by showing that trust moneys have gone into it. On similar principles a lien cannot be asserted upon a fund in a borrower's hands, which, at an earlier stage, might have been subject to it, if, by consent of the claimant, it has become a part of the borrower's general estate. But that was the result of the dealings between these parties, and it cannot be done away with by a wish or intention, if such there was, that alongside of this permitted freedom of dealing on the part of the bankrupts, the security of the bank should persist. It is not like the case of property wrongfully mingled with general funds and afterwards traced. All that the parties agreed, either expressly or by implication, was that the debt incurred at 10 o'clock should be paid by 3. Some banks seem to have required the dealing to be conducted on the footing of a fund identified and subject to a trust at every step; but between these parties there was no attempt to follow a specific fund through a series of changes until it was returned. See Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 430, 22 L. ed. 673.

As all trace of the bank's money was lost when it entered the stream of the firm's general property, there can be no right of subrogation. Neither can a claim be upheld on [58] the ground that there was no diminution of the bankrupt's assets, or that the transaction should be regarded as instantaneous and one. The consent to become a general creditor for an hour, that was imported, even if not intended to have that effect, by the liberty allowed to the firm, broke the continuity and established the loan as part of the assets. No doubt many general creditors have increased a bankrupt's estate by their advances, but they have lost the right to take them back. Time sometimes can be disregarded when it is insignificant. But in this case half the time between the loan and the transfer of securities sufficed to change the position of the borrowers from a fortune of half a million to a deficit of double that amount.

In both Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 57 L. ed. 1047, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690, and Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 52 L. ed. 835, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, 14 Ann. Cas. 981, in addition to the personalty of the holder there was also a specific stock, which identified the fund relied upon and separated it from the general mass of the estate. Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 53 L. ed. 729, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466, stood on the peculiar facts of the case, which were held to point to an identified res and give an immediate claim against it. The case established no general proposition contrary to what we now decide.

The suggestions that it does not appear that the bankrupts intended to give a preference, or that the bank had reasonable cause to believe that it was obtaining one, hardly need answer. The bank did not confine its demand to proceeds of the loan, but asked for and obtained securities without regard to their source. It was notified in terms that it was receiving a preference and that the firm was going into bankruptcy. If this was not sufficient notice, it is hard to imagine what would be enough.

The cross appeal depends upon the frame of the bill and effect of an agreement between the parties. On April 5, 1910, it was agreed that the securities in question might be sold by the bank "at the best price obtainable, at such [59] times as may seem best to the officers of" the bank; that the rights of both parties "shall attach to the proceeds realized from the sale," and "the amount realized from the sale of the said securities shall stand in lieu of the securities, and shall represent the amount of the liability" of the bank to the trustee in bankruptcy in case of judgment against it. "The making of this stipulation shall not alter the rights or claims of any of the parties, nor change the jurisdiction of any court . . . it being the intention of the stipulation that the securities in the possession of the National City Bank shall be converted into money at the best prices obtainable, and that all rights of the parties shall remain as against the proceeds of the sale of the said securities the same as they existed against the securities themselves at the time of making this stipulation."

Digitized by Google

It seems that no sale took place. The decree was for a delivery of the securities with all interest and dividends thereon received, and in default thereof for $161,740.62, with interest from the date of the master's report. But as the securities have declined a good deal below their value at the time of conversion, and again below their value at the date of the foregoing agreement, the trustee claims the right to take the sum named, with corrections. This was answered sufficiently by Judge Hand in the district court. As he observed, the suit was in equity to recover the securities in specie. After the agreement the bank was authorized to hold them until it thought it wise to sell. If it had sold, there can be no doubt that the plaintiff's claim would have been limited to the proceeds, by the words of the contract. Its judgment not to sell, exercised for the benefit of both parties, cannot have been intended to put it in a worse position. Such an understanding would have deprived the plaintiff of the judgment of the bank.

Decree affirmed.

---

[60] MECHANICS' & METALS NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,

v.

IRVING L. ERNST, Lindsay Russell, and Harper T. Marshall, as Trustees in Bankruptcy of Dudley P. Humphrey, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 60–67.)

Bankruptcy — preference — deposit by insolvent — set-off.

Deposits made by an insolvent customer after the bank cashier has forbidden the payment of checks against the deposit account, and but a few hours before an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the customer, constitute a voidable preference, and cannot be allowed to the bank by way of set-off against the customer's indebtedness to the bank.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, 2; X. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 446.]

Argued October 20, 1913. Decided November 3, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York in favor of trustees in bankruptcy in a suit to recover an alleged voidable preference. Affirmed.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 92, 201 Fed. 664.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lewis H. Freedman argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Adrian H. Larkin and Leland B. Garretson, filed a brief for appellant:

The contract must be construed in the light of the law of New York.

Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 52 L. ed. 835, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, 14 Ann. Cas. 981; Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 51 L. ed. 945, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Skiff v. Stoddard, 63 Conn. 198, 21 L.R.A. 102, 26 Atl. 874, 28 Atl. 104.

The only contracts which are void against creditors in New York are contracts which are (1) in fraud of creditors: Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 267, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127; (2) void under the statute: Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790.

A general custom is the common law itself, or a part of it. And written contracts, by implication, incorporate custom into them.

Underwood v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 161 N. Y. 423, 55 N. E. 936; Newhall v. Appleton, 114 N. Y. 140, 3 L.R.A. 859, 21 N. E. 105; Walls v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. 471, 10 Am. Rep. 407; Botany Worsted Works v. Wendt, 22 Misc. 156, 48 N. Y. Supp. 1024; Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 40, 34 L. ed. 568, 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

Persons engaged in a particular trade or business are bound to inform themselves as to the customs and usages of such business; hence knowledge on their part will be presumed.

NOTE.—On set-off by bank against bankrupt's deposit as preference within bankruptcy law—see note to Booth v. Prete, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 863.

Digitized by Google

Robinson v. United States, 13 Wall. 363, 366, 20 L. ed. 653, 654; Hazard v. New England M. Ins. Co. 8 Pet. 557, 8 L. ed. 1043; Hartshorne v. Union Mut. Ins. Co. 36 N. Y. 172.

The proof of custom was competent.

Megowan v. Peterson, 173 N. Y. 5, 65 N. E. 738; Nightingale v. J. H. & C. K. Eagle, 141 App. Div. 386, 126 N. Y. Supp. 339; Juilliard v. Chaffee, 92 N. Y. 535; Grierson v. Mason, 60 N. Y. 394; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534.

The doctrine of equitable liens is now thoroughly established.

Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. § 1235; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 664, 665, 41 L. ed. 865, 870, 871, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504; Howard v. Delgado, 57 C. C. A. 270, 121 Fed. 26; Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co. 102 Fed. 755; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 368, 53 L. ed. 208, 229, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475; Holroyd v. Marshall, 10 H. L. Cas. 191, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 193, 9 Jur. N. S. 213, 7 L. T. N. S. 172, 11 Week. Rep. 171, 10 Eng. Rul. Cas. 420.

A party may, by express agreement, create a charge or claim in the nature of a lien on property of which he is the owner or possessor, and equity will establish and enforce such charge or claim not only against the party who stipulated to give it, but also against third persons, who are either volunteers, or who take the estate on which the lien is agreed to be given, with notice of the stipulations.

Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306, 25 L. ed. 999; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Carr v. Hamilton, 129 U. S. 252, 32 L. ed. 669, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 41 L. ed. 855, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Ingersoll v. Coram, 211 U. S. 335, 53 L. ed. 208, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 53 L. ed. 729, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Sexton v. Kessler & Co. 225 U. S. 90, 56 L. ed. 995, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co. 119 Fed. 531; First Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania Trust Co. 60 C. C. A. 100, 124 Fed. 968; Fisher v. Zollinger, 79 C. C. A. 76, 149 Fed. 54; Union Trust Co. v. Bulkeley, 80 C. C. A. 328, 150 Fed. 510; Mills v. Virginia-Carolina Lumber Co. 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 901, 90 C. C. A. 154, 164 Fed. 168; Re Farmers' Supply Co. 170 Fed. 502; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 171 Fed. 940; Re National Cash Register Co. 98 C. C. A. 425, 174 Fed. 579.

If such a contract is shown to exist, payments made in pursuance thereof will not be invalidated as preferences by the operation of the bankruptcy act.

Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299.

The agreement creating the lien may be either verbal or in writing.

Riddle v. Hudgins, 7 C. C. A. 335, 19 U. S. App. 144, 58 Fed. 490.

The doctrine of equitable lien has been uniformly declared and adopted by the New York courts, and lately approved by this court (Sexton v. Kessler & Co. 225 U. S. 90, 56 L. ed. 995, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657), and enforced as against all subsequent claimants except purchasers for value, without notice.

National Bank v. Rogers, 166 N. Y. 380, 59 N. E. 922; Hamilton Trust Co. v. Clemes, 163 N. Y. 423, 57 N. E. 614; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fancher, 145 N. Y. 552, 27 L.R.A. 757, 40 N. E. 206; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475; Spring v. Short, 90 N. Y. 538; Coats v. Donnell, 94 N. Y. 168; Husted v. Ingraham, 75 N. Y. 251; Payne v. Wilson, 74 N. Y. 348; Parshall v. Eggert, 54 N. Y. 18; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497, 85 Am. Dec. 290; McCaffrey v. Woodin, 65 N. Y. 459, 22 Am. Rep. 644.

The bankruptcy courts could recognize and enforce the equitable principle even if an ordinary court of equity could not.

Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 53 L. ed. 729, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 171 Fed. 940; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co. 119 Fed. 531; Mills v. Virginia-Carolina Lumber Co. 21 L.R.A. (N.S.) 901, 90 C. C. A. 154, 164 Fed. 169.

The right of a broker to substitute one kind of security for another does not alter the rights of the parties.

Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 57 L. ed. 1047, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 52 L. ed. 835, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, 14 Ann. Cas. 981.

The moment the checks composing the deposit of $54,048.18 were received by the appellant, and passed to the credit of the brokers, the funds became the appellant's property, and the relation of debtor and creditor was created.

New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 380, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; First Nat. Bank v. Burkhardt, 100 U. S. 686, 25 L. ed. 766; Cassidy v. Uhlmann, 170 N. Y. 515, 63 N. E. 554.

The relation of debtor and creditor having been created, the right of set-off was also established.

Digitized by Google

New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 380, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Joyce v. Auten, 179 U. S. 591, 45 L. ed. 332, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Scott v. Armstrong, 146 U. S. 499, 36 L. ed. 1059, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Straus v. Tradesmen's Nat. Bank, 122 N. Y. 379, 25 N. E. 372.

The case involves no question of actual fraud.

Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co. 227 U. S. 575, 582, 57 L. ed. 652, 654, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Githens v. Shiffler, 112 Fed. 505; Re Maher, 144 Fed. 503; Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank, 197 U. S. 356, 49 L. ed. 790, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609, 615, 29 L. ed. 742, 744, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538.

The insolvent's estate must have been diminished as a result of the transaction.

Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, affirming 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 372, 82 C. C. A. 91, 152 Fed. 949: Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Calhoun County Bank v. Cain, 82 C. C. A. 114, 152 Fed. 983; Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 960, 91 C. C. A. 200, 165 Fed. 166; Re Neill-Pinckney-Maxwell Co. 176 Fed. 481; Sparks v. Marsh, 177 Fed. 739; Kimmerle v. Farr, 111 C. C. A. 27, 189 Fed. 295; Collier, Bankr. 9th ed. pp. 790, 791, 802, 803; Remington, Bankr. §§ 1276, 1296; Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 449, 45 L. ed. 1171, 1178, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 147, 48 L. ed. 380, 384, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Continental & C. Trust & Sav. Bank v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 229 U. S. 435, 57 L. ed. 1268, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Wild v. Provident Life & T. Co. 214 U. S. 292, 53 L. ed. 1003, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; National Bank v. National Herkimer County Bank, 225 U. S. 178, 56 L. ed. 1042, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Re Sagor, 57 C. C. A. 412, 121 Fed. 658; Gans v. Ellison, 52 C. C. A. 366, 114 Fed. 734; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co. 107 Fed. 255.

The debtor must have been insolvent within the meaning of the statute.

Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 451, 45 L. ed. 1171, 1178, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline R. Co. 164 Fed. 1007; Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Remington, Bankr. § 1343, pp. 786, 787; Collier, Bankr. 9th ed. pp. 8, 9; Re Klein, 116 C. C. A. 603, 197 Fed. 241; J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Goembel, 74 C. C. A. 433, 143 Fed. 295.

The law recognizes the possibility of such an occurrence as is shown at bar, and declines to recognize it as a fair criterion in determining the "fair valuation" required by the statute.

People ex rel. Knickerbocker F. Ins. Co. v. Coleman, 107 N. Y. 544, 14 N. E. 431; Collier, Bankr. 9th ed. p. 792; Rutland County Nat. Bank v. Graves, 156 Fed. 168; J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Goembel, 74 C. C. A. 433, 143 Fed. 295; Chicago Motor Vehicle Co. v. American Oak Leather Co. 74 C. C. A. 576, 141 Fed. 518; Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193, 32 L. ed. 658, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Re Swift, 114 Fed. 947; Wright v. Bank of Metropolis, 110 N. Y. 237, 1 L.R.A. 289, 6 Am. St. Rep. 356, 18 N. E. 79; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25; Baker v. Drake, 53 N. Y. 211, 13 Am. Rep. 507, 66 N. Y. 518, 23 Am. Rep. 80; Chicago Title & T. Co. v. John A. Roebling's Sons Co. 107 Fed. 71.

Furthermore, the bankrupt firm being a partnership, it must also be shown that each of the partners was also individually insolvent.

Francis v. McNeal, 108 C. C. A. 459, 186 Fed. 481; Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 966, 91 C. C. A. 200, 165 Fed. 166.

The payment must have been in satisfaction of, or on account of, an antecedent debt.

Coder v. Arts, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 372, 82 C. C. A. 91, 152 Fed. 943, affirmed in 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008.

Insolvency must have existed at the time when the payment was made.

Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 960, 91 C. C. A. 200, 165 Fed. 168; Rutland County Nat. Bank v. Graves, 156 Fed. 168; J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Goembel, 74 C. C. A. 433, 143 Fed. 295; Re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812; Troy Wagon Works v. Vastbinder, 130 Fed. 232; Re Wittenberg Veneer & Panel Co. 108 Fed. 593; McDonald v. Daskam, 53 C. C. A. 554, 116 Fed. 276.

It is a well-known fact that on the stock exchange quotations vary enormously in a few moments, and this is especially so in "panicky" times. Such was the case in the suit at bar; and in such a case, the law will recognize the fraction of a day, and the rule that the law takes no notice of the fraction of a day is inapplicable.

Upson v. Mt. Morris Bank, 103 App. Div. 367, 92 N. Y. Supp. 1101.

The adjudication of bankruptcy on March 12, 1910, did not relate back to the filing of the petition, and is not evidence of insolvency prior to such filing.

Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 960,

Digitized by Google

91 C. C. A. 200, 165 Fed. 166; Re Chappell, 113 Fed. 545; Re Alexander, 102 Fed. 464; Re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812.

There being no other creditor of this class, there could be no violation of the statute.

Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 C. C. A. 387, 117 Fed. 1; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 46 App. Div. 335, 61 N. Y. Supp. 604.

A landlord is a creditor of a different class from other creditors under § 60a, but he would not be entitled to priority under § 64.

Re Belknap, 129 Fed. 646; Re Barrett, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199.

The holder of a note indorsed by third persons is in a different class from other creditors under § 60a.

Re Harpke, 54 C. C. A. 97, 116 Fed. 295.

Almost any distinction is sufficient to constitute a separate class under § 60a (Re Denning, 114 Fed. 219; Gomila v. Wilcombe, 81 C. C. A. 268, 151 Fed. 476), but the classification under § 64 is definite and fixed.

The debtor making such payment must have intended to give such a preference.

Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Re First Nat. Bank, 84 C. C. A. 16, 155 Fed. 100; Kimmerle v. Farr, 111 C. C. A. 27, 189 Fed. 295; Re Leech, 96 C. C. A. 424, 171 Fed. 622; Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 960, 91 C. C. A. 200, 165 Fed. 166; Debus v. Yates, 193 Fed. 427.

The question in the Pirie Case, 182 U. S. 438, 451, 45 L. ed. 1171, 1178, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906, was whether, under § 57g, a person who had received a preference of any nature had to surrender it in order to prove a claim in bankruptcy.

Re Fixen, 50 L.R.A. 605, 42 C. C. A. 354, 102 Fed. 295; Re Henry C. King Co. 113 Fed. 110; Re Dickson, 55 L.R.A. 349, 49 C. C. A. 574, 111 Fed. 726; Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Re Wolf, 122 Fed. 127.

The creditor receiving such payment must have had knowledge, or have had reasonable cause to believe, that he was receiving a preference.

Collett v. Bronx Nat. Bank, 200 Fed. 111; Re Klein, 116 C. C. A. 603, 197 Fed. 241; Re The Leader, 190 Fed. 624; Re Pfaffinger, 154 Fed. 523; Collier, Bankr. 9th ed. pp. 816, 817; Grant v. First Nat. Bank, 97 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 971; Powell v. Gate City Bank, 102 C. C. A. 55, 178 Fed. 609; Stucky v. Masonic Sav. Bank, 108 U. S. 74, 27 L. ed. 640, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; Barbour v. Priest, 103 U. S. 293, 26 L. ed. 478; Sparks v. Marsh, 177 Fed. 739; First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 91 C. C. A. 538, 165 Fed. 852; Off v. Hakes, 73 C. C. A. 464, 142 Fed. 364; Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 1, 102 Fed. 735.

If the real status of the bankrupts could have been obtained only from their books, a creditor who has no right of access to those books cannot be charged with knowledge of the facts which they would reveal.

Re Wolf Co. 164 Fed. 448; Sharpe v. Allender, 96 C. C. A. 104, 170 Fed. 589.

The extent of the transactions in the financial district in New York city is so great, and the manner in which they are conducted so generally known, that the courts will take judicial notice of it.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 174 U. S. 674, 683, 43 L. ed. 1130, 1134, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Hutchinson v. Manhattan Co. 150 N. Y. 256, 44 N. E. 775; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Hall, 83 N. Y. 345, 38 Am. Rep. 434; Swinnerton v. Columbian Ins. Co. 37 N. Y. 174, 93 Am. Dec. 560; Agawam Bank v. Strever, 18 N. Y. 512.

Under the provisions of the bankruptcy act as it existed in January, 1910, it was well settled that a trustee in bankruptcy did not stand in the position of a bona fide purchaser for value. He took such title only as the bankrupt had.

Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 216 U. S. 134, 138, 54 L. ed. 418, 419, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 213 U. S. 126, 53 L. ed. 729, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Thomas v. Taggart, 209 U. S. 385, 52 L. ed. 845, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 52 L. ed. 835, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, 14 Ann. Cas. 981; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

Mr. Daniel P. Hays argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin D. Hays, filed a brief for appellees:

The intention to give a lien is a necessary element to the existence of an equitable lien.

Pom. Eq. Jur. pp. 38, 39.

Possession is necessary for the existence of a legal lien.

Re Faulhaber Stable Co. 95 C. C. A. 343, 170 Fed. 68; Sexton v. Kessler & Co. 40 L.R.A.(N.S.) 639, 97 C. C. A. 161, 172 Fed. 535; Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L. ed. 779.

A mere agreement to give security when called upon does not create an equitable lien, or prevent the transfer of property under such an agreement, if the transfer would otherwise be voidable, from being a voidable preference.

Digitized by Google

Re Smith, 176 Fed. 426; Re Faulhaber Stable Co. 95 C. C. A. 344, 170 Fed. 68; Smedley v. Speckman, 85 C. C. A. 179, 157 Fed. 815; Torrance v. Winfield Nat. Bank, 66 Kan. 177, 71 Pac. 235, 11 Am. Bank. Rep. 185; Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462; Ryttenberg v. Schefer, 131 Fed. 313.

Assuming that the evidence as to the alleged custom herein was admissible in this case to add to the written contract, the appellant failed to prove any general custom from which an agreement that the bankers were to have a lien on the securities and moneys transferred to it can be implied.

Willis v. Tibbals, 1 Jones & S. 228; Allen v. Merchants' Bank, 22 Wend. 222, 34 Am. Dec. 289; Mills v. Hallock, 2 Edw. Ch. 656; Gallup v. Lederer, 1 Hun, 286; Ames Mercantile Co. v. Kimball S. S. Co. 125 Fed. 335; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534; The John H. Cannon, 51 Fed. 48.

The method in which business is transacted by the appellant and other Wall street banks with stockbrokers is inconsistent with the existence of the mutual intention that the bank was to have a lien on securities obtained with the proceeds of the loan.

Douglas v. Carpenter, 17 App. Div. 329, 45 N. Y. Supp. 219; Rothschild v. Allen, 90 App. Div. 233, 86 N. Y. Supp. 42; Tompkins v. Morton Trust Co. 91 App. Div. 274, 86 N. Y. Supp. 520; Strickland v. Magoun, 119 App. Div. 113, 104 N. Y. Supp. 425.

Proof of custom is not admissible to vary a contract, or to make a different or additional contract, or change the legal rights and liabilities of the parties as established by law.

The Delaware, 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. ed. 779; Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. 383, 19 L. ed. 987; First Nat. Bank v. Burkhardt, 100 U. S. 686, 25 L. ed. 766; Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. 669, 18 L. ed. 705; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534; Hopper v. Sage, 112 N. Y. 530, 8 Am. St. Rep. 771, 20 N. E. 350; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235; Minnesota C. R. Co. v. Morgan, 52 Barb. 217.

In order for a valid, equitable lien to exist, there must be not only a clear, mutual intention that one party shall have a lien on the property of another, not delivered to him, but it must be the present intention to create a lien. An agreement to give a lien or security in the future is not enough. The transaction must be judged as of the time the lien is actually created.

Re Dismal Swamp Contracting Co. 135 Fed. 415; Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462; Re Faulhaber Stable Co. 95 C. C. A. 344, 170 Fed. 68; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 267, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127; Ryttenberg v. Schefer, 131 Fed. 313; Re Klingaman, 101 Fed. 691.

In the case at bar, if there were any intention that the bank should have any lien on the securities obtained by Fiske & Company with the use of the money borrowed, it is clear that such lien was only to exist and be effective if Fiske & Company failed to pay the loan in cash. The distinct understanding was that the loan was to be paid in cash, and that the securities were not to be forced on the bank. Therefore, it was without present consideration, and voidable as against the trustee.

Johnston v. Huff, A. & M. Co. 66 C. C. A. 534, 133 Fed. 704.

There cannot be an equitable lien unless the property which is to be subject to such lien is designated and identified, and appropriated to the use of the lienor.

Adams v. Citizens' Bank, 28 C. C. A. 329, 55 U. S. App. 513, 84 Fed. 270; Re Dismal Swamp Contracting Co. 135 Fed. 415; First Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 208; Lighthouse v. Third Nat. Bank, 162 N. Y. 336, 56 N. E. 738; Hazenwinkle Grain Co. v. McComb, 116 Ill. App. 541.

Even if there had been a promise on the part of Fiske & Company to pay the bank out of the proceeds of the securities obtained by them during the day, this would not constitute an appropriation of the money to the use of the bank, such as is necessary for the creation of an equitable assignment or right, such as was claimed by the bank.

Christmas v. Russell (Christmas v. Gaines) 14 Wall. 69, 20 L. ed. 762; Re Faulhaber Stable Co. 95 C. C. A. 344, 170 Fed. 68; Wright v. Ellison, 1 Wall. 16, 17 L. ed. 555; Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623; Torrance v. Winfield Nat. Bank, 66 Kan. 177, 71 Pac. 235, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185; Smedley v. Speckman, 85 C. C. A. 179, 157 Fed. 815; Pettibone v. Thomson, 72 Misc. 486, 130 N. Y. Supp. 284.

Even if the intention was to create a lien, such lien was fraudulent as against creditors, and voidable by the trustee, for the reason that Fiske & Company were to retain possession of the property, which was to be subject to the lien, together with the right to sell and dispose of the same, and to treat it as their own. This is shown by the general method in which the business is done. A lien created under such circumstances is fraudulent at law and voidable by the trustee.

Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Re Liberty Silk Co. 152 Fed. 844; Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87.

Digitized by Google

The case of Adams v. Citizens' Bank, 28 C. C. A. 329, 55 U. S. App. 513, 84 Fed. 270, is directly in point, and is a complete answer to the appellant's contention.

The test of whether two creditors are in the same clas. within the meaning of § 60a of the bankruptcy act depends solely on whether they should be classified alike in a distribution of the estate.

Remington, Bankr. § 1387; Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 54 C. C. A. 387, 117 Fed. 1.

The intent of the debtor to give a preference was clearly established in the case at bar. It is unnecessary, therefore, to decide whether such intent is a necessary element of a voidable preference.

Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 48, 20 L. ed. 481, 483; Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 196 U. S. 502, 508, 49 L. ed. 571, 574, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Wilson v. City Bank, 17 Wall. 473, 486, 21 L. ed. 723, 727.

The appellant had reasonable cause to believe that it was receiving a preference.

Pratt v. Columbia Bank, 157 Fed. 137; Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 1, 102 Fed. 735; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. ed. 504; Dutcher v. Wright, 94 U. S. 553, 24 L. ed. 130; Schmidt v. Bank of Commerce, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 904; McElvain v. Hardesty, 94 C. C. A. 399, 169 Fed. 31; Alexander v. Redmond, 103 C. C. A. 446, 180 Fed. 92; Coder v. McPherson, 82 C. C. A. 99, 152 Fed. 951; Wright v. Sampter, 152 Fed. 196; Stevens v. Oscar Holway Co. 156 Fed. 90; Re Tindal, 155 Fed. 456; Stern v. Paper, 183 Fed. 228; Re Virginia Hardwood Mfg. Co. 139 Fed. 209; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 122 Iowa, 443, 98 N. W. 284; Crittenden v. Barton, 59 App. Div. 555, 69 N. Y. Supp. 559; Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 87 C. C. A. 521, 160 Fed. 619; Brewster v. Goff Lumber Co. 164 Fed. 124; Re Coffey, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; Wright v. William Skinner Mfg. Co. 89 C. C. A. 23, 162 Fed. 315.

We must judge the transaction not only by what it was proved the transferee knew as to the insolvency, but we must take into consideration and can infer a belief that a preference was intended from unusual actions and methods on the part of the transferee in relation to the bankruptcy act.

Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; McElvain v. Hardesty, 94 C. C. A. 399, 169 Fed. 31.

The resort to unusual method of payment or securing of payment will raise an inference of belief that a preference was intended.

Remington, Bankr. § 1399; Re Andrews, 135 Fed. 599; McElvain v. Hardesty, 94 C. C. A. 399, 169 Fed. 31.

The appellant has no right to set off the sum of $54,048.18, delivered to it by Fiske & Company, but the delivery of such sum to the appellant constituted a preferential transfer which is voidable by the trustee.

Schmidt v. Bank of Commerce, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 904; Ridge Ave. Bank v. Studheim, 76 C. C. A. 362, 145 Fed. 798.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court of appeals, reached upon the same opinion that disposed of National City Bank v. Hotchkiss, just decided. [231 U. S. 50, ante, 115, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20.] (The judgment of the district court will be found [66] in 200 Fed. 295.) This case arose at the same time and differs but little from that in its facts, as to which, as in the other case, the master, the district court, and the circuit court of appeals all agree.

The advance in this case was made at about 10 on the following note, to the firm signing it, "Please loan us to-day $400,000. Crediting this amount to our account, and oblige. J. M. Fiske & Company." This sum was credited on the firm's deposit account, on which there was already $36,239.47. Before noon the bank certified and afterwards paid checks for $276,679.67. Between 11 and 12 the cashier, hearing that there was trouble in the stock market and with J. M. Fiske & Company, ordered that no more checks should be paid or certified. He then went to the brokers' office, saw Mr. Sherwood, a member of the firm, at about 12, and after getting an evasive answer to an inquiry as to the rumor, said that the firm had made no deposits on that day, and was told that one was on its way. ($54,048.08 were in fact paid in after the cashier's order to stop payment.) He then told Mr. Sherwood that he had better give him some securities, that he ought to give additional securities on the bank's loans, and after consultation Mr. Sherwood did so, and the cashier returned to the bank. We may assume for purposes of decision that the securities, with a small exception, were obtained by the use of the clearance loan.

At 40 minutes after 12 the brokers gave notice to the stock exchange that they were unable to meet their obligations, and an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against them at 25 minutes past 3. This suit is for the proceeds of the securities (which were sold by the bank), and for the sum deposited as we have stated. In view of our decision in the other case, only one or two matters need mention. It is somewhat more pressed that the bank had not reasonable ground to believe that the brokers' property at a fair valuation would be insufficient [67] to pay their debts, and therefore had not ground to believe that the brokers were insolvent within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, § 1 (15). We think it too plain to need argument that the findings below that the firm was insolvent, knew that it was insolvent, and intended a preference, were correct. These brokers were ruined by the collapse of the pool mentioned in the other case, and apart from any knowledge that the bank may have had as to their interest in the stock concerned, the entirely unusual course of the cashier in leaving his bank to get additional security (not merely proceeds of the clearance loan upon a claim of lien) and the circumstances are sufficient to prevent our going behind the finding below. Really no other conclusion could have been reached.

Digitized by Google

On the question of lien the evidence does not differ enough from that in the other case to need further discussion. The bankrupts were under an agreement with the bank, of the usual sort, giving the bank a general lien on all securities in its hands for all liabilities of the firm, and a right to require additional approved securities to be lodged with it, etc. But a general promise to give security on demand puts the creditor in no better position than an agreement to pay money. Sexton v. Kessler & Co. 225 U. S. 90, 98, 56 L. ed. 995, 1000, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

The so-called deposit of $54,048.08 was paid in after the cashier had forbidden the payment of checks against the deposit account, and therefore rightly was held to be a payment and a preference. A set-off properly was denied.

Decree affirmed.

---

[68] BALTIC MINING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. (No. 30.)

S. S. WHITE DENTAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. (No. 353.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 68–88.)

Foreign corporations — state tax for doing local business — commerce — due process of law.

1. The excise tax exacted from foreign corporations under Mass. Pub. Stat. 1909, chap. 490, for the privilege of doing business in the state, as applied to corporations which were incorporated to carry on a business not of itself interstate commerce, though their products are sold and shipped in such commerce, and which are carrying on a purely local and domestic business, quite separate from their interstate transactions, is not invalid under the commerce and due process of law clauses of the Federal Constitution, as necessarily amounting to a burden and tax upon the interstate business of such corporations and on their property outside the state, although the tax is imposed by taking a percentage of the entire authorized capital stock, where the facts that such authorized capital is but a part of the entire property and assets of the corporations, and that the maximum yearly tax is $2,000, compel the conclusion that the authorized capital is used only as the measure of the tax.

[For other cases, see Corporations, XII. b, 2; Commerce, III. d, 5; IV. b, 1; Constitutional Law, 536–540, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — foreign corporations — excise tax.

2. A foreign corporation which has paid all the local taxes theretofore assessed against it, and has a leasehold for storerooms in the state, is not denied the equal protection of the laws by the exaction under the authority of Mass. Pub. Stat. 1909, chap. 490, of an excise tax upon the privilege of doing business within the state, although domestic corporations may be favored under this statute.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 254–265, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 30 and 353.]

Argued April 29 and 30, 1913. Decided November 3, 1913.

TWO WRITS of Error to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts to review decrees dismissing the petitions of foreign corporations to recover back the amount of an excise tax. Affirmed.

See same case below, in No. 30, 207 Mass. 381, 93 N. E. 831; No. 353, 212 Mass. 35, 98 N. E. 1056, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 805.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—State licenses or taxes, as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburgh & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On corporate taxation and the commerce clause—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641.

On the taxation of corporate capital stock generally—see note to State Bd. of Equalization v. People, 58 L.R.A. 513.

On constitutional equality in United States in relation to corporate taxation—see note to Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 60 L.R.A. 321.

Digitized by Google

Messrs. Charles A. Snow and William P. Everts argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

A state statute which imposes an excise measured by the entire capital stock of a foreign corporation engaged, to a substantial extent, in interstate commerce, is unconstitutional and void, because repugnant to the commerce clause, even though professedly exacted for the privilege of transacting domestic commerce; and an excise measured by the entire capital stock of a foreign corporation having property outside of the taxing state is unconstitutional because it conflicts with the due process clause.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

That these decisions rest upon both grounds is fully shown in:—

Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 163, 55 L. ed. 389, 418, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 285, 56 L. ed. 436, 438, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050.

The Western Union and Pullman Cases, and decisions following them, conclusively settle the proposition that the necessary effect of an excise based on the entire capital of an interstate commerce corporation is to burden directly and substantially the interstate portion of its business, even though professedly imposed for the privilege of transacting domestic business.

Neither in these decisions nor in the later cases has this court ever alluded to any of the factors deemed vital by the court below.

Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 56 L. ed. 436, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050.

H. K. Mulford Co. v. Curry, 163 Cal. 276, 125 Pac. 236, directly decides that the principles of the Western Union and Pullman decisions are not confined to quasi public corporations, but cover all kinds of ordinary trading corporations engaged partly in interstate and partly in domestic commerce.

The theory of the Massachusetts court that the principles of the Pullman and Western Union Cases have no application where the company is free to renounce or abandon its domestic business, and only apply where the interstate and domestic business are inextricably interwoven, has no support in reason or upon the authorities. This theory is not supported by any of the cases cited by the court below, because in none of them was interstate commerce involved.

Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 189 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. ed. 134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. ed. 663, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 112, 34 L. ed. 392, 393, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958.

The separability of interstate and domestic receipts has been considered an important reason for holding an excise to be unconstitutional, where the interstate and domestic receipts are taxed indiscriminately and without attempt at apportionment.

Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851.

A tax upon goods sold in another state, delivered to a common carrier, and consigned to the purchaser in the state of Georgia, was an illegal interference with interstate commerce.

Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 65, 49 L. ed. 663, 666, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Interstate commerce may exist wholly independent of any transportation, and without the intervention of common carriers.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 189, 6 L. ed. 23, 68; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 446, 6 L. ed. 678, 688; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 270, 23 L. ed. 543, 548; United States v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 417, 18 L. ed. 182, 185; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 702, 26 L. ed. 238, 241; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 352, 353, 47 L. ed. 492, 499, 500, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 108, 34 L. ed. 391, 392, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Pom. Const. Law, § 378; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 497, 30 L. ed. 694, 697, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 218, 38 L. ed. 962, 968, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 359, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; International Text-Book Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481.

Digitized by Google

Many decisions prior to Western Union and Pullman Cases decided that interstate sales of goods, the companies and agents making them, their business, and the place where the business is conducted, are all protected by the commerce clause against state excises, and that the protection of that clause is not limited to railroads and quasi public corporations.

Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Corson v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 502, 30 L. ed. 699, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 50, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 29 L. ed. 691, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 785, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

A state cannot tax people representing the owners of property outside of the state for the privilege of soliciting orders within it, as agents of such owners, for property to be shipped to persons within the state.

Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Dozier v. Alabama, 218 U. S. 124, 54 L. ed. 965, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 264, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649.

Various other excises or license fees have been held unconstitutional, where exacted for the privilege of maintaining an office within the state, used for purposes of interstate commerce.

McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 391, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 28 L. ed. 1137, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Parsons-Willis Lumber Co. v. Stuart, 105 C. C. A. 211, 182 Fed. 779; United States v. Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. 191 Fed. 172.

It is immaterial that the company might equally well manage and direct interstate business by removing its office to another state.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958.

The protection of the commerce clause is extended to ordinary trading corporations engaged in interstate sales, and is not confined to quasi public corporations.

Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 28 L. ed. 1137, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Parsons-Willis Lumber Co. v. Stuart, 105 C. C. A. 211, 182 Fed. 779; International Text-Book Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; International Text Book Co. v. Lynch, 218 U. S. 664, 54 L. ed. 1201, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Buck Stove & Range Co. v. Vickers, 226 U. S. 205, 57 L. ed. 189, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41.

The Massachusetts court holds that this very excise is void as applied to ordinary trading companies, where they are engaged exclusively in interstate commerce. In such cases they come within the protection of the commerce clause.

Atty.-Gen. ex rel. Corporation Comrs. v. Electric Storage Battery Co. 188 Mass. 239, 74 N. E. 467, 3 Ann. Cas. 631; Baltic Min. Co. v. Com. 207 Mass. 381, 93 N. E. 831.

The Massachusetts excise is unconstitutional and void, because it is also repugnant to the equal protection of the laws clause.

Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247.

Mr. James M. Swift, Attorney General of Massachusetts, and Mr. Andrew Marshall, argued the cause and filed a brief for the state of Massachusetts:

In general, a state has power to exclude or condition the entrance of foreign corporations within its limits.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 519, 10 L. ed. 274; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, 249, 50 L. ed. 1013, 1014, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619, 6 Ann. Cas. 317; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 655, 41 L. ed. 586, 587, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 28 L. ed. 1137, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 322, 343, 53 L. ed. 530, 541, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370.

Digitized by Google

Full recognition is, however, given by the defendant in error to the principle that a state, in exercising its general right to exclude or condition foreign corporations, may not restrict or regulate interstate commerce. The argument of the defendant in error gives full effect to the limitation which forbids imposing upon corporations engaged in interstate commerce conditions so directly affecting the interstate commerce as to amount to a restriction of that commerce or to a regulation of it, within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States.

Com. v. Petranich, 183 Mass. 217, 66 N. E. 807; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Corporation Comrs. v. Electric Storage Battery Co. 188 Mass. 239, 74 N. E. 467, 3 Ann. Cas. 631; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 28 L. ed. 1137, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; International Text-Book Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Baltic Min. Co. v. Com. 207 Mass. 381, 93 N. E. 831; S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Com. 212 Mass. 35, 98 N. E. 1056, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 805.

If the excise, reasonable in its amount, as imposed upon the privileges enjoyed by the plaintiffs in error, is, in its actual operation and effect, nothing but an excise tax; if it does not impose upon any interstate business in which the plaintiffs in error are directly engaged, and upon the property employed in that business, such a direct burden as to make what is denominated as an excise in reality a tax upon interstate commerce and a tax upon property, —the mode of its measure, however arbitrary and capricious, is wholly immaterial in this court.

Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 231, 21 L. ed. 888, 896.

Whether the excise regulates interstate commerce is a practical question, to be determined by analyzing its effect in operation.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 227, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1037, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 56 L. ed. 436, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050.

In determining the question the whole scheme of taxation of Massachusetts must be taken into account.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 225, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1036, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

The interpretation and construction of the provision of law in question by the highest court of Massachusetts must also be taken into account.

Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 30, 46 L. ed. 785, 788, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Brown-Forman Co. v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 563, 572, 54 L. ed. 883, 886, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 654, 41 L. ed. 586, 587, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

The "establishment of principles" by Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, and Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232, does not in itself determine whether the Massachusetts excise is constitutional or unconstitutional under the commerce clause. That question may be determined only by the application of those principles to the special facts of the cases in which the Massachusetts excise is under discussion.

New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 664, 665, 43 L. ed. 323, 326, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958.

The exaction in question, considered with reference to the whole taxation system of Massachusetts, and as construed by the courts and as applied to the facts in these cases, does not, as a practical matter, regulate interstate commerce in which either plaintiff in error is engaged.

Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 7, 6 L. ed. 23, 24; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 181, 31 L. ed. 650, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 391, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup.

Digitized by Google

Ct. Rep. 881; Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. ed. 663, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 44, 54 L. ed. 355, 373, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727, 736, 28 L. ed. 1137, 1139, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Reymann Brewing Co. v. Brister, 179 U. S. 445, 45 L. ed. 269, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 48 L. ed. 134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 565, 19 L. ed. 1002; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. ed. 306, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 359, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494.

A tax is not a regulation of interstate commerce merely because it is assessed upon and paid by a corporation which is engaged in interstate commerce.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; State Tax on R. Gross Receipts, 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. ed. 164; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888.

The decisions of the Massachusetts court do not deny to ordinary business corporations engaged to some extent in interstate commerce the protection of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Atty. Gen. ex rel. Corporation Comrs. v. Electric Storage Battery Co. 188 Mass. 239, 74 N. E. 467, 3 Ann. Cas. 631; Baltic Min. Co. v. Com. 207 Mass. 381, 93 N. E. 831; S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Com. 212 Mass. 35, 98 N. E. 1056, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 805.

The exaction, if true to its history, its nature, its name, and its purpose as an excise, did not tax property outside the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 152, 55 L. ed. 389, 413, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

The exaction in operation and effect does not tax property or business outside the commonwealth.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 220, 41 L. ed. 683, 695, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

If the exaction in question does not tax property and does not regulate interstate commerce, it is not unconstitutional merely on account of the mode of its measurement.

Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 231, 21 L. ed. 888, 896; Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 140, 151, 55 L. ed. 137, 153, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 317, 36 L. ed. 164, 169, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 46 L. ed. 713, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 167, 55 L. ed. 389, 419, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 58, 49 L. ed. 78, 96, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561.

The statute in question does not deny the plaintiffs in error the equal protection of the laws.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Brown-Forman Co. v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 563, 572, 54 L. ed. 883, 886, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 228, 41 L. ed. 683, 697, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases present the question of the constitutional validity of an act of the commonwealth of Massachusetts (Stat. 1909, chap. 490, pt. 3, §§ 54 et seq.), undertaking to impose a tax on foreign corporations within the commonwealth. While the cases are not in all respects parallel, [79] they were argued together, and present the same questions, and we shall accordingly dispose of them as one.

The cases were heard upon agreed statements of fact, which show:

The Baltic Mining Company, a Michigan corporation, organized for the purpose of mining, producing, and selling copper, with a total authorized capital stock of $2,500,000, consisting of 100,000 shares of the par value of $25 each, all of which have been issued and are outstanding, $18 having been paid on each share, owns a copper mine with equipment in Michigan, and has its principal place of business in that state. It has an office in the city of Boston, for the use of its president and treasurer, residing in Boston, for the general financial management and direction of its affairs, and for the meetings of its board of directors and the transfer of its stock. The Copper Range Consolidated Company, a New Jersey corporation, owns and holds 99,659 shares of its stock, and also has an office and place of business in Boston. The Baltic Mining Company was admitted to do business in Massachusetts, and complied with the foreign corporation laws of that state. Its total property and assets amount to $10,776,000, but none of the property is in Massachusetts except current bank deposits and a certificate for $80,000 of stock in another Michigan corporation. It is engaged in the mining and refining of copper in Michigan, which is sold for delivery in the several states of the United States and in foreign countries. The United Metals Selling Company, a New Jersey corporation, with its principal office in New York city, and with no office in Massachusetts, has the exclusive agency for marketing the Baltic Mining Company's copper, it making no sales directly itself. Considerable quantities of the copper are sold for delivery in Massachusetts, as well as in other states, and transported from the Michigan smelter to the purchaser. In exceptional instances sales are made in Massachusetts [80] for delivery there, but this is out of the usual course of business, not more than 5 per cent of the total sales being made, the larger part being regularly consummated in New York city. The petition was brought to recover an excise tax of $500 imposed by the commonwealth, pursuant to § 56 of the act, and paid by the company, and was dismissed by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts. 207 Mass. 381, 93 N. E. 831.

Digitized by Google

The S. S. White Dental Manufacturing Company is a Pennsylvania corporation, engaged in manufacturing and buying and selling artificial teeth and dental supplies, with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000, and with its principal office in Philadelphia. Its assets aggregate $5,711,718.29. It has a usual place of business in Boston, consisting of large salesrooms, stockrooms, offices, and storerooms, occupied under lease, where it keeps a supply of goods displayed for sale and in stock. Books are kept here, a New England sales agent is in charge, and fifty-four persons are employed, twelve being salesmen who travel through the New England states, except Connecticut and the maritime provinces; but no manufacturing is done in Massachusetts. It sells goods over the counter from its Boston store and also for delivery in Massachusetts by messenger, mail, and express, 50 per cent of the sales made at that store being to persons residing in Massachusetts, and 50 per cent for delivery to persons residing outside of the state. Goods sold from the Boston stock for delivery other than over the counter or by mail or messenger are billed from the Boston salesrooms directly to the purchaser as consignee, from the company as consignor. Orders are also accepted at the Boston salesroom for delivery from the New York and Pennsylvania factories, such orders being sent to the principal office in Pennsylvania, and filled either in New York or in Pennsylvania, and the goods being billed directly to the purchaser. Except in intrastate deliveries by messenger, [81] the company uses public carriers in the transportation of the goods, and a large percentage of the total sales require transportation from the New York or Pennsylvania factories into other states. The stock on hand in the Boston store, the fixtures and the current bank deposits, represent the tangible property in Massachusetts, and amount to about $100,000. The company maintains fourteen places of business other than the ones in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, located in New York and other states. Ten per cent of the sales are made in Massachusetts, of which approximately one half are for delivery in that state. The company complied with the requirement of the laws relating to foreign corporations for ten years, and seeks to recover an excise tax of $200, levied pursuant to the statute, and paid by it. The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts held that the act was valid, and dismissed the petition. 212 Mass. 35, 98 N. E. 1056, Ann. Cas. 1913 C, 805.

The act provides (§ 54) for the filing of a certificate annually by foreign corporations, showing their authorized capital stock and assets and liabilities, and (§ 55) that such certificate shall be accompanied by an auditor's sworn statement, and shall be submitted to the commissioner of corporations, who shall assess an excise tax upon the corporation, in accordance with the provisions of § 56 of the act, and that the certificate shall not be filed until approved by him and the tax paid.

Section 56 reads:

"Every foreign corporation shall, in each year, at the time of filing its annual certificate of condition, pay to the treasurer and receiver general, for the use of the commonwealth, an excise tax, to be assessed by the tax commissioner, of 1/50 of 1 per cent of the par value of its authorized capital stock as stated in its annual certificate of condition; but the amount of such excise tax shall not in any one year exceed the sum of $2,000."

[82] It is further provided (§ 58) for notice to foreign corporations failing to file their proper certificates, and thereafter for the forfeiture and collection of penalties, and for the issuance of injunctions until the payment of such penalties and the filing of such certificates.

The specific objections of the plaintiffs in error to the imposition of this tax under the facts shown in the records are threefold: First, the tax is a regulation of interstate commerce, in that it imposes a direct burden upon that portion of the business and capital of the plaintiffs in error which is devoted to interstate commerce; second, the tax is in violation of the due process of law clause, because it attempts to impose taxes upon property beyond the jurisdiction of the commonwealth of Massachusetts; and third, the tax denies to the plaintiffs in error the equal protection of the law.

Digitized by Google

It is well settled and requires no review of the decisions of this court to that effect that the power of Congress over interstate commerce is supreme under the Federal Constitution, and that the states may not burden such commerce, it being the purpose of the Constitution of the United States to bring commerce of this character under one supreme control, and to vest the exercise of authority over it in the general government. It is equally well settled that forms of regulation prohibited to the state by the Constitution may consist of efforts to tax the carrying on of such commerce, and of attempted levies of taxes upon the receipts of interstate commerce as such. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 21 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 400, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1541, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729, and previous cases in this court therein cited.

While this is true, other equally well-established principles must be borne in mind in considering the validity of a state tax attacked upon grounds of unconstitutionality. The mere fact that a corporation is engaged in [83] interstate commerce does not exempt its property from state taxation. United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, 223 U. S. 335, 344, 56 L. ed. 459, 464, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211. It is the commerce itself which must not be burdened by state exactions which interfere with the exclusive Federal authority over it. A resort to the receipts of property or capital employed, in part at least, in interstate commerce, when such receipts or capital are not taxed as such, but are taken as a mere measure of a tax of lawful authority within the state, has been sustained. Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163; Provident Inst. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 611, 18 L. ed. 907; Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 162-165, 55 L. ed. 389, 417-419, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, 58 L. ed. Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; United States Exp. Co. v. Minnesota, supra.

The right of a state to exclude a foreign corporation from its borders, so long as no principle of the Federal Constitution is violated in such exclusion, has been repeatedly recognized in the decisions of this court, and the right to prescribe conditions upon which a corporation of that character may continue to do business in the state, unless some contract right in favor of the corporation prevents, or some constitutional right is denied in the exclusion of such corporation, is but the correlative of the power to exclude. Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 322, 343, 53 L. ed. 530, 541, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, 15 Ann. Cas. 645; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 942, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. ed. 365; Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 54 L. ed. 970, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633. For example, a state may not say to a foreign corporation, you may do business within our borders if you permit your property to be taken without due process of law; or you may transact business in interstate commerce subject to the regulatory power of the state. To allow a state to exercise such authority would permit it to deprive of fundamental rights those entitled to the protection of the Constitution in every part of the Union. Having these general principles [84] in mind, we will proceed to a consideration of the statute of Massachusetts directly involved in these cases.

The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in considering the character of the tax assessed under the statute of 1909, said (207 Mass. 388):

"The required payment is strictly of an excise tax, and not of a tax upon property. . . . This excise tax is for the commodity or privilege of having an establishment for business in Massachusetts, with the protection of our laws and the financial and other advantages of a situation here."

We have no fault to find with the conclusion that this is an excise tax. See also Provident Inst. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 611, 18 L. ed. 907; Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904, in which this court had occasion to consider the taxing system of Massachusetts. That the state may impose a tax upon a corporation, foreign or domestic, for the privilege of doing business within its borders, is undoubted; and such has long been the legislative policy of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, as appears from the history of legislation set forth in the opinions in the cases last cited. Construing the act in question, the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts has held that it does not apply to corporations engaged in railroad, telegraph, telephone, etc., business, which are taxed on another plan under the provisions of the statute. It is held not to apply to corporations whose business is interstate commerce, or who carry on interstate and intrastate business in such close connection that the intrastate business cannot be abandoned without serious impairment of the interstate business of the corporation. And the statute, it is held, does not apply to corporations which have places of business for the transaction solely of interstate commerce. Atty. Gen. ex rel. Commissioner of Corporations v. Electric Storage Battery Co. 188 Mass. 239, 74 N. E. 467, 3 Ann. Cas. 631. The tax is levied upon the privilege of carrying on business within [85] the state, and not upon property therein which is otherwise taxed.

Digitized by Google

It is said, notwithstanding, that this tax is a direct burden upon interstate commerce, and an attempt to tax property beyond the jurisdiction of the state, within the authority of the Kansas cases, Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232. These cases have been followed by others similar in character. Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 56 L. ed. 436, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913 C, 1050; Meyer v. Wells, F. & Co. 223 U. S. 298, 56 L. ed. 445, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218.

In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, and Pullman Co. v. Kansas, the statute under which the state of Kansas undertook to levy a charter fee of 1/10 of 1 per cent of their authorized capital upon the first $100,000 of the capital stock of foreign corporations, and 1/20 of 1 per cent upon the next $400,000, and for each million or major part thereof, $200, making a tax of $20,100 against the Western Union Telegraph Company, and $14,800 against the Pullman Company, was declared to be unconstitutional, as having the effect not simply to exert the lawful power of taxing a foreign corporation for the privilege of doing local business, but to burden interstate commerce, and to reach property represented by the capital stock of the companies, which was duly paid in and invested in property in many states, and therefore beyond the taxing jurisdiction of Kansas. Every case involving the validity of a tax must be decided upon its own facts, and having no disposition to limit the authority of those cases, the facts upon which they were decided must not be lost sight of in deciding other and alleged similar cases. In the Kansas cases the business of both complaining companies was commerce, the same instrumentalities and the same agencies carrying on in the same places the business of the companies of state and interstate [86] character. In the Western U. Teleg. Co. Case, the company had a large amount of property permanently located within the state, and between 800 and 900 offices constantly carrying on both state and interstate business. The Pullman Company had been running a large number of cars within the state, in state and interstate business, for many years. There was no attempt to separate the intrastate business from the interstate business by the limitations of state lines in its prosecution.

An examination of the previous decisions in this court shows that they have been decided upon the application to the facts of each case of the principles which we have undertaken to state, and a tax has only been invalidated where its necessary effect was to burden interstate commerce, or to tax property beyond the jurisdiction of the state. In the cases at bar the business for which the companies are chartered is not, of itself, commerce. True it is that their products are sold and shipped in interstate commerce, and to that extent they are engaged in the business of carrying on interstate commerce, and are entitled to the protection of the Federal Constitution against laws burdening commerce of that character. Interstate commerce of all kinds is within the protection of the Constitution of the United States, and it is not within the authority of a state to tax it by burdensome laws. From the statement of facts it is apparent, however, that each of the corporations in question is carrying on a purely local and domestic business, quite separate from its interstate transactions. That local and domestic business, for the privilege of doing which the state has imposed a tax, is real and substantial, and not so connected with interstate commerce as to render a tax upon it a burden upon the interstate business of the companies involved. In these cases the ultimate contention is not that the receipts from interstate commerce are taxed as such, but that the property of the corporations, including [87] that used in such commerce, represented by the authorized capital of the corporations, is taxed, and therefore interstate commerce is unlawfully burdened by a state statute. While the tax is imposed by taking a percentage of the authorized capital, the agreed facts show that the authorized capital is only a part of the capital of the corporations, respectively. In the Baltic Mining Company Case, the authorized capital is $2,500,000, while the entire property and assets are $10,776,000; and in the White Dental Company Case the authorized capital is $1,000,000, while the assets aggregate $5,711,718.29. Further, the Massachusetts statute limits the tax to a maximum of $2,000. The conclusion, therefore, that the authorized capital is only used as the measure of a tax, in itself lawful, without the necessary effect of burdening interstate commerce, brings the legislation within the authority of the state. So, if the tax is, as we hold it to be, levied upon a legitimate subject of such taxation, it is not void because imposed upon property beyond the state's jurisdiction, for the property itself is not taxed. In so far as it is represented in the authorized capital stock, it is used only as a measure of taxation, and, as we have seen, such measure may be found in property or in the receipts from property not in themselves taxable.

Digitized by Google

It is further contended that the imposition of the tax denies the equal protection of the laws, and this upon the authority of Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247. In that case the railway company had gone into the state of Alabama, and, under authority of the state, acquired a large amount of railroad property upon which it paid taxes as well as a license tax imposed by the state. After the payment of all such taxes, and in this condition of affairs, the state undertook to levy upon the railroad company a privilege tax because it was a foreign corporation, not imposing the same tax upon domestic corporations doing precisely the same business. This court held that the railroad company was a person within the meaning [88] of the Constitution, and entitled to the equal protection of the laws, and that by the taxation of its railroad property under such circumstances it was denied the equal protection of the law, no like tax being levied upon domestic corporations. It was said in that case (p. 416):

"We have here a foreign corporation within a state, in compliance with the laws of the state, which has lawfully acquired a large amount of permanent and valuable property therein, and which is taxed by a discriminating method not employed as to domestic corporations of the same kind, carrying on a precisely similar business."

The conditions existing in the Southern R. Co. v. Greene Case are not presented here. It is true that the plaintiffs in error paid taxes assessed against foreign corporations before the passage of the law of 1909, and that the White Dental Company had a leasehold for storerooms in the state; but we do not find in this situation an acquisition of permanent property, such as was shown in the Greene Case. And there is no question of the continued authority of the state to tax a foreign corporation for the privilege of doing business within its borders, which authority the state possesses so long as it does not violate rights secured by the Federal Constitution. Even if, as plaintiffs in error contend, under the statute, domestic corporations are favored, the statute is not invalid, for no limitation upon the power of a state to exclude foreign corporations requires identical taxes in all cases upon domestic and foreign corporations.

As this statute has been construed by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, and applied in these cases, we are unable to find that the tax imposed violates the constitutional rights of the plaintiffs in error.

Judgments affirmed.

Dissenting: The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Van Devanter, and Mr. Justice Pitney.

---

[89] COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA v. STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 89-91.)

Federal Supreme Court — original jurisdiction — suit between states — motion for final decree.

The assurance by the attorney general of West Virginia, on behalf of that state, that a commission appointed under a joint resolution of the state legislature is endeavoring to effect a settlement of the controversy, and needs further time to complete its labors, requires the denial of a motion by the commonwealth of Virginia that the Federal Supreme Court proceed at once to settle and determine all the questions left open by it when determining the amount which West Virginia should pay as its equitable share of Virginia's public debt, which was assumed by West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state.

[Original jurisdiction of Federal Court, see Supreme Court of the United States, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 2, Original.]

Submitted October 14, 1913. Decided November 10, 1913.

Digitized by Google

ON MOTION of the Commonwealth of Virginia that the court proceed to a final hearing of the questions left open by its decision when determining the amount which West Virginia should pay as its equitable share of the Virginia public debt, which was assumed by West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state. Overruled and case assigned for final hearing on April 13, 1914.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Samuel W. Williams, Attorney General of Virginia, and Messrs. Randolph Harrison and William A. Anderson submitted the cause for the Commonwealth of Virginia. Mr. John B. Moon was on the brief.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and Sanford Robinson submitted the cause for the bondholding creditors.

Mr. A. A. Lilly, Attorney General of West Virginia, and Messrs. V. B. Archer, Charles E. Hogg, and John H. Holt submitted the cause for the state of West Virginia.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In March, 1911 (Virginia v. West Virginia, 220 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 353, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330), our decision was given "with respect to the basis of liability and the share of the principal of the debt of Virginia that West Virginia assumed." In view, however, of the [90] nature of the controversy, of the consideration due the respective states, and the hope that by agreement between them further judicial action might be unnecessary, we postponed proceeding to a final decree, and left open the question of what, if any, interest was due, and the rate thereof, as well as the right to suggest any mere clerical error which it was deemed might have been committed in fixing the sum found to be due upon the basis of liability which was settled. In October, 1911, we overruled without prejudice a motion made by Virginia to proceed at once to a final determination of the cause on the ground that there was no reasonable hope of an amicable adjustment. Virginia v. West Virginia, 222 U. S. 17, 56 L. ed. 71, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

The motion on behalf of the state of Virginia now before us is virtually a reiteration of the former motion to proceed, and is based upon the ground that certain negotiations which have taken place between the Virginia Debt Commission representing Virginia, and a commission representing West Virginia, appointed in virtue of a joint resolution of the legislature of that state, adopted in 1913, make it indubitably certain that no hope of an adjustment exists. But without reviewing the course of the negotiations relied upon, we think it suffices to say that, in resisting the motion, the attorney general of West Virginia, on behalf of that state, insists that the view taken by Virginia of the negotiations is a misapprehension of the purposes of West Virginia, as that state, since the appointment of the commission on its behalf, has been relying upon that commission "to consummate such an adjustment and settlement of said controversy as to commend the result of its negotiations to the favorable consideration of the governor and the legislative branch of its government, and thus terminate said controversy, to the satisfaction of her people and the commonwealth of Virginia, and upon the principles of honor and justice to both states, and in fairness to the holders of the debt [91] for whose benefit this controversy is still pending." The attorney general further stating that, in order to accomplish the results just mentioned, a subcommittee of the Commission of West Virginia has been and is engaged in investigating the whole subject with the purpose of preparing a proposition to be submitted to the Virginia Debt Commission, to finally settle the whole matter, and that a period of six months' time is necessary to enable the committee to complete its labors.

Having regard to these representations, we think we ought not to grant the motion to proceed at once to consider and determine the cause, but should, as near as we can do so consistently with justice, comply with the request made for further time to enable the commissioners of West Virginia to complete the work which we are assured they are now engaged in performing for the purpose of effecting a settlement of the controversy. As, however, the granting of six months' delay would necessitate carrying the case possibly over to the next term, and therefore be in all probability an extension of time of more than a year, we shall reduce somewhat the time asked, and direct that the case be assigned for final hearing on the 13th day of April next, at the head of the call for that day.

Digitized by Google

[92] C. M. SUMMERS, Petitioner,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 92–106.)

Indictment — joinder of counts — application of Revised Statutes to Alaska.

1. Crimes against the United States committed within the district of Alaska, thought not included in the enumeration of offenses contained in the Alaskan Penal Code, such as violations of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3497, relating to national banks, are governed by the requirement of Alaska Code Crim. Proc. § 43, that the indictment must charge but one crime and in one form only, rather than by the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1024, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720, which permit the joinder in one indictment in separate counts of charges arising out of the same or connected acts or transactions, or of offenses or crimes of the same class.

[Joinder of counts in indictment, see Indictment, Information, and Complaint, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indictment — joinder of counts — amendment to Alaska Code — retrospective effect.

2. A retrospective operation which would validate indictments found before its enactment will not be given to Alaska act of April 26, 1913, amending Alaska Code Crim. Proc. § 43, so as to permit the joinder of two or more offenses or crimes of the same class in one indictment in separate counts.

[For other cases, see Indictment, Information, and Complaint, III.; Statutes, II. v, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 502.]

Argued October 22, 23, 1913. Decided November 10, 1913.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the District Court for the District of Alaska of violations of the national banking law. Reversed and remanded to the District Court, with directions to sustain the demurrer to the indictment.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 563, 202 Fed. 457.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Albert Fink argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Lewis P. Shackleford, Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, Evans Browne, and Kurnal R. Babbitt, filed a brief for petitioner:

The local practice adopted as the law of a territory controls the procedure of the territorial courts.

Cochran v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 432, 147 Fed. 206; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 154, 25 L. ed. 244, 246; Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 310, 26 L. ed. 481, 483; Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 434, 447, 20 L. ed. 659, 662; Hornbuckle v. Toombs, 18 Wall. 648, 21 L. ed. 966; Good v. Martin, 95 U. S. 90, 98, 24 L. ed. 341, 344; Welty v. United States, 14 Okla. 7, 76 Pac. 121; United States v. Haskell, 169 Fed. 449; Endleman v. United States, 30 C. C. A. 186, 57 U. S. App. 1, 86 Fed. 456; Jackson v. United States, 42 C. C. A. 452, 102 Fed. 473; Corbus v. Leonhardt, 51 C. C. A. 636, 114 Fed. 10; Ball v. United States, 78 C. C. A. 126, 147 Fed. 32; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 38 L. ed. 631, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 44 L. ed. 1078, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 510, 40 L. ed. 237, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Alaska stands on exactly the same footing as all of the other territories of the United States.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. United States, 224 U. S. 474, 56 L. ed. 849, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; The Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346, 41 L. ed. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1117; Rassmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 862, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 48 L. ed. 1087, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816.

The district court for the district of Alaska is not a circuit or district court of the United States.

McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 35 L. ed. 693, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; The Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346, 41 L. ed. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1117.

Messrs. Aldis B. Browne and Albert Fink filed a separate brief for petitioner:

Will an indictment invalid on demurrer for that it charges more than one crime become valid through a change in the statute law, made subsequent to the filing of the demurrer?

Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221, 27 L. ed. 506, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 351, 42 L. ed. 1066, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John Rustgard and Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for respondent:

This court will decide the case on the present law; that law authorizes the joinder of several offenses, and the judgment below

NOTE.—On joinder of offenses of same general character in one indictment—see note to Herman v. People, 9 L.R.A. 182.

As to retrospective statutes generally—see notes to Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331, and Barnitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

Digitized by Google

will not be reversed if, upon rehearing, the same order must be entered.

United States v. The Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103, 2 L. ed. 49; Pugh v. McCormick, 14 Wall. 361, 20 L. ed. 789; Dinsmore v. Southern Exp. Co. 183 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 111, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Keller v. State, 12 Md. 322, 71 Am. Dec. 596; Muskogee Nat. Teleph. Co. v. Hall, 4 Ind. Terr. 18, 64 S. W. 600; Hubbard v. Gilpin, 57 Mo. 444; Wayne Co. v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 66 Mo. 77; Myers v. Hollingsworth, 26 N. J. L. 186; Wade v. St. Mary's Industrial School, 43 Md. 178; Simpson v. Stoddard County, 173 Mo. 476, 73 S. W. 700; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Berry, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 470, 93 S. W. 1107; Perry v. Minneapolis Street R. Co. 69 Minn. 165, 72 N. W. 55; People v. Syracuse, 128 App. Div. 702, 113 N. Y. Supp. 707; Rawlings Co. v. Miller, 199 U. S. 353, 369, 50 L. ed. 226, 233, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46.

Nor can there be any claim that the amended statute is ex post facto as applied to offenses committed before its passage. It is a mere change in the rules of procedure, which dispenses with none of the substantial protections with which the law surrounds the accused.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 326; Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Gibson v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 590, 40 L. ed. 1075, 1081, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904; Thompson v. Missouri, 171 U. S. 380, 386, 43 L. ed. 204, 207, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Hallock v. United States, 107 C. C. A. 487, 185 Fed. 417; Walston v. Com. 16 B. Mon. 15; State v. Ryan, 13 Minn. 376, Gil. 343; State v. Hoyt, 47 Conn. 518, 36 Am. Rep. 89; South v. State, 86 Ala. 617, 6 So. 52; Mathis v. State, 31 Fla. 291, 12 So. 681; Com. v. Brown, 121 Mass. 69; State v. Pell, 140 Iowa, 655, 119 N. W. 154; Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233, 57 Am. Rep. 825, 29 N. W. 911.

The alleged error was immaterial.

(a) Petitioner received no greater sentence than must have been imposed on a conviction of one crime only.

Claassen v. United States, 142 U. S. 140, 35 L. ed. 966, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169.

(b) Prejudice cannot be shown because the error might have been cured had petitioner gone to trial.

Myers v. State, 92 Ind. 394; Com. v. Packard, 5 Gray, 101; Com. v. Adams, 127 Mass. 15; Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 38 L. ed. 208, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; State v. Buck, 59 Iowa, 382, 13 N. W. 342; Mills v. State, 52 Ind. 187.

(c) The error was one of form, cured by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1025, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720; United States v. Nye, 4 Fed. 888; United States v. Durland, 65 Fed. 408; Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 39 L. ed. 1033, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 951.

The Penal and Criminal Procedure Codes of Alaska apply only to the crimes therein mentioned, and not to crimes defined in the Revised Statutes or other general laws of the United States.

The general laws of the United States not locally inapplicable, including § 1024 of the Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720, are in force in Alaska.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. United States, 224 U. S. 474, 481, 56 L. ed. 849, 852, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; Nagle v. United States, 111 C. C. A. 621, 191 Fed. 141; Kie v. United States, 27 Fed. 351; Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 44 L. ed. 1078, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944.

The character of the district court for Alaska has been many times considered by this court, and the effect of those decisions seems to be that whenever it is exercising the jurisdiction of a district court of the United States the Federal rules apply.

McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 35 L. ed. 693, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; The Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346, 41 L. ed. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1117; Re Cooper, 138 U. S. 404, 34 L. ed. 993, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Re Cooper, 143 U. S. 472, 494, 510, 36 L. ed. 232, 239, 244, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; United States v. Pacific & A. R. & Nav. Co. 228 U. S. 87, 57 L. ed. 742, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443. See also Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 9, 27 L. ed. 346, 348, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Benson v. Henkel, 198 U. S. 1, 13, 49 L. ed. 919, 923, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 75, 50 L. ed. 90, 94, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; United States v. Haskins, 3 Sawy. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 15,322; Moss v. United States, 23 App. D. C. 475.

A dual system of procedure does exist in Alaska.

Ex parte Crow Dog (Ex parte Kang Gi Shun Ca) 109 U. S. 556, 560, 27 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Folsom, 7 N. M. 532, 38 Pac. 70.

[98] Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Petitioner was indicted under § 5209 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3.97) relating to national banks, and was charged with fifty-six separate violations of the section. He demurred to the indictment on the ground, among others, that it violated § 43 of the Criminal Code of Alaska, known as Carter's Code, in that more than one crime was charged.

Digitized by Google

The demurrer was overruled, to which ruling petitioner excepted. He then gave written notice "of election to stand upon the said demurrer and not further plead, and to take advantage of the provisions of § 97 of the Alaskan Code of Criminal Procedure, and to submit to judgment thereunder, and forthwith take his appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit."

The government objected to the entry of judgment until the cause had been submitted to a jury for trial and a verdict rendered, urging that § 97 of the Code of Alaska did not apply, but that §§ 1026 and 1032† of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 720 and 722) governed the procedure. After argument, the court ruled that the Federal procedure prevailed in all proceedings in the cause, but that the defendant [99] (petitioner) might waive trial by jury, if he so elected, and have judgment entered against him pursuant to the provisions of § 97.‡

The court then asked petitioner if he was guilty or not guilty of the crime. Petitioner stood mute, refused to plead, elected to stand on his demurrer and have judgment rendered against him in accordance with § 97. He was then adjudged guilty and sentenced to imprisonment for five years for each of the offenses, to run concurrently, the entire sentence to be completed at the end of five years.

Judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 120 C. C. A. 563, 202 Fed. 457.

The first question in the case is whether § 43 of the Alaskan Criminal Code applies, or § 1024 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720). They read, respectively, as follows:

"Sec. 43. That the indictment must charge but one crime, and in one form only; except that where the crime may be committed by use of different means, the indictment may allege the means in the alternative." 30 Stat. at L. 1290, chap. 429.

"Sec. 1024. When there are several charges against any person for the same act or transaction, or for two or more acts or transactions connected together, or for two or more acts or transactions of the same class of crimes or offenses, which may be properly joined, instead of having several indictments, the whole may be joined in one indictment in separate counts; and if two or more indictments are found in such cases, the court may order them to be consolidated."

The trial court and the circuit court of appeals held, as we have seen, that § 1024 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720) applied, and this is the contention [100] of the government. Petitioner asserts the applicability of § 43 of the Alaskan Code.

The trial court expressed its recognition of the difference between a district and circuit court of the United States and a territorial court, such as the district court of Alaska was expressed to be, but was of opinion that when the latter court exercises jurisdiction to enforce the laws of the United States, "not only the substantive law, but the machinery, the procedure which enables the court to enforce the substantive law," applied. The circuit court of appeals, in a circumstantial opinion, reached the same general result and considered that the Alaskan Code, by its title and some of its provisions, explicitly specialized the crimes relating to Alaska and the procedure applicable to them. The title of the act is, it was said, "An Act to Define and Punish Crimes in the District of Alaska, and to Provide a Code of Criminal Procedure for Said District;" the enacting clause is, "That the penal and criminal laws of the United States of America, and the procedure thereunder relating to the District of Alaska, shall be as follows:" and § 2, chapter 1, title 1, provides: "That the crimes and offenses defined in this act, committed within the District of Alaska, shall be punished as herein provided." It was hence concluded that as the offense charged in the indictment was not one mentioned in the Alaskan Code, it was not one to be governed by the local procedure, but was left under the procedure prescribed in § 1024 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp Stat. 1901, p. 720). The †Sec. 1026. In every case in any court of the United States, where a demurrer is interposed to an indictment, or to any count or counts thereof, or to any information, and the demurrer is overruled, the judgment shall be respondeat ouster; and thereupon a trial may be ordered at the same term, or a continuance may be ordered as justice may require.

Sec. 1032. When any person indicted for any offense against the United States, whether capital or otherwise, upon his arraignment stands mute, or refuses to plead or answer thereto, it shall be the duty of the court to enter the plea of not guilty on his behalf, in the same manner as if he had pleaded not guilty thereto. And when the party pleads not guilty, or such plea is entered as aforesaid, the cause shall be deemed at issue, and shall, without further form or ceremony, be tried by a jury.

‡Sec. 97. That if the demurrer be disallowed, the court must permit the defendant, at his election, to plead, which he must do forthwith, or at such time as the court may allow; but if he do not plead, judgment must be given against him. 30 Stat. at L. 1295, chap. 429.

Digitized by Google

conclusion was fortified by a consideration of the genesis of the respective provisions. The result of the conclusion will be the existence of a dual procedure in the prosecution of different crimes committed within the same territorial jurisdiction. The result may have examples, but it is certainly undesirable, and the systematic character of the Alaskan Code indicates a contrary intention.

Section 43 is a continuation of the procedure that had [101] been prescribed for Alaska. The act providing a civil government for that territory, passed in 1884 (23 Stat. at L. 25 and 26, chap. 53), made the general laws of Oregon applicable to it, and those laws require "that the indictment must charge but one crime and in one form only." It is contended, however, that the laws of Oregon were declared to be the law of Alaska only in so far as they were applicable and not in conflict with the laws of the United States, and that necessarily the provision above-quoted in regard to the indictment was in conflict with § 1024 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720). And it is further contended that the conflict is not reconciled, or rather, that the difference in procedure is not removed, by § 43 of the Alaskan Code. We concede strength to these considerations, but there are countervailing ones.

The Alaskan Code is quite an elaborate code of substantive and adjective law, the former containing twelve chapters of definitions of offenses against the person and property, the public safety and the public peace; the other containing elaborate and circumstantial provisions for the indictment and trial of offenders, their sentence and punishment, and a provision for appellate review. It seems to omit nothing of circumstance or detail necessary to a careful and advanced procedure. But its enumeration of offenses does not include all crimes against the United States, does not include the one under review, and it is hence contended that the procedure prescribed does not apply to the crimes not enumerated, and therefore does not apply to the crime under review. In other words, it is contended that the procedure prescribed is complementary only to the crimes defined and has no broader application, leaving all other crimes to be governed by § 1024 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720).

It is established that the courts of the territories may have such jurisdiction of cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit [102] and district courts, but this does not make them circuit and district courts of the United States. It has been hence decided that the manner of impaneling grand juries prescribed for the circuit and district courts does not apply to the territorial courts. Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 154, 25 L. ed. 244, 246. See, as to trial juries, Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 434, 20 L. ed. 659. In the latter case it was said "that the whole subject-matter of jurors in the territories is committed to territorial regulation." (p. 445.)

This principle was applied to the mode of challenging petit jurors (Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. ed. 481); to give defendants the right to separate trials and for the regulation of peremptory challenges to jurors (Cochran v. United States [circuit court of appeals, eighth circuit], 77 C. C. A. 432, 147 Fed. 206, 207). In Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 307, 308, 44 L. ed. 1078, 1080, 1081, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944, it was said that the laws of Oregon must be looked to for the requisites of an indictment for murder, rather than the rules of the common law. And this by virtue of the act providing a civil government for Alaska, presently referred to. See also Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 510, 40 L. ed. 237, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

In the case at bar there is direct legislation by Congress. Does the principle apply in such case? The first legislation for Alaska was an act of May 17, 1884, entitled, "An Act Providing a Civil Government for Alaska," § 7 of which was as follows: "That the general laws of the state of Oregon now in force are hereby declared to be the law in said district so far as the same may be applicable and not in conflict with the provisions of this act or the laws of the United States." 23 Stat. at L. 25, 26, chap. 53. But what constitutes conflict? Mere difference, the court of appeals decided, citing Kie v. United States, 27 Fed. 351, 356. That, however, depends upon the purpose. Congress was legislating directly for Alaska; manifestly intended to distinguish it, and intended the laws of Oregon to be its laws, regarding them as more suitable to its conditions [103] than general laws determined by or addressed to different conditions. See United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 38 L. ed. 631, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746. And this appears to have been the view taken by the court in other cases.

In Endleman v. United States, 30 C. C. A. 186, 57 U. S. App. 1, 86 Fed. 456, the laws of Oregon were referred to to sustain an indictment to which a demurrer had been filed on the ground that it contained only one count, and that several distinct offenses were charged in that count. The case, however, may be said to have only negative value in the discussion. It referred to the Criminal Code as constituting the law of the district, but did not refer to or base the decision on that provision which required an indictment to charge "one crime and in one form only." The law of Oregon necessarily was decided to be controlling.

Digitized by Google

In Jackson v. United States, 42 C. C. A. 452, 102 Fed. 473, 477, the court resorted to the laws of Oregon to determine the qualifications of grand jurors, considering them as applicable under the organic act providing a civil government for the territory.

In Corbus v. Leonhardt, 51 C. C. A. 636, 114 Fed. 10, the court refused to apply § 858 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 659), which provides that in actions by or against executors and administrators neither party shall be allowed to testify against the other, and applied instead the law of Oregon permitting such testimony. And this by virtue of the provision of the act already cited, making the laws of Oregon the laws of Alaska.

In Ball v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 308, 147 Fed. 32, 36, it was assigned as error that the trial court overruled the motion of Ball to require the district attorney to furnish him a list of all of the witnesses to be produced against him on the trial, in accordance with § 1033 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 722). It was held that the section applied only to the trial of treason and capital cases in the courts of the United States. The court said: "The present case was [104] tried in a territorial court under the Penal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure of Alaska. Those Codes contain no requirement that a list of witnesses be furnished the accused upon demand or otherwise." Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 510, 515, 40 L. ed. 237, 241, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, was cited as holding that § 1033 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 722) does not control practice and procedure in territorial courts.

These cases in the court of appeals apply the principle of the cases in this court, which we have cited, that Congress by its legislation intends always special regulations for the territories, to be exercised, it may be, through territorial legislatures, or, as in the case of Alaska, by making the laws of Oregon the ws of Alaska, and subsequently by the Code enacted for that territory.

It is, however, the contention, as we have seen, that the limitations of the title of the Alaskan Codes, and the omission from them of the crime under review, make § 1024 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720) applicable; or, to state it differently, make § 43 of the Code, which provides that "the indictment must charge but one crime and in one form only," applicable only to the crimes and offenses specifically defined in the act. If it be true that there is such limitation, it would follow that if the laws of Oregon were, before the enactment of the Codes, applicable to other offenses in Alaska, they are still applicable. But we are not disposed so to limit the procedure in Alaska. It is, as we have said, very complete and circumstantial. It covers every step in a criminal proceeding, the first accusation, arrest, preliminary inquiry of guilt, duties of officers and magistrates, formation of grand juries, the indictment, trial, and its conduct, verdict, sentence, and judgment. The reason given for denying its application seems to us not adequate. It is said that § 1024 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 720) was originally contained in the act of February 26, 1853, (10 Stat. at L. 161, chap. 80), to regulate the fees of clerks, marshals, and attorneys of the courts of the United States, and finally became § 823 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 632), and by it made applicable to all of the states and [105] territories. And it is said that the purpose of the act of 1853 and its continuance was to prevent the officers of the United States from increasing their fees by filing separate indictments when the offenses might be properly charged in one. But such a general purpose might easily be considered as yielding to the special provisions for Alaska expressed in the laws of Oregon and declared to be the law of Alaska, and in the repetition of the provisions of those laws in the Code of Alaska, that but one offense shall be charged in the indictment. We cannot suppose that the purpose of regulating the fees of officers was more essential and dominant than that special provision, to have no effect as to the great body of crimes of ordinary and everyday commission defined in the Code, and yet apply to offenses less frequent.

By an act of the territorial legislature, approved April 26, 1913, § 43 was amended so as to permit the joinder of two or more offenses or crimes of the same class in one indictment in separate counts, and it is hence contended by the government that the act makes valid the indictment in the case at bar. It is therefore insisted that "the only result of a reversal will therefore be that petitioner will be retried under the present indictment, or under a new indictment identical in form." If the trial court erred, it is further insisted, the error has become immaterial.

We are not disposed to give the act retrospective operation, so as to give validity to indictments found before its enactment, assuming for the argument's sake that it could have been given such operation. The evil of so considering it is manifest. Petitioner stood on his demurrer in reliance upon the then-existing law, and fault cannot be imputed to him for doing so. Had the law been different his pleading might have been different, and instead of submitting to judgment he might have contested the charges against him. This is certainly a substantial right. The government [106] seems to urge that he was in fault for not contesting the charges, and by not doing so took all chances of the change of the law, and that besides, it is urged, he received no greater sentence than must have been imposed on a conviction of one crime only, as the minimum sentence under § 5209 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3497) is five years. It is contended that the principle that one good count will support a judgment is applicable. But this overlooks the right of petitioner to have defended against the indictment,—the right which, we repeat, he did not lose by pleading its defects under the then-existing law.

Digitized by Google

It is contended by petitioner that the trial court, in imposing sentence and judgment upon him, denied him the constitutional right of trial by jury, and that, the offenses charged against him being felonies, he was without power to waive a jury trial. Of this contention, we are not required to express opinion, having found the indictment against him insufficient.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded to the District Court for the District of Alaska, Division No. 1, with directions to sustain the demurrer to the indictment.

EMILIA ALZUA and Ignacio Arnalot, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
E. FINLEY JOHNSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 106-112.)

Judges — liability for acts — Philippine supreme court.

1. The American doctrine of immunity of judges from suit because of their judicial acts protects a justice of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands against a suit to recover damages upon the alleged grounds that, without jurisdiction, he entered a judgment against the plaintiff, contrary to an order of the full court, and made a false statement of fact in the opinion by which the full court ratified the change, and inserted in the opinion of the full court in a second suit various false statements, including one attributing to the first judgment an effect that it could not have in the circumstances,—all with full knowledge and intent to injure the plaintiff, as appears from an inspection of the opinions,—and that the plaintiff had to pay the second judgment at a sacrifice.

[For other cases, see Judges, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judges — liability for acts — Philippine supreme court.

2. No implication that a justice of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands shall be liable for a judgment rendered in bad faith can be deduced from the provisions of § 9 of act No. 190 of the Philippine Commission, that "no judge, justice of the peace, or assessor shall be liable to a civil action for the recovery of damages by reason of any judicial action or judgment rendered by him in good faith and within the limits of his legal powers and jurisdiction."

[For other cases, see Judges, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 306.]

Submitted October 27, 1913. Decided November 10, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of First Instance of Manila, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing a suit against a justice of the Supreme Court. On motion to affirm, affirmed.

See same case below, 21 Philippine, 309.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry W. Van Dyke, Charles A. Douglas, and Hugh H. Obear submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. Thomas Ruffin was on the brief.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, Alexander Britton, W. A. Kincaid, and Evans Browne submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought by the plaintiffs in error against a justice of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands. Its allegations, much abridged, are as follows: The plaintiff Alzua had a judgment, in cause No. 3274, declared to be a first lien upon two stores, among other things, of Martinez, widow of Soler, and Riu, the judgment debtors; the sheriff levied; two Solers, sons of Martinez, demanded that the sheriff dismiss the levy as they were owners of the stock levied upon; the plaintiff Alzua gave the sheriff a bond, on October 14, 1905, and thereupon the sheriff proceeded to advertise

NOTE.—On liability of judicial officer to civil action for acts of judicial nature—see notes to Austin v. Vrooman, 14 L.R.A. 138; Thompson v. Jackson, 27 L.R.A. 92; and Broom v. Douglass, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 164.

On effect of bad motive to make actionable the acts of a judge without, or in excess of, jurisdiction—see note to State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 62 L.R.A. 721.

Digitized by Google

and sell the property concerned. On the same October 14 the above-mentioned Solers brought [108] suit (No. 4017) against the sheriff and the present plaintiff, Alzua, alleging that the Solers owned and were entitled to possession of the property, and praying for an injunction and damages. The trial court decided for the sheriff and Alzua and the Solers appealed to the supreme court. On March 27, 1907, that court, including the defendant, affirmed the decision, postponing a statement of the grounds, and ordered judgment in twenty days and a return of the record ten days thereafter. The term ended on March 31. In vacation, on April 8, the defendant, without consulting the other judges, changed the judgment of affirmance to one of reversal, and gave orders accordingly; so that on July 29 the record was returned to the court below with judgment reversed. The defendant then prepared a decision, filed September 14, which was signed by five justices, including the defendant, and with intent to injure Alzua falsely stated therein that the Solers were preferred creditors of Martinez and Riu, well knowing that they alleged themselves to be owners, and that Martinez and Riu were not parties to the suit, and could not be bound by the decision. No final judgment has been rendered in the cause.

On August 22, 1907, the Solers brought another suit, No. 5719, against the sheriff, Alzua, her husband, and the other obligors on the bond given to the sheriff, to which Martinez and Riu afterwards were made parties, alleging that the Solers had a preferred credit in the previously mentioned property. On November 29, the court dismissed the suit as to all but Martinez, who confessed liability, and entered judgment against her. The Solers appealed to the supreme court and the case was submitted to six judges, including the defendant. The defendant prepared a decision, and, with intent to injure the plaintiff, set forth further false statements, viz.: that in the demand on the sheriff that he dismiss the levy, the guardian ad litem of the Solers alleged that their claim was a [109] preferred claim, whereas they claimed as owners and partners; that the supreme court had decided in the former suit, No. 4017, that the Solers had a preferred credit for P. 9,868.29, whereas the defendant knew that the decision in 4017 had not been pleaded or put in evidence; that the cause No. 5719 was brought upon the bond for the above sum together with damages, etc., P. 11,068; the defendant, knowing that the sheriff, acting sheriff, Martinez, and Riu were also defendants, and that the first named sum alone was in issue and no damages proved; that the cause No. 5719 was instituted on October 1, 1907, well knowing that it was begun on August 22, before, not after, the last decision (of September 14) in the former case; that the record in No. 5719 shows that the bond was given to the sheriff after issue of an injunction in No. 4017, whereas it does not; and finally that the sureties on the bond had bound themselves thereby to respond to the Solers for the amount of the claim that the Solers had against Martinez and Riu, whereas the bond was given to the sheriff, and the Solers were not parties to it.

The declaration goes on to allege that with the same intent the defendant did not discuss the actual questions or evidence; that he obtained the signatures of the other judges upon his representation that the decision set forth an impartial and fair statement of the case, he knowing the contrary; and further, that Justice Elliott, who sat at the hearing, did not sign the decision, and was not informed of it. It further alleges that defendant omitted the names of Martinez and Riu, and directed the clerk to enter judgment against the other defendants only, knowing who were parties and what had been the judgment below. Thereafter, on February 8, 1910, pursuant to the decision and defendant's orders, judgment was entered against Alzua and three others for P. 11,068, with interest, on the ground that the Solers were creditors of Martinez and Riu, and preferred to Alzua; although, it is said, Martinez [110] and Riu were absolved by the judgment. Averments are reiterated that the defendant performed all the acts alleged in relation to Nos. 4017 and 5719 wrongfully, with intent to injure the plaintiff, with knowledge of the facts set forth, and that such knowledge appears from inspection of the decisions in Nos. 4017 and 5719. Execution issued, and the present plaintiffs paid the judgment in 5719, but to do so had to sell their property at a great sacrifice. The plaintiffs therefore seek judgment for the actual value of the property sold, the income that would have been realized, and punitive damages; P. 115,000 in all. A demurrer to the declaration was sustained by both courts below, and the plaintiffs being unable to better their case by amendment, judgment was entered and the complaint dismissed.

Abridged once more, this complaint is that the defendant, without jurisdiction, entered a judgment against the plaintiff, contrary to an order of the full court; and, in the opinion by which the full court ratified the change, made a false statement of fact; that in the opinion of the full court in a second suit he inserted various false statements, including one attributing to the first judgment an effect that it could not have in the circumstances, all with full knowledge and intent to injure the plaintiff, which knowledge appears from inspection of the opinions, and that the plaintiff had to pay the second judgment at a sacrifice.

Digitized by Google

It is apparent that there are other difficulties beside the immunity of the judge in the way of such a suit. In the first place the supreme court of the Philippines decides that the judge had jurisdiction to make the change,—a matter of local administration on which we should be very slow to revise the judgment. Gray v. Taylor, 227 U. S. 51, 57 L. ed. 413, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 679, 39 L. ed. 576, 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457. Next, the judges, on inspection of the opinions and records which they regard as incorporated in the complaint, and for which they were responsible by their assent, are of opinion that the statements in the former opinions were [111] correct and that the decisions were right, and of course reject the suggestion that they were deceived when they rendered the judgments. It might be added that the complaint hardly makes it clear that any of the alleged misstatements, some of which, at least, were irrelevant to the result, were the determining causes of the judgment of which the plaintiff complains.

But, however it may be as to the matters that we have stated, we regard it as fundamental that the immunity of the defendant from this suit is the same as that of judges in the United States, which is established beyond dispute. Bradley v. Fisher, 13 Wall. 335, 20 L. ed. 646; Randall v. Brigham, 7 Wall. 523, 19 L. ed. 285. Whatever may have been the Spanish law, this is a principle so deep seated in our system that we should regard it as carried into the Philippines by implication as soon as we established courts in those islands. Acts of Philippine Commission Nos. 136, 222. Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, chap. 1369, §§ 1, 5, 32 Stat. at L. 691, 693. Reasons somewhat analogous to those adverted to in Carrington v. United States, 208 U. S. 1, 7, 52 L. ed. 367, 368, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203, make the rule perhaps more important in the Philippines than it is here. It is true that in act No. 190, § 9, of the Philippine Commission (1901), it is provided that "no judge, justice of the peace, or assessor shall be liable to a civil action for the recovery of damages by reason of any judicial action or judgment rendered by him in good faith, and within the limits of his legal powers and jurisdiction;" and it is argued that this imports that any judge shall be liable for a judgment rendered in bad faith. But, without considering the question of power, we are of opinion, for the reasons to which we have referred, that this should not be construed to convey such an implication, at least, as to judges of the supreme court. The section is shown to have had in mind inferior judges and the like by its mention of justices of the peace and assessors, as to whom a different rule has been held to prevail.

[112] We think it manifest that the question on which the decision of this cause depends needs no further argument, and that the judgment should be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY OF TEXAS and American Surety Company of New York, Petitioners,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 112-120.)

Master and servant — Federal regulation of carriers — hours of service — number of penalties.

1. A separate penalty is incurred for each railway employee kept on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours, contrary to the hours of service act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1415, chap. 2939, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1321), by reason of the same delay of a train, such statute making the carrier which permits "any employee" to remain on duty in violation of its terms liable to a penalty "for each and every violation."

[For other cases, see Master and Servant I, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — Federal regulation of carriers — hours of service — when employees are on duty.

2. Employees, though inactive, are none the less on duty within the meaning of the hours of service act of March 4, 1907, penalizing carriers for keeping their employees on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours, where they are under orders, liable to be called upon at any moment, and not at liberty to go away.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant I, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Certiorari — to circuit courts of appeals — question not raised below.

3. A carrier sued under the hours of service act of March 4, 1907, for keeping employees on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours, cannot urge upon certiorari that the delay of the train which kept the employees beyond the proper time was caused by a defective injector that was not known to the carrier, and could not have been foreseen when the employees left a

---

Note.—On certiorari from Federal Supreme Court to circuit courts of appeals—see note to United States v. Dickinson, 53 L. ed. U. S. 711.

Digitized by Google

terminal, and that therefore, by the proviso in § 3, the act does not apply, where the question was raised only by a request to direct a verdict for the defendant, and the trouble might have been found to be due to the scarcity and bad quality of the water, which was well known.

[For other cases, see Certiorari, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — province of court and jury — amount of penalty.

4. The judge, not the jury, is to determine the amount of the penalty to be imposed under the hours of service act of March 4, 1907, when a carrier keeps employees on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours.

[For other cases, see Trial, VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 439.]

Submitted October 24, 1913. Decided November 10, 1913.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Eastern District of Texas, in favor of the United States in two suits to recover penalties for violation of the hours of service act. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Joseph M. Bryson and Cecil H. Smith submitted the cause for petitioners. Messrs. Alexander S. Coke and A. H. McKnight were on the brief:

The act of requiring or permitting members of a train crew, who go on duty at the same time and off duty at the same time, to work overtime, is single, and but one penalty can be recovered for it. The authorities on analogous questions clearly sustain this contention.

Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 94, 55 L. ed. 384, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. State, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 97 S. W. 724; Porter v. Dawson Bridge Co. 157 Pa. 367, 27 Atl. 730; Central R. Co. v. Green, 86 Pa. 427, 27 Am. Rep. 718; Hill v. Williams, 14 Serg. & R. 287; People v. Spencer, 201 N. Y. 105, 94 N. E. 614, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 818; Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446; Fisher v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 46 N. Y. 644; Cox v. Paul, 175 N. Y. 328, 67 N. E. 586; Griffin v. Interurban Street R. Co. 179 N. Y. 438, 72 N. E. 513; State Bd. of Pharmacy v. Bellinger, 138 App. Div. 12, 122 N. Y. Supp. 651; Apothecaries Co. v. Jones [1893] 1 Q. B. 89, 5 Reports, 101, 67 L. T. N. S. 677, 41 Week. Rep. 267, 17 Cox C. C. 588, 57 J. P. 56; Parks v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 13 Lea, 1, 49 Am. Rep. 655; Washburn v. M'Inroy, 7 Johns. 134; State v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 133 Wis. 478, 113 N. W. 952, 14 Ann. Cas. 1061; Central R. Co. v. Green, 86 Pa. 427, 27 Am. Rep. 718; 12 Cyc. 289; 22 Cyc. 383; 25 Cyc. 61; 1 Bishop, New Crim. Law, § 793, p. 479, § 1061; Bishop, Statutory Crimes, § 1121.

This principle has been applied in the following cases, among others, in each of which the act, though involving two or more persons or things, was held to constitute a single offense:

Crepps v. Durden, Cowp. pt. 2, p. 640; Reg. v. Giddins, Car. & M. 634; Clem v. State, 42 Ind. 420, 13 Am. Rep. 369; Hoiles v. United States, 3 MacArth. 370, 36 Am. Rep. 106; United States v. Patty, 2 Fed. 664; United States v. Scott, 74 Fed. 213; Hurst v. State, 86 Ala. 604, 11 Am. St. Rep. 79, 6 So. 120; Ben v. State, 22 Ala. 9, 58 Am. Dec. 234; Westfall v. State, 4 Ga. App. 834, 62 S. E. 558; Peck v. State, 54 Tex. Crim. Rep. 81, 111 S. W. 1019, 16 Ann. Cas. 583; Scott v. State, 46 Tex. Crim. Rep. 305, 81 S. W. 950; State v. Warren, 77 Md. 121, 39 Am. St. Rep. 401, 26 Atl. 500; State v. Nelson, 29 Me. 329; Woodford v. People, 62 N. Y. 117, 20 Am. Rep. 464; Gordon v. State, 46 Ohio St. 607, 6 L.R.A. 749, 23 N. E. 63. See also Muckenfuss v. State, 55 Tex. Crim. Rep. 229, 20 L.R.A. (N.S.) 783, 131 Am. St. Rep. 813, 116 S. W. 51, 16 Ann. Cas. 768; State v. Hennessey, 23 Ohio St. 339, 13 Am. Rep. 253; Smith v. State, 59 Ohio St. 350, 52 N. E. 826; State v. Egglesht, 41 Iowa, 574, 20 Am. Rep. 612; Com. v. Crowell, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1182, 60 S. W. 179; State v. Batson, 108 La. 479, 32 So. 478; Ward v. State, 90 Miss. 249, 43 So. 466; State v. Douglas, 26 Nev. 196, 99 Am. St. Rep. 688, 65 Pac. 802; People v. Adams, 17 Wend. 475; State v. Clark, 46 Or. 140, 80 Pac. 101; Cornell v. State, 104 Wis. 527, 80 N. W. 745; State v. Stevens, 81 Vt. 454, 70 Atl. 1060.

A member of a train crew while not actually engaged in, or having a duty to perform in connection with, the movement of his train, his time being at his disposal, is off duty within the meaning of the hours of service act.

United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 197 Fed. 629; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 100 C. C. A. 534, 177 Fed. 118; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 180 Fed. 630; United States v. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. 195 Fed. 783; United States v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 189 Fed. 471; United States v. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. 197 Fed. 624.

The failure of an injector, caused by impure water, where, owing to a protracted drouth, water cannot be procured that will not foam and thus cause injector failures, is an unavoidable accident within the meaning of the hours of service act.

Digitized by Google

United States v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 189 Fed. 471; United States v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 121 C. C. A. 136, 202 Fed. 828.

Suits by the government for penalties under the hours of service act are actions at law for debt, and, as such, are civil suits.

Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 53 L. ed. 720, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960; United States v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 182 Fed. 285; United States v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 184 Fed. 32; United States v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co. 92 C. C. A. 578, 167 Fed. 126; United States v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 121 C. C. A. 136, 202 Fed. 828.

In a civil suit, where the damages or penalties are not made certain and fixed by the terms of a contract or statute, the court, upon request, should submit to the jury the question of assessing the damages o: penalties.

Renner v. Marshall, 1 Wheat. 215, 4 L. ed. 74; Aurora v. West, 7 Wall. 104, 19 L. ed. 50; Armstrong v. Carson, 2 Dall. 302, 1 L. ed. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 543; Kennon v. Gilmer, 131 U. S. 22, 33 L. ed. 110, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Haines v. Darling, 99 Mich. 47, 57 N. W. 1081; McDaniel v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 79 Ga. 58, 3 S. E. 693.

Assistant Attorney General Denison submitted the cause for respondent:

The question whether separate penalties are to be imposed for every employee who is worked over hours is exclusively a question of construction of the statute involved, and this statute clearly so intends.

Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 94, 55 L. ed. 384, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. People, 82 Ill. App. 679; Com. v. Cooke, 50 Pa. 201; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; People v. Spencer, 201 N. Y. 105, 94 N. E. 614, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 818; People v. New York C. R. Co. 13 N. Y. 78; Southern R. Co. v. State, 165 Ind. 613, 75 N. E. 272; United States v. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. 197 Fed. 624; United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 197 Fed. 629; United States v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 106 C. C. A. 230, 184 Fed. 28; United States v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 162 Fed. 775.

The crew of train No. 622 were "on duty," within the meaning of the act, nineteen hours and forty minutes.

United States v. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. 197 Fed. 625; United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 197 Fed. 629; United States v. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. 195 Fed. 783; United States v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 189 Fed. 471; United States v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 189 Fed. 954; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 180 Fed. 630.

The cause of the delay to train No. 404 was not within the exception.

Gleeson v. Virginia Midland R. Co. 140 U. S. 435, 35 L. ed. 458, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; The Majestic, 166 U. S. 375, 41 L. ed. 1039, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 282; United States v. Garbish, 222 U. S. 257, 56 L. ed. 190, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The size of the penalty (within the maximum) was a question for the court, and not for the jury.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 582, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 103, 53 L. ed. 720, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960; Haines v. Darling, 99 Mich. 47, 57 N. W. 1081; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 143, 178 Fed. 15; McDaniel v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 79 Ga. 58, 3 S. E. 693; O'Connell v. O'Leary, 145 Mass. 311, 14 N. E. 143; United States v. Zucker, 161 U. S. 475, 40 L. ed. 777, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; United States v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 98 C. C. A. 110, 173 Fed. 764; United States v. Southern P. Co. 162 Fed. 412, 157 Fed. 459; United States v. Boston & A. R. Co. 15 Fed. 209.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case brings up two suits that were consolidated and tried together, both being suits for penalties under the hours of service act of March 4, 1907, chap. 2939, 34 Stat. at L. 1415, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1321, for keeping employees on duty for more than sixteen consecutive hours. The main question is whether, when several persons thus are kept beyond the proper time by reason of the same delay of a train, a separate penalty is incurred for each, or only one for all. The circuit court of appeals decided for the government without discussion.

The petitioner cites many cases in favor of the proposition that generally, when one act has several consequences that the law seeks to prevent, the liability is attached to the act, and is but one. It argues that the delay of the train was such an act, and that the principle, which is a very old one, applies. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v.

Digitized by Google

United States, 220 U. S. 94, 55 L. ed. 384, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368. But unless the statute requires a different view, to call the delay of the train the act that produced the wrong is to beg the question. See Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. 176, 19 L. ed. 909; Denny v. New York C. R. Co. 13 Gray, 481, 74 Am. Dec. 645. The statute was not violated by the delay. That may have made keeping the men overtime more likely, but was not in itself wrongful conduct quoad hoc. The wrongful act was keeping an employee at work overtime, and that act was distinct as to each employee so kept. Without stopping to consider whether this argument would be met by the proviso declaring a "delay" in certain cases not to be within the statute, it is enough to observe that there is nothing to hinder making each consequence a separate cause of action or offense, if by its proper construction the law does so; see Flemister v. United States, 207 U. S. 372, 375, 52 L. ed. 252, 254, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; [119] so that the real question is simply what the statute means. The statute makes the carrier who permits "any employee" to remain on duty in violation of its terms, liable to a penalty "for each and every violation." The implication of these words cannot be made much plainer by argument. But it may be observed, as was said by the government, that as towards the public, every overworked man presents a distinct danger, and as towards the employees, each case, of course, is distinct. United States v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 106 C. C. A. 230, 184 Fed. 28; People v. Spencer, 201 N. Y. 105, 111, 94 N. E. 614, Ann. Cas. 1912 A, 818.

One of the delays was while the engine was sent off for water and repairs. In the meantime the men were waiting, doing nothing. It is argued that they were not on duty during this period, and that if it be deducted, they were not kept more than sixteen hours. But they were under orders, liable to be called upon at any moment, and not at liberty to go away. They were none the less on duty when inactive. Their duty was to stand and wait. United States v. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. 197 Fed. 624, 628; United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 197 Fed. 629.

It is urged that in one case the delay was the result of a cause, a defective injector, that was not known to the carrier, and could not have been foreseen when the employees left a terminal, and that therefore, by the proviso in § 3, the act does not apply. But the question was raised only by a request to direct a verdict for the defendant, and the trouble might have been found to be due to the scarcity and bad quality of the water, which was well known. See Gleeson v. Virginia Midland R. Co. 140 U. S. 435, 35 L. ed. 458, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 859; The Majestic, 166 U. S. 375, 386, 41 L. ed. 1039, 1043, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 282.

The statute provides for a penalty not to exceed $500. It is argued that the amount of the penalty was for the jury, the proceeding being a civil suit. But the penalty is a deterrent, not compensation. The [120] amount is not measured by the harm to the employees, but by the fault of the carrier, and, being punitive, rightly was determined by the judge. United States v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 98 C. C. A. 110, 173 Fed. 764, 771; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 140, 178 Fed. 12, 15.

Judgment affirmed.

CLEMENT NATIONAL BANK, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF VERMONT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 120-143.)

Error to state court — questions reviewable.

1. The ruling of the highest court of the state that the tax imposed under Vt. Pub. Stat. chap. 37, upon interest-bearing deposits in national banks, which the bank may pay and charge to the depositors, is laid upon the depositor, and not upon the bank, is conclusive upon the Federal Supreme Court when testing, on writ of error to the state court, the validity of such statute under the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124-2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — deposits in national banks — discrimination.

2. The semiannual tax imposed under Vt. Pub. Stat. chap. 37, upon interest-bearing

---

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On writs of error to state court in cases involving questions under the national bankrupt law, see note to Rankin v. Barton, 50 L. ed. U. S. 163.

On state taxation of bank deposits—see note to State v. Duluth Gas & Water Co. 57 L.R.A. 72.

On state taxation of national banks generally—see notes to McHenry v. Downer, 45 L.R.A. 737; Old Nat. Bank v. County Ct. 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 584; and Providence Bank v. Billings, 7 L. ed. U. S. 939.

On notice and hearing required generally to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

Digitized by Google

deposits in national banks, which the bank itself may pay upon the basis of average deposits, charging the same to the depositors, and thereby relieving the latter from the necessity of making any return, does not unfairly discriminate against national banks, where, under the state laws, state banking institutions pay a franchise tax at substantially the same rate upon the average amount of deposits, after deducting deposits in excess of $2,000, upon which the depositors are taxable locally, depositors being exempted from taxation upon those deposits which enter into the calculation of the average.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

National banks — powers — agreement to pay tax on deposits.

3. An agreement between a national bank and the state, by which the former agrees to pay upon the basis of average deposits, the tax imposed under Vt. Pub. Stat. chap. 37, upon interest-bearing deposits, and thereby relieve its depositors from the necessity of making any returns, is not ultra vires of the bank because the average amount upon which the bank agrees to pay may not precisely correspond to the amount upon which the depositors would be taxed, or because the agreement does not contemplate a charge against the depositors' accounts of the amounts paid by the bank.

[For other cases, see Banks, IV. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — taxation of bank deposits.

4. Depositors in national banks are not denied the equal protection of the laws by the tax imposed under Vt. Pub. Stat. chap. 37, upon interest-bearing deposits in such banks, because depositors in state banking institutions are exempted from taxation on their deposits up to $2,000, such institutions paying a franchise tax upon the average amount of deposits after deducting deposits in excess of $2,000, upon which the depositors are taxable locally, nor because of the exemptions which such statute makes in favor of municipalities, corporations organized solely for charitable, educational, or religious purposes, and various corporations otherwise taxed, nor because persons whose deposits do not bear interest in excess of 2 per cent per annum are also exempted.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing.

5. The lack of any assessment other than that made by the statute itself, or of any other notice to the depositor than that thus given by law, does not invalidate, as denying due process of law, the semiannual tax laid at a specified rate by Vt. Pub. Stat. chap. 37, upon interest-bearing deposits in national banks, where the tax was recoverable by suit in which the depositor would have full opportunity to resist any illegal demand.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 725-744, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — taxation of bank deposits.

6. The obligation of existing contracts between a national bank and its depositors was not unconstitutionally impaired by the tax imposed under Vt. Pub. Stat. chap. 37, upon interest-bearing deposits which the bank itself may pay upon the basis of average deposits, charging the same to the depositors.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1450-1474, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 29.]

Argued April 28, 29, 1913. Decided November 10, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Vermont to review a judgment which, reversing in part a judgment of the Rutland County Court in favor of the state, enforced an agreement by a national bank to pay the taxes assessed upon interest-bearing deposits. Affirmed.

See same case below, 84 Vt. 167, 78 Atl. 944, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 22.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Marvelle C. Webber and Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The title of the statute indicates the purpose to tax the bank, and the statutory designation, while not absolutely controlling, is generally an important element in determining what kind of a tax the state imposes.

Gray, Limitations of Taxing Power, p. 42 § 55, note 49; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 462, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 386, 2 L. ed. 304, 313; United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 610, 631, 4 L. ed. 471, 477; Machen Fed. Corp. Tax Law 1909.

The deposits become the property of the bank, not of the depositor, while the depositor becomes a creditor of the bank to the amount of the deposit.

National Bank v. Millard, 10 Wall. 152, 19 L. ed. 897; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 369, 23 L. ed. 483, 485; Morse, Bkg. § 289; State v. Franklin County Sav. Bank & T. Co. 74 Vt. 246, 52 Atl. 1069; Manhattan Co. v. Blake, 148 U. S. 412, 424, 37 L. ed. 504, 508, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640.

They are assessable to the depositor only, and as debts owing by the bank.

People v. National Bank, 123 Cal. 53, 45 L.R.A. 747, 69 Am. St. Rep. 32, 55 Pac. 685; Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35.

The statute, being an attempt to tax national banks, is absolutely void.

Davis v. Elmira Sav. Bank, 161 U. S. 275, 283, 40 L. ed. 700, 701, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502;

Digitized by Google

Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Hawley v. Hurd, 72 Vt. 122, 52 L.R.A. 195, 82 Am. St. Rep. 922, 47 Atl. 401; Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 43 L. ed. 850, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537.

The sum the bank is called upon to pay is based on the average of the deposits for the period. This measures the amount to be paid by the bank. Taxes on banks and savings banks, measured by the amount of their deposits, have generally been held to be privilege or franchise taxes, imposed on the privilege of doing business as a banking corporation.

Gray, Limitations of Taxing Power, pp. 43, 44, § 56; Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 594, 18 L. ed. 897; Provident Inst. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 611, 18 L. ed. 907; Com. v. People's Five Cents Sav. Bank, 5 Allen, 428; State v. Bradford Sav. Bank & T. Co. 71 Vt. 238, 44 Atl. 349; Com. v. Lancaster Sav. Bank, 123 Mass. 493; Jones v. Winthrop Sav. Bank, 66 Me. 242; State v. Franklin County Sav. Bank & T. Co. 74 Vt. 246, 52 Atl. 1069; New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265, 30 L. ed. 411, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

When a bank is required to collect a tax levied by the state against the owners of shares of stock in said bank upon said shares, but it appears that the bank cannot reimburse itself from assets of such shareholders in its hands, the tax becomes, under these circumstances, a tax upon the bank itself, and therefore invalid. It cannot be made necessary for the bank to institute and maintain a collection suit in order to be reimbursed.

Gray, Limitations of Taxing Power, § 801a; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 717, note 1; Farmers' & T. Nat. Bank v. Hoffmann, 93 Iowa, 119, 61 N. W. 418; New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265, 30 L. ed. 411, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Boston v. Beal, 51 Fed. 306; First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 41 L. ed. 1069, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; Stapylton v. Thaggard, 33 C. C. A. 353, 62 U. S. App. 638, 91 Fed. 93.

The statute is by design and in effect and reality a duress upon national banks, compelling them to execute the stipulation to pay the tax in order to retain their depositors.

Swift & C. & B. Co. v. United States, 111 U. S. 22, 28 L. ed. 341, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Maxwell v. Griswold, 10 How. 242, 13 L. ed. 405; Robertson v. Frank Bros. Co. 132 U. S. 17, 33 L. ed. 236, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 223 U. S. 280, 56 L. ed. 436, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1050; Gaar, S. & Co. v. Shannon, 223 U. S. 468, 471, 56 L. ed. 510, 512, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236.

The bank was without power to enter into the stipulation, and its act in so doirg is ultra vires, and not enforceable.

McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Bowen v. Needles Nat. Bank, 36 C. C. A. 553, 94 Fed. 925; Metropolitan Stock Exch. v. Lyndonville Nat. Bank, 76 Vt. 303, 57 Atl. 101; First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122, 23 L. ed. 679; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 550, 41 L. ed. 817, 821, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433, 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 376; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Pirie, 27 C. C. A. 171, 49 U. S. App. 596, 82 Fed. 799; Norton v. Derry Nat. Bank, 61 N. H. 589, 60 Am. Rep. 334; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. ed. 365; Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 30 L. ed. 915, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 295, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 942, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; First Nat. Bank v. Converse, 200 U. S. 425, 440, 50 L. ed. 537, 543, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Wehrmann, 202 U. S. 295, 50 L. ed. 1036, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Dolley v. Abilene Nat. Bank, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1065, 102 C. C. A. 607, 179 Fed. 461.

The taxes levied in pursuance of the act, if enforced, constitute a denial of the equal protection of the laws.

Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 337, 29 L. ed. 414, 419, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 521, 43 L. ed. 786, 793, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Keeney v. New York, 222 U. S. 525, 56 L. ed. 299, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1139, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell, 222 U. S. 225, 235, 56 L. ed. 175, 179, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 529; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 294, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; State v. Hoyt, 71 Vt. 59, 42 Atl. 973; Aluminum Co. v. Ramsey, 222 U. S. 251, 56 L. ed. 185, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76, 1 N. C. C. A. 184; Opinion of Justices, 76 N. H. 588, 79 Atl. 31.

The taxes, if enforced, constitute in effect

Digitized by Google

a taking of the property of the depositors without due process of law.

(1) There was no valid assessment, and none provided for.

27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 660; Cooley, Const. Lim. 259; Com. v. Delaware Div. Canal Co. 123 Pa. 600, 2 L.R.A. 798, 16 Atl. 584; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 91; Jones v. Winthrop Sav. Bank, 66 Me. 245; State v. Bradford Sav. Bank & T. Co. 71 Vt. 238, 44 Atl. 349; 1 Cooley, Taxn. pp. 600, 753, 754; People v. Hastings, 29 Cal. 449.

(2) The tax is assessed, if assessed at all, without proper notice to the depositors.

Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 57, 47 L. ed. 70, 73, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; State R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 610, 23 L. ed. 663, 672; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 104 Pa. 101; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Messrs. Hale K. Darling and Clarke C. Fitts argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The construction given by a state court to the laws of that state is final.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Martin v. West, 222 U. S. 191, 196, 56 L. ed. 159, 161, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 592, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 456, 33 L. ed. 970, 980, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 754; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 423, 36 L. ed. 485, 491, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 12 Am. Neg. Cas. 659; New York ex rel. Schurz v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 411, 37 L. ed. 498, 503, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 462, 42 L. ed. 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, 38 L. ed. 265, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 152, 41 L. ed. 107, 110, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096.

The bank had the right to enter into the stipulation.

Western Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 152 U. S. 346, 38 L. ed. 470, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 127, 23 L. ed. 681; Pattison v. Syracuse Nat. Bank, 80 N. Y. 82, 36 Am. Rep. 582; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 73, 35 L. ed. 107, 110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Sykes v. First Nat. Bank, 2 S. D. 259, 49 N. W. 1058; Interstate Nat. Bank v. Ferguson, 48 Kan. 732, 30 Pac. 237; First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699, 25 L. ed. 750, 1 Am. Neg. Cas. 588; First Nat. Bank v. Strang, 138 Ill. 347, 27 N. E. 903; George v. Wallace, 68 C. C. A. 40, 135 Fed. 286; Schofield v. State Nat. Bank, 38 C. C. A. 179, 97 Fed. 282; Lull v. Anamosa Nat. Bank, 110 Iowa, 542, 81 N. W. 784; Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 286, 54 L. ed. 1043, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188.

There was a legally adequate consideration for the stipulation.

Ballard v. Burton, 64 Vt. 393, 16 L.R.A. 664, 24 Atl. 769; Bellows v. Sowles, 55 Vt. 391, 45 Am. Rep. 621; Blake v. Peck, 11 Vt. 483; Churchill v. Bradley, 58 Vt. 403, 56 Am. Rep. 563, 5 Atl. 189; Giddings v. Giddings, 51 Vt. 236, 31 Am. Rep. 682; Dorwin v. Smith, 35 Vt. 69.

No interference with a Federal agency is involved.

Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 154, 30 L. ed. 895, 901, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Dolley v. Abilene Nat. Bank, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1065, 102 C. C. A. 607, 179 Fed. 461; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 362, 19 L. ed. 701, 703; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961.

Contracts made under duress are not void, but voidable merely; and one who, after its execution, has ratified a contract by accepting its benefits, cannot afterward avoid it on the ground of duress; and ratification may be shown by subsequent conduct.

Carver v. United States, 111 U. S. 609, 28 L. ed. 540, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Connolly v. Bouck, 98 C. C. A. 184, 174 Fed. 312; Schee v. McQuilken, 59 Ind. 269.

Again, what constitutes duress is a question of law; but whether duress has been actually exercised is a question of fact.

Clement v. Buckley Mercantile Co. 172 Mich. 243, 137 N. W. 657; Galusha v. Sherman, 105 Wis. 263, 47 L.R.A. 417, 81 N. W. 495.

Duress is but a species of fraud (Brainard v. Van Dyke, 71 Vt. 365, 45 Atl. 758); and it is fundamental that fraud in fact must be found by the trier of fact; it will not be presumed.

A statute can be assailed only by those whose rights are injuriously affected thereby.

Collins v. Texas, 223 U. S. 288, 56 L. ed. 439, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 47 L. ed. 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Red River Valley Nat. Bank v. Craig, 181 U. S. 548, 45 L. ed. 994, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 26 L. ed. 1044.

The state has a right to enact tax laws that may incidentally affect the profit arising from a contract; but this does not unlawfully impair the contract, because it was made subject to just that kind of impairment.

Digitized by Google

Rutland R. Co. v. Central Vermont R. Co. 63 Vt. 23, 10 L.R.A. 562, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 488, 21 Atl. 262, 731.

It is not entirely clear whether the bank is complaining in its own behalf, or for its depositors. We do not consider the relation between the bank and its depositors to be such that it can interpose for them, though the case might perhaps be otherwise were the bank a savings institution (Provident Inst. for Sav. v. Malone, 221 U. S. 660, 55 L. ed. 899, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1129, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661). The relation between this bank and its depositors differs from that existing between savings banks and their depositors. In this case, the relation is that of debtor and creditor. But the depositor in a savings bank does not loan the money deposited. He intrusts it to the bank as his trustee; if there is a profit, he receives it; if there is a loss, he shares it (State v. People's Nat. Bank, 75 N. H. 27, 70 Atl. 542, 21 Ann. Cas. 1204).

A voluntary course of action often subjects a party to liabilities that would not be incurred had he not volunteered.

Consumers' Co. v. Hatch, 224 U. S. 148, 56 L. ed. 703, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The state might compel the bank to pay each resident depositor's tax, in the first instance.

First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Lionberger v. Rouse, 9 Wall. 468, 19 L. ed. 721; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Waite v. Dowley, 94 U. S. 527, 24 L. ed. 181; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Haight v. Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 6 Wall. 15, 18 L. ed. 818; Carstairs v. Cochran, 193 U. S. 10, 16, 48 L. ed. 596, 597, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; St. Albans v. National Car Co. 57 Vt. 68; Assaria State Bank v. Dolley, 219 U. S. 121, 55 L. ed. 123, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189.

In view of the state court's conclusion that the case affords indications that "national banks are benefited by the act," it would seem that no further inquiry as to the fact of a sufficient consideration is needful.

9 Cyc. 311.

There is no imperative requirement that taxation shall be equal. If there were, the operations of the government would come to a stop, from the absolute impossibility of fulfilling it.

Com. v. People's Five Cents Sav. Bank, 5 Allen, 436; Allen v. Drew, 44 Vt. 186; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 504, 22 L. ed. 189, 195; First Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 205, 216, 43 L. ed. 669, 673, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 337, 29 L. ed. 414, 419, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

The 14th Amendment was never intended wholly to forbid "class legislation," and discriminations are not prohibited provided they are reasonable, and the law applies alike to all of the particular class affected.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

Is the selection of depositors in national banks to form a class for the purpose of assessing a state tax an arbitrary classification?

Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 292, 293, 50 L. ed. 761, 762, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

Unless restrained by constitutional provisions, the legislature of a state has full power to exempt any persons or corporations or classes of property from taxation, according to its views of public policy or expediency.

37 Cyc. 885.

There was a valid assessment.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227, 22 L. ed. 80; King v. United States, 99 U. S. 229, 25 L. ed. 373; United States v. Erie R. Co. 107 U. S. 1, 27 L. ed. 385, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; United States v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 123 U. S. 113, 31 L. ed. 138, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Faust v. Twenty-Third German American Bldg. Asso. 84 Md. 186, 35 Atl. 890.

The state does not distrain for these taxes. The only way it can compel a depositor to pay the tax is by means of a suit against him, and so an opportunity for hearing before assessment is not required. In such suit, the taxpayer would have ample opportunity to contest the validity of the tax on all of the grounds here urged.

Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 537, 40 L. ed. 247, 251, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist.

Digitized by Google

111 U. S. 701, 711, 28 L. ed. 569, 573, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

This court is concerned only with the constitutionality of the law in view of the applicable provision of the Federal Constitution. The state is left to choose its own methods of taxation, and its form and manner of enforcing the payment of the public revenues, subject, so far as the Federal power is concerned, to the restricting regulations of the Constitution of the United States.

Kentucky Union Co. v. Kentucky, 219 U. S. 151, 55 L. ed. 153, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The judgment under review awarded a recovery in favor of the state of Vermont against the plaintiff in error, the Clement National Bank, upon an agreement which the bank had made pursuant to § 815 of chapter 37 of the Public Statutes of Vermont, entitled, "Taxation of National Bank Deposits," originally enacted as No. 41 of the Acts of 1906. The chapter is set forth in the margin.† The Federal questions relate to the validity of the [127] bank's stipulation in view of the scheme of taxation which induced the making of it.

The plaintiff in error was organized under the Federal [128] statutes, and does business at Rutland, Vermont. For several years it has maintained a "savings department," allowing depositors therein interest at a rate exceeding 2 [129] per cent per annum, payable on the first days of January and July in each year on deposits remaining in bank on those days. Certain other depositors have received certificates of deposit with interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum for each calendar month that the deposit continued. Prior to the year 1906, depositors in national banks in Vermont, whether or not their deposits bore interest, were taxable at the local tax rate, in the districts in which they resided, in common with other owners of credits (or debts due from solvent debtors) under the general plan of local taxation. Pub. Stat. (Vt.) 1894 ed. §§ 374, 398, 399. Depositors in savings banks and trust companies, organized under the laws of the state, had long been exempt from all taxation upon their deposits to a specified extent (at first $1,500, and later

†CHAPTER 37.

Taxation of National Bank Deposits.

Sec. 804. Depositors' report to commissioner.—Every person having, on the 1st day of April and October, an interest-bearing deposit in a national bank in this state, shall, except as otherwise provided by this chapter, within twenty days thereafter, report the amount thereof and the name of such bank to the commissioner of state taxes, on blanks prepared and furnished by him to such depositor on application therefor.

Sec. 805. Depositors' report to listers.—Every resident of this state so having an interest-bearing deposit in a national bank in this state shall annually, except as otherwise provided in this chapter, report to the listers of the town wherein he resides, the names of all banks located in this state wherein he then has or has had any such deposits during the year next preceding the 1st day of April in the year wherein such report is made, and the amount of such deposits.

Sec. 806. Interrogatories in inventories.—The secretary of state shall incorporate into the tax inventory interrogatories so framed as to require the person subscribing to the same to state in writing and under oath whether or not he then has or has had during the year next preceding the 1st day of such April, any such deposits; and, if such interrogatories are answered in the affirmative, he shall also state the name of such bank and the amount of such deposit, with all accrued interest.

Sec. 807. Reports by listers.—The listers in every town shall, on or before the 10th day of May, upon blanks to be furnished by the commissioner of state taxes, report the names of all persons whose inventories show that they had in a national bank in this state, on the 1st day of the preceding April, deposits of the character and kind described in the third preceding section, together with the amount of each individual deposit so held on such 1st day of April, and the name of the bank holding such deposit.

Sec. 808. Reports filed; inspection.—Such reports shall be kept on file by said commissioner for three years from and after the dates on which the taxes based thereon became due and payable to the state. Such reports shall not be subject to the inspection of any person other than said commissioner and the employees in his office, the attorney general and the state's attorney of the county wherein such bank has its principal place of business, or said depositor, if a resident of this state, has his domicil. Any information contained in such reports shall not be disclosed by any person authorized to examine the same, except by the direction of a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 809. Assessment of tax; payment.—Every person so having a deposit in a national bank as aforesaid shall semiannually, except as otherwise provided by this chapter, pay a tax to the state, which is hereby assessed at the rate of 7/20 of 1 per cent semiannually upon the amount of such deposit so held by such national bank on the 1st day of April and October; and no deduction therefrom shall be made on account of any exemption. The taxes imposed by this section shall be paid to the state treasurer semiannually on or before

Digitized by Google

$2,000 in any one institution), these organizations being subject to a state tax of $\frac{7}{20}$ of 1 per [130] cent per annum, computed upon the average amount of deposits; in this computation, deposits in excess of the above-stated limit were deducted, and upon these the depositors were taxable locally. Pub. Stat. (Vt.) 1894 ed. §§ 582-584; Acts of 1902, No. 20, § 41; Acts of 1906, No. 28, § 1; Pub. Stat. 1906 ed. §§ 744-746.

This system being continued as to the state institutions and the depositors therein, the general assembly passed the statute in question which provides for a state tax on interest-bearing deposits in national banks (where the interest exceeds 2 per cent per annum) of $\frac{7}{20}$ of 1 per cent semi-annually. Persons having deposits of this sort, unless specially excepted (§ 819), are required to report them at specified periods (§§ 804-806), and to pay the tax without deduction on account of any exemption (§ 809). No other tax is to "be assessed on such deposits in national banks, nor against the depositors on account thereof" (§ 810).

It is further provided that, if a national bank so elects, it may pay to the state all the prescribed taxes, and deduct them from the interest or deposits of the persons from whom they became due (§ 814). On such election, the bank is, semiannually, to file with the state commissioner a stipulation to that effect; no depositor is required to make returns for the period covered by the stipulation (§ 815); the state commissioner is to issue to the bank a certificate showing that it has been filed (§ 816); and the statute provides that upon such filing the bank shall "become liable to the state for the amount of such tax of $\frac{7}{20}$ of 1 per cent of the average amount of such deposits" held by the bank during the six months to which the stipulation refers (§ 817).

This suit was brought by the state upon the following stipulation, which was filed by the plaintiff in error, on October 1, 1908, the returns and payment therein specified not having been made:

[131] State of Vermont:

The Clement National Bank, whose banking house is located at Rutland, in the state of Vermont, for the consideration hereinafter named, hereby stipulates and agrees with the state of Vermont that on or before the 30th day of April, 1909, it will make the last day of May and November next following the dates whereon the reports provided for in the fourth preceding section are required to be made.

---

Sec. 810. Exempt from other taxes.—No other tax shall be assessed on such deposits in national banks, nor against the depositors on account thereof.

Sec. 811. Penalty.—A depositor who wilfully fails to make returns or pay the taxes provided by this chapter shall forfeit 10 per cent of such deposit to the use of the state for each month's delay in filing such return. Such tax and forfeiture may be recovered in an action on this statute, commenced by the commissioner of state taxes in the name of the state, in any county, municipal, or city court.

Sec. 812. Trustee process.—A person having any of the moneys, goods, chattels, effects, rights, or credits of said depositor in his possession may be summoned as trustee in any action instituted under the preceding section, notwithstanding that the amount of such tax or the amount in his hands may be less than $10.

Sec. 813. Waiver of penalty.—If the commissioner of state taxes or the court wherein such action is pending for the recovery of such tax or forfeiture becomes satisfied that such failure was not wilful on the part of the depositor, said commissioner or said court may, in its discretion, waive any part or all of such penalty.

Sec. 814. Bank may elect to pay.—If a national bank in this state so elects, it may pay to the state all taxes provided by this chapter; and it shall be lawful for such bank to deduct such taxes so paid from the interest or deposits then or thereafter held by it, belonging to the person from whom such tax became due.

Sec. 815. Same; stipulation.—If a national bank elects to so pay such taxes to the state, and, to make returns as hereinafter provided, it shall semiannually, on or before the 1st day of April and October, file with the commissioner of state taxes a stipulation setting forth such fact; and thereupon such bank shall become liable to the state for such tax for the six months named in such stipulation, and to make returns as hereinafter provided; and no depositor in such bank shall be required to make the returns hereinbefore specified, covering the six months' period for which such stipulation was filed.

Sec. 816. Commissioner's certificate to bank.—Upon such stipulation being filed, said commissioner shall issue in duplicate to such bank a certificate showing that it has filed such stipulation.

Sec. 817. Bank's liability.—Every bank filing such stipulation shall thereupon become liable to the state for the amount of such tax of $\frac{7}{20}$ of 1 per cent of the average amount of such deposits held by such bank during the six months beginning with the 1st day of April and October respectively, for which such stipulation was filed.

Sec. 818. Bank's return.—If such bank, on or before the 1st day of April, files a stipulation as hereinbefore provided, it shall, on or before the 31st day of the following October, file a return with the state treasurer and commissioner of state taxes, verified by the oath of its president, cashier, or one of its directors, showing the average amount of such deposits for the six months ending the 30th day of September in that sworn returns to the state treasurer and commissioner of state taxes, showing the average amount of all deposits held by it during the six months beginning with the 1st day of October, 1908, whereon the rate of interest paid or allowed by said bank to the depositors thereof exceeds 2 per cent per annum: and that on or before the 30th day of April, 1909, it will pay to the state treasurer a tax of 7/20 of 1 per cent of the average amount of all such deposits so held by it.

Digitized by Google

This stipulation is made and is to be filed with said commissioner in consideration and for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the statutes of Vermont which provide that upon the making and filing hereof, as aforesaid, no depositor having an interest-bearing deposit or deposits in said bank, whereon the rate of interest paid or allowed by said bank exceeds 2 per cent per annum, shall be required, on or before the 20th day of October, 1908, to make returns to the state treasurer and commissioner of state taxes, showing the amount of such deposit or deposits in said bank on the 1st day of October, 1908; and that no such depositor shall be required to pay to the state treasurer, on or before the 30th day of November, 1908, a tax of 7/20 of 1 per cent of the amount of such interest-bearing deposit or deposits so held by said bank on the 1st day of October, 1908.

This stipulation is also made and is to be filed as aforesaid for the purpose of obtaining from said commissioner, as the law provides, a certificate in duplicate, setting forth that the same has been filed, and of showing that said bank has elected to pay and will pay to the state treasurer [132] on or before the 30th day of April, 1909, a tax of 7/20 of 1 per cent of the average amount of all such deposits held by said bank during the six months beginning with the 1st day of October, 1908, on account of which the depositors thereof shall be by said bank paid or allowed interest exceeding the rate of 2 per cent per annum.

In witness whereof said bank has, on this 30th day of September, 1908, at Rutland, in the state of Vermont, caused its corporate name to be hereunto affixed by its cashier, duly empowered so to do by vote of said bank.

Clement National Bank,
Rutland, Vermont,
by C. H. Harrison, Cashier

Indorsed: Received October 1, 1908, J. E. Cushman, Commissioner of State Taxes.

The case was tried upon an agreed statement of facts. It appeared that the state commissioner issued to the bank his certificate, which was conspicuously posted in its banking room, that the stipulation had been filed, and that therefore depositors having deposits upon which the rate of interest exceeded 2 per cent per annum would not be required to make returns. In consequence, none of the depositors' reports was made, and there was no valuation of the individual deposits by any official during the period covered by the stipulation.

It was also set forth that, under the bank's method of allowing interest on deposits, it was impossible for it to determine, at the time it was required to make its semiannual returns under the stipulation, upon what deposits interest exceeding 2 per cent per annum would actually be allowed. Thus, deposits might be withdrawn prior to January 1st or July 1st, the dates on which interest was credited on amounts then in bank. In practice, in former periods for which the plaintiff in error had made payments under similar stipulations, it had included all [133] deposits belonging to the class upon which interest was allowable in excess of 2 per cent per annum, in arriving at the average amount of deposits, whether or not interest was in fact paid. The monthly averages were ascertained by averaging the aggregate deposits held at the close of each day, and the average for the six months was taken by averaging the monthly averages. Thus computed, the average amount year, and shall pay to the state treasurer the amount of such semiannual tax. In case such bank, on or before the 1st day of October, filed a like stipulation, it shall, on or before the 30th day of the following April, file a like return with the first-named officers, showing the average amount of such deposits for the six months ending with the 31st day of March next preceding the making of such return, and shall, in like manner, pay such taxes.

---

Sec. 819. Exemptions.—The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to municipalities; nor to corporations organized solely for charitable, educational, or religious purposes; nor to railroad, insurance, guaranty, express, telegraph, telephone, steamboat, car, transportation, sleeping car, parlor car, mortgage, loan, or investment companies; nor to savings banks, trust companies, and savings bank and trust companies which have interest-bearing deposits in national banks; nor to national banks having an interest-bearing deposit in another national bank; nor to any person having any sum of money on deposit in a national bank whereon interest not exceeding the rate of 2 per cent per annum is paid or allowed him by such national bank.

Sec. 820. Exemptions restricted.—Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as exempting from taxation any deposit in any national bank, except as hereinbefore provided.

Digitized by Google

of deposits of the class above described (including those of nonresidents) for the six months beginning October 1, 1908, was $594,357.74. The average deposits exempted for the period in question, under § 819, were $15,688.15, and the net average for the six months was $578,669.19, upon which the state sought to recover $2,025.33.

The state also declared upon a similar stipulation filed by the bank on April 1, 1909, covering the ensuing six months. The court of first instance rendered judgment in favor of the state for the full amount demanded. This was reversed by the supreme court of the state, which held that the statute did not apply to nonresidents, and that the amount of recovery should be determined by a computation based on the credits of resident depositors. Final judgment was then entered against the bank, covering the two periods, in the sum of $3,989.85. 84 Vt. 167, 78 Atl. 944, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 22.

1. It is contended that the statute imposed a tax upon the franchises of national banks, and hence exceeded the state power. Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 667, 668, 43 L. ed. 850, 852, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537, and cases there cited.

But it is apparent that, whatever other objections may lie, the tax complained of is not laid upon the national bank itself, its property or franchises. It is imposed upon the depositors; they alone are required to pay it. If they fail to make returns, as provided by the statute, they are subject to penalty; and both tax and penalty are recoverable by suit against them in the name of the state. If [134] they escape the tax, it is because of the bank's stipulation. If the bank becomes liable, it is by virtue of its agreement, and not otherwise. The statute was so interpreted by the supreme court of the state, which said: "The transaction which makes the money the property of the bank gives the depositor a credit of equal amount, and the term 'deposit' may be used to indicate the money deposited or the credit which the depositor receives for it. The last must be taken to be the meaning here, for the statute lays the tax upon the depositor in so many words." 84 Vt. 167, 181, 78 Atl. 944, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 22. There is no difficulty in the interpretation of the statute as to the prescribed incidence of the tax, and, aside from that, the decision of the state court is controlling as to the persons upon whom the statute fixed responsibility. It was the province of that court to determine what the terms of the statute authorized, commanded, or forbade and it is for this court to say whether, in view of its operation, thus delimited, it conflicts with the Federal law. New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 541, 542, 25 L. ed. 705, 706; First Nat. Bank v. Ayers, 160 U. S. 660, 664, 40 L. ed. 573, 574, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 444, 41 L. ed. 1069, 1072, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 182 U. S. 556, 560, 46 L. ed. 1227, 1229, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

2. It is not urged that the legislation of Congress relating to national banks, either expressly or by implication, withdraws from the reach of the taxing power of the state the credits belonging to depositors, whether or not interest-bearing. "No one contends," says the plaintiff in error, that a state "has not the right to include in its taxation of a person's property the amount which he may have on deposit in the savings department of a national bank." It must also be recognized that in exercising its authority to tax property within its jurisdiction, the state is not limited to one method. It has a broad range of discretion in classifying subjects of taxation and in employing different methods for different sorts of property. [135] Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 606, 33 L. ed. 1025, 1031, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Citizens' Teleph. Co. v. Fuller, 229 U. S. 322, 329-331, 57 L. ed. 1206, 1213, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 833. The objection made by the bank to the state's plan must rest not upon the mere fact that the depositors in national banks are taxed upon their credits, or that they are taken out of the system of local taxation, but upon the ground that the measure adopted is essentially inimical to national banks, frustrating the purpose of the national legislation, or impairing their efficiency as Federal agencies. Davis v. Elmira Sav. Bank, 161 U. S. 275, 283, 40 L. ed. 700, 701, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502; McClellan v. Chipman, 164 U. S. 347, 357, 41 L. ed. 461, 465, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85. And that, in substance, is the position taken.

To be open to such an objection, it must appear that the scheme of taxation constitutes an injurious discrimination. Even in the case of shares of the capital stock of national banks, which cannot be taxed save with the consent of Congress (New York v Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 543, 25 L. ed. 705, 706), taxation by the state is expressly permitted if it is not at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502. The object is to prevent hostile discrimination, and for this purpose a standard is fixed. Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 154, 155, 30 L. ed. 895, 901, 902, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. With respect to the taxation of depositors' credits, the Federal statute does not prescribe a rule; and, the property being normally subject to the state's taxing power, there is no warrant for implying a restriction which would extend beyond the requirements of protection from the prejudicial effect of such exactions as would be unjustly discriminatory.

Digitized by Google

It follows that the comparison must have regard to business and property which may be deemed to have, generally speaking, a similar character; and, in the present case, there is no basis for the contention that the statute unfairly discriminates against national banks unless it may be found in the method of dealing with deposits in [136] banking institutions organized under the state law. The institutions thus brought to our attention are savings banks and trust companies. Formerly there were also state banks of circulation, discount, and deposit; but these, shortly after the passage of the national banking act, ceased to exist and were succeeded by trust companies or "savings banks and trust companies." The latter were organized under special charters and had, except as to the issuance of notes of circulation, very nearly the same powers as those possessed by the earlier state banks. State v. Franklin County Sav. Bank & T. Co. 74 Vt. 246, 257, 258, 52 Atl. 1069.

These state organizations, as it has already been observed, for many years had been subject to a special state tax upon the average amount of deposits, after certain deductions. This has been held to be a franchise tax (State v. Bradford Sav. Bank & T. Co. 71 Vt. 254, 44 Atl. 349; State v. Franklin County Sav. Bank & T. Co. supra). Having laid this tax, the state exempted the depositors in these savings banks and trust companies from taxation upon their respective credits not exceeding $2,000 in any one institution. Individual deposits over this amount, as we have seen, were to be deducted in computing the tax to be paid by the state banks and trust companies, and were to be listed by the depositors for local taxation at their places of residence. The situation then was, with respect to the state institutions, that they paid the tax of $\frac{7}{10}$ of 1 per cent per annum upon average deposits, and the deposits were exempted from taxation upon those deposits which entered into the calculation of this average. National banks did not pay, and could not be compelled to pay, a franchise tax, or other tax upon their deposits, and their depositors having credits bearing interest at a rate exceeding 2 per cent per annum were required by the statute in question to pay upon such credits a tax of $\frac{7}{20}$ of 1 per cent semi-[137] annually. Or, if any national bank desired to do so, it could agree to pay an amount computed at the same rate upon the average amount of deposits of the described class, and thus save its depositors both from the tax and the inconvenience of making returns.

With respect to those interest-bearing deposits of the described class which did not exceed severally the sum of $2,000, it is evident that there was no hostile discrimination against the national banks by reason of the rate of the tax imposed upon their depositors. True, in the one case the depositor was exempted to the specified amount, and in the other the depositor was taxed. But the depositor in the state bank was relieved because the bank paid. The amount received by the state was substantially the same in each case, that is, at the rate of $\frac{7}{10}$ of 1 per cent a year. The state banks transacted their business under this charge. As to national banks, the state could not follow the course taken with the state institutions, and lay a tax upon the bank, computed upon the amount of its deposits, with a corresponding exemption to the depositors. Nor was the state bound to extend its exemption to cases where the reason for it did not exist. But the national bank, not being subject to the tax which the state banks had to pay, had the opportunity to give its depositors, if it chose, an equivalent benefit in interest rates. So far as the amount of the tax upon these deposits was concerned, the national bank was not put at a disadvantage as compared with the state banks.

Then, as to deposits in excess of $2,000, for which depositors in the state institutions were taxable locally, it does not appear that the difference in method was to the prejudice of national banks. The depositors in the latter, with respect to the interest-bearing deposits in question, had a low, flat rate, and were free from what the state court properly called "the greater burden and uncertain demands of local taxation." The agreed statement of [138] facts sets forth that the average local rate throughout the state for the year beginning April 1, 1908, was $16.70 per $1,000 of taxable property set in the grand list; the minimum being $7.50 per $1,000, and the maximum being $39.80 per $1,000. While deduction for debts was allowed in the ascertainment of the amount of personal estate subject to the local tax, and this was laid only once a year, the allowance of a much lower rate on deposits to any amount in a national bank might well be regarded as a compensatory, if not a greater, advantage in its general operation. It is said that no such publicity was required of the other taxpayers regarding their personal property as was demanded of depositors in national banks. This argument refers to the requirement that the latter should report the amount of their deposits and the names of the banks in which they were kept. But, in the case of local taxes, a "full statement of all taxable property" was required from each taxpayer, who was obliged to make oath that his inventory was "a full, true, and correct list and description." Pub. Stat. (Vt.) §§ 536-540. What difference there may be in the form of the two statements is plainly not important. The requirements in the case of the depositors in national banks went no further than to secure the payment of the tax, and the returns were subject to official inspection only. Pub. Stat. (Vt.) § 808, supra.

Digitized by Google

It was in these circumstances that the legislature adopted the provision that, if the national bank agreed to pay an amount which might fairly be regarded as equivalent to the sum demanded of the depositors, the latter should be free from the necessity of making any returns. In no proper sense could this be deemed to place the bank under duress. It may well be that the state desired, by substituting the flat exclusive rate in place of local taxation, to facilitate the appearance in larger amount of a class of property which easily escapes [139] taxation. 84 Vt. 167, 195, 78 Atl. 944, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 22. But the exaction it imposed upon the depositors was not relatively unfair, and in providing that the bank might, if it saw fit, make the returns and payment stipulated, the state left no possible ground for objection on the score of inconvenience in practical administration. That the plaintiff in error, in the conduct of its savings department, did not fail to perceive the business advantages of the state's plan, is apparent from the excerpts from the advertisements it published during the period covered by the stipulation in suit and prior thereto. The following are illustrative:

"We pay 4 per cent on savings accounts, in any amount from 1 dollar upwards. All taxes are paid by the bank, and you do not need to report deposits in this bank to the listers."

"Be sure and take advantage of the law governing taxes on deposits in national banks. Our depositors do not make any report of their deposits to the listers."

"Under the law governing saving deposits in national banks, we pay all taxes on any amount. There is no $2,000 limit. You can carry any amount tax free, and no report of your deposit is made by the bank to the listers."

We find no basis for the charge of injurious discrimination.

3. With this view of the scheme of the statute, we come to the question of the validity of the stipulation in suit. The bank contends that it was ultra vires. There is no suggestion that the bank did not have the power to allow interest upon deposits, or to conduct its savings department. Neither party questions the bank's authority in that respect. The practice of maintaining savings departments seems to have become extensive in recent years, without challenge by the government. (Report of the Comptroller of the Currency; Treasury Reports, 1912, p. 361.) The position of the plaintiff in error is that, assuming [140] its right to transact business of this sort, still it could not lawfully enter into the agreement which the state seeks to enforce.

The applicable principles are not in dispute. The Federal statutes relative to national banks constitute the measure of the authority of such corporations, and they cannot rightfully exercise any powers except those expressly granted or which are incidental to carrying on the business for which they are established. California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 366, 42 L. ed. 198, 200, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 73, 35 L. ed. 107, 110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496. These incidental powers are such "as are required to meet all the legitimate demands of the authorized business, and to enable a bank to conduct its affairs, within the general scope of its charter, safely and prudently." First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122, 127, 23 L. ed. 679, 681; Western Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 152 U. S. 346, 351, 38 L. ed. 470, 472, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572. The bank was authorized to receive deposits. Arising from these deposits were credits to the depositors, forming part of their property, and subject to the taxing power of the state. It cannot be doubted that the property being taxable, the state could provide, in order to secure the collection of a valid tax upon such credits, for garnishment or trustee process against the bank, or in effect constitute the bank its agent to collect the tax from the individual depositors. First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 361-363, 19 L. ed. 701, 703, 704; Merchants' & Mfrs' Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 465, 466, 41 L. ed. 236, 238, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829. Further, it would seem to be highly appropriate that, the credits of depositors being taxable by the state, the bank should be free to make reasonable agreements, and thus promote the convenience of its business, with respect to the making of returns and the payment of such amounts as the state might lawfully require of its depositors. Provision for such agreements, instead of constituting an interference with a Federal instrumentality, would aid it in performing its functions, [141] and would remove unnecessary obstacles to the successful prosecution of its business.

Digitized by Google

The contention, however, is that in this case the bank, under the statute, stipulated to pay at the specified rate upon an average amount of deposits, and it is insisted that this amount did not correspond precisely to the amounts upon which interest was actually paid to the depositors, and upon which accordingly they would have been taxable. That is, as already stated, certain deposits being withdrawn between the interest dates fixed by the bank, there would be deposits belonging to the interest-bearing class upon which interest would not in fact be paid. The facts in regard to the fluctuations in deposits during the period in question are shown in the excerpts from the agreed statement set forth in the margin.† But we are of the [142] opinion that this lack of an exact correspondence between the amount upon which the depositors would have been taxed and the average amount upon which the bank agreed to pay cannot be said to furnish a ground for holding the agreement to be invalid. There was, and in the ordinary course of business there naturally would be, a substantial equivalency. The arrangement to make the computation upon the average amount of deposits of the class was a simple and convenient method which could fairly be said to offset in its advantages such risks as might be incident to the fluctuations. It is further said that the agreement did not contemplate a charge against the depositors' accounts of the amount paid by the bank. The bank, however, was free to adjust its interest rates accordingly. We find no ground for sustaining the contention that the agreement was beyond the bank's power.

4. But it is also insisted that the agreement cannot be enforced for the reason that it was without valid consideration. The proposition is that the tax, considered as one upon the depositors, would, if enforced, constitute a denial of the equal protection of the laws, and would take the property of the depositors without due process of law.

What has already been said with respect to the charge of discrimination as against the bank is applicable here, and need not be repeated. Reference is also made to the exemptions granted by § 819 of the statute (ante) which makes its provision for the tax inapplicable to municipalities; to corporations organized solely for charitable, educational, or religious purposes; and to various corporations which were otherwise taxed. All these exemptions it was manifestly within the power of the state to allow. Similarly, with respect to persons whose deposits did not bear interest exceeding 2 per cent per annum, the legislature took this method of recognizing a practical difference between deposit accounts of the ordinary commercial sort and those which partook, generally speaking, [143] of the character of savings accounts. It cannot be said that the classification adopted was purely arbitrary or beyond the power of the state. Citizens' Teleph. Co. v. Fuller, 229 U. S. 322, 329-331, 57 L. ed. 1206, 1213, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

In support of the contention that the tax would deprive the depositors of their property without due process of law, it is said, (1), that there was no valid assessment, and none was provided for; and (2), that the tax was assessed, if at all, without proper notice to the depositors. The statute laid the tax at a specified rate upon bank credits; no other assessment than that made by the statute itself was necessary; and no other notice to the depositor than that thus given by law was required. The tax was recoverable by suit in which the depositor would have full opportunity to resist any illegal demand. Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227, 240, 22 L. ed. 80, 82; King v. United States, 99 U. S. 229, 233, 25 L. ed. 373, 374; United †"Deposits to the amount of $4,514, were made subsequent to July 1, 1908, and were withdrawn prior to January 1, 1909; and deposits to the amount of $3,002.12 were made subsequent to January 1, 1909, and withdrawn, prior to July 1, 1909, some being withdrawn prior to April 1, and some subsequent thereto. No interest was paid by the defendant on any of the deposits mentioned in this article.

"Deposits to the amount of $7,069.24, were made after October 1, 1908, and were withdrawn prior to April 1, 1909, of which $5,723.29 were in the bank January 1, 1909, and drew interest at the aforesaid rate; deposits in said bank on October 1, 1908, to the amount of $20,726.28, whereon interest at said rate was then allowed by the defendant, were withdrawn prior to March 31, 1909. Eleven of the individual depositors having interest-bearing deposits, not exceeding in the aggregate $4,561.95, became such after October 1, 1908, and ceased to be depositors before March 31, 1909; and forty-eight depositors of this class having deposits on October 1, 1908, not exceeding in the aggregate $22,530.54, ceased to be depositors before March 31, 1909."

It also appeared that the aggregate of such interest-bearing deposits on October 1, 1908, was $569,393.75, of which $36,424.27 were deposited by nonresidents; and on April 1, 1909, such aggregate was $623,242.75, of which $39,361.98 were deposited by nonresidents. The aggregate on the last-named date was $28,885.01 in excess of the average for the semiannual period ending March 31, 1909.

Digitized by Google

States v. Erie R. Co. 107 U. S. 1, 2, 27 L. ed. 385, 386, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U. S. 250, 263, 264, 55 L. ed. 204, 210, 211, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

5. Further objection is made that the statute interfered with existing contracts between the bank and its depositors, impairing their obligation. But this is clearly untenable. The statute did not act upon such contracts; it imposed a tax upon the property of depositors in the exercise of a power subject to which the deposits were made. North Missouri R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. 46, 61, 22 L. ed. 287, 293.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

---

[144] UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
FREDERICK W. WHITRIDGE, as Receiver of the Third Avenue Railroad Company et al. (No. 466.)

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
ADRIAN H. JOLINE and Douglas Robinson, as Receivers of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company et al. (No. 467.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 144–149.)

Internal revenue — Federal corporation tax — effect of receivership.

The income derived from the management of street railway lines by receivers authorized and required by the order for their appointment to manage and operate such railways, and to discharge their public duties subject to the supervision of the court, is not subject to the excise tax imposed by the act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 11, 112–117, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 741, 946), § 38, upon the doing or carrying on of business in a corporate capacity.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 466 and 467.]

Argued October 21, 1913. Decided November 10, 1913.

TWO WRITS of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review decrees which affirmed decrees of the District Court for the Southern District of New York in favor of the receivers of street railway companies in suits to require them to make returns of the net income comformably to the Federal corporation tax law. Affirmed.

See same case below, 117 C. C. A. 556, 198 Fed. 774.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Graham argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

When a corporation is brought into a court of equity at the suit of a creditor or mortgagee, and that court, in the exercise of the jurisdiction so acquired, appoints a receiver of all its assets, including its franchises, and authorizes the receiver to carry on all its business, which is done, is that corporation, while thus in the hands of a receiver, doing business "with the advantages which inhere in the peculiarities of corporate or joint-stock organizations of the character described?"

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 145, 146, 55 L. ed. 389, 411, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

If the corporations themselves are not doing business under such circumstances, how could such a suit as that of Morrison v. Forman, 177 Ill. 427, 53 N. E. 73, be sustained where a corporation by its receiver was permitted to condemn property?

In every substantial sense the income received and disbursements made by the receiver are those of the corporation itself. The receiver takes the income as a trustee, applies it first to the debts of the corporation, and holds the surplus for the corporation. Any net income over and above the expenses, debts, etc., is the equitable property of the latter.

Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Com. 104 Pa. 82.

The court of appeals of New York has, in three cases, expressly construed a taxing statute in substantially all respects similar to the corporation-tax act as covering corporations in the hands of receivers.

Central Trust Co. v. New York City & N. R. Co. 110 N. Y. 250, 1 L.R.A. 260, 18 N. E. 92; People ex rel. Joline v. Williams, 200 N. Y. 528, 94 N. E. 1097; New York Terminal Co. v. Gaus, 204 N. Y. 515, 98 N. E. 11.

Mr. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Mr. Matthew C. Fleming, filed a brief for Whitridge:

The decisions construing the act hold that it imposes a tax upon the doing of business by corporations in their corporate capacity.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 428, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

Digitized by Google

Receivers cannot be brought by construction within any of the provisions of this act.

United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co. 176 Fed. 477.

It is not the intent of the act to impose a tax upon the doing of business by a receiver. If this were its intent, it would be unconstitutional so far as it relates to business done by receivers appointed by state courts or under state laws, and therefore it cannot be inferred that Congress intended to tax the business done by receivers.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 157, 158, 55 L. ed. 415, 416, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122; South Carolina v. United States, 199 U. S. 437, 50 L. ed. 261, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 4 Ann. Cas. 737; Porter v. Sabin, 149 U. S. 473, 37 L. ed. 815, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1008; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. ed. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579.

The only franchise the exercise of which is taxable is the corporate franchise. The right to do business in a corporate capacity has many advantages, and is a valuable right. It is only the exercise of this right that Congress intended to tax.

McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

Chancery receivers do not represent the corporation in its individual or personal character, nor supersede it in the exercise of its corporate powers, except so far as the property intrusted to their care is concerned. Notwithstanding their appointment, the corporations were clothed with their franchises and still existed. They could still exercise their powers if thereby they did not interfere with the management of the railroads. They could do many corporate acts and could do all things necessary to preserve their legal existence; could sue and be sued, and were liable for their acts and upon their contracts and covenants the same as if the receivers had not been appointed.

Decker v. Gardner, 124 N. Y. 334, 11 L.R.A. 480, 26 N. E. 814.

The court could, in a foreclosure or general creditor's suit, take possession of the secondary franchises, and the receivers could exercise them.

Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. (Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry) 112 U. S. 609, 619, 28 L. ed. 837, 841, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299.

The possession of the railroads by the receivers gave them the power to operate them and exercise the secondary franchises which were inseparable from them. To do this they did not require and did not exercise any corporate franchises. They merely did, in their capacity as receivers, what individuals might do.

People ex rel. Third Ave. R. Co. v. Public Service Commission, 203 N. Y. 308, 96 N. E. 1011.

The receiver did not take the place of the corporation or its officers, and was not its agent.

White v. Ewing, 159 U. S. 36, 40 L. ed. 67, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018; Decker v. Gardner, supra.

Mr. Arthur H. Masten argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ellis W. Leavenworth, filed a brief for Joline et al.:

The tax imposed by the act is a tax, not upon business per se, but upon the right to do business in a particular manner and with particular advantages; to wit, in a corporate capacity, and with the advantages which inhere in corporate organizations. If business is not done in a corporate capacity, no tax is payable in respect thereto. It is not a tax upon property or franchises or income. Where income is actually received, but no corporate business is done, the tax is not payable.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 528, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

The receivers acquired no interest in the right of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company to be a corporation. The corporation continued to exist. It could hold corporate meetings and elect officers. It retained title to its property, the receivers being vested with no interest therein, but acting merely as its custodians for the court.

Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 36 L. ed. 632, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

A corporate existence is not an absolute prerequisite to lawful operation of a railway.

Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. (Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry) 112 U. S. 609, 619, 28 L. ed. 837, 841, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; New York ex rel. Schurz v. Cook, 148 U. S. 397, 409, 37 L. ed. 498, 502, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Phœnix v. Gannon, 195 N. Y. 471, 88 N. E. 1066.

The receiver represents none of the parties to the cause, but acts under the sole direction of the court.

Atlantic Trust Co. v. Chapman, 208 U. S. 360, 375, 52 L. ed. 528, 535, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, 13 Ann. Cas. 1155.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases were heard together in the district court and in the circuit court of appeals (sub. nom. Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co. 193 Fed. 286, 117 C. C. A. 556, 198 Fed. 774). They were argued together in this court, and may be disposed of in a single opinion.

In the years 1909 and 1910 certain lines of street railway in the city of New York, that may be conveniently designated as the Third Avenue system, were in the hands of the respondent Whitridge, as receiver, under orders made in the year 1908 by the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York in actions pending therein against the several proprietary companies. One of these actions was a foreclosure suit; the others were creditors' actions based upon the insolvency of the respective companies. The powers conferred upon the receiver did not vary in any respect now [146] material, and so a recital of the substance of one of the orders will suffice as an example. This order constituted Whitridge receiver of all the railroads and other property of the company, including tracks, cars, and other rolling stock and equipment, easements, privileges, and franchises, and the tolls, earnings, income, rents, issues, and profits thereof, with authority "to run, manage, and operate the said railroads and properties, to collect the rents, income, tolls, issues, and profits of said railroads and property, to exercise the authority and franchises of said defendant, and discharge its public duties, acting in all things subject to the supervision of this court." By the same order the officers, agents, and employees of the company were required to turn over and deliver to the receiver all of the said property in their hands or under their control, and the company was enjoined from interfering in any way with his possession or management.

In the same years (1909 and 1910) certain other lines of street railway in the city of New York, which may be described as the Metropolitan system, were in the possession of the respondents Joline and Robinson as receivers, appointed in the year 1907 by the circuit court of the United States for the same district, in several actions therein pending against the corporations which were owners of these lines. The orders appointing these receivers contain provisions substantially similar to those already recited. (See Re Metropolitan R. Receivership [Re Reisenberg] 208 U. S. 90, 93-96, 52 L. ed. 403-405, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219.)

In the year 1911, petitions were filed in the circuit court in behalf of the United States, praying for orders directing the receivers to make returns of the net income of the respective railway corporations for the years 1909 and 1910, to the collector of internal revenue, in the manner required by the provisions of the corporation tax law (act of August 5, 1909, § 38, 36 Stat. at L. chap. 6, pp. 11, 112-117, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 741, 946).

[147] The applications were resisted by the receivers on the ground that the respective corporations did not, during the years 1909 and 1910, carry on any business in respect of the property that was in their hands as such receivers; that they as such receivers managed, controlled, and operated the same, and carried on all the business in respect thereto, and received all the income arising therefrom, not acting in place of the directors and officers of the respective companies, but as officers of the court; and that they were therefore not subject to the provisions of the act.

Jurisdiction of the controversy having been transferred to the district court by virtue of the new Judicial Code, § 290 [36 Stat. at L. 1167, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 243], that court sustained the contention of the receivers (193 Fed. 286) and the circuit court of appeals affirmed this decision (117 C. C. A. 556, 198 Fed. 774). The cases are brought here by writs of certiorari.

As repeatedly pointed out by this court, the corporation tax law of 1909 —enacted, as it was, after Congress had proposed to the legislatures of the several states the adoption of the 16th Amendment to the Constitution, but before the ratification of that Amendment—imposed an excise or privilege tax, and not in any sense a tax upon property or upon income merely as income. It was enacted in view of the decision of this court in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. St. Rep. 673, 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912, which held the income tax provisions of a previous law (act of August 27, 1894, 28 Stat. at L. chap. 349, pp. 509, 553, §§ 27 etc. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2260) to be unconstitutional because amounting in effect to a direct tax upon property within the meaning of the Constitution, and because not apportioned in the manner required by that instrument.

As was said in Flint v. Stone-Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 145, 55 L. ed. 389, 411, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912 B, 1312, respecting the act of August 5, 1909: "The tax is imposed not upon the franchises of the corporation irrespective of their use in business, nor upon the property of the corporation, but upon the doing of corporate or insurance [148] business, and with respect to the carrying on thereof, in a sum equivalent to 1 per centum upon the entire net income over and above $5,000 received from all sources during the year; that is, when imposed in this manner it is a tax upon the doing of business with the advantages which inhere in the peculiarities of corporate or joint-stock organizations of the character described. As the latter organizations share many benefits of corporate organization, it may be described generally as a tax upon the doing of business in a corporate capacity." This interpretation was adhered to and made the basis of decision in Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 428, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361 and McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 300, 57 L. ed. 842, 844, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

Digitized by Google

A reference to the language of the act† is sufficient to [149] show that it does not in terms impose a tax upon corporate property or franchises as such, nor upon the income arising from the conduct of business unless it be carried on by the corporation. Nor does it in terms impose any duty upon the receivers of corporations or of corporate property, with respect to paying taxes upon the income arising from their management of the corporate assets, or with respect to making any return of such income.

And we are unable to perceive that such receivers are within the spirit and purpose of the act, any more than they are within its letter. True, they may hold, for the time, all the franchises and property of the corporation, excepting its primary franchise of corporate existence. In the present cases, the receivers were authorized and required to manage and operate the railroads, and to discharge the public obligations of the corporations in this behalf. But they did this as officers of the court, and subject to the orders of the court; not as officers of the respective corporations, nor with the advantages that inhere in corporate organization as such. The possession and control of the receivers constituted, on the contrary, an ouster of corporate management and control, with the accompanying advantages and privileges.

Without amplifying the discussion, we content ourselves with saying that, having regard to the genesis of the legislation, the constitutional limitation in view of which it was evidently framed, the language employed by the lawmaker, and the reason and spirit of the enactment, all considerations alike lead to the conclusion that the act of 1909 did not impose a tax upon the income derived from the management of corporate property by receivers, under such conditions as are here presented.

Decrees affirmed.

†Sec. 38. That every corporation . . . organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares . . . organized under the laws of the United States or of any state . . . and engaged in business in any state . . . shall be subject to pay annually a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation . . . equivalent to one per centum upon the entire net income over and above five thousand dollars received by it from all sources during such year, exclusive of amounts received by it as dividends upon stock of other corporations . . . subject to the tax hereby imposed. . . .

Second. Such net income shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of the income of such corporation . . . received within the year from all sources, (first) all the ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid within the year out of income in the maintenance and operation of its business and properties. . . .

And on or before the first day of March, nineteen hundred and ten, and the first day of March in each year thereafter, a true and accurate return under oath or affirmation of its president, vice president, or other principal officers, and its treasurer or assistant treasurer, shall be made by each of the coroprations . . . subject to the tax imposed by this section, to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which such corporation . . . has its principal place of business.

---

[150] FRANK A. MUNSEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
WESLEY WEBB, Administrator of the Estate of Samuel T. Pennington.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 150-157.)

Elevators — negligence — guarding opening.

1. The duty to keep an elevator door shut while the car is in motion, or to guard the open space with the extended arm of the boy in charge, cannot, as a matter of law, be said not to exist in favor of all passengers, whether the car is crowded or not, where the floors of the building project at right angles into the elevator well for several inches, and there are no flanges or pieces of metal inclining from the projecting floors to the shaft wall.

Proximate cause — elevator accident — failure to guard opening.

2. Failure to close the elevator door or to guard the open space with the extended

NOTE.—On liability for injury to elevator passenger—see notes to Mitchell v. Marker, 25 L.R.A. 33, and Edwards v. Manufacturers' Bldg. Co. 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 744.

Digitized by Google

arm of the boy in charge cannot, as a matter of law, be said not to be the proximate cause of the death of a passenger who fell into the opening while the car was ascending, and had his head crushed between the floor of the elevator car and the floor of the building, which projected several inches into the elevator well at right angles, with no flange or piece of metal inclining from the projecting floor to the shaft wall.

[Matters as to proximate cause, see Proximate Cause, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 40.]

Argued November 4, 5, 1913. Decided November 17, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in favor of plaintiff in an action for death. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 185.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles A. Douglas and John W. Price argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Hugh H. Obear, Wilton J. Lambert, C. K. Mount, J. Norment Powell, H. H. Shelton, and Thomas Ruffin, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where there is an intervening efficient cause, such intervening cause is the proximate cause of an injury, and therefore the responsible one.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 65; Howard F. Ins. Co. v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co. 12 Wall. 194, 20 L. ed. 378; Scheffer v. Washington City, V. M. & G. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 249, 26 L. ed. 1070; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Calhoun, 213 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 671, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; 1 Cooley, Torts, 3d ed. pp. 99, 101; Wharton, Neg. 134; Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L.R.A. 416, 59 C. C. A. 593, 124 Fed. 113, 14 Am. Neg. Rep. 676; Zopfi v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 9 C. C. A. 308, 22 U. S. App. 136, 60 Fed. 987; Teis v. Smuggler Min. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 893, 85 C. C. A. 478, 158 Fed. 260; Empire State Cattle Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 135 Fed. 135; Butts v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 49 C. C. A. 69, 110 Fed. 329, 10 Am. Neg. Rep. 455; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Elliott, 20 L.R.A. 582, 5 C. C. A. 347, 12 U. S. App. 381, 55 Fed. 949, 7 Am. Neg. Cas. 478; Goodlander Mill Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 27 L.R.A. 583, 11 C. C. A. 253, 24 U. S. App. 7, 63 Fed. 400; American Bridge Co. v. Seeds, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1041, 75 C. C. A. 407, 144 Fed. 609; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Bennett, 16 C. C. A. 680, 32 U. S. App. 632, 69 Fed. 528; Cleghorn v. Thompson, 62 Kan. 727, 54 L.R.A. 402, 64 Pac. 605; Stone v. Boston & A. R. Co. 171 Mass. 536, 41 L.R.A. 794, 51 N. E. 1, 4 Am. Neg. Rep. 490; Huber v. LaCrosse City R. Co. 92 Wis. 636, 31 L.R.A. 583, 53 Am. St. Rep. 940, 66 N. W. 708; Herr v. Lebanon, 149 Pa. 222, 16 L.R.A. 106, 34 Am. St. Rep. 603, 24 Atl. 207; Loftus v. Dehail, 133 Cal. 214, 65 Pac. 379; Glassey v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 185 Mass. 315, 70 N. E. 199, 16 Am. Neg. Rep. 86; Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 293, 27 Am. Rep. 653; Board of Trade Bldg. Corp. v. Cralle, 109 Va. 246, 22 L.R.A. (N.S.) 297, 132 Am. St. Rep. 917, 63 S. E. 995; West Mahaney Twp. v. Watson, 116 Pa. 344, 2 Am. St. Rep. 604, 9 Atl. 430; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Beckworth, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 153, 32 S. W. 347, 6 Am. Neg. Rep. 723; Schaeffer v. Jackson Twp. 150 Pa. 145, 18 L.R.A. 100, 30 Am. St. Rep. 792, 24 Atl. 629; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Chambers, 73 Tex. 296, 11 S. W. 279; Nelson v. Narragansett Electric Lighting Co. 26 R. I. 258, 67 L.R.A. 116, 58 Atl. 802; South Side Pass. R. Co. v. Trich, 117 Pa. 390, 2 Am. St. Rep. 672, 11 Atl. 627; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Dickens, 7 Ind. Terr. 16, 103 S. W. 750; McClain v. Garden Grove, 83 Iowa, 235, 12 L.R.A. 482, 48 N. W. 1031; Hunter v. Wanamaker, 1 Sadler (Pa.) 383, 2 Atl. 507; Hershey v. Mill Creek Twp. 6 Sadler (Pa.) 459, 9 Atl. 452; McGahan v. Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. 140 Ind. 335, 29 L.R.A. 355, 49 Am. St. Rep. 199, 37 N. E. 601; Russo v. Morris Bldg. & Land Improv. Asso. 104 La. 438, 29 So. 46; O'Connor v. Brucker, 117 Ga. 451, 43 S. E. 731, 13 Am. Neg. Rep. 500; Beall v. Athens Twp. 81 Mich. 536, 45 N. W. 1014; Lewis v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 54 Mich. 55, 52 Am. Rep. 790, 19 N. W. 744; Claypool v. Wigmore, 34 Ind. App. 35, 71 N. E. 509; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Columbia, 65 Kan. 390, 58 L.R.A. 399, 69 Pac. 338; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. 176, 19 L. ed. 909; Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. 171, 57 Am. Dec. 695; Cuff v. Newark & N. Y. R. Co. 35 N. J. L. 18, 10 Am. Rep. 205; Smith v. County Ct. 33 W. Va. 713, 8 L.R.A. 82, 11 S. E. 1; Moulton v. Sanford, 51 Me. 127; Brown v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 20 Mo. App. 222; Connell v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 93 Va. 44, 32 L.R.A. 792, 57 Am. St. Rep. 786, 24 S. E. 467; Fowlkes v. Southern R. Co. 96 Va. 742, 32 S. E. 464; Winfree v. Jones, 104 Va. 39, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 201, 51 S. E. 153.

In order to recover, plaintiff must show some negligent act on the part of the defendant, and also, that the accident and injury complained of were not only the natural and probable consequence of such act claimed to be negligent, but, also, that the accident and injury were, in fact, occasioned by such act, and, in addition, that the accident and injury so suffered should have been foreseen and anticipated, and therefore guarded against, by a man of ordinary care and prudence.

Digitized by Google

McGrell v. Buffalo Office Bldg. Co. 153 N. Y. 265, 47 N. E. 305, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 598; Dougan v. Champlain Transp. Co. 56 N. Y. 1; Cleveland v. New Jersey S. B. Co. 68 N. Y. 306; Loftus v. Union Ferry Co. 84 N. Y. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 533, 5 Am. Neg. Cas. 234; Lafflin v. Buffalo & S. W. R. Co. 106 N. Y. 136, 60 Am. Rep. 433, 12 N. E. 599, 5 Am. Neg. Cas. 268; Frobisher v. Fifth Ave. Transp. Co. 151 N. Y. 431, 45 N. E. 839, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 148.

Whether the defendant could reasonably have anticipated the happening of the accident must be measured by the circumstances before the accident, not afterwards.

American Exp. Co. v. Smith, 33 Ohio St. 511, 31 Am. Rep. 561; Libby v. Maine C. R. Co. 85 Me. 34, 20 L.R.A. 812, 26 Atl. 943; Cornman v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 4 Hurlst. & N. 781, 29 L. J. Exch. N. S. 94, 4 Jur. N. S. 657; American Brewing Asso. v. Talbot, 141 Mo. 674, 64 Am. St. Rep. 538, 42 S. W. 679; Nashville & C. R. Co. v. David, 6 Heisk. 261, 19 Am. Rep. 594; Cooley, Torts, 15.

If this defendant shall be held to respond in damage for failure to use the preventive measures that would, under every possibility, have avoided this accident, then he is held to a higher degree of care than the law imposes, and is made the absolute insurer of the lives of passengers while engaged in transportation.

McGrell v. Buffalo Office Bldg. Co. 153 N. Y. 265, 47 N. E. 305, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 598; Empire State Cattle Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 135 Fed. 135; Smith v. Western R. Co. 91 Ala. 455, 11 L.R.A. 619, 24 Am. St. Rep. 929, 8 So. 754.

It is undoubtedly true that what is the proximate cause of an injury is ordinarily a question for the jury; but where the whole evidence offers no substantial dispute on material points, and is of such conclusive character that the court, in an exercise of sound judicial discretion, would be compelled to set a verdict aside which was returned in opposition to it, it is not only the province but the duty of the court to direct a verdict.

Guenther v. Metropolitan R. Co. 23 App. D. C. 493; Scheffer v. Washington City, V. M. & G. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 249, 26 L. ed. 1070; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Elliott, 20 L.R.A. 582, 5 C. C. A. 347, 12 U. S. App. 381, 55 Fed. 949, 7 Am. Neg. Cas. 478; Empire State Cattle Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 135 Fed. 135; Butts v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 49 C. C. A. 69, 110 Fed. 329, 10 Am. Neg. Rep. 455; Goodlander Mill Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 27 L.R.A. 583, 11 C. C. A. 253, 24 U. S. App. 7, 63 Fed. 400; Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L.R.A. 416, 59 C. C. A. 593, 124 Fed. 113, 14 Am. Neg. Rep. 676; Cleghorn v. Thompson, 62 Kan. 727, 54 L.R.A. 402, 64 Pac. 605; Stone v. Boston & A. R. Co. 171 Mass. 536, 41 L.R.A. 794, 51 N. E. 1, 4 Am. Neg. Rep. 490; Huber v. La Crosse City R. Co. 92 Wis. 636, 31 L.R.A. 583, 53 Am. St. Rep. 940, 66 N. W. 708; Nelson v. Narragansett Electric Lighting Co. 26 R. I. 258, 67 L.R.A. 116, 106 Am. St. Rep. 711, 58 Atl. 802; Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 293, 27 Am. Rep. 653; South Side Pass. R. Co. v. Trich, 117 Pa. 390, 2 Am. St. Rep. 672, 11 Atl. 627; McClain v. Garden Grove, 83 Iowa, 235, 12 L.R.A. 482, 48 N. W. 1031; McGrell v. Buffalo Office Bldg. Co. 153 N. Y. 265, 47 N. E. 305, 2 Am. Neg. Rep. 598.

Mr. Arthur Peter argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Preston B. Ray and Julian W. Whiting, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Whether the defendant was negligent must be determined in the light of the care demanded of him. The defendant, in constructing and operating the elevator, was required to exercise the highest degree of care, anything short of which was absolute negligence. If Pennington's death might have been avoided in the exercise by the defendant of extraordinary vigilance, aided by the highest skill, extending to all the agencies or means employed in his transportation, the defendant is responsible for his death.

Webb, Elevators, § 7; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 946.

The defendant was guilty of negligence in failing to keep closed the inside collapsible door.

Thomp. Neg. § 3528; Augusta R. Co. v. Glover, 92 Ga. 145, 18 S. E. 406, 2 Am. Neg. Cas. 466; Adams v. Washington & G. R. Co. 9 App. D. C. 26, 9 Am. Neg. Cas. 163; Crandall v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. 96 Minn. 434, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 645, 113 Am. St. Rep. 653, 105 N. W. 185, 19 Am. Neg. Rep. 348; Bronson v. Oakes, 22 C. C. A. 520, 40 U. S. App. 413, 76 Fed. 734.

The failure of the elevator boy to obey the rule of the defendant and keep his arm across the open door was negligence.

Warner v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 339, 42 L. ed. 491, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Stevens v. Boston Elev. R. Co. 184 Mass. 478, 69 N. E. 338, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 338; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Lowell, 151

Digitized by Google

U. S. 209, 38 L. ed. 131, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, 7 Am. Neg. Cas. 373.

Proximate cause is not a question of science, but is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 474, 24 L. ed. 258; Donegan v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. 91 C. C. A. 555, 105 Fed. 87; Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Price, 38 C. C. A. 239, 97 Fed. 429; Southern P. Co. v. Yeargin, 48 C. C. A. 497, 109 Fed. 439; Union P. R. Co. v. Callaghan, 6 C. C. A. 205, 12 U. S. App. 541, 56 Fed. 991.

The defendant's negligence was a causa sine qua non of the accident.

Hayes v. Michigan C. R. Co. 111 U. S. 241, 28 L. ed. 415, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Holloway, 191 U. S. 334, 48 L. ed. 207, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 235; McDonald v. Toledo Consol. Street R. Co. 20 C. C. A. 322, 43 U. S. App. 79, 74 Fed. 104; Shugart v. Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. 66 C. C. A. 379, 133 Fed. 505; Patton v. Southern R. Co. 27 C. C. A. 287, 42 U. S. App. 567, 82 Fed. 984; Thomp. Neg. ¶ 68.

Injury to passengers was a probable consequence of defendant's negligence.

25 Harvard L. Rev. 117; 33 Can. L. J. 717, 9 Columbia L. Rev. 139; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Calhoun, 213 U. S. 9, 53 L. ed. 674, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Washington & G. R. Co. v. Hickey, 166 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 1102, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 758; Hill v. Winsor, 118 Mass. 251.

The facts in this case present no opportunity for the application of the nearest wrongdoer rule.

Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L.R.A. 416, 59 C. C. A. 593, 124 Fed. 113, 14 Am. Neg. Rep. 676; Teis v. Smuggler Min. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 893, 85 C. C. A. 478, 158 Fed. 260; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Calhoun, 213 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 671, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Thomp. Neg. ¶ 68; McDonald v. Toledo Consol. R. Co. 20 C. C. A. 322, 43 U. S. App. 79, 74 Fed. 106; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Holloway, 191 U. S. 339, 48 L. ed. 210, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 235; Patton v. Southern R. Co. 27 C. C. A. 287, 42 U. S. App. 567, 82 Fed. 984; Washington & G. R. Co. v. Hickey, 166 U. S. 521, 41 L. ed. 1101, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 758; Shugart v. Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. 66 C. C. A. 379, 133 Fed. 505.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought against the owner of a building for causing the death of the plaintiff's intestate in an elevator in which the deceased was being carried to his place of employment. Negligent construction and negligent management of the elevator are alleged. The plaintiff had a verdict against a request by the defendant that one be directed for him, the judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals (37 App. D. C. 185), and the defendant brought the case here.

The elevator car did not quite fill the well, or shaft, and the bottom of the floor that it was approaching projected at right angles into the well about 3½ inches. The car was equipped with a collapsible door, [155] which was open at the time of the accident, and the boy in charge did not have his arm across the space as he had been instructed to do. Between the fourth and fifth floors the deceased fell, and his head was caught between the projecting bottom of the fifth floor and the floor of the car and was crushed. The negligence relied upon is the leaving of the door open and failure to guard the space; the not having a flange or piece of metal inclining from the projecting floor to the shaft wall, and the failure to use an emergency switch, the quickest means of stopping the car, the boy in charge not having been instructed in the use of it.

The plaintiff in error argued at some length that there was no negligence, because the fall of deceased was something wholly out of the ordinary course, and not to be foreseen; or that, if there was negligence in any sense, it was not the proximate cause of the death, but merely a passive condition made harmful by the fall. Neither argument can be maintained. It is true that it was not to be anticipated specifically that a man should drop from internal causes into the open door of the car. But the possibility and the danger that in some way one in the car should get some part of his person outside the car while it was in motion was obvious, and was shown to have been anticipated by the door being there. In some circumstances, at least, it was a danger that ought to be and was guarded against. It is said that the danger was manifest only when the car was crowded, and that the door was needed only for that. If the duty to have the car shut on all sides had been created with reference only to conditions different in kind from those of the accident, it may be that the plaintiff could not avail himself of a requirement imposed alio intuitu. The Eugene F. Moran, 212 U. S. 466, 476, 53 L. ed. 600, 604, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339. But the accident was similar in kind to those against which the door was provided, and we are not prepared to say, contrary to the finding of the jury, that [156] the duty to keep it shut or to guard the space with the arm did not exist in favor of all travelers in an elevator having the structure that we have described. It was not necessary that the defendant should have had notice of the particular method in which an accident would occur, if the possibility of an accident was clear to the ordinarily prudent eye. Washington & G. R. Co. v. Hickey, 166 U. S. 521, 526, 527, 41 L. ed. 1101–1103, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 661, 1 Am. Neg. Rep. 758.

Digitized by Google

If there was negligence, it very properly could be found to have been the proximate cause of the death. See Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256. Even if it were true that the neglect was merely a passive omission, the deceased was invited into the elevator, and the principle of the trap cases would apply. Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B. N. S. 556, 563, 27 L. J. C. P. N. S. 318, 4 Jur. N. S. 512, 6 Week. Rep. 575; Sweeny v. Old Colony & N. R. Co. 10 Allen, 368, 374, 87 Am. Dec. 644. But that is not the case. The defendant is sued for having crushed the head of the deceased by forces that he put in motion. He replies that it would not have happened but for the unforeseen fall of the deceased without the defendant's fault, and to this the plaintiff rejoins and the jury has found that the defendant was bound to take the easy precaution which he had provided against any and all ways by which a passenger's body could get outside the car while it was going up. Hayes v. Michigan C. R. Co. 111 U. S. 228, 241, 28 L. ed. 410, 415, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Holloway, 191 U. S. 334, 339, 48 L. ed. 207, 210, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102. The whole question comes down to whether we are prepared to say as matter of law, against the finding of the jury, that, in an elevator constructed as this was, with a special source of danger in the shaft outside the car, to require the defendant to guard the door space in transitu, at his peril, is too strict a rule. We cannot go so far. McDonald v. Toledo Consol. Street R. Co. 20 C. C. A. 322, 43 U. S. App. 79, 74 Fed. 104, 109.

There was, perhaps, evidence sufficient to warrant a finding that there was negligence in not stopping the car [157] after the fall and before the harm was done, and a finding on that ground would not open the questions that have been discussed; but we have preferred to deal with the case on the matters principally argued, as they seem to offer the most obvious reasons for the verdict, and therefore have assumed that the jury found the facts and standard of conduct to be as we have supposed.

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN R. BUCHSER, Appt.,
v.
ANNIE BUCHSER and W. W. Zent, as Guardian ad Litem for Hans R. Buchser, Roland H. Buchser, and Hillman A. Buchser, Minors.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 157–162.)

Public lands — rights on death of entryman — community property.

There is nothing in the Federal laws which prevents the application, where a patent has been issued to a homestead entryman, of the rule of the local law that land in the state acquired by a husband under the homestead laws is the community property of the entryman and his wife.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. e. 8; States, IV. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 641.]

Submitted November 3, 1913. Decided November 17, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Eastern District of Washington, sustaining a de-

---

Note.—Rights in lands entered or acquired under the Federal homestead laws as affected by state community property laws.

The decision in Buchser v. Buchser, when considered in connection with McCune v. Essig, 199 U. S. 382, 50 L. ed. 237, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78, covers this question in about all of its phases, and renders unnecessary a review of the decisions of the state and lower Federal courts.

McCune v. Essig, supra, definitely established the doctrine that so long as the title to the homestead is incomplete, the Federal laws apply to the exclusion of any state community property laws; and, further, that, should the homestead entryman die before patent has issued, the doctrine of relation cannot successfully be invoked to confer any right or interest in the land under the operation of such state laws upon the heirs of a deceased member of the community as against the survivor to whom, under the Federal laws, the patent has issued.

Now comes the complementary ruling in Buchser v. Buchser that, where the title of the homestead entryman has been perfected by the issuance of a patent from the United States during coverture, it becomes subject to the community laws of the state where the land is located.

The cases which present the views of other courts are to be found in the notes to Cunningham v. Krutz, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 967, and Krieg v. Lewis, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1117.

Digitized by Google

murrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 212, 202 Fed. 854.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Fred M. Dudley and W. E. Cullen submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. David Herman was on the brief:

The circuit court of appeals erred in its opinion that the state of Washington has uniformly held grants of the Federal government under the homestead laws to be the community property of the entryman and his wife.

Bolton v. La Camas Water Power Co. 10 Wash. 246, 38 Pac. 1043; Hall v. Hall, 41 Wash. 186, 111 Am. St. Rep. 1016, 83 Pac. 108; Cunningham v. Krutz, 41 Wash. 190, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 967, 83 Pac. 109; Teynor v. Heible, 74 Wash. 222, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1033, 133 Pac. 1.

To allow the states to ignore Federal land laws, to interpret the grants made by the Federal government and designate the persons who are the beneficiaries thereof according to their own local laws, brings about the anomalous situation of citizens of the United States holding different rights under grants issued by the Federal government in pursuance of the same and identical laws, simply because one happens to live in California and the other in the state of Washington. Thus California, also possessing the community property law, has uniformly held that the homestead becomes the sole and separate property of the entryman.

Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 577; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 421; Hood v. Hamilton, 33 Cal. 698; Lake v. Lake, 52 Cal. 428; Harris v. Harris, 71 Cal. 314, 12 Pac. 274; Morgan v. Lones, 80 Cal. 317, 22 Pac. 253.

The rights of a grantee from the Federal government present a Federal question on which the decisions of the Federal courts are controlling, and in the administration of the Federal land laws the community system is unknown.

Phœnix Min. & Mill Co. v. Scott, 20 Wash. 48, 54 Pac. 777; Cunningham v. Krutz, 41 Wash. 190, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 967, 83 Pac. 109; McCune v. Essig, 199 U. S. 382, 50 L. ed. 237, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Hall v. Hall, 41 Wash. 186, 111 Am. St. Rep. 1016, 83 Pac. 108.

Congress alone has the power to enact laws for the disposition of the lands belonging to the United States. No state can abridge that right nor interfere with the grantee's enjoyment or possession of the lands granted by the Federal government.

Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 15 L. ed. 994; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 534.

A homestead acquired under the laws of the United States is the sole and separate property of the entryman. Any other conclusion is inconsistent with the clear and explicit provisions of the United States statutes applicable to homestead entries.

Gibson v. Chouteau, supra; McCune v. Essig, 199 U. S. 382, 50 L. ed. 237, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

Messrs. Frank T. Post and B. B. Adams submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. John Salisbury and W. W. Zent were on the brief:

It is the settled law of the state of Washington, where the property in controversy is situated, that the same is community property.

Kromer v. Friday, 10 Wash. 621, 32 L.R.A. 671, 39 Pac. 229; Ahern v. Ahern, 31 Wash. 334, 96 Am. St. Rep. 912, 71 Pac. 1023; Cox v. Tompkinson, 39 Wash. 70, 80 Pac. 1005; Hall v. Hall, 41 Wash. 186, 111 Am. St. Rep. 1016, 83 Pac. 108; Krieg v. Lewis, 56 Wash. 196, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1117, 105 Pac. 483; Cunningham v. Krutz, 41 Wash. 190, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 967, 83 Pac. 109; Teynor v. Heible, 74 Wash. 222, 46 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1033, 133 Pac. 1.

The question has been settled in our favor by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 516, 10 L. ed. 273; McCune v. Essig, 199 U. S. 382, 50 L. ed. 237, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

[161] Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill to quiet title, alleging that the plaintiff, a married man, made entry and acquired title to the land in question under the homestead laws of the United States by patent issued December 17, 1903; that thereafter his wife died, and that the defendants, the children of the marriage, claim an interest in the land. By the laws of the state of Washington, in which the property is situated, it became community property unless the statutes of the United States forbid. Teynor v. Heible, 74 Wash. 222, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1033, 133 Pac. 1. On that point we follow the Washington decisions. There was a demurrer, which was sustained by the district court (sub nom. Buchser v. Morse, 196 Fed. 577), and by the circuit court of appeals (121 C. C. A. 212, 202 Fed. 854).

There is no doubt, of course, that until the title is completed the laws of the United States control. Wadkins v. Producers Oil Co. 227 U. S. 368, 57 L. ed. 551, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 534. But when the title has passed, then the land "like all other property in the state is subject to state legislation." Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 517, 10 L. ed. 264, 273; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 564, 15 L. ed. 994, 997; McCune v. Essig, 199 U. S. 382, 390, 50 L. ed. 237, 241, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78. If the United States could impress a peculiar character upon land within a state after parting with all title to it, at least the clearest expression would be necessary before such a result could be reached. Wright v. Morgan, 191 U. S. 55, 58, 48 L. ed. 89, 93, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6. But it has not tried to do anything of the sort.

Digitized by Google

No one would doubt that this title was subject to the same incidents as any other so far as events subsequent to its acquisition were concerned. See Wright v. Morgan, supra. It could be lost by adverse occupation for the time prescribed by state law, and in a state that adopted the common law as to dower, it would be subject to dower [162] if the settler subsequently married. The only semblance of difficulty is due to the coincidence in time of the acquisition of a separate right by the settler and the beginning of a community right in the wife. But this is by no means an extreme illustration of the division of an indivisible instant that is practised by the law whenever it is necessary. A statute may give a man a right of action against another for causing his death, that accrues to him at the instant that he is vivus et mortuus. Higgins v. Central New England & W. R. Co. 155 Mass. 176, 179, 31 Am. St. Rep. 544, 29 N. E. 534. In the present case the acquisition under the United States law is complete, and that law has released its control before the state law lays hold, and, upon grounds in no way connected or interfering with the policy of Congress, brings the community régime into play. The special family relations thus created are not like contracts with third persons impliedly forbidden by the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 561, § 5, 26 Stat. at L. 1097, amending Rev. Stat. § 2290, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1389. They are consistent with the policy of the statute, which is to enable the settler and his family to secure a home. See § 2291, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1390.

Decree affirmed.

A. STRAUS, Appt.,
v.
W. L. FOXWORTH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 162–171.)

Pleading — admission by demurrer — conclusion of law.

1. An allegation in a complaint attacking the validity of certain tax deeds, that the tax sales upon which they are based were "not sufficiently advertised," is a conclusion of law which is not admitted on demurrer, where no facts are set forth in the complaint to sustain it.

[For other cases, see Pleading, 908–924, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — following decision below — statutory construction.

2. The construction given by the territorial supreme court to the words "in accordance with this act," contained in N. M. Laws 1899, chap. 22, § 25, restricting the grounds on which "the title to any property sold at tax sale in accordance with this act" may be attacked, as meaning "under this act," is not so clearly erroneous as to justify the Federal Supreme Court on appeal in rejecting such interpretation.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — tax titles.

3. Restricting the grounds for attacking the title to property sold at tax sales under N. M. Laws 1899, chap. 22, as is done by § 25 of that act, does not take property without due process of law because its effect is to prevent assailing the validity of tax deeds for noncompliance with the local statutory provisions respecting the making and preserving of proofs of the publication and posting of the notice of sale.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 523–533, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — when validity may be assailed.

4. A territorial statute governing tax sales cannot be attacked on the ground that it may be so construed as to deny due process of law, but the plaintiff must show that in the case he presents, the effect of applying the statute is to deprive him of his property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 191.]

Submitted October 20, 1913. Decided November 17, 1913.

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

As to who may raise objection that a statute contains an unconstitutional discrimination—see note to Pugh v. Pugh, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 954.

Digitized by Google

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the County of Quay, in that territory, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the complaint in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 16 N. M. 442, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 117 Pac. 881.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William C. Reid submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. James M. Hervey was on the brief:

A tax deed cannot be made conclusive evidence of the grantee's title to the land.

Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 37 L. ed. 410, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508, 30 Fed. 579; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 518, 519; Taylor v. Deveaux, 100 Mich. 581, 59 N. W. 250; McKinnon v. Meston, 104 Mich. 642, 62 N. W. 1014; Weeks v. Merkle, 6 Okla. 714, 52 Pac. 929; Wilson v. Wood, 10 Okla. 284, 61 Pac. 1045; Kelly v. Herrall, 10 Sawy. 161, 20 Fed. 364; Bannon v. Burnes, 39 Fed. 895; McCready v. Sexton, 29 Iowa, 356, 4 Am. Rep. 214; Northern P. R. Co. v. Galvin, 85 Fed. 811; Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Parks, 32 Ark. 131; Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Payne, 33 Ark. 816, 34 Am. Rep. 55; Wambole v. Foote, 2 Dak. 1, 2 N. W. 239; Dickerson v. Acosta, 15 Fla. 614; White v. Flynn, 23 Ind. 46; Corbin v. Hill, 21 Iowa, 70; Powers v. Fuller, 30 Iowa, 476; Taylor v. Miles, 5 Kan. 498, 7 Am. Rep. 558; Baumgardner v. Fowler, 82 Md. 631, 34 Atl. 538; Groesbeck v. Seeley, 13 Mich. 329; Case v. Dean, 16 Mich. 12; Dawson v. Peter, 119 Mich. 274, 77 N. W. 997; Abbott v. Lindenbower, 42 Mo. 162, 46 Mo. 291; Roth v. Gabbert, 123 Mo. 29, 27 S. W. 528; Wright v. Cradlebaugh, 3 Nev. 349; Young v. Beardsley, 11 Paige, 93; East Kingston v. Towle, 48 N. H. 57, 97 Am. Dec. 575, 2 Am. Rep. 174; Sheets v. Paine, 10 N. D. 103, 86 N. W. 117; Strode v. Washer, 17 Or. 50, 16 Pac. 926; Mather v. Darst, 13 S. D. 75, 82 N. W. 407; Harness v. Cravens, 126 Mo. 233, 28 S. W. 971; Bettison v. Budd, 21 Ark. 578; Watt v. Gilmore, 2 Yeates, 330; Shimmin v. Inman, 26 Me. 233; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Alvord v. Collin, 20 Pick. 418; Workingmen's Bank v. Lannes, 30 La. Ann. 871; Martin v. Barbour, 34 Fed. 701; Tracy v. Reed, 2 L.R.A. 773, 13 Sawy. 622, 38 Fed. 69; Doe ex dem. Davis v. Minge, 56 Ala. 121; Oliver v. Robinson, 58 Ala. 46; Radcliffe v. Scruggs, 46 Ark. 96; Townsend v. Martin, 55 Ark. 192, 17 S. W. 875; Cooper v. Freeman Lumber Co. 61 Ark. 36, 31 S. W. 981, 32 S. W. 494; Ramish v. Hartwell, 126 Cal. 443, 58 Pac. 920; Maguiar v. Henry, 84 Ky. 1, 4 Am. St. Rep. 182; Larson v. Dickey, 39 Neb. 463, 42 Am. St. Rep. 595, 58 N. W. 167; Roberts v. First Nat. Bank, 8 N. D. 504, 79 N. W. 1049; Dever v. Cornwell, 10 N. D. 123, 86 N. W. 227; Simpson v. Meyers, 197 Pa. 522, 47 Atl. 868; Salmer v. Lathrop, 10 S. D. 216, 72 N. W. 570; Virginia Coal Co. v. Thomas, 97 Va. 527, 34 S. E. 486; Clarke v. Mead, 102 Cal. 519, 36 Pac. 863; State v. Dugan, 105 Tenn. 245; Bennett v. Davis, 90 Me. 107, 37 Atl. 866; Soper v. Lawrence Bros. Co. 201 U. S. 370, 50 L. ed. 788, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Meyer v. Kuhn, 13 C. C. A. 298, 25 U. S. App. 174, 65 Fed. 705; Lufkin v. Galveston, 73 Tex. 340, 11 S. W. 340.

The essential or jurisdictional steps provided by statute were not complied with.

2 Cooley, Taxn, 3d ed. p. 918; Games v. Stiles, 14 Pet. 322, 10 L. ed. 476; Martin v. Barbour, 34 Fed. 701, 140 U. S. 634, 644, 35 L. ed. 546, 549, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Rustin v. Merchants' & M. Tunnel Co. 23 Colo. 351, 47 Pac. 300; Salinger v. Gunn, 61 Ark. 414, 33 S. W. 959; Martin v. Allard, 55 Ark. 218, 17 S. W. 878; Coit v. Wells, 2 Vt. 318; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 518, 519.

Where property is sold for more than is due, whether the excess is due to an illegal levy or illegal penalties and costs, the officer has no jurisdiction to sell, and it is void, notwithstanding curative statutes.

Lufkin v. Galveston, 73 Tex. 340, 11 S. W. 340; Treadwell v. Patterson, 51 Cal. 637; Huse v. Merriam, 2 Me. 375; Case v. Dean, 16 Mich. 12; Eustis v. Henrietta, 91 Tex. 325, 43 S. W. 259; Alexander v. Gordon, 41 C. C. A. 228, 101 Fed. 91; Ensign v. Barse, 107 N. Y. 329, 14 N. E. 400, 15 N. E. 401; Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233; Warden v. Broome, 9 Cal. App. 172, 98 Pac. 252; Dever v. Cornwell, 10 N. D. 123, 86 N. W. 227.

Illustrative of the principle that a curative statute does not aid a tax deed or certificate which, on the face thereof, shows a violation or noncompliance with the statute relative to sale, are the cases which hold that, notwithstanding the curative statute, tax certificates or deeds which show upon their face that the county was a competitive bidder, or that the property was struck off to the county on a day when it was not authorized to purchase it, contrary to the statute, are void.

Reckitt v. Knight, 16 S. D. 395, 92 N. W. 1077; Rush v. Lewis & Clark County, 37 Mont. 240, 95 Pac. 836; Hanenkratt v. Hamil, 10 Okla. 219, 61 Pac. 1050; Magill v. Martin, 14 Kan. 67; Dyke v. Whyte, 17 Colo. 296, 29 Pac. 128.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Harry H. McElroy submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Harry M. Dougherty was on the brief:

It is not even necessary, in order to constitute due process of law, to have had any sale whatsoever. The state could, if it saw fit, have forfeited the property to the state immediately upon the failure to pay the taxes.

King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; King v. West Virginia, 216 U. S. 92, 54 L. ed. 396, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Fay v. Crozer, 217 U. S. 456, 54 L. ed. 837, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568.

The construction of the statute as to the steps required by law are for the state courts, provided they do not encroach upon constitutional provisions.

Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51–57, 47 L. ed. 70–73, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20.

The owner of property is bound to take notice of the time and place provided for tax proceedings. He knows that his property is subject to tax.

Ontario Land Co. v. Yordy, 212 U. S. 152–157, 53 L. ed. 449–452, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

It is not the province of this court to interfere with the policy of the revenue laws of the states, nor with the interpretation given to them by the courts.

Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 684, 42 L. ed. 626, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Huling v. Kaw Valley R. & Improv. Co. 130 U. S. 559, 32 L. ed. 1045, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. 111 U. S. 710, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 18 L. ed. 339; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

The laws for the assessment and collection of general taxes are construed with the utmost liberality, sometimes even to the extent of holding that no notice is required.

Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 47 L. ed. 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20.

If this case is only appealable under § 2 of the act of March 3, 1885, no question as to the construction of the statute will be considered, but only whether the statute, as construed by the supreme court of New Mexico, was within the power of the legislature to pass, in view of the requirements of the Constitution of the United States.

New Mexico ex rel. McLean v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 203 U. S. 38–48, 51 L. ed. 78–85, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The court will not consider, as has been suggested, what are the "essentials under the territorial statute."

Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 683, 42 L. ed. 622, 625, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong, 223 U. S. 543, 56 L. ed. 544, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328.

The plaintiff has no interest to assert that the statute is unconstitutional because it might be construed so as to cause it to violate the Constitution. His right is limited solely to the inquiry whether, in the case which he presents, the effect of applying the statute is to deprive him of his property without due process of law.

Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674–680, 42 L. ed. 622–624, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

Where directions upon the subject might originally have been dispensed with, or executed at another time, irregularities arising from neglect to follow them may be remedied by the legislature, unless its action in this respect is restrained by constitutional provisions, prohibiting retrospective legislation.

Williams v. Albany County, 122 U. S. 154–164, 30 L. ed. 1088–1090, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1244; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674–682, 42 L. ed. 622–625, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

Laws which undertake to provide that in future proceedings, errors or irregularities shall not be fatal, come also under the same restrictions upon legislative authority; they cannot, for instance, cure a total want of power to tax, nor can they relieve against jurisdictional defects. But such laws would seem entitled to liberal consideration, since the parties concerned would be apprised in advance that they were not to rely upon an exact compliance with the law, and would be under greater obligation to watch the proceedings.

Cooley, Taxn. 521, 522.

It may not be altogether easy in a particular case to determine whether the defects are jurisdictional or not, but certain irregularities in the personal conduct of the officers in making the sale would not be so regarded; and it is at least exceptionally doubtful whether the failure to preserve the auditor's list of delinquent lands, or the evidence of publication and posting of the statutory notice, would vitiate a deed made by the clerk after a lapse of twelve years.

Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 47 L. ed. 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20.

If this was an original question before this court for construction, and not a statute which has already been charged with a construction by the state of New Mexico, still we feel that the Supreme Court of the United States has made an original construction of a similar statute in the case of DeTreville v. Smalls, 98 U. S. 517, 25 L. ed. 174.

See also Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441, 25 L. ed. 327; Sherry v. McKinley, 99 U. S. 497, 25 L. ed. 330; Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 26 L. ed. 253.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit to quiet the title to three tracts of land in Quay county, in the territory of New Mexico. In the court of first instance a demurrer to the complaint was sustained, and the plaintiff declining to amend, a decree of dismissal was entered, which subsequently was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory. 16 N. M. 442, —L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 117 Pac. 831. An appeal from the decree of affirmance brings the case here, under the act of March 3, 1885, 23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572.

The complaint purported to state four causes of action. In the first, embracing all the tracts, it was alleged that the plaintiff was the owner in fee simple, and that the defendant was making some adverse claim, not described. In the others, each embracing a single tract, the plaintiff's ownership was reiterated, and it was alleged that the defendant was claiming title under tax deeds issued in consummation of tax sales which were characterized as void for designated reasons. But, notwithstanding its form, the complaint, as the record discloses, was treated in both of the territorial courts, with the acquiescence of the parties, as intended to challenge the validity of the tax deeds only upon the grounds designated in the last [168] three causes of action; that is, as if the general charge in the first cause of action was intended to be restrained and limited by the more specific charges in the others. We therefore treat the complaint in the same way.

It was not alleged that the lands were not subject to taxation, or that the taxes on account of which the sales were had were in any wise invalid, or that the taxes or any part of them had been paid or tendered, or that they had not been delinquent for such a period as justified their enforcement by a sale of the lands, or that the sales were in any wise tainted with fraud, or that there had been any attempt to redeem the lands, or any of them, within the three years allowed therefor, or that that period had not elapsed after the sales and before the deeds were issued. On the contrary, the sole grounds on which the complaint assailed the tax title were (a) that the sales were "not sufficiently advertised;" (b) that proof of publication of the notice of sale was not transmitted by the printer to the county collector "immediately after the last publication;" (c) that the collector did not cause to be made an affidavit of the public posting of the notice of sale, and did not cause proof of publication or of posting to be deposited with the probate clerk; (d) that the probate clerk did not "carefully preserve" any such proofs; and (e) that the amount of the delinquency sought to be satisfied by the sales was in one instance 16 cents, and in another 24 cents, more than the taxes levied on the particular tract.

Plainly, the allegation that the sales were "not sufficiently advertised" was purely a conclusion of law, and must be disregarded. No facts being set forth to sustain it, the statement of the conclusion was merely an empty assertion, and, under the rule that a demurrer admits only facts well pleaded, the conclusion was not admitted.

The charge that the delinquency sought to be satisfied by the sales was in excess of the taxes levied must be read in connection with the fact, otherwise appearing in [169] the complaint, that the taxes were delinquent, and in connection with the statutory provisions augmenting the delinquency by designated penalties and costs. When this is done it is quite evident that the amount sought to be collected was not excessive.

The remaining objections advanced in the complaint are founded upon a failure to comply with local statutory provisions directing the making and preserving of proofs of the publication and posting of the notice of sale. The supreme court of the territory held, in effect, that compliance with these statutory provisions was not essential in a constitutional sense to the validity of tax sales, and therefore that the territorial legislature was free to declare that noncompliance should not render the sales invalid; and with this as a premise the court further held that the objections could not prevail, because the statute under which the sales were had contained a provision that "no bill of review or other action attacking the title to any property sold at tax sale in accordance with this act shall be entertained by any court, nor shall such sale or title be invalidated by any proceedings, except upon the ground that the taxes, penalties, interest, and costs had been paid before the sale, or that the property was not subject to taxation." Laws New Mexico, 1899, chap. 22, § 25.

The appellant assigns error upon this ruling, and insists that the provision just quoted (a) is in terms restricted to sales made "in accordance with this act," and so cannot be applied to any sale wherein some requirements of the act were not followed, and (b) is epugnant to the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment as applied to the territory by the organic act.

The supreme court of the territory construed the words "in accordance with this act" as meaning "under this act," and we think this was right. At least, we cannot say that it was manifestly wrong, as must be done [170] to justify us in rejecting the local interpretation of a territorial statute. Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 679, 39 L. ed. 576, 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Treat v. Grand Canyon R. Co. 222 U. S. 448, 452, 56 L. ed. 265, 266, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125. Of course, the provision was intended to have some operation and effect, and it hardly could have any if restricted to sales made in accordance with the act, in the stricter sense, for such sales would be as valid without the provision as with it.

Digitized by Google

While statutes authorizing tax sales often provide for making and preserving some designated form of record evidence of compliance with the requirements respecting notice of the sale, the subject is one which rests in legislative discretion, being quite apart from those fundamental rights which are embraced in a right conception of due process of law. And if there be legislative provision upon the subject, it does not assume the dignity of an essential element of due process of law in the constitutional sense (Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 683, 42 L. ed. 622, 625, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229), but belongs to that class of regulations of which it is said in Williams v. Albany County, 122 U. S. 154, 164, 30 L. ed. 1088, 1089, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1244: "Where directions upon the subject might originally have been dispensed with, or executed at another time, irregularities arising from neglect to follow them may be remedied by the legislature, unless its action in this respect is restrained by constitutional provisions prohibiting retrospective legislation." We are not here concerned with retrospective legislation or with any prohibition of it; for, as before shown, the remedial or relieving provision was embodied in the act under which the sales were had.

It is contended, however, that the remedial or relieving provision is so broad in its terms as to give effect to a sale not founded upon a prior assessment, or where no opportunity was afforded for a hearing in opposition to the tax, and therefore that it is violative of due process. To this it is a sufficient answer to repeat what was said in Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 680, 42 L. ed. 624, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229, in disposing of a like contention: [171] "But, as thus stated, the proposition presents a purely moot question. The plaintiff in error has no interest to assert that the statute is unconstitutional because it might be construed so as to cause it to violate the Constitution. His right is limited solely to the inquiry whether, in the case which he presents, the effect of applying the statute is to deprive him of his property without due process of law."

As none of the objections advanced in the complaint against the defendant's tax title appears to have been well taken, we think the demurrer was rightly sustained.

Decree affirmed.

MARCELINO TORRES ZAYAS, Appt. and Plff. in Err.,
v.
LOTHROP, LUCE, & COMPANY, Pedro Juan Rosaly y Capo,† and Alice Lothrop.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 171-181.)

Appeal — from Porto Rico supreme court — mode of review.

1. Appeal, and not writ of error, is the proper method of obtaining a review in the Federal Supreme Court of a decree of the supreme court of Porto Rico, which affirmed a decree of a district court in a suit tried without a jury, to set aside a judicial sale in proceedings to foreclose a mortgage.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — scope of review — questions not raised below.

2. A contention that the summary or executory process provided by the Porto Rico mortgage law for the foreclosure of a mortgage was so deficient in notice, or so wanting in opportunity to defend, as to cause such law to be repugnant to the due process of law clause of U. S. Const., 5th Amend., cannot be considered by the Federal Supreme Court on an appeal from the supreme court of Porto Rico, where that question was not and could not have been considered by the latter court, because it was not raised in the trial court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mortgage — construction — prohibiting future advances.

3. A clause in a mortgage by which it was agreed that the crops made by the mortgagor should be shipped to the mortgagees, who should sell them, applying the proceeds first to the interest, and then to the principal of the debt, did not prevent the mortgagees from advancing to the mortgagor, at his request, sums to aid him in making a crop, and thus to enable him to carry out, instead of disregarding, the letter and spirit of the contract.

[Rights and liabilities of parties to mortgage, see Mortgage, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

†Appearance of the heirs of Pedro Juan Rosaly y Capo, one of the defendants in error herein, filed and entered October 20, 1913.

Note.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rico courts—see note to Garrozi v. Dastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369.

On mortgages for future advances—see note to Lawrence v. Tucker, 16 L. ed. U. S. 474.

Digitized by Google

Appeal — from Porto Rico supreme court — question reviewable — statutory construction.

4. The conclusion of the Porto Rico supreme court that the Code of Civil Procedure in force at the time of bringing a suit to foreclose a mortgage, to the extent that it directed service of citation and summons in ordinary cases, was not cumulative nor applicable to proceedings under the mortgage law, will be followed by the Federal Supreme Court on appeal, in the absence of a clear conviction that error was committed in so ruling.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judicial sale — collateral attack.

5. A mortgagor who, so far as the public record was concerned, had parted with his title, although by a fictitious and simulated sale, has no standing to challenge the regularity of the proceedings by which the mortgage was enforced against the record owner, and the property judicially sold.

[For other cases, see Judicial Sale, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 17.]

Argued October 31, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

APPEAL from and in error to the Supreme Court of Porto Rico to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Judicial District of Ponce, dismissing a suit to set aside a judicial sale in proceedings to foreclose a mortgage. Writ of error dismissed. Judgment affirmed on appeal.

See same case below, 16 P. R. R. 172.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles M. Boerman argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error and appellant.

Mr. Malcolm Donald argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error and appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, Marcelino Torres, in January, 1908, brought this suit to set aside a sale of real estate, made in judicial proceedings of a summary or executory character, for the foreclosure of a mortgage and to recover the property with fruits, revenues, and damages. The right to the relief sought was based, broadly speaking, upon the following grounds: (a) the prematurity of the suit to foreclose because there was nothing due when the proceedings were commenced; (b) the absence of a necessary party; (c) vices in the proceedings, of such a character as to cause them to be absolutely void. The trial court dismissed the suit. On appeal, the supreme court of Porto Rico [174] affirmed, and it is to reverse such judgment that the writ of error and the appeal in this record were prosecuted. Having the power to review only by appeal (Garzot v. Rios de Rubio, 209 U. S. 283, 52 L. ed. 794, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548), the writ of error is dismissed and we consider the case on the appeal.

The court below directed attention to the slovenly and ill-arranged record, but despite its admonition nothing seems to have been done to rearrange the record for the purposes of review by this court. We are not authorized to re-examine the evidence, but a statement of facts made by the court below; and in a case where there was no such statement our duty would be to affirm, because it would be impossible to decide that error had been committed. There is a statement of facts in the record, but it is unsatisfactory in many respects, since in matters which are important it is silent where it should speak, and in negligible matters speaks with unnecessary prolixity, being confusedly arranged, and in important particulars but states evidentiary facts, without any attempt to find the ultimate fact properly to be deduced from the stated evidence. We mention these subjects in order to direct the attention of the court below to them, and to avoid the making of like statements of fact in the future. As the court delivered a full opinion which throws light on the statement, and as in substance our conclusion will be rested upon documents which are uncontroverted and facts which are clearly found by the court below and are undisputed, we come to dispose of the case, giving, as a prelude, a statement which we deem necessary to an understanding of the matters for decision.

Torres owed a debt of $47,000 to W. S. H. Lothrop, which Torres had assumed in 1898 on the purchase of certain real estate upon which the debt was secured by a conventional mortgage. The firm of De Ford & Company had acquired this debt from Lothrop, and in February, 1901, gave Torres an extension of four years to [175] February, 1905, new notes being furnished as evidence of the debt, bearing 10 per cent interest, payable annually, and the notes being secured by a conventional mortgage on two pieces of property belonging to Torres, and upon a third piece belonging to a commercial firm who intervened in the act and mortgaged its property to secure the debt of Torres. By the ninth clause of the act of mortgage it was agreed that the crops made by Torres on the property mortgaged by him should be shipped to De Ford & Company, who should sell them, applying the proceeds first to the interest and then to the principal of the debt. The mortgage, while indivisible as between the parties, was as to third persons made divisible, a specific portion of the debt being assigned to each of the three properties. The original mortgage due by Torres was canceled and erased on the execution of the new one. The crops were shipped to De Ford & Company in 1902 and 1903, and were sufficient to pay the interest. In the crop year 1904, Torres solicited advances from De Ford & Company to enable him to make his crop, and acceding to his request the firm either directly advanced or paid off advances made by others, charging the same to Torres. When the crops came in and were sold, their proceeds were inadequate to pay these advances and the interest. They were imputed primarily to the advances, leaving the interest unpaid, this being done with the assent of Torres, who had monthly accounts rendered him, and made no objection whatever to the debiting of advances or the imputation of payment. The interest for 1904 remained unpaid, and a suit to foreclose the mortgage was commenced by a summary, or executory process, in accordance with the local mortgage law. There was filed with this suit a certificate reciting that the mortgaged property stood upon the public records in the name of Torres, this certificate having been issued by the registering office a day or two before the commencement of the suit. On the day the foreclosure suit was filed, [176] whether before or after does not appear, Torres sold the property to Alvarado for a small sum in cash and a large amount secured by mortgage, and this deed of sale was put upon the registry before any cautionary notice of the suit was, or could have been, recorded. Conformably to law, the court ordered a demand made upon Torres, notifying him of the suit, and calling upon him to pay the debt within thirty days, in default of which the property would be sold. Although he was served with this notice, Torres ostensibly took no heed of the proceedings, but Alvarado, as the registered owner of the property, filed a petition to enjoin the foreclosure proceedings on grounds which, although they are not fully set out in the record, it is conceded were substantially identical with those here relied upon. No injunction was granted, and the suit, having been twice called for hearing, was dismissed for want of prosecution. An order for the seizure of the property was in due season awarded by the court, as was also another order stating the amount of the debt and directing the sale of the property. It was seized, advertised, and sold by the marshal, and bought in by one Rosaly, who assumed the mortgage sued upon in the foreclosure proceedings, and paid a small cash price. It then developed that the deed to Alvarado which was on the records was an insurmountable obstacle to the completion of the purchase made by Rosaly under the foreclosure, and in those proceedings he began what was tantamount to an hypothecary action against Alvarado as a third possessor, to compel him to pay the mortgage debt or cancel the inscription of his deed of purchase. Alvarado appeared in these proceedings, admitted that he could not pay the mortgage debt and could not hold the property unless he did, that he had brought his suit to enjoin and had intentionally abandoned the same, and consented to the erasure of the inscription of his deed of sale. This being done, the marshal made a deed to Rosaly in confirmation of the [177] foreclosure sale, which was duly inscribed. Subsequently, Rosaly having given a mortgage in favor of the firm of De Ford, Luce, & Company, who were the successors in right of De Ford & Company, by legal proceedings obtained an erasure of the inscription of the Torres mortgage which he, Rosaly, had assumed at the foreclosure sale, on the ground that the same had been discharged.

Digitized by Google

A little more than a year after, that is, on the 20th of April, 1907, Torres and Alvarado, in a notarial act, rescinded the sale which had apparently taken place between them, it being recited in the act that the rescission was the result of an agreement which had taken place between the parties in 1905, and that it was caused by the refusal of the wife of Alvarado to join in the mortgage which was given by him in the deed of sale.

Eight months afterwards, as we have seen, in January, 1908, Torres commenced this suit upon the general grounds which we have at the outset outlined. The assignments of error which are relied upon to reverse the judgment, affirming the action of the trial court, in dismissing the suit, are nineteen in number. While we think their inherent weakness is apparent from the facts which we have just stated, we briefly notice them.

1st. The summary or executory process provided by the mortgage law, which was followed in foreclosing the Torres mortgage, it is insisted was so deficient in notice, or so wanting in opportunity to defend, as to cause that law to be repugnant to the due process clause of the Constitution of the United States. Without pausing to apply the elementary doctrine that the due process clause does not control the mere forms of procedure provided only the fundamental requirements of notice and opportunity to defend are afforded (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620), and without stopping to indicate how clearly these fundamental rights were provided for, as demonstrated by the facts which we have enumerated, we [178] think it suffices to say that it does not appear that the contention of want of due process was urged either upon the trial court, or was assigned as error in the court below, or was passed upon by that court. And as in its opinion in this case concerning another subject, the court below pointed out that it was without authority to consider errors complained of which were not presented to the trial court, it follows that, in any view, it could not be held that the court below erred in deciding a matter which it did not decide, and which it had no authority to pass upon.

Digitized by Google

2d. It is contended that the ninth clause of the act of mortgage of 1901 was mandatory, and prohibited the firm of De Ford & Company from advancing to Torres, at his request, money to make his crop for the year 1904, and therefore such advances were not properly chargeable against the proceeds of the crop, and hence the interest was paid because the whole proceeds of the crop, if so imputed, disregarding the advances, would have been adequate to have paid the interest. But we think the court below was right in refusing to sustain this fictitious payment of interest, or to uphold the construction of the contract upon which it was based. We concur with the court below that the contract did not exclude the right of the firm to advance to Torres at his request, sums to aid him in making a crop, and thus to enable him to carry out, instead of disregarding, the letter and the spirit of the contract. This view, of course, disposes of the contention that error was committed in admitting proof of the agreement to make the advances and of their receipt by Torres, and his acquiescence in and approval of the accounts which were rendered him on the subject.

3d. It is urged, although Torres was fully informed of the institution of the foreclosure proceedings by the demand made upon him under the order of court, conformably to the mortgage law, and had the opportunity to defend afforded by that law, nevertheless the proceedings [179] were void because no copy of the petition of foreclosure and citation, as provided by the Code of Civil Procedure in ordinary cases, was issued and served. The contention is based upon the proposition that the Code of Procedure in force at the time the suit to foreclose was brought, to the extent that it directed service of citation and summons in ordinary cases, was cumulative and applicable to proceedings under the mortgage law, because not incompatible with such law. But, construing and applying the local law, the court below held that this contention was without merit,—a conclusion which we follow in the absence of a clear conviction that error was committed, which is far from being the case, and because in any event, for reasons which we shall hereafter state, the contention was additionally without merit.

4th. We group under this paragraph all the other errors relied upon, specifying only those which we consider of importance: (a) That the wife of Torres, as a widow in community, was not made a party defendant in the foreclosure suit; (b) that the notes secured by the mortgage were not annexed to the petition to foreclose, or filed therewith; (c) that the order of the court directing the notice of demand was signed only by two out of the three judges composing the court, and by an attorney at law who was then acting as judge because of the recusation of a member of the court; (d) because the act of mortgage did not contain a specification of value or appraisement for the purposes of foreclosure: (e) because of an asserted defect in the advertisement which preceded the sale; (f) because of the absence from the foreclosure record of the order finding the amount due, and directing its payment. The court disposed of all these objections separately upon considerations of local law, which we see no reason to reverse, but which we do not refer to in detail, because, in addition it held them all untenable upon a general, and we think, conclusive, ground to which we refer.

[180] It is not challenged, as pointed out by the court, that under the law of Porto Rico the state of the public record as to title is the dominant factor controlling proceedings for the foreclosure of a mortgage, and therefore that the one in whose name a property stands recorded upon the public records is the essential party to a proceeding to foreclose. Nothing could better illustrate the correctness of these propositions than do the proceedings in this case, since in consequence of the existence of the registry of the title in Alvarado, resulting from the sale made to him by Torres, the foreclosure proceedings against

Digitized by Google

Torres and the judicial sale thereunder were inefficacious to transmute the title, and it became essential for Rosaly, the purchaser at such sale, to commence proceedings to enforce the mortgage as against Alvarado as a third possessor. Applying these principles the court held, in view of the existence of the record title in Alvarado, of his suit to restrain the foreclosure proceeding, and its dismissal for want of prosecution, of the steps taken against him as a third possessor, and his admissions on the subject, and consent to the erasure of the inscription of his title, that the foreclosure proceedings were binding, and it was not open to Torres, who, so far as the record was concerned, had parted with his title, to assail them on the grounds which we have stated. The correctness of the premise and of the conclusion itself, abstractly considered, is not denied, but it is insisted that they are here inapplicable because the sale made by Torres to Alvarado was a mere fiction or simulation; and one of the matters complained of which we have not specified is that error was committed in refusing to permit proof of the simulation.

The court below, however, considered and disposed of the alleged distinction in so conclusive and succinct a manner that we adopt and place our own conclusion upon it:

"Alvarado was the record owner and the ostensible [181] owner. He not only had a duly recorded public document in his favor, but he had begun a suit similar to the present one, and this course of action was inconsistent with the possession by anyone else.

"The appellant complains that the court erred in not permitting him to show that the conveyance made from Torres Zayas to Alvarado was fictitious or simulated, and that the real party in interest was always Torres Zayas. We cannot see that the court committed an error in refusing to admit such testimony; at most Alvarado would have to be considered as the agent or representative of Torres Zayas, and the maxim, Qui facit per alium facit per se, may be held to apply. The registry system in Porto Rico exists to apprise purchasers and others who are the true owners of property; and if a man, after treating with the apparent owner, may still have his title impugned by a secret agreement existing between such record owner and the alleged true owner, there would be no security in the acquisition of property." [16 P. R. R. 181.]

Affirmed.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JOSEPH A. HOUSTON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 181–183.)

Public lands — railroad land grant — indemnity selections — approval.

Lands lawfully embraced in a list of indemnity selections filed by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company with the Land Department, and subsequently approved by the Secretary of the Interior, were not subject to entry or purchase under the Federal Land laws during the interim between the date of filing and the date of such approval.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 125–131, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 57.]

Submitted November 11, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Morrison County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit to cancel a sale of land lying within the indemnity limits of a railroad land grant. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 109 Minn. 273, 123 N. W. 922, 18 Ann. Cas. 325.

Mr. Charles W. Bunn submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by Mr. Chief Justice White, by direction of the court:

In Northern P. R. Co. v. Wass, 104 Minn. 411, 116 N. W. 937, it was decided that lands claimed under an indemnity grant, and described in lists of indemnity selections filed in the appropriate United States Land Office, and which were rightfully pending for action by the proper officer, were nevertheless subject to entry by others, to the destruction of the right to select, and to the frustration of the governmental power to approve the selections and award the land under the granting law. The judgment below, which is now under review, was expressly rested by the court on the ruling in the Wass Case. Houston v. Northern P. R. Co. 109 Minn. 273, 123 N. W. 922, 18 Ann. Cas. 325. The identity between the controversies here presented and the one which was passed on Note.—As to land grants to railroads, generally, see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Digitized by Google

in the Wass Case is additionally shown by the fact that it is stated in the printed argument on behalf of the railroad company, the plaintiff in error, there being no argument on behalf of the defendant in error, that the land involved in this case was covered by selections made at the same time the selections which were involved in the Wass Case were made, and were embraced in the identical lists which were the subject of contest in that case. But since this case was decided by the court below, its ruling in the Wass Case was reviewed by this court and it was reversed, thereby destroying the only foundation upon which the judgment in this case could possibly rest. Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Wass, 219 U. S. 426, 55 L. ed. 280, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321. It follows, for the reasons stated in the Wass Case, and upon the authority of that case, the judgment below must be [183] reversed and the case be remanded to the court below for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion in the Wass Case, and the action which we now take in applying the decision in that case.

Reversed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JOHN A. DAVIS and William B. Davis.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 183–190.)

Public lands — use of false or fraudulent documents — soldier's additional homestead right.

False and fraudulent documents made and used in support of a fraudulent claim under U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2304, 2307, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1413, 1417, to a soldier's additional homestead right, whether forged or counterfeited or not, are embraced within the provision of § 5421 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3667), which makes criminal the transmission to, or presentation at, or the causing or procuring to be transmitted to, or presented at, any office or officer of the government of the United States, of any deed, power of attorney, order, certificate, receipt, or other writing in support of, or in relation to, any account or claim, with intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited.

[No. 395.]

Argued October 17, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to review a judgment quashing an indictment charging a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Knaebel argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The false writings intended by the third clause of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5421, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3667, are not confined to forgeries, but include also writings genuine as to execution, but false and fraudulent in substance.

United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. ed. 979; United States v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 14,524; United States v. Bickford, 4 Blatchf. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 14,591; United States v. Spaulding, 3 Dak. 85, 13 N. W. 357, 538; United States v. Hansee, 79 Fed. 303; Dolan v. United States, 69 C. C. A. 274, 133 Fed. 450; United States v. Gowdy, 37 Fed. 332.

Mr. Thomas M. Seawell argued the cause, and, with Mr. Oscar T. Hamlin, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The construction of this indictment and each count thereof by the lower court was in effect that the instruments alleged to have been uttered for which the conspiracy was formed were not forged, but, when all the allegations of the indictment were considered, they appeared to be genuine in execution, and only false in their statements. This construction is without doubt correct; but if it is not, still this court cannot review that question in this proceeding, because the construction of the indictment, made by the lower court, is final in this court.

United States v. Biggs, 211 U. S. 507, 53 L. ed. 305, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

Sections 28 and 29 of the Penal Code, namely, the act of Congress approved March 4th, 1909, relate and refer solely to forged, false, and counterfeited instruments, public records, affidavits, and other writings, and not to instruments, public records, affidavits, and other writings containing false statements; therefore, the indictment does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense under § 57 of the Penal Code; namely, a conspiracy to commit an offense prohibited by §§ 28 and 29 of the Penal Code.

United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. ed. 979; United States v. Howell, 11 Wall. 432, 20 L. ed. 195; United States v. Moore, 60 Fed. 738; United States v. Glasener, 81 Fed. 566; United States v. Albert, 45 Fed. 552; United States v. Wentworth, 11 Fed. 52; United States v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 14,524; United States v. Reese, 4 Sawy. 629, Fed. Cas. No. 16,138;

Digitized by Google

State v. Willson, 28 Minn. 52, 9 N. W. 28; Mann v. People, 15 Hun, 155; State v. Young, 46 N. H. 266, 88 Am. Dec. 212; Com. v. Baldwin, 11 Gray, 197, 71 Am. Dec. 703; Barbour, Crim. Law, 97; Wharton Crim. Law, § 653.

The affidavit of the claimant is unofficial in character, and initiated no right to any tract of land; being mere ex parte declarations under oath by persons having no official relation to the government.

Barnes v. Poirier, 12 C. C. A. 9, 27 U. S. App. 500, 64 Fed. 14; Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 41 L. ed. 179, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 963.

If no affidavits are required in such matters, then there can be no criminal offense based either upon the fact that said instruments were forged, or were genuine and contained false statements. The instruments, being unknown to the law, cannot be made the basis of a criminal offense, and therefore a proper construction of §§ 28 and 29 of the Penal Code does not include the instruments contained in the indictment.

United States v. Dupont, 176 Fed. 823.

Even if there were rules and regulations of the Land Department providing for such instruments, still, as they are not authorized by any law of the United States, such requirements cannot be made the basis of a criminal offense.

Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 41 L. ed. 179, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 963; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764.

If there be any fraudulent purpose disclosed in the indictments, it is not to defraud the government, but individuals who may be allured into the purchase of such rights. The statute does not include such conduct towards individuals.

Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; United States v. Thompson, 29 Fed. 86; United States v. Fout, 123 Fed. 625.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The indictment charged the defendants under Penal Code, § 37 (Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), with a conspiracy to commit offenses against the United States; that is, to violate §§ 28 and 29 of the Penal Code (act March 4, 1909, chap. 321, 35 Stat. at L. 1094, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1597). These sections, leaving [187] aside additions, irrelevant to this case, are reproductions of §§ 5421 and 5479, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3667, 3696), in force in 1909 when the acts charged were committed. All the overt acts concerned the making or use of false affidavits and documents, in support of a fraudulent claim for land under Rev. Stat. §§ 2304 and 2307 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1413, 1417), giving honorably discharged soldiers of the Civil War the right to make an additional entry under the circumstances stated in the statutes, and the privilege also conferred upon the widow of such honorably discharged soldier to make a claim for land as therein provided. In passing on demurrers, the court treating all the counts as relating solely to the making and use of documents which were merely false and fraudulent, but not forged, and construing §§ 5421 and 5479, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3667, 3696), and Penal Code, §§ 28 and 29, as embracing only documents which were forged and counterfeited, held that none of the counts charged acts embraced by the provisions in question, and therefore the indictment was quashed because it stated no offense against the United States. On this direct appeal we assume the correctness of the meaning affixed to the indictment by the court below, and come only to determine whether the statute was correctly construed. This duty is narrowed by a concession made in argument by the government to the effect that the construction given by the court to the statute was correct except as to the last paragraph of § 5421, and that even if, as to that paragraph, it be held that the court below was wrong, and that the terms of the paragraph include affidavits, documents, etc., which were merely fraudulent, and not forged, only the fourth count would in that contingency be within the section. This consequently confines the issue to a consideration of the third paragraph of the section. For convenience of reference the entire section is in the margin.†

[188] Coming to the text of the third paragraph, we think it is at once apparent that its provisions are so comprehensive as to prevent us from holding that they include only documents which are forged or counterfeited, and hence exclude all other documents, however fraudulent they may be.

†Sec. 5421. Every person who falsely makes, alters, forges, or counterfeits, or causes or procures to be falsely made, altered, forged, or counterfeited, or willingly aids or assists in the false making, altering, forging, or counterfeiting, any deed, power of attorney, order, certificate, receipt, or other writing for the purpose of obtaining or receiving, or of enabling any other person, either directly or indirectly, to obtain or receive from the United States, or any of their officers or agents, any sum of money; or who utters or publishes as true, or causes to be uttered or published as true, any such false, forged, altered, or counterfeited deed, power of attorney, order, cer-

Digitized by Google

The all-embracing words "any deed, power of attorney, order, certificate, receipt, or other writing in support of or in relation to any account or claim with intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited," leave room for no other conclusion. The context of the section reinforces this view, since the contrast between the narrow scope of the first two paragraphs and the enlarged grasp of the third shows the legislative intent, after fully providing in the first two paragraphs for forged and counterfeited documents, instruments, etc., to reach by the provisions of the third paragraph, any and all fraudulent documents, whether forged or not forged, and thus efficiently to deter [189] from committing the wrong which it was the purpose of the section to prohibit. It is not, however, necessary to fix the true meaning of the provision by a resort, as an original question, to its text, since its significance has been authoritatively determined contrary to the construction adopted by the court below. The section represents the 1st section of the act of March 3, 1823, 3 Stat. at L. 771, chap. 38, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3667, the title of which, "An Act for the Punishment of Frauds Committed on the Government of the United States," manifests the purpose which Congress had in mind in enacting it. As long ago as 1850, in United States v. Staats, 8 How. 41, 12 L. ed. 979, the court was called upon to determine whether an indictment charging the transmission of a false (but not forged) affidavit touching a claim for pension was sustainable under the third clause of the section. The court fully analyzed the statute, and while conceding that other clauses of the act dealt with forged instruments in a technical sense, concluded that the case was within both the letter and the spirit of the act, and therefore that the acts charged in the indictment constituted an offense within the provisions of the law. When, then, the question before us is determined in the light of the text of the third paragraph and the context of the section, especially as elucidated by the ruling in the Staats Case, we think it clearly results that the court below was wrong in the construction which it gave the statute, and therefore its judgment must be reversed. In saying this we do not overlook the fact that in the argument for the defendant in error it is insisted that even although it be found that the construction which the court below gave was an erroneous one, nevertheless its judgment should be affirmed because from other points of view, the statute, if rightly construed, would exclude the possibility of holding that the facts charged in the indictment were within its terms. But without going into detail on this subject, we content ourselves with saying that, in our opinion, all the propositions [190] relied upon to sustain this result are so obviously unsound, or so plainly concern the construction of the indictment, as not to call for particular notice.

Reversed.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
LARAMIE STOCK YARDS COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 190–204.)

Adverse possession — railroad right of way — retrospective operation of statute.

1. A retrospective operation will not be given to the provision of the act of June 24, 1912 (37 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 181), that the adverse possession of any part of the railroad right of way granted by the act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120), shall have the same effect, when of the character and duration prescribed by the laws of the state in which the land is situated, as though the land embraced within the lines of said right of way had been granted by the United States absolutely or in fee.

[For other cases, see Adverse Possession, I. h; Statutes, II. v, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Corporations — charter — amendment.

2. Congress cannot be deemed to have tificate, receipt, or other writing with intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited; or who transmits to, or presents at, or causes or procures to be transmitted to or presented at any office or officer of the government of the United States, any deed, power of attorney, order, certificate, receipt, or other writing in support of or in relation to any account or claim with intent to defraud the United States, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged, or counterfeited, shall be imprisoned at hard labor for a period of not less than one year nor more than ten years; or shall be imprisoned not more than five years, and fined not more than one thousand dollars.

---

NOTE.—On adverse possession of railroad right of way—see note to Roberts v. Sioux City & P. R. Co. 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 272.

As to retrospective statutes generally—see notes to Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331, and Barnitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

On power to alter, amend, or repeal corporate charters—see note to Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 26 L. ed. U. S. 961.

Digitized by Google

exercised its right to alter, amend, or repeal, reserved in the acts of July 1, 1862, and of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 356, chap. 216), incorporating the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and making land grants in aid of railway construction, by the enactment of the act of June 24, 1912, legalizing conveyances of land forming a part of the railroad right of way, theretofore made by the railway company, and providing that adverse possession of any part of such right of way shall have the same effect, when of the character and duration prescribed by the laws of the state in which the land is situated, as though the land embraced within the lines of said right of way had been granted by the United States absolutely or in fee.

[For other cases, see Corporations, IV., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 570.]

Submitted October 14, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Wyoming to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment. Reversed and remanded, with directions to sustain the demurrer to the answer.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John W. Lacey and N. H. Loomis submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Herbert V. Lacey was on the brief:

Prior to the act of June 24, 1912, title to the right of way could not have been acquired by adverse possession.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Kindred v. Union P. R. Co. 225 U. S. 582, 597, 56 L. ed. 1216, 1220, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 275, 43 L. ed. 157, 163, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 5, 49 L. ed. 639, 640, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Stuart v. Union P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 342, 353, 57 L. ed. 535, 543, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338.

The act, in so far as it attempts to convey title by adverse possession, is not retroactive.

United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 82, 40 L. ed. 82, 83, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; United States v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 202 U. S. 563, 577, 50 L. ed. 1149, 1152, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; Twenty Per Cent Cases, 20 Wall. 179, 187, 22 L. ed. 339, 341; United States v. Heth, 3 Cranch, 413, 2 L. ed. 483; Black, Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 627, § 286; Reynolds v. M'Arthur, 2 Pet. 417, 7 L. ed. 470; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. 503, 5 Am. Dec. 291; Society for Propagation of Gospel v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. 105, Fed. Cas. No. 13,156; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 388, 1 L. ed. 648, 649; Winfree v. Northern P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 296, 57 L. ed. 518, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

If construed as retroactive, the act of June 24, 1912, operates immediately, and by virtue of itself alone, to take from the plaintiff its vested right and title to the property in controversy, and transfer the same to the defendant without due process of law, and is therefore unconstitutional.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Walbridge v. Russell County, 74 Kan. 341, 86 Pac. 473; Proprietors of Kennebec Purchase v. Laboree, 2 Me. 275, 11 Am. Dec. 79; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. 488, 14 L. ed. 510; Thistle v. Frostburg Coal Co. 10 Md. 144; Osborn v. Jaines, 17 Wis. 573; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 135, 3 L. ed. 162, 177; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 206, 4 L. ed. 529, 551; Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 599, 21 L. ed. 737, 738; Herrick v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co. 200 U. S. 96, 102, 50 L. ed. 388, 391, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192.

Messrs. Roderick N. Matson and T. Blake Kennedy submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The act in controversy is an alteration or an amendment of the original grants to the Pacific Railroad Companies, and as such violates no constitutional provision.

Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478–498, 21 L. ed. 98–104; Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 519, 21 L. ed. 133, 139; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 459, 21 L. ed. 204, 206; Maine C. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499–510, 24 L. ed. 836–840; Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 324, 24 L. ed. 357, 359; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496; Looker v. Maynard, 179 U. S. 46, 52, 45 L. ed. 79, 81, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Calder v. Michigan, 218 U. S. 591, 54 L. ed. 1163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

A retrospective law is not in itself unconstitutional.

Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 413, 7 L. ed. 458, 469; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 70, 20 L. ed. 513, 514; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 540, 9 L. ed. 773, 821; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 110, 8 L. ed. 876, 884; Baltimore & S. R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, 401, 13 L. ed. 469, 472; Blount v. Windley, 95 U. S. 173, 180, 24 L. ed. 424, 426; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 391, 1 L. ed. 648, 650.

Legislatures may pass laws regulating the conduct and operation of corporations then in existence, and such statutes do not devest vested rights or impair contract obligations.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87.

Digitized by Google

The question of vested rights is closely associated with the question of the enjoyment of contracts which are guaranteed by constitutional provision, and as to what may be considered within the scope of legislative powers, so far as impairing contract obligations under constitutional restriction is concerned, the field is very broad.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. ed. 513; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 673, 676, 40 L. ed. 838, 847, 848, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705.

Whatever is contrary to public policy or inimical to the public interests is subject to the police power of the state, and within legislative control; and in the exertion of such power the legislature is vested with a large discretion, which, if exercised bona fide for the protection of the public, is beyond the reach of judicial inquiry.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 700, 40 L. ed. 849, 859, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Ejectment to recover certain described lands alleged to constitute part of the right of way of plaintiff (being such in the court below, we will so call it).

The allegations of the complaint are that plaintiff and defendant are corporations, and that plaintiff is engaged in the operation of a railroad from Ogden, in Utah, easterly through certain states to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and over the lands in controversy, they being portions of its right of way made by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120], of the width of 400 feet. The right of way was acquired under said act of Congress, which is entitled, "An Act to Aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to Secure to the Government the Use of the Same for Postal, Military, and Other Purposes." Section 2 of the act provides as follows: "That the right of way through the public lands be and the same is hereby granted to said company [the Union Pacific Railroad Company] for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said company to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, and other materials for the construction thereof; said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of two hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, and depots, machine shops, switches, side tracks, turntables, and water stations."

[197] By virtue of said act of Congress and amendatory acts, certain railroad companies, which are enumerated, theretofore organized and existing in pursuance of said acts, and subject to and enjoying the rights created thereby, were consolidated into a new corporation known as "The Union Pacific Railway Company," and the corporation thus created became vested with all the rights of the said constituent corporations, and the plaintiff has become the successor of the Union Pacific Railway Company and is entitled to the possession of the land in controversy, and that defendant wrongfully keeps it out of the possession thereof. The ground of the asserted right of defendant is alleged to be an act of Congress entitled, "An Act Legalizing Certain Conveyances Heretofore Made by the Union Pacific Railroad Company," approved June 24, 1912 [37 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 181], which act, it is alleged, is unconstitutional in that it seeks to deprive plaintiff of its vested rights and titles in and to the lands, and to deprive it of its lands and property without due process of law.

The answer of defendant admits all of the allegations of the complaint except the possession of the legal title to the lands in plaintiff, and that they are unlawfully held from it, and alleges that defendant and its immediate grantors have been for more than ten years prior to the filing of the complaint in the adverse possession thereof under the act of Congress of June 24, 1912, and that such possession constitutes a bar to the action.

Plaintiff demurred to the answer as not constituting a defense. The demurrer was overruled, and, plaintiff declining to plead further, judgment was entered that it "take nothing in said action," and that the defendant have and recover costs. This appeal was then prosecuted.

The crux of the controversy is the act of June 24, 1912. There is no question of the grant of the right of way and its extent, or that the lands in suit are within it.

The act provides that all conveyances and agreements [198] heretofore made by the enumerated railway or railroad companies "of certain land forming part of the right of way" under the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, "and all conveyances or agreements confining the limits of said right of way, or restricting the same, are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed to the extent that the same would have been legal or valid if the land involved therein had been held by the corporation making such conveyance or agreement under absolute or fee-simple title.

Digitized by Google

"That in all instances in which title or ownership of any part of said right of way heretofore mentioned is claimed as against said corporations or either of them, or the successors or assigns of any of them, by or through adverse possession of the character and duration prescribed by the laws of the state in which the land is situated, such adverse possession shall have the same effect as though the land embraced within the lines of said right of way had been granted by the United States absolutely or in fee instead of being granted as a right of way."

Two contentions are made by plaintiff: (1) The act is not retroactive; (2) if it be so construed, it is unconstitutional because it takes plaintiff's vested right and title to the property, and transfers the same to defendant without due process of law.

It is established that the right of way to the several railroads was a present, absolute grant, subject to no conditions except those necessarily implied, such as that the roads should be constructed and used. And it has been decided that the right of way was a very important aid given to the roads (St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578; Stuart v. Union P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 342, 57 L. ed. 535, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338), and that it could not be voluntarily transferred by the companies, nor acquired against them by adverse possession (Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 275, 43 L. ed. 157, 163, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; [199] Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 5, 49 L. ed. 639, 640, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302). Of this defect of power in the companies and the defect of right in the possessors of the right of way, the act of June 24th was intended to be corrective. But of what time was it intended to speak—to the past or future?—to apply to that which was done, or that which was to be done? There is no doubt as to the answer in the case of agreements or conveyances by the company. The act is explicit that they are those "heretofore made" by the enumerated companies. There is no such qualifying word of the "title or ownership" "claimed as against" the corporation by adverse possession. Construction, therefore, becomes necessary, and the first rule of construction is that legislation must be considered as addressed to the future, not to the past. The rule is one of obvious justice, and prevents the assigning of a quality or effect to acts or conduct which they did not have or did not contemplate when they were performed. The rule has been expressed in varying degrees of strength, but always of one import, that a retrospective operation will not be given to a statute which interferes with antecedent rights, or by which human action is regulated, unless such be "the unequivocal and inflexible import of the terms, and the manifest intention of the legislature." United States v. Heth, 3 Cranch, 413, 2 L. ed. 483; Reynolds v. M'Arthur, 2 Pet. 417, 7 L. ed. 470; United States v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 202 U. S. 563, 577, 50 L. ed. 1149, 1152, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; Winfree v. Northern P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 296, 57 L. ed. 518, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273. Surely such imperative character cannot be assigned to the words of the act of June 24; and the intention is not so manifest as to strengthen the insufficiency of the words. Indeed, all reasonable considerations determine the other way.

We have seen that the conveyances and agreements which were legalized were those theretofore made; that is, consummated acts of the company deliberately done to transfer its right. Can it be said that the adverse [200] possession which was to transfer the right was to be less complete, not fully adverse in fact and law, at once assertive of title and concessive of it? It is to be remembered that there was no sanction of a right to the possession of the defendant, or possibility of a right by the railroad company's nonaction. There was not a moment of time in which the railroad was called upon to act or lose its right; there was not a moment of time when the possession of defendant initiated an adverse right or constituted an adverse right. This being the situation, it is difficult to believe—or certainly a belief is not compelled—that Congress intended to give to the past conduct of the railroad company a consequence it was not intended to have and did not have. A statute having such a result may incur the opposition of the Constitution. When such may be the result, a different construction of the statute is determined. United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 408, 53 L. ed. 836, 849, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. ed. 253, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

In Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. ed. 737, the questions we are now discussing came up for consideration. We there expressed, in considering a statute of limitations whose literal interpretation would have had the effect of making it applicable to actions which had accrued prior to its passage, the rule against retrospective operation,—the injustice and unconstitutionality of it. We said that a statute of limitations may affect actions which have accrued as well as those to accrue, and "whether it does or not will depend upon the language of the act and the apparent intent of the legislature to be gathered therefrom." But it was said that, even against a literal interpretation of the terms of the statute, "it will be presumed that such was not the intent of the legislature. Such an intent would be unconstitutional. To avoid such a result, and to give the statute a construction that will enable it to stand, courts have given it a prospective [201] operation." And three modes were pointed out as having been adopted by the courts: (1) to make the statute apply only to causes of action arising after its passage; (2) to construe the statute as applying to such actions only as have run out a portion of the time, but which still have a reasonable time left for the prosecution of the action before the statutory time expires,—which reasonable time is to be estimated by the court,—leaving all other actions accruing prior to the statute unaffected by it; and (3) the rule announced in Ross v. Duval, 13 Pet. 62, 10 L. ed. 59, and Lewis v. Lewis, 7 How. 778, 12 L. ed. 910.

Digitized by Google

Of the first two modes there was condemnation. The third was approved. It was said of the first that it left "all actions existing at the passage of the act, without any limitation." Which would not be presumed as intended. The second was said to be founded on no better principle than the first, and was a more arbitrary rule than that, as it left "a large class of actions entirely unprovided with any limitation whatever, or, as to them, unconstitutional."

Speaking of the rule announced in the cited cases, it was said: "In those cases certain statutes of limitation—one in Virginia and the other in Illinois—had originally excepted from their operation nonresidents of the state, but this exception had been afterwards repealed; and this court held that the nonresident parties had the full statutory time to bring their actions after the repealing acts were passed, although such actions may have accrued at an earlier period. 'The question is,' says Chief Justice Taney (speaking in the latter of the cases just cited), 'from what time is this limitation to be calculated? Upon principle, it would seem to be clear that it must commence when the cause of action is first subjected to the operation of the statute, unless the legislature has otherwise provided.'"

Sohn v. Waterson was cited and its principle applied in Herrick v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co. 200 U. S. 97, 50 L. ed. 389, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192. A paragraph [202] in the statutes of Arizona prescribed a limitation of actions as follows: "Any person who has a right of action for recovery of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments against another having peaceable and adverse possession thereof, cultivating, using, and enjoying the same, shall institute his suit therefor within ten years next after his cause of action shall have accrued, and not afterward."

It will be observed that the language of the paragraph, as of the statute passed on in Sohn v. Waterson, or, it may be, the act of June 24th under review, literally interpreted, would apply to causes of action which have accrued. The supreme court of the territory refused to give that effect to the provision, and "decided," as this court said, "that under no canon of construction or rule giving a retroactive effect to a new statute of limitations could paragraph 2938 be made to apply to the case." And, after considering all possible constructions of the statute expressed by the supreme court of the territory, among others, that if it be construed as absolutely barring causes of action existing at the time of its passage, it was unconstitutional, citing Sohn v. Waterson, this court approved the views expressed, and said that the court committed no error in determining that under no possible hypothesis could the limitation prescribed operate to bar the plaintiff's action.

The principle of these cases forbids a retrospective operation to be given to the statute under consideration. To do so would cause in a high degree the evil and injustice of retroactive legislation. As said by plaintiff's counsel, the possession of defendant prior to the statute "had no effect on the title, and was not, as between the parties, even a threat against it." And we are loath to believe that Congress intended by an imperative declaration of law, immediately operating, to give defendant's possession another character,—one hostile to the title.

Defendant does not combat plaintiff's contentions based [203] on considering the act of June 24th as one of limitation. Indeed, the admission is "that prior to the passage of the act in controversy, title by adverse possession could not be acquired as against the plaintiff in error in its original right-of-way grant, and it is further admitted that title could not have been acquired by adverse possession subsequent to the passage of the act." Defendant does not regard the act as a limitation of the remedy, but as amendatory of the charter of the company,—an exercise of a right reserved in the acts of 1862† and 1864.‡ The argument is, disregarding its involutions, that the right of way was not a right in fee, but only a right to use, which was forfeited by nonuse, and that the right which thereby reverted to the United States was, by the act of June 24th, conveyed to those in possession of the land. And the exercise of the right reserved, it is contended, neither impairs any contract with the railroad nor devests its property. Nor does it come under the condemnation of being retroactive legislation, it is further contended. We need not follow the discussion by which these contentions are attempted to be supported. We meet them all by the declaration that Congress, by the act of June 24th, did not intend to exercise the power over the charters of the companies reserved to it. The exercise of such power would naturally only find an impulse in some large national purpose, and would hardly be provoked by a desire to legalize the encroachments here and there on the right of way of a transcontinental railroad.

Digitized by Google

We are constrained to believe that when Congress intends to forfeit or limit any of the rights conveyed to aid that great enterprise, it will do so explicitly and directly [204] by a measure proportionate to the purpose, and not leave it to be accomplished in a piecemeal and precarious way, —not by confirming a few conveyances which may have been made, or legalizing trespasses which may be made.

But if it could be conceded that the act of June 24th was intended as an amendment of the charters of the companies, the question would still occur as to its effect, —as to what time it should be considered as applying, whether to the past or the future. That question we have decided.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded, with directions to sustain the demurrer to the answer.

Mr. Justice Hughes dissents.

Mr. Justice Holmes, Mr. Justice Lurton, and Mr. Justice Pitney took no part in the decision.

†"Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said companies named herein, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act." 12 Stat. at L. 497, chap. 120.

‡"And be it further enacted, that Congress may at any time after, amend, or repeal this act." 13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 216.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
GEORGE A. SNOW and Robert W. Burton (Said Burton Doing Business as an Individual under the Name and Style of Byers Mercantile Company).

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 204–213.)

Adverse possession — railroad right of way — retrospective operation of statute.

1. A restrospective operation will not be given to the provisions of the act of June 24, 1912 (37 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 181), that adverse possession of any part of the railroad right of way granted by the act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120), shall have the same effect when of the character and duration prescribed by the laws of the state in which the land is situated as though the land embraced within the lines of said right of way had been granted by the United States absolutely or in fee.

[For other cases, see Adverse Possession, I. h; Statutes, II. v, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — railway right of way — forfeiture.

2. Some act of the United States is necessary to effect a forfeiture of the right of way in aid of railway construction, granted by the act of July 1, 1862, and to reinvest the United States with complete title to the land granted.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 271–298, 320–329, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 682.]

Submitted October 14, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court of Arapahoe County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 1 Colo. 1, 137 Pac. 1037.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. N. H. Loomis and C. C. Dorsey submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. E. I. Thayer was on the brief:

The act of June 24, 1912, correctly construed, is not retrospective in its operation,

NOTE.—On adverse possession of railroad right of way—see note to Roberts v. Sioux City & P. R. Co. 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 272.

As to retrospective statutes generally—see notes to Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331, and Barnitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

As to land grants to railroads, generally —see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Digitized by Google

and therefore is inapplicable to the cases in hand.

United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 82, 40 L. ed. 82, 83, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; United States v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 202 U. S. 563, 577, 50 L. ed. 1149, 1152, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; Twenty Per Cent Cases, 20 Wall. 179, 187, 22 L. ed. 339, 341; United States v. Heth, 3 Cranch, 413, 2 L. ed. 483; Black, Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 627, § 286; Winfree v. Northern P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 296, 301, 57 L. ed. 518, 520, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169, 1 N. C. C. A. 875.

Unconstitutionality will be avoided, if possible, by putting such a construction on the statute as will make it conform to the Constitution.

Black's Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 60, § 37; Miller v. United States (Page v. United States) 11 Wall. 268, 309, 20 L. ed. 135, 145; United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72, 9 L. ed. 1004; Grenada County v. Brogden (Grenada County v. Brown) 112 U. S. 261, 268, 28 L. ed. 704, 706, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 179 U. S. 388, 394, 45 L. ed. 244, 247, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; Japanese Immigrant Case (Yamataya v. Fisher) 189 U. S. 86, 101, 47 L. ed. 721, 726, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 408, 53 L. ed. 836, 849, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. ed. 253, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Knights Templars' & M. Life Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197, 204, 47 L. ed. 139, 145, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

If the act of June 24, 1912, requires the retrospective construction, and is to be given the retrospective effect attributed to it by the Colorado supreme court, it is unconstitutional and beyond the power of Congress to enact.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Walbridge v. Russell County, 74 Kan. 341, 86 Pac. 473; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627, 657, 7 L. ed. 542, 553; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Society for Propagation of Gospel v. New Haven, 8 Wheat. 464, 5 L. ed. 662; Proprietors of Kennebec Purchase v. Laboree, 2 Me. 295, 11 Am. Dec. 79; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. 488, 502, 503, 14 L. ed. 510, 516, 517; Thistle v. Frosburg Coal Co. 10 Md. 145; Wilson v. Iseminger, 185 U. S. 55, 62, 46 L. ed. 804, 807, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 324; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 523; Ochoa v. Hernandez y Morales, 230 U. S. 139, 161, 57 L. ed. 1427, 1437, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1033.

Congress could not, under the reserved power to alter or amend, by such alteration or amendment destroy rights actually vested, nor disturb transactions fully consummated, nor take away property already acquired under the operation of the charter.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 33, 40 L. ed. 319, 330, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

A well-settled and universally accepted canon of construction forbids us to apply the words "heretofore made," used in the first portion of the act in respect to conveyances and agreements, to the second portion of the act, wherein adverse possession under the state statute is separately and specifically dealt with.

United States v. Chase, 135 U. S. 255, 260, 34 L. ed. 117, 119, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756, 8 Am. Crim. Rep. 649; Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 125, 49 L. ed. 114, 122, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, 1 Ann. Cas. 655; Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 512, 27 L. ed. 1012, 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Endlich Interpretation of Statutes, § 399, pp. 559, 560.

Messrs. Milton Smith and Charles R. Brock submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. W. H. Ferguson was on the brief:

Any title which plaintiff in error or its predecessors ever had in or to the premises in controversy emanated from the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, and was a limited or determinable fee, conditioned upon the continued use of the right of way for railroad purposes.

Stuart v. Union P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 342, 57 L. ed. 535, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 494, 24 L. ed. 1095, 1096; United States v. Kansas P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 455, 25 L. ed. 289; Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 43 L. ed. 157, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 271, 47 L. ed. 1044, 1046, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. Quigley, 10 Idaho, 770, 80 Pac. 405; First Universalist Soc. v. Boland, 155 Mass. 174, 15 L.R.A. 231, 29 N. E. 524; Greenleaf's Cruise, Real Prop. title 13, chap. 2, § 64; 2 Bl. Com. 155; 4 Kent. Com. 13th ed. p. 134; Denver & S. F. R. Co. v. School Dist. 14 Colo. 332, 23 Pac. 978; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 430, 41 L. ed. 770, 777, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551.

Under the allegations contained in the second defense of the answers, the title or ownership of the land in controversy was claimed by or through adverse possession of the character and duration prescribed by the laws of the state of Colorado, and the supreme court of Colorado in these cases conclusively held that the allegations of the second defense were sufficient, under the state statutes, to establish title by adverse possession.

Digitized by Google

Snow v. Union P. R. Co. — Colo. —, 133 Pac. 1037; Sides v. Union P. R. Co. — Colo. —, 133 Pac. 1040; Laws v. Newkirk, 39 Colo. 78, 88 Pac. 861; Hurd v. McClellan, 1 Colo. App. 330, 29 Pac. 181; Latta v. Clifford, 47 Fed. 619; Elder v. McClaskey, 17 C. C. A. 251, 37 U. S. App. 1, 199, 70 Fed. 529; Scott v. Mineral Development Co. 64 C. C. A. 659, 130 Fed. 497, 196 U. S. 640, 49 L. ed. 631, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796; Harpending v. Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, 16 Pet. 455, 10 L. ed. 1029; Santee River Cypress Lumber Co. v. James, 50 Fed. 360; United States v. One Lot of Land, 178 Fed. 334; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 402.

The title acquired by the defendants in error under the adverse possession statutes of Colorado was precisely equivalent in contemplation of law to such title as they would have acquired had the railroad company expressly granted to them all its right, title, and interest in the premises in controversy.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 543, 36 L. ed. 532, 535, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Toltec Ranch Co. v. Cook, 191 U. S. 532, 538, 48 L. ed. 291, 292, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166; 3 Washb. Real. Prop. 5th ed. p. 176.

The implication of a grant from the railroad company arising out of the adverse possession of the defendants in error is conclusive evidence of a voluntary abandonment on the part of the railroad company of the premises in question.

Stevens v. Norfolk, 42 Conn. 377; Livermore v. White, 74 Me. 452, 43 Am. Rep. 600; Myers v. Spooner, 55 Cal. 257, 9 Mor. Min. Rep. 519; Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630; North American Exploration Co. v. Adams, 45 C. C. A. 185, 104 Fed. 404, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 65.

The act of Congress of June 24, 1912, was equivalent to a re-entry or declaration of forfeiture or reverter upon the part of the United States of the land in controversy, because of its abandonment and non-user as a railroad right of way, and had the effect of confirming in the defendants in error the title acquired by them by adverse possession and under the patent issued by the United States to their predecessor in title on November 5, 1878.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 430, 41 L. ed. 770, 777, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551; Spokane & B. C. R. Co. v. Washington & G. N. R. Co. 219 U. S. 166, 55 L. ed. 159, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was submitted at the same time as No. 570, just decided [231 U. S. 190, ante, 179, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101]. It is ejectment for lands, part of the right of way granted to the Leavenworth, Pawnee, & Western Railroad Company by the act of 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120], to which right of way plaintiff in error (designated herein as plaintiff) is the successor. The action was brought in the district court of Arapahoe county, state of Colorado.

The sufficiency of the complaint is not questioned, and it is enough to say that it is, in legal effect, the same as in case No. 570, with only such differences as are necessary.

The answer of defendants in error (called herein defendants) set up three defenses and a counterclaim. The first answer admits the incorporation of plaintiff, and denies all other allegations of the complaint. The second defense alleges that under certain acts of Congress, subsequent to the act of 1862, and prior to the incorporation of the companies, the right of way of the companies was made 200 feet wide instead of 400 feet; that is, 100 feet from the center line of the railroad track. That the land sued for, which is in possession of the defendants, is more than 100 feet from such center line; that neither plaintiff nor any of its predecessors have been in possession of any portion thereof, and have not used the same, nor has it needed to use the same for railroad purposes. That defendants, and those under and through whom they claim title, acquired the title under and by virtue of a patent from the [208] United States, issued November 5, 1878, and various mesne conveyances, and have been in the adverse possession of all of the property described continuously since the patent was issued, which is more than the full period of seven years next before the institution of the action; have paid and caused to be paid taxes thereon, and that defendants now plead and rely upon the statute of limitations of the state of Colorado.

The third defense alleges that the right received by the corporation which was created by the act of Congress of 1862, or by its successors or assigns, was, at most, the grant of a limited fee, and made on the condition that the property should revert to the United States if it should not be appropriated and used for a railroad within a reasonable time, or should cease to be used for railroad purposes. That thereafter, before the land was used for such purposes, the right of reverter which was retained by the United States was conveyed by the United States to defendants and their grantors by a patent which was issued by the United States to the vendor of defendants in 1878. That neither plaintiff nor any of its predecessors used or occupied the land for railroad purposes or for any purposes whatever; and on account thereof lost any and all right thereto, and the property reverted to the United States and to defendants; that neither plaintiff nor any of its predecessors ever needed the property or any part thereof for railroad purposes, and can never use the same for such purposes. That on account of failure to use or occupy the land for a period which now approximates fifty years next ensuing after the approval of the act of 1862, the limited fee which may have been granted to plaintiff ceased and determined, and the property reverted to the United States and its grantees.

Digitized by Google

The counterclaim repeats some of the allegations in regard to the width of the right of way and defendants' adverse possession of the land outside of the 100 feet on [209] either side of the center of the railroad track, alleges the value of improvements made thereon by defendants at $1,500, and claims the reimbursement thereof in case of recovery by plaintiff.

Plaintiff demurred to the second and third defenses and to the counterclaim. The demurrer was sustained. The case was subsequently tried on the issues made by the complaint and the first answer thereto.

At the trial the defendants objected to any testimony being introduced, and moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that no right of way was granted to plaintiff "at the place in dispute," or no grant of right of way in excess of 100 feet on either side of the center line of plaintiff's track. The objection was overruled and defendants excepted.

It was then stipulated that witnesses would testify to the various steps in the title of plaintiff, that the railroad was constructed over the right of way described in the complaint, and that the railroad and the main track thereof are now in the same location in which they were at the time of the original construction; that the predecessors in title of plaintiff complied with all of the requirements of the various acts of Congress in the complaint mentioned, and that plaintiff is the owner of the lands, if any, conveyed to its predecessor companies under and by virtue of the said acts of Congress; that the land described in the complaint lies within 200 feet of the center of the main track of the railroad, but outside of a line of 100 feet; that the railroad is part of the railroad constructed from the Missouri river at the mouth of the Kansas river, westward to a connection with the main line of the Union Pacific, as authorized by the acts of Congress, and has been, since its construction, continuously operated as a railroad in connection with the main line of the Union Pacific at Cheyenne, Wyoming. That defendants withhold possession of the lands from plaintiff, [210] and that possession was demanded before the commencement of the action.

Judgment of nonsuit was moved on the grounds stated in the motion to dismiss; also judgment for defendants. Both motions were denied, and plaintiff was adjudged owner in fee of the lands, and that defendants had no right, title, or interest therein. Judgment was entered accordingly. The judgment was reversed by the supreme court of the state. 133 Pac. 1037.

The supreme court decided that the Kansas Pacific became vested by the acts of 1862 and 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 356, chap. 216] with title to a right of way 400 feet wide through the land, and that the Union Pacific, its successor in title, is the owner of the right of way. The court rested this conclusion on Stuart v. Union P. R. Co. 227 U. S. 342, 57 L. ed. 535, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338. It hence decided that "the determination of the court of the facts found upon the issue raised by the first defense was . . . in conformity with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States." And the supreme court also decided that the district court, in sustaining the demurrer to the second defense which pleaded the statute of limitations, followed the decision of this court, and cited Kindred v. Union P. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 112, 168 Fed. 653, 225 U. S. 582, 56 L. ed. 1216, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 267, 43 L. ed. 160, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 197 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 639, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671, to the effect that individuals could not for private purposes acquire by adverse possession, under state statutes, any portion of a right of way granted by the United States to a railroad company. "So," the court said, "it is plain that prior to June 24, 1912, an individual could not acquire title to any portion of the 400-foot right of way by the statute of limitations or adverse possession, and the judgment of the lower court on this issue was correct." But it was remarked that the act of June 24th [37 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 181], [211] though passed while the case was pending on appeal, nevertheless applied to the case, on the authority of certain cases which were cited.

Digitized by Google

The cited cases express the principle that a judgment, though not erroneous when rendered, may become so by a subsequent law. Or if an event occurs after an appeal which makes it impossible for the appellate court to enforce its decision, the case will be dismissed. United States v. The Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103, 2 L. ed. 49; New Orleans Flour Inspectors v. Glover, 160 U. S. 170, 40 L. ed. 382, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 161 U. S. 101, 40 L. ed. 632, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 492; Dinsmore v. Southern Exp. Co. 183 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 111, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45. Two of the members of the court dissented and expressed the view that as the judgment of the lower court was "in strict conformity with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, and therefore when rendered was not erroneous," it was the duty of the court to affirm it.

In deciding that the act of June 24th was controlling, the supreme court of Colorado necessarily gave retrospective operation to the act. This was error. Union P. R. Co. v. Laramie Stock Yards Co. [213 U. S. 190, ante, 179, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101].

It was contended in that case that the grant of the right of way was only a grant of the right to use; and that whenever and if not so used, or for any reason became forfeited, it would revert to the grantor. It was recognized that to enforce the forfeiture and convey the right which had reverted, some act of the United States was necessary. This condition, it was contended, was satisfied by the act of June 24th, enacted, it was further contended, under the power reserved to Congress by the acts of 1862 and 1864, to alter or amend the charters of the companies. We rejected the contention, and we said, besides, that even if the act be so regarded, its effect was to be determined by the time it was intended to operate, whether retrospectively or prospectively. What we said is applicable here. It is contended here that the [212] right of way was derived through the act of July, 1862, and that the title granted to the companies "was a fee upon limitation, and that the estate continued so long as, or while, the railroad companies continued to use the land granted for railroad purposes, and terminated ipso facto by the cessation of such use." And it is further contended that no act was necessary upon the part of the United States to work the forfeiture, or reinvest the United States with complete title to the land granted.

The bearing of the first contention we shall presently consider; the other has no foundation in the granting acts nor in the decisions interpreting them, some of which are cited above. It is opposed by the act of June 24th, which leaves the right of way as originally granted and to the extent granted in the railroad companies, except where they had theretofore conveyed parts of the same, and where parts of it shall be held by adverse possession.

It is, however, contended that if some act of the United States was necessary to effect a forfeiture of the right of way, the act of June 24, 1912, was sufficient for that purpose. If this be conceded, arguendo, and if it be also conceded that the grant of the right of way was of a limited fee, we are brought to a consideration of the effect of the act,—whether it applies to a past or a future possession; and we have decided that it applies to the latter. Union P. R. Co. v. Laramie Stock Yards Co.

This conclusion is, of course, contested by defendants in an argument which it is, however, unnecessary to answer in detail. It is asserted that the act "operates in præsenti in so far as it conveys the reversionary interest of the United States to the persons entitled to the benefit of the act, or confirms their pre-existing titles." Special emphasis is put upon the words "is claimed" of the act as necessarily intended to apply to titles claimed at the time of the passage of the act by adverse possession. "Such [213] titles," it is said, "must have been initiated prior to the enactment of the act." For that reason, it is further said, "the act cannot be said to be retrospective, because the language used simply designates the classes of persons to whom confirmatory grants are made." But these considerations are simply the result of dwelling upon the literal terms of the act. But this is obnoxious to the rule of the cases. Courts will not, as we have seen, enforce a literal interpretation when by doing so antecedent rights are affected or human conduct given a consequence it did not intend. Such a purpose the courts refuse to assign to the legislature unless compelled by language explicit and imperative. And we have pointed out that we are repelled from so doing by grave doubts of its legality as well as of its justice. These considerations need not be further expanded. Their strength has been pointed out and their sufficiency to prevail over a literal interpretation of a statute.

Digitized by Google

Judgment reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Hughes dissents.

Mr. Justice Holmes and Mr. Justice Pitney took no part in the decision.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
MARTIN V. SIDES and Walter W. Scherrer.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 213, 214.)

This case is governed by the decision in Union P. R. Co. v. Snow, ante, 184.

[No. 683.]

Submitted October 14, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court of Arapahoe County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 55 Colo. 174, 133 Pac. 1040.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. N. H. Loomis and C. C. Dorsey submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. E. I. Thayer was on the brief.

Messrs. Milton Smith and Charles R. Brock submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. W. H. Ferguson was on the brief.

For contentions of counsel, see their brief as reported in Union P. R. Co. v. Snow, ante, 184.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action in ejectment, brought by plaintiff in error, called here plaintiff, against defendants in error, here called defendants, in the district court of Arapahoe county, state of Colorado.

Except as to the description of the land the complaint is substantially the same as that in No. 682 [231 U. S. 204. ante, 184, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104], and presents the same legal rights and tities. Defendant Sides demurred to the complaint; Scherrer denied being in possession of the land and disclaimed any claim to it. The demurrer was overruled and Scherrer answered, setting up defenses which are in substance the same as in No. 682. To the defenses plaintiff filed demurrers, which were sustained. Sides elected to plead no further, and the case coming on for trial and certain facts being agreed upon as testified to, objection to the materiality of which was made, motions to dismiss and for judgment were also made and overruled. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. It was reversed by the supreme court of the state, for the reasons stated in its opinion in Snow v. Union P. R. Co. 55 Colo. 175, 133 Pac. 1037; that is, No. 682. 55 Colo. 174, 133 Pac. 1040.

This case was submitted with No. 682, involves the same questions, and is determined by its decision.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent herewith.

Mr. Justice Hughes dissents.

Mr. Justice Holmes and Mr. Justice Pitney took no part in the decision.

---

[215] THOMAS M. KENER, Administrator of Edwin Kener, Deceased, Plff. in Err.,
v.
LA GRANGE MILLS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 215-218.)

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — exemption laws — congressional adoption — bankruptcy.

Real property was not, and could not be, exempted from the existing lien a judgment by the adoption of the Georgia Constitution of 1868, with its provisions with respect to homestead exemptions, nor by the act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. 577, chap. 235, Rev. Stat. § 5045), amendatory of the bankrupt act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176), preserving exemptions under state laws, and providing that such exemptions should be valid against debts contracted before those laws, and against liens by judgment of any state court.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1543-1548; Congress, 17; Bankruptcy, 102-104, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 63.]

Argued and submitted November 13, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

NOTE.—On the application to existing judgments of statute abolishing or diminishing exemptions—see note to Laird v. Carton, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 189.

Digitized by Google

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Troup Superior Court in favor of defendant in a suit to recover an interest in real property sold under execution. Affirmed.

See same case below, 135 Ga. 730, 70 S. E. 245.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Daniel W. Rountree and Clifford L. Anderson submittted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. W. H. Terrell was on the brief:

The impairment clause is only a restriction upon the states. No provision of the Constitution prohibits Congress from passing laws impairing the obligation of contracts. On the contrary, the power to enact bankrupt laws plainly authorizes it to annul or impair the obligations of contracts. Indeed, this is the prime purpose of such laws.

Re Smith, 2 Woods, 458, 14 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 12,996; Re Jordan, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 7,515; Re Beckerford, 1 Dill. 45, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 1,209; Re Jordan, 8 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 180, Fed. Cas. No. 7,514; Re Kean, 2 Hughes, 322, 8 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 7,630; Re Smith, 8 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 12,986; Windley v. Tankard, 88 N. C. 223; Lamb v. Chamness, 84 N. C. 379; Simpson v. Houston, 97 N. C. 344, 2 Am. St. Rep. 297, 2 S. E. 651; Darling v. Berry, 4 McCrary, 470, 13 Fed. 659; Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 416, 7 L. ed. 458, 470; Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 19 L. ed. 513; Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 550, 20 L. ed. 287, 311, 110 U. S. 421, 449, 28 L. ed. 204, 215, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 28 L. ed. 279, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170, 312.

Nor was the act of March 3, 1873, inconsistent with a uniform system of bankruptcy. As against debts contracted before the adoption of the laws authorizing it, the exemption was valid; and this was true in every state, and therefore uniform.

Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 46 L. ed. 1113, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Holden v. Stratton, 198 U. S. 202, 214, 49 L. ed. 1018, 1022, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656; Thomas v. Woods, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1180, 97 C. C. A. 535, 173 Fed. 585, 19 Ann. Cas. 1080; Re Rouse H. & Co. 33 C. C. A. 356, 63 U. S. App. 570, 91 Fed. 96.

Mr. Louis Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

If the bankrupt act as amended in 1873 had undertaken to destroy the vested lien of the Tharp judgment, it would have violated the 5th Amendment.

Gilman v. Tucker, 128 N. Y. 190, 13 L.R.A. 304, 26 Am. St. Rep. 464, 28 N. E. 1040; Germania Sav. Bank v. Suspension Bridge, 159 N. Y. 362, 54 N. E. 33; Re Greene, 166 N. Y. 485, 60 N. E. 183; Merchants' Bank v. Ballou, 98 Va. 112, 44 L.R.A. 306, 81 Am. St. Rep. 715, 32 S. E. 481; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 440.

Prior to the passage of the act of March 3, 1873, this court had decided that the homestead exemption provision of the Georgia Constitution of 1868, and the laws passed thereunder, was unconstitutional as to judgments circumstanced as was the Tharp judgment, and its interpretation was accepted by the Georgia courts.

Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 212; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793; Jones v. Brandon, 48 Ga. 593; Wilson v. Brochon, 95 Fed. 82; White v. Hart, 13 Wall. 654, 20 L. ed. 688; Osborn v. Nicholson, 13 Wall. 654, 20 L. ed. 689; Chambliss v. Jordan, 50 Ga. 81; Grant v. Cosby, 51 Ga. 460; Wofford v. Gaines, 53 Ga. 485; Bush v. Lester, 55 Ga. 579; Hiley v. Bridges, 60 Ga. 375; Dixon v. Lawson, 65 Ga. 661; Shipp v. Smith, 76 Ga. 1; Dozier v. McWhorter, 113 Ga. 584, 39 S. E. 106. See also Homestead Cases, 22 Gratt. 266, 12 Am. Rep. 507.

There is no merit in the contention that the Georgia decisions to which we have referred are in contravention and disregard of the bankruptcy act in force at the time of the sale of Kener's property under the Tharp judgment and execution.

Re Dillard, 2 Hughes, 190, Fed. Cas. No. 3,912; Re Deckert, 2 Hughes, 183, Fed. Cas. No. 3,728; Re Shipman, 2 Hughes, 227, Fed. Cas. No. 12,791; Re Duerson, 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 4,117; Re Kerr, 9 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 7,729.

The lien of a judgment before bankrupt proceedings are commenced upon land set apart as exempt therein is not affected by the discharge in bankruptcy, where the judgment creditor did not prove his debt or submit it to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and the land is subject to salel on execution thereunder.

Jackson v. Allen, 30 Ark. 110; Ward v. Huhn, 16 Minn. 159, Gil. 142; Fehley v. Barr, 66 Pa. 196.

It is no defense to an action to foreclose a mortgage that the mortgaged premises were allotted to the mortgagor as a homestead by proceedings in the bankrupt court.

Brady v. Brady, 71 Ga. 71; Brown v. Hoover, 77 N. C. 40.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit to recover an interest in land sold on execution against Godfred Kener, and held by the defendant in error under that sale. The plaintiff is the representative of one of Kener's heirs. The facts are these. A judgment was recovered upon a bill of exchange against Godfred Kener in 1858, and execution issued in 1873; in 1878 he was adjudged a bankrupt, and returned the holders of the judgment among his creditors, but they did not prove their claim. In the same year this land was set aside in due form to Kener as his homestead exempted by the state Constitution of 1868 and the bankruptcy act then in force. Rev. Stat. § 5045. In June, 1879, he died, and in December, 1879, the execution was levied and this land was sold. The sale was valid unless the bankruptcy act interfered. The trial court entered judgment for the defendant, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 135 Ga. 730, 70 S. E. 245.

Digitized by Google

The bankruptcy act of 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176], as amended by the act of March 3, 1873, chap. 235, 17 Stat. at L. 577, Rev. Stat. § 5045, preserved, within a limit, exemptions under state laws, and provided that such exemptions should be valid against debts contracted before those laws, and against liens by judgment of any state court. The plaintiff bases his claim upon this act. But in Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 212, argued and decided (March 31, 1873) just after the amendment of March 3, it was held that the Georgia Constitution could not exempt property from existing liens, and that Congress could not give that Constitution greater effect. See also Re Deckert, 2 Hughes, 183, Fed. Cas. No. 3,728; Re [218] Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 560, 36 L. ed. 572, 576, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865. In Re Shipman, 2 Hughes, 227, Fed. Cas. No. 12,791, it seems to have been supposed that the act of 1873, wrongly called of 1874, was passed to meet Gunn v. Barry, in the teeth of the declaration that such an attempt would be invalid. But that was a mistake.

Of course, if the Constitution of 1868, and statutes based upon it, should be construed as not attempting to disturb then-existing liens, the act of Congress hardly would be read as purporting to give a greater scope to the state laws. The Georgia decisions since Gunn v. Barry agree that in cases like the present the lien remained. Bush v. Lester, 55 Ga. 579. Whether the result be reached by construction of the state laws, by construction of the former bankruptcy act, or on constitutional grounds, it comes to the same thing, and the judgment below was right.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, EX RELATIONE A. GOLDBERG, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS, Secretary of the Navy.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 218–222.)

United States — immunity from suit — suit against officer.

The inability to make the United States a party precludes the maintenance of an action in mandamus to require the Secretary of the Navy to deliver to the highest bidder a cruiser which, after survey, condemnation, and appraisal, had been stricken from the naval register under the act of August 5, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 296, chap. 391, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1058), § 2, and for proposals for the purchase of which the Secretary of the Navy, acting under the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. at L. 599, chap. 141, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1059), had advertised.

[For other cases, see United States, IV. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 79.]

Argued November 14, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a petition for mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Navy to deliver a government cruiser to the highest bidder. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 282.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Albert N. Eastman and Charles Poe argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Morgan H. Beach argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Davis, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for a mandamus directing the Secretary of the Navy to deliver the United States cruiser Boston to the petitioner. The petition alleges that after survey, condemnation, and appraisal the cruiser was stricken from the Naval Register under the act of August 5, 1882, NOTE.—On suit against Federal officers or agents as suit against United States—see note to Louisiana v. Garfield, 53 L. ed. U. S. 92.

As to when action against officers is deemed to be action against state—see note to Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Burr, 44 L.R.A. (N.S.) 189.

Digitized by Google

chap. 391, § 2, 22 Stat. at L. 296, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1058; that thereafter the Secretary of the Navy advertised for proposals of purchase under the act of March 3, 1883, chap. 141, 22 Stat. at L. 599, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1059; that the petitioner bid more than the appraised value, sending a certified check for the whole sum bid; that when the bids were opened on the day fixed, the petitioner's was the highest, but that the Secretary refused to deliver the vessel, and sent back the check, which the petitioner holds subject to the Secretary's order. The answer admits the facts, but sets up that the bid is not an acceptance of an offer, but is itself only an offer, subject to be accepted or not, at the discretion of the Secretary, and that the Secretary never accepted the petitioner's bid, the government having decided to lend the cruiser to the governor of Oregon for use by the naval militia of that state. The petitioner demurred, but the petition was dismissed on the ground that the discretion of the Secretary was not ended by the receipt and opening of the bids, even though they satisfied all the conditions prescribed. 37 App. D. C. 282.

We see no sufficient reason for throwing doubt upon this premise for the decision, but there is another that comes earlier in point of logic. The United States is the [222] owner, in possession of the vessel. It cannot be interfered with behind its back, and as it cannot be made a party, this suit must fail. Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 194 U. S. 601, 606, 48 L. ed. 1134, 1137, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 69, 50 L. ed. 935, 938, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Naganab v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 473, 476, 50 L. ed. 1113, 1114, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667.

Judgment affirmed.

ISIDOR STRAUS and Nathan Straus, Composing the Firm of R. H. Macy & Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 222-237.)

Error to state court — Federal question — claim under Federal statute.

1. Plaintiff's contention at the trial in a state court that an agreement between publishers and booksellers to maintain retail prices on copyrighted books not only went beyond the authority conferred in the copyright laws relied upon by defendant, but was in violation of the terms of the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), making illegal combinations in restraint of trade and tending to monopoly, presents a claim of Federal right which is necessarily denied when the highest state court affirms a judgment below in favor of defendant, so as to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, governing writs of error to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1168-1911, 1436-1445, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Monopoly — publishers and sellers — copyrighted books.

2. The copyright monopoly conferred by the Federal laws does not protect, as against condemnation under the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890, agreements between associations embracing probably 75 per cent of the book publishers and a majority of the booksellers in the United States, which operate to restrict the sale of copyrighted books to those only who will maintain the fixed net retail price, and result in almost completely destroying competition in such books at retail.

[For other cases, see Monopoly, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 19.]

Argued March 7, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York in and for the County of New York to review a judgment rendered pursuant to the mandate of the

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On validity of contract provision seeking to control price at which an article shall be resold—see note to Grogan v. Chaffee, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 395.

As to illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

On the legality under modern anti-trust acts of combinations or agreements which restrict the class of persons to whom commodities shall be sold or from whom they shall be bought—see note to Cleland v. Anderson, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 136.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of that state, which, on a third appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, which had in turn affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court at Special Term, refusing to restrain any interference with the purchase and sale of copyrighted books. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below in court of appeals, first appeal, 177 N. Y. 473, 64 L.R.A. 701, 101 Am. St. Rep. 819, 69 N. E. 1107; second appeal, 193 N. Y. 496, 86 N. E. 525; third appeal, 199 N. Y. 548, 93 N. E. 1133.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wallace Macfarlane argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edmond E. Wise, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

It is quite immaterial that the court of appeals in its several opinions does not expressly overrule plaintiff's claim under the Federal anti-trust act of July 2, 1890, or refer to that act, if by necessary implication its decision denies the asserted right of the plaintiffs in error.

Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 199, 43 L. ed. 665, 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 519, 520, 50 L. ed. 845, 850, 851, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 68, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

The plaintiffs' position is in principle quite similar to that of the plaintiff in the case of McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

That these agreements restrained trade is obvious. That they have been entered into by 75 per cent of the publishers of the United States and by a large majority of the booksellers of the United States is established. That they affected interstate commerce as well as intrastate trade, and operated to restrain trade or commerce among the several states, necessarily follows from the trial court's findings of fact.

Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

The court of appeals (177 N. Y. 473, 64 L.R.A. 701, 101 Am. St. Rep. 819, 69 N. E. 1107) in fact held that in so far as uncopyrighted books were concerned, the combination was in restraint of trade; and it requires little reasoning to show that it contains every element of illegality as to effect, intent, and method of execution condemned by this court in the latest, as well as many of the previous, decisions.

American Tobacco Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; W. W. Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 57 L. ed. 107, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 55 L. ed. 502, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The same condemnation has been passed upon similar combinations by the courts in most of the states.

Cohen v. Berlin & J. Envelope Co. 166 N. Y. 292, 59 N. E. 906; Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 164 N. Y. 401, 52 L.R.A. 262, 79 Am. St. Rep. 655, 58 N. E. 525; People v. Milk Exch. 145 N. Y. 267, 27 L.R.A. 437, 45 Am. St. Rep. 609, 39 N. E. 1062; Judd v. Harrington, 139 N. Y. 105, 34 N. E. 790; People v. Sheldon, 139 N. Y. 251, 23 L.R.A. 221, 36 Am. St. Rep. 690, 34 N. E. 785; Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 190; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Brown v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 429, 57 L.R.A. 547, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553; More v. Bennett, 140 Ill. 69, 15 L.R.A. 361, 33 Am. St. Rep. 216, 29 N. E. 888; People ex rel. McIlhany v. Chicago Live Stock Exch. 170 Ill. 556, 39 L.R.A. 373, 62 Am. St. Rep. 404, 48 N. E. 1062; Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632, 6 L.R.A. 457, 43 N. W. 1102; State v. Nebraska Distilling Co. 29 Neb. 700, 46 N. W. 155; Hawarden v. Youghisgheny & L. Coal Co. 111 Wis. 545, 55 L.R.A. 828, 87 N. W. 472; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881; Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L.R.A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14.

The state court erred in deciding that the owners of several separate copyrights are empowered to enter, by virtue of the copyright laws, into contracts or agreements or combinations between themselves concerning the supply and price of books published under their separate copyrights, which would be unlawful and contrary to the statute of the United States passed on the 2d day of July, 1890, known as "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," if such books were not copyrighted.

Digitized by Google

E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 57 L. ed. 107, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9.

The court of appeals erroneously held that the owner of a copyright has the power, by virtue of the copyright statutes, to control the ultimate retail price, and erred in deciding that the owner or proprietor of a copyright can, by virtue of the copyright statutes of the United States, after he has parted with the title to the copyrighted book, continue to control the sale or resale of such books by reason of the copyright law, in violation of the aforementioned statute of the United States, known as "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies."

Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, 52 L. ed. 1086, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Charles Scribner's Sons v. Straus, 210 U. S. 352, 52 L. ed. 1094, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735.

Mr. Stephen H. Olin argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The court has no jurisdiction to review the decision of the state courts concerning the effect of the copyright act. The plaintiffs in error claimed no title, right, privilege, or immunity under the copyright act. The defendants claimed such a right, privilege, or immunity, and the decision was in favor of their claim. The right or privilege must be personal to the plaintiff in error, and he is not entitled to a review when the right or privilege was asserted by the other party, and the decision was in favor of that party, and adverse to himself.

Missouri ex rel. Carey v. Andriano, 138 U. S. 496, 34 L. ed. 1012, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 528, 44 L. ed. 872, 874, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Jersey City & B. R. Co. v. Morgan, 160 U. S. 288, 40 L. ed. 430, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Ryan v. Thomas, 4 Wall. 603, 18 L. ed. 460; Commonwealth Bank v. Griffith, 14 Pet. 56, 10 L. ed. 352.

That a Federal statute was construed unfavorably to one of the parties to the suit is no ground for jurisdiction by this court unless such construction was not only unfavorable, but was against the right, etc., specially set up and claimed under the statute. In that case the party setting up and claiming the right under the statute, which has been denied, can obtain a review here.

Kizer v. Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. 179 U. S. 199, 201, 45 L. ed. 152, 153, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Baker v. Baldwin, 187 U. S. 61, 47 L. ed. 75, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19; Rae v. Homestead Loan & G. Co. 176 U. S. 121, 44 L. ed. 398, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Fulton v. M'Affee, 16 Pet. 149, 10 L. ed. 918; Linton v. Stanton, 12 How. 423, 13 L. ed. 1050; Strader v. Baldwin, 9 How. 261, 13 L. ed. 130; Burke v. Gaines, 19 How. 388, 15 L. ed. 655.

The plaintiffs in error did not specially set up or claim any right, privilege, or immunity under the Federal anti-trust act, as to which there was a decision adverse to the right or privilege claimed. The complaint claimed that the agreement therein recited was unlawful under the state laws and the Federal statute. The decision was that the agreement was unlawful under the state statute. Hence, the decision was not against the right claimed, although the court did not rest it upon the Federal statute. Furthermore, the right claimed under the Federal statute was not specially set up or claimed, since in the claim as made was involved a non-Federal claim made under the public policy and statutes of New York.

Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Allen v. Arguimbau, 198 U. S. 149, 49 L. ed. 990, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 366, 37 L. ed. 1111, 1112, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 34 L. ed. 683, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

The court may examine the opinions rendered in the state courts in order to ascertain the ground of the judgment of the state court.

Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 69, 41 L. ed. 72, 74, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Kreiger v. Shelby R. Co. 125 U. S. 39, 44, 31 L. ed. 675, 677, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752.

As the record shows that no Federal question was at any time specially presented to the appellate courts by the plaintiffs, so the opinions show that no such question as is raised by the assignments of error was in fact considered or decided on either of the appeals.

Straus v. American Publishers' Asso. 177 N. Y. 473, 64 L.R.A. 701, 101 Am. St. Rep.

Digitized by Google

819, 69 N. E. 1107, 193 N. Y. 496, 86 N. E. 525, 194 N. Y. 538, 87 N. E. 1127, 199 N. Y. 548, 93 N. E. 1133.

This court has therefore no jurisdiction to examine the alleged errors assigned.

Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Johnson v. Risk, 137 U. S. 300, 34 L. ed. 683, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Bachtel v. Wilson, 204 U. S. 36, 41, 51 L. ed. 357, 359, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 271, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Rogers v. Jones, 214 U. S. 196, 53 L. ed. 965, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Sauer v. New York, 206 U. S. 536, 546, 51 L. ed. 1176, 1181, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 33 L. ed. 442, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 53 L. ed. 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Appleby v. Buffalo, 221 U. S. 524, 55 L. ed. 838, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699.

The claim set up in the assignments of error was not by adequate specification presented to the appellate division or the court of appeals, and therefore this court has no jurisdiction. Assignments of error in this court cannot enlarge the right of review.

Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McDonald, 214 U. S. 191, 193, 53 L. ed. 963, 964, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546.

The Federal question must have been brought before the highest state court "specially," that is, unmistakably; and the right of this court to examine the judgment must arise from averments so distinct and positive as to place it beyond question that the party bringing a case here intended to assert a Federal right.

F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 655, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 248, 46 L. ed. 171, 176, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

So far as the record discloses, there was neither authority cited nor argument made in the court of appeals in support of the right now claimed. Hence there is no jurisdiction in this court.

Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

Where the question has been treated as one of local law, the mere fact that suit was brought under a Federal statute does not necessarily involve a Federal question so as to authorize a writ of error from this court.

McMillen v. Ferrum Min. Co. 197 U. S. 343, 49 L. ed. 784, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

No inference of the denial of the Federal question raised in the assignments of error can be based upon the decision itself, because it might have rested upon other grounds broad enough to sustain it. For example: The state courts might have disclaimed jurisdiction to enforce the Federal anti-monopoly act. For such a course authority may be found.

Locker v. American Tobacco Co. 121 App. Div. 443, 106 N. Y. Supp. 115, affirmed in 195 N. Y. 565, 88 N. E. 289; State ex rel. Star Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 159 Mo. 410, 51 L.R.A. 170, 81 Am. St. Rep. 368, 60 S. W. 91.

Or the state courts might have refused to enforce the Federal anti-monopoly act in a suit in equity for an injunction, not brought by the United States. For this there is authority.

Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 48 L. ed. 870, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Houston Coal & Coke Co. v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 171 Fed. 723; Blindell v. Hagan, 54 Fed. 40; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co. 30 C. C. A. 142, 52 U. S. App. 732, 86 Fed. 407; Southern Indiana Exp. Co. v. United States Exp. Co. 88 Fed. 659, 35 C. C. A. 172, 92 Fed. 1022; National Fireproofing Co. v. Mason Builders' Asso. 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 148, 94 C. C. A. 535, 169 Fed. 259.

Or the state courts, having granted an injunction and damages under the state law, might have refused, in the same action, to apply the Federal statute, which has different provisions, relates to different subject-matter, and awards different relief, and especially when the claim under it was merely cumulative. For such a refusal there would be abundant and obvious argument of convenience. Or the state courts might have refused to make a finding that the defendants' acts restrained interstate commerce because the complaint contained no allegation to that effect, unless such an allegation could be inferentially deduced from allegations framed to bring the case within the state statute.

Unless a decision upon a Federal question was necessary to the judgment, or in fact was made the ground of it, the writ of error must be dismissed. And even when an erroneous decision upon a Federal question is made a ground, if the judgment also is supported upon another which is adequate by itself, and which contains no Federal question, the same result must follow as a general rule.

Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat.

Digitized by Google

Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 275, 52 L. ed. 201, 203, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Bachtel v. Wilson, 204 U. S. 36, 41, 51 L. ed. 357, 359, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wilson, 213 U. S. 52, 53, 53 L. ed. 693, 694, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Bonner v. Gorman, 213 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 709, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 483; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

Mr. John G. Milburn also argued the cause, and, with Mr. Stephen H. Olin, filed a brief for defendants in error:

It is not enough that there may be somewhere, hidden in the record, a question which, if raised, would be of a Federal nature.

Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 199, 43 L. ed. 665, 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904.

There is nothing to prevent a party from waiving a Federal right of this character if he chooses to do so, either in express terms or as a necessary implication from his manner of proceeding in the cause.

Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 88, 49 L. ed. 394, 397, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

It was not error to dismiss the complaint as to copyrighted books because—

(a) The plaintiffs have not come into a court of equity with clean hands.

Michigan Pipe Co. v. Fremont Ditch, P. L. & Reservoir Co. 49 C. C. A. 324, 111 Fed. 284; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 398, 404; Manhattan Medicine Co. v. Wood, 108 U. S. 218, 227, 27 L. ed. 706, 709, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Comstock v. Johnson, 46 N. Y. 615; Fetridge v. Wells, 4 Abb. Pr. 144, 13 How. Pr. 388; Toledo Computing Scale Co. v. Computing Scale Co. 74 C. C. A. 89, 142 Fed. 919; 1 Eddy, Combinations, § 329; Message of the President to Congress, Dec. 5th 1911; Straus v. American Publishers' Asso. 177 N. Y. 473, 64 L.R.A. 701, 101 Am. St. Rep. 819, 69 N. E. 1107; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 14, 62 L.R.A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136; Clinton E. Worden & Co. v. California Fig Syrup Co. 187 U. S. 516, 528, 530, 47 L. ed. 282, 288, 289, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Uri v. Hirsch, 123 Fed. 578.

(b) It appears that the plaintiffs have suffered no actionable damage from the acts complained of.

Verplanck v. Van Buren, 76 N. Y. 249; Central Coal & Coke Co. v. Hartman, 49 C. C. A. 244, 111 Fed. 96; The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 41 L. ed. 937, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; 1 Sedgw. Damages, §§ 143, 202; Authors & Newspapers Asso. v. O'Gorman Co. 147 Fed. 616; Warren v. Stoddart, 105 U. S. 224, 26 L. ed. 1117; Parsons v. Sutton, 66 N. Y. 92; Lawrence v. Porter, 26 L.R.A. 167, 11 C. C. A. 27, 22 U. S. App. 483, 63 Fed. 62; Hamilton v. McPherson, 28 N. Y. 76, 84 Am. Dec. 330; Rochester Lantern Co. v. Stiles & P. Press Co. 135 N. Y. 217, 31 N. E. 1018; Brown v. Weir, 95 App. Div. 78, 88 N. Y. Supp. 479; Milton v. Hudson River S. B. Co. 37 N. Y. 214; Ashley v. Rocky Mountain Bell Teleph. Co. 25 Mont. 286, 64 Pac. 765; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Sullivan Timber Co. 138 Ala. 379, 35 So. 327; Scherrer v. Baltzer, 84 Ill. App. 126; French v. Vining, 102 Mass. 132, 3 Am. Rep. 440; Rudell v. Grand Rapids Cold-Storage Co. 136 Mich. 528, 99 N. W. 756, 16 Am. Neg. Rep. 380; Vencill v. Quincey, P. & K. C. R. Co. 132 Mo. App. 722, 112 S. W. 1030; Dobbins v. Duquid, 65 Ill. 464; Joseph v. Sulzberger, 136 App. Div. 508, 121 N. Y. Supp. 73; Swift & Co. v. Johnson, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1161, 71 C. C. A. 619, 138 Fed. 867.

Notwithstanding the Federal anti-trust act, it is lawful for a publisher when selling, at wholesale, books copyrighted by him, to fix, by agreement with the purchasing bookseller, the retail price at which such copyrighted books shall be sold during a period of one year.

E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 91–93, 46 L. ed. 1058, 1068–1070, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Henry v. A. B. Dick Co. 224 U. S. 1, 31, 39, 43–47, 56 L. ed. 645, 657, 660, 662, 663, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424; National Phonograph Co. v. Schlegel, 64 C. C. A. 594, 128 Fed. 733; Robinson, Patents, § 824; Edison Phonograph Co. v. Kaufmann, 105 Fed. 960; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartmann, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 24; Edison Phonograph Co. v. Pike, 116 Fed. 863; Drone, Copyright, 365, 383, 387–399, 433, 467; Story v. Holcombe, 4 McLean, 306, Fed. Cas. No. 13,497; Macgillivray, Copyright, 281, 282; Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 617, 32 L. ed. 547, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Reed v. Holliday, 19 Fed. 325; List Pub. Co. v. Keller, 30 Fed. 772; Gilmore v. Anderson, 38 Fed. 846; Harper & Bros. v. Donohue, 144 Fed. 491; West Pub. Co. v. Lawyers' Co-op. Pub. Co. 25 L.R.A. 441, 64 Fed. 360; Harper v. Ranous, 67 Fed. 904; Daly v. Webster, 4 C. C. A. 10, 1 U. S. App. 573, 56 Fed. 483; Ogilvie v. G. & C. Merriam Co. 149 Fed. 858; Doan v. American Book Co. 45 C. C. A. 42, 105 Fed. 772; Murphy v. Christian Press Asso. Pub. Co. 38 App. Div. 430, 56 N. Y. Supp. 597; Parton v. Prang, 3 Cliff. 537, Fed. Cas. No. 10,784; Hudson v. Patten, 1 Root, 133; Aronson v. Baker, 43 N. J. Eq.

Digitized by Google

369, 12 Atl. 177; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 19, 62 L.R.A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136; Cooper v. Stephens [1895] 1 Ch. 567, 64 L. J. Ch. N. S. 403, 43 Week. Rep. 444, 72 L. T. N. S. 390, 13 Reports, 444; Marshall v. Bull, 85 L. T. N. S. 77, 17 Times L. R. 684; Patterson v. J. S. Ogilvie Pub. Co. 119 Fed. 453; Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How. 447, 15 L. ed. 155; Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 405, 55 L. ed. 502, 517, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The agreement of the American Publishers' Association was not in violation of the Sherman act.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 58, 55 L. ed. 619, 644, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; Straus v. American Publishers' Asso. 177 N. Y. 477, 64 L.R.A. 701, 101 Am. St. Rep. 819, 69 N. E. 1107; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 1, 62 L.R.A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136; United States v. John Reardon & Sons Co. 191 Fed. 454; Fonotipia Limited v. Bradley, 171 Fed. 951; Heim v. New York Stock Exch. 64 Misc. 531, 118 N. Y. Supp. 591; American Live Stock Commission Co. v. Chicago Live Stock Exch. 143 Ill. 210, 18 L.R.A. 190, 36 Am. St. Rep. 385, 32 N. E. 274.

[229] Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to review a judgment of the supreme court of the state of New York, rendered on remittitur from the court of appeals, refusing to grant to the plaintiffs in error an injunction restraining any interference with their purchase and sale of copyrighted books, and damages, the defendants acting under an agreement alleged to be violative of the laws of New York and the Sherman anti-trust act (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200).

The suit originated in a bill filed in the supreme court of the state of New York for New York county, in which the plaintiffs in error alleged that they conducted a department store in New York city, a large department of which was devoted to books, magazines, and pamphlets; that, because of their methods of business, they had been able to undersell other retail book stores; that the defendants in error, through the American Publishers' Association and the American Booksellers' Association, and by means of resolutions and agreements, with the co-operation of the Associations and their members, and by the use of various practices and methods, to the end that books should be sold to the booksellers only who would maintain the retail price upon net copyrighted books for one year, and who would not sell books to anyone who would cut such prices, had restrained and prevented competition in the state of New York and throughout all of the United States in the supply and price of books, and that the business of the plaintiffs in error had been seriously affected; and they prayed that the combination and agreements be declared unlawful, and that defendants be enjoined from acting thereunder or accomplishing the purposes thereof, and for damages. A demurrer having been interposed to the complaint and sustained by the court at special term, and the interlocutory judgment [230] there entered having been reversed upon appeal to the appellate division of the first department, the court of appeals, permission having been granted to appeal and the question certified, affirmed the decision, and held that, so far as the bill related to copyrighted books, the demurrer was good; but that as to uncopyrighted books, the complaint stated facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. 177 N. Y. 473, 64 L.R.A. 701, 101 Am. St. Rep. 819, 69 N. E. 1107.

Amended answers having been filed, upon trial to the court without a jury, the court made findings of fact from which it appears that the material allegations of the complaint are true, as above set forth, and further, that about April 1, 1904, and after the decision of the court of appeals reported in 177 N. Y., the Associations amended their resolutions and agreements so as to restrict the application and operation thereof to copyrighted books only; that about January 19, 1907, the Publishers' Association revoked all its former resolutions and adopted a new resolution, but that the Associations had continued the same course as to copyrighted books as was followed before the passage of such resolution. The court concluded that the resolutions and agreements, so far as they related to uncopyrighted books, were unlawful and contrary to the laws of New York, and to that extent granted relief by way of injunction and damages; but held that as to copyrighted books, the agreements, resolutions, and acts of the defendants were not unlawful, and entered an interlocutory judgment accordingly; and in its opinion the court stated that the former decision of the court of appeals in the case (177 N. Y. 473) was controlling. Plaintiffs in error excepted to the conclusions of law made by the court, restricting the illegality of the combinations to uncopyrighted books, and requested that certain conclusions be made, and excepted to the refusal to find the conclusions submitted by them.

Digitized by Google

From that part of the interlocutory judgment denying [231] relief as to copyrighted books, the plaintiffs in error appealed to the appellate division, which, also upon the authority of 177 N. Y. 473, affirmed the interlocutory judgment, and judgment of affirmance was entered in the supreme court; and, with permission, an appeal was taken to the court of appeals, which answered in the negative the question certified by the appellate division as to whether plaintiffs in error, in so far as copyrighted books were concerned, were entitled to relief, adhering to its previous decision (177 N. Y. 473). 193 N. Y. 496, 86 N. E. 525. Judgment was so entered on remittitur to the supreme court. The report of the referee appointed to ascertain the amount of the damages sustained by the plaintiffs in error in the sale of uncopyrighted books having been filed and approved, final judgment was entered in the supreme court, granting an injunction and damages as to uncopyrighted books only, and upon appeal to the court of appeals that court affirmed the final judgment (199 N. Y. 548, 93 N. E. 1133) and remitted the case to the supreme court. Judgment on remittitur was accordingly entered, and this writ of error sued out to review that judgment.

In this court a motion was made to dismiss the writ of error upon the ground that it presents no Federal question so saved and brought here as to permit a review of such question. When the case was before the court of appeals, upon demurrer to the complaint (177 N. Y. 473), that court held that the agreement, as to copyrighted books, was not illegal, because of the monopoly granted to the holder of a copyright under the statutes of the United States. The court held that the agreement, as to uncopyrighted books, however, was in violation of the so-called anti-trust law of New York, chapter 690, Laws of 1899, making contracts, agreements, etc., creating monopoly, or restraining or preventing competition in the supply or price of articles or commodities void as against public policy. Subsequently the agreement was modified so as [232] to apply to copyrighted books only, and findings of fact were specifically made upon which the case again went to the court of appeals of New York upon the certified question: "Are the plaintiffs, under the findings of fact contained in the decision in this case, entitled, in so far as copyrighted books are concerned, to the relief demanded in the complaint, or to any relief as against the defendants in this case?" Upon the record the court of appeals by a majority adhered to its former decision, notwithstanding the decision of Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, 52 L. ed. 1086, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, which had in the meantime been decided by this court, and held that, as the object of the copyright and patent statutes was to give monopolies, contracts made by the owners of copyrights to secure the fullest protection in the enjoyment of their monopolies would not be condemned by the courts as being in unlawful restraint of trade; at least, not until the Supreme Court of the United States had pronounced differently (193 N. Y. 496). Three of the justices dissented upon the ground that the agreement was clearly one in restraint of trade, as they had theretofore held, and that the decision of this court in Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, supra, had so construed the copyright act as to limit the right of a copyright holder to the sale of copyrighted works, and did not have the effect to protect such monopolistic agreements as were shown in the present case. As to uncopyrighted books, the views theretofore expressed were maintained by the court, and upon remittitur judgment was entered granting injunction and damages as to such books.

An inspection of the record shows that before the case went to the court of appeals for decision the second time upon the facts found in the lower court, the following conclusions of law were specifically requested, covering the effect of the Sherman anti-trust act as to copyrighted books dealt with in interstate commerce, as was found to be established by the facts in the present case:

[233] "VII. That such resolutions and agreements purporting to restrict the effect of the combination, arrangement, or contracts to copyrighted books likewise affect an article of interstate commerce, and was unlawful and contrary to the aforementioned statute [the Sherman anti-trust act] of the United States as being in restraint to interstate commerce and tending to create a monopoly."

"IX. That the owners of several separate copyrights are not empowered to enter into any contract or agreement or combination between themselves concerning the supply and price of books published under their separate copyrights which would be unlawful and contrary to the statutes of the United States against combinations in restraint of trade or for the purpose of creating a monopoly, if entered into with reference to the supply or price of uncopyrighted books."

Digitized by Google

It is thus apparent that, when the defendants below set up the copyright statute of the United States as an authority for the agreement of the character here in question, the plaintiffs contended that such agreement was not only beyond the authority conferred in the copyright act, but was in violation of the terms of the Sherman anti-trust law, making illegal combinations in restraint of trade and tending to monopoly. This contention was in terms denied by the lower court, and the decision upon the facts found went to the court of appeals with the result which we have stated. The contention thus made as to the effect of the Sherman anti-trust act when read in connection with the copyright act of the United States presented a question of a Federal character to the state courts, which claim of Federal right was necessarily denied in the decision of the court of appeals, affirming the judgment of the court below. One who sets up a Federal statute as giving immunity from a judgment against him, which claim is denied by the decision of a state court, may bring the case here for review under § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), [234] now § 237 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227]. Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 229 U. S. 265, 57 L. ed. 1179, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 858. The motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction must therefore be overruled.

This court, in the case of Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, supra, held that the copyright act did not grant the right to fix a limitation upon prices of books at subsequent sales to purchasers from retailers by notice of price limitation inscribed upon the book, and, construing the copyright act, held that, in conferring the right to vend a book, it did not intend to confer upon the holder of the copyright any further right after he had exercised the right to vend secured to him by the act.

In the case of Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. United States, 226 U. S. 20, 57 L. ed. 107, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9, this court had under consideration the effect of the patent statute upon agreements found to be unlawful under the Sherman law, and the agreements condemned were held not to be protected as within the patent monopoly conferred by the statute. Replying to the contention as to the protection which the patent law gave to enter into such agreements, this court said (p. 49):

"Rights conferred by patents are indeed very definite and extensive, but they do not give any more than other rights an universal license against positive prohibitions. The Sherman law is a limitation of rights, —rights which may be pushed to evil consequences, and therefore restrained."

So, in the present case, it cannot be successfully contended that the monopoly of a copyright is in this respect any more extensive than that secured under the patent law. No more than the patent statute was the copyright act intended to authorize agreements in unlawful restraint of trade and tending to monopoly, in violation of the specific terms of the Sherman law, which is broadly designed [235] to reach all combinations in unlawful restraint of trade, and tending, because of the agreements or combinations entered into, to build up and perpetuate monopolies.

From the finding of facts upon which the court certified the question decided to the court of appeals, after the attempted reformation in view of the first decision of that court, it appears that the Publishers' Association was composed of probably 75 per cent of the publishers of copyrighted and uncopyrighted books in the United States, and that the Booksellers' Association included a majority of the booksellers throughout the United States; that the Associations adopted resolutions and made agreements obligating their members to sell copyrighted books only to those who would maintain the retail price of such net copyrighted books, and, to that end, that the Associations combined and co-operated with the effect that competition in such books at retail was almost completely destroyed. The findings further show that the Associations employed various methods of ascertaining whether prices of net copyrighted books were cut and whether there was competition in the sale thereof at retail, and issued cut-off lists, so-called, directing the discontinuance of the sale of such books to offenders, and that the plaintiffs in error, who had failed to maintain net prices upon copyrighted books, had been put upon the cut-off lists, and were unable to secure a supply of such books in the ordinary course of business. It further appears that in some instances dealers who had supplied the plaintiffs in error were wholly ruined and driven out of business; that the Booksellers' Association widely circulated the names of such dealers, and warned others to avoid their fate, and that various circulars were issued to the trade at large by both Associations, warning all persons against dealing with the plaintiffs in error or other so-called price-cutters; that after the reformation of the resolutions and agreements in 1904, the Associations and [236] their members continued the same methods as to ascertaining the supply of copyrighted books of the plaintiffs in error, as to cut-off lists and circulars to the trade, and that, although in 1907 the resolution of the Publishers' Association was modified so that the "agreement" became a "recommendation," the cut-off lists were still issued, with plaintiff's name thereon, and that the dealers still refused to supply plaintiffs in error with books of any kind. And it also appears from the finding of facts that the members of the Associations resided in and carried on the business of selling books in many different states, and purchased books from persons in many states other than the one in which they resided and did business; and that the rules, regulations, and agreements of the Associations were enforced against all publishers and dealers in books throughout the United States, whether they were members of either Association or not, and whether they purchased books in one state for transportation and delivery in another, or for delivery in the state where purchased.

Digitized by Google

We agree with the court of appeals in its characterization of the agreement involved in this case, about which there seems to have been no difference of opinion, except as to the supposed protection of the copyright act. It manifestly went beyond any fair and legal agreement to protect prices and trade as among the parties thereto, and prevented, as the court of appeals said, when dealing with uncopyrighted books, the sale of books of any kind, at any price, to those who were condemned by the terms of the agreement, and with whom dealings were practically prohibited. We conclude, therefore, that the court of appeals erred in holding that the agreement was justified by the copyright act, and was not within the denunciation of the Sherman act, and in denying, for that reason alone, the right of the plaintiffs in error to recover under the state act as to copyrighted books.

[237] This view of the case renders it unnecessary to decide whether an original action can be maintained in the state courts, seeking an injunction, and to recover damages under the Sherman law.

As the Federal question, made in the manner which we have stated, was, in our view, wrongly decided, and such decision was the basis of the judgment in the state court, the judgment of that court must be reversed. Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 634, 22 L. ed. 429, 443.

Judgment reversed and case remanded to the state court whence it came for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES FOR THE BENEFIT OF FRANK P. BARTLETT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 237-244.)

Bonds — of public contractor — extent of obligation — labor and materials.

1. The work of quarrying the stone and transporting it to the place of building a breakwater for the Federal government is within the obligations of the bond of the contractor for the construction of the breakwater, executed pursuant to the act of August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523), conditioned for the prompt payment by him to all persons supplying him with labor or materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in his contract.

[For other cases, see Bonds, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Assignment — what constitutes.

2. The practice of an employer, consented to by the employees, to deduct from their wages and credit the superintendent's account with the amount of advances made by him to such workmen, amounts, to the extent of such deductions as are approved by the employees, to an assignment to the superintendent of their wage claims.

[For other cases, see Assignment, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bond — of public contractor — excessive demands.

3. Claiming an excessive amount under the bond of a public contractor, given conformably to the act of August 13, 1894, to protect laborers and materialmen, does not defeat the right to enforce the bond for the amount fairly due, where the excessive demand was not wilfully or intentionally made.

[For other cases, see Bonds, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Laches — suit on bond of public contractor.

4. A delay of upwards of five years in bringing suit on the bond of a public contractor, given conformably to the act of August 13, 1894, for the protection of laborers and materialmen, during which time the contractor became insolvent, is not such laches as will defeat the suit, although

---

Note.—On the nature of labor or materials which will support an action upon a contractor's bond—see note to Standard Boiler Works v. National Surety Co. 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 162.

As to laches as a defense—see notes to Middletown v. Newport Hospital, 1 L.R.A. 191; Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. 8 L.R.A. 248; Coffey v. Emigh, 10 L.R.A. 125; Pratt v. Carroll, 3 L. ed. U. S. 627; Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720; and Abraham v. Ordway, 39 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

Digitized by Google

coupled with want of previous demand or notice to the surety.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 50.]

Argued November 6 and 7, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, in favor of plaintiff in an action upon the bond of a public contractor. Affirmed.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 71, 189 Fed. 339.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

The United States, for the benefit of Frank P. Bartlett, brought suit in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York against the plaintiff in error, as surety upon a bond given pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523), to the effect that any person or persons contracting with the government for the prosecution of public work should be required to furnish a bond conditioned that the contractor or contractors would "promptly make payments to all persons supplying him or them labor and materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract." Upon trial a verdict was rendered in his favor, and judgment entered accordingly. The circuit court of appeals for the second circuit affirmed the judgment (111 C. C. A. 71, 189 Fed. 339), and this writ of error is brought to review its judgment.

The record shows: The United States government contracted with one Donovan on February 18, 1903, for the construction of a breakwater off Point Judith, Rhode Island, it being provided in the contract that he should be "responsible for and pay all liabilities incurred in the prosecution of the work for labor and material." Donovan executed a bond containing the obligation required by the act, with the plaintiff in error as surety. Donovan was associated with Hughes & Bangs, and it was agreed that they should perform the contract, and that he would turn over the government's estimates to them, this fact being known to the plaintiff in error.

An arrangement was made between Hughes Brothers & [239] Bangs and Bartlett that he should engage the labor, open the quarry of the former, located at Sachems Head, Connecticut, about 50 miles from the breakwater, and superintend the furnishing of stone for the construction of the breakwater. Bartlett was also to maintain a commissary at the quarry from which the men might be supplied with provisions and merchandise, an account to be kept of the articles purchased, and, after approval by the men, forwarded to the office of Hughes Brothers & Bangs, who would deduct the amount from the wages of the laborers, this practice being with their consent, and credit Bartlett's account.

The quarry was operated, labor being employed in various ways, from clearing the surface preparatory to blasting to loading the stone on scows, and the stone was transported to the breakwater and there deposited according to the direction of a government inspector. All, save the inspector and a few of the more skilled workmen, were provided for at the commissary, and, under the arrangement described, the amount of their purchases was deducted from their wages by Hughes Brothers & Bangs. Separate account was kept of the men who were actually employed at the breakwater, for the reason that Bartlett had to wait for them to come back to procure their approval of his charges, before he could send in his statement to Hughes Brothers & Bangs.

The contract was completed November 8, 1903, and on December 22, 1903, the last retained percentage of $8,956.44 was paid by the United States. Hughes Brothers & Bangs became insolvent in 1907 or 1908. Suit on the bond was begun June 4, 1909.

Mr. Emanuel J. Myers argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Leonidas Dennis and Gordon S. P. Kleeberg, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Neither the act of Congress nor the terms of the bond warrant a recovery for preparation for the performance of the contract.

City Trust, S. D. & Surety Co. v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 397, 147 Fed. 157; United States use of Sabine & E. T. R. Co. v. Hyatt, 34 C. C. A. 445, 63 U. S. App. 767, 92 Fed. 442; United States use of Thomas Laughlin Co. v. Morgan, 111 Fed. 484; United States use of Sica v. Kimpland, 93 Fed. 406; United States ex rel. McAllister v. Fidelity & D. Co. 86 App. Div. 478, 83 N. Y. Supp. 752; Philadelphia v. Malone, 214 Pa. 95, 63 Atl. 539; Schaghticoke Powder Co. v. Greenwich & J. R. Co. 183 N. Y. 306, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 288, 111 Am. St. Rep. 751, 76 N. E. 153, 5 Ann. Cas. 443; Troy Public Works Co. v. Yonkers, 207 N. Y. 81, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 311, 100 N. E. 700; Kennedy v. Com. 182 Mass. 480, 65 N. E. 828.

No assignment of the wages to be thereafter earned was proved sufficient to sustain a recovery in an action at law, but the transaction at most constituted only an equitable assignment, enforceable only in equity, and cognizable at law only after it had been legally completed or established.

Digitized by Google

Ridings v. Johnson, 128 U. S. 212, 217, 32 L. ed. 401, 402, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 84 C. C. A. 603, 157 Fed. 159, 13 Ann. Cas. 752; Levi v. Mathews, 76 C. C. A. 122, 145 Fed. 154; Re Black, 138 App. Div. 564, 123 N. Y. Supp. 371; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 136, 23 N. E. 475; Union Trust Co. v. Bulkeley, 80 C. C. A. 328, 150 Fed. 514.

The contractor's bond is a substitute under the act of Congress for a mechanics' lien secured by a statute to laborers and materialmen.

Title Guaranty & T. Co. v. Puget Sound Engine Works, 89 C. C. A. 618, 163 Fed. 174; Title Guaranty & T. Co. v. Crane Co. 219 U. S. 34, 55 L. ed. 77, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; United States v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. 218 U. S. 452, 471, 54 L. ed. 1107, 1114, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; United States ex rel. McAllister v. Fidelity & D. Co. 86 App. Div. 479, 83 N. Y. Supp. 752; Kennedy v. Com. 182 Mass. 481, 65 N. E. 828.

A claim of lien for a wilfully exaggerated and unconscionable amount cannot be enforced against the owner even for the actual amount that may be due.

Lane & B. Co. v. Jones, 79 Ala. 163; Camden Iron Works v. Camden, 60 N. J. Eq. 214, 47 Atl. 220; Uthoff v. Gerhard, 42 Mo. App. 256; Springer Land Asso. v. Ford, 168 U. S. 513, 42 L. ed. 562, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Marsh v. Mick, 159 Ill. App. 407; Stubbs v. Clarinda, C. S. & S. W. R. Co. 62 Iowa, 280, 17 N. W. 530, 65 Iowa, 513, 22 N. W. 654; J. E. Greilick Co. v. Taylor, 143 Mich. 704, 107 N. W. 712; Griff v. Clark, 155 Mich. 611, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 305, 130 Am. St. Rep. 582, 119 N. W. 1076; State ex rel. Connors v. Shelton, 238 Mo. 291, 142 S. W. 417; Lynch v. Cronan, 6 Gray, 531; Jones v. Keen, 115 Mass. 171; McPherson v. Walton, 42 N. J. Eq. 282, 11 Atl. 21; Reeve v. Elmendorf, 38 N. J. L. 125; Romanik v. Rapoport, 148 App. Div. 691, 132 N. Y. Supp. 892; Nicolai Bros. Co. v. Van Fridagh, 23 Or. 149, 31 Pac. 288; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Keenan, 15 S. D. 377, 89 N. W. 1009; Robinson v. Brooks, 31 Wash. 60, 71 Pac. 721.

The claim made against the surety is so gross, so exorbitant, and so unconscionable as to defeat any and all right of recovery.

Industrial & General Trust v. Tod, 180 N. Y. 225, 73 N. E. 7; Aeschlimann v. Presbyterian Hospital, 165 N. Y. 302, 80 Am. St. Rep. 723, 59 N. E. 148; Equitable Sav. & L. Asso. v. Hewitt, 55 Or. 338, 106 Pac. 447.

Where the items for which a lien can be claimed are inextricably blended and intermingled with items for which no right or lien can be urged, the action cannot be maintained.

United States use of Rockland Lake Trap Rock Co. v. Conkling, 68 C. C. A. 220, 135 Fed. 512; Schulenburg & B. Lumber Co. v. Strimple, 33 Mo. App. 160.

The creditor's gross laches and delay in presenting his claim against the surety, followed by the withdrawal of retained percentages and the insolvency of the principal, bars recovery.

United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 416, 426, 48 L. ed. 242, 246, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States use of Heise v. American Bonding & T. Co. 89 Fed. 924.

The admissions and declarations of Hughes Brothers & Bangs, who were subcontractors of the principal in the bond, were inadmissible and incompetent as against the surety.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 187, 16th ed. note 1; Hatch v. Elkins, 65 N. Y. 496; Rae v. Beach, 76 N. Y. 168; Wheeler v. State, 9 Heisk. 393; White v. German Nat. Bank, 9 Heisk. 475; Bocard v. State, 79 Ind. 270; Knott v. Peterson, 125 Iowa, 407, 101 N. W. 173; Lee v. Brown, 21 Kan. 458; Howe Mach. Co. v. Farrington, 16 Hun, 591; Ayer v. Getty, 46 Hun, 288.

Both at law and in equity a claimant will not be heard to allege that he was ignorant of payments made to him, unless the burden of proof cast upon him of establishing such ignorance is fairly met.

Lynch v. Cronan, 6 Gray, 531; McPherson v. Walton, 42 N. J. Eq. 282, 11 Atl. 21; Gibbs v. Hanchette, 90 Mich. 657, 51 N. W. 691; Jones v. Keen, 115 Mass. 170.

Messrs. Edward W. Norris and Horace L. Cheyney argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry B. Hammond, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The surety company is liable, under its bond, for the wages of the laborers who were employed in the quarry and in all other work necessary for the complete performance of the contract of Donovan with the government.

Title Guaranty & T. Co. v. Puget Sound Engine Works, 89 C. C. A. 618, 163 Fed. 168, affirmed in 219 U. S. 24, 55 L. ed. 72, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 197, 50 L. ed. 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; American Surety Co. v. Lawrenceville Cement Co. 110 Fed. 717; Title Guaranty &

Digitized by Google

T. Co. v. Crane, 219 U. S. 34, 55 L. ed. 77, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

The laborers made complete legal assignments of their wages claims to Bartlett.

Re Black, 138 App. Div. 562, 123 N. Y. Supp. 371.

Bartlett was not guilty of fraud upon the Surety Company by bringing suit for more than was found by the jury to be due to him.

Pioneer Min. Co. v. Delamotte, 108 C. C. A. 90, 185 Fed. 752; Schmulbach v. Caldwell, 115 C. C. A. 650, 196 Fed. 28; Ringle v. Wallace Iron Works, 149 N. Y. 439, 44 N. E. 175.

After making the foregoing statement, Mr. Justice Day delivered the memorandum opinion of the court:

The nature of liability upon bonds given in pursuance of the act of Congress has been the subject of frequent consideration in this court, and the former discussions and conclusions need not be repeated here. United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden [243] Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 427, 48 L. ed. 247, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 197, 50 L. ed. 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Mankin v. United States, 215 U. S. 533, 54 L. ed. 315, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

The first contention of the plaintiff in error is that the work done at the quarry and the hauling and delivering of stone at the breakwater, or, at least, certain parts of such work, are not within the terms of the contract and bond, as work done or material furnished in the prosecution of the work provided for in the contract. This contention was rejected by the court below, and we think properly. The object of the contract was to put the stone in place, much of it being merely dropped into the water, with a view to the construction of the breakwater. To accomplish this purpose it was, of course, necessary to have the material taken from the quarry, using tools and labor for that purpose, and transported to the location of the breakwater, and there deposited. This material could not be had immediately at the breakwater, and bids were required to show samples of stone and names and locations of quarries to be used as the source of supply. The work involved in the claim here made was all necessary to the performance of the contract, and in our view comes clearly within the class of labor accounts the satisfaction of which it was the purpose of the act of Congress to secure by a proper bond.

It is next contended that the laborers had not assigned their claims to Bartlett in such way as to give him any more than an equitable right thereto, and had not clothed him with the legal right to maintain an action at law upon the bond. But we think that the testimony discloses that so much of the laborers' wages as were necessary to satisfy Bartlett's advances were assigned to him with their consent, and deductions to that extent made from such wages with their approval in such wise as to consummate the assignment.

It is next urged that in making the claim for an excessive [244] amount there was such gross fraud that no recovery can be had in the case. It is sought to bring this contention within that class of cases which have held that mechanics' liens, when wilfully and intentionally made, for an amount in excess of that fairly due, cannot be enforced for any sum. We do not think the record displays a case of that character. It appears that some of the books of Bartlett, left in a building at the quarry, had been destroyed, and that efforts were made to obtain the amount of payments from other sources. At the trial it appeared that the credits to be made upon the account were contained upon certain cards which were in the possession of counsel for the plaintiff in error. Upon production at the trial they were admitted and accepted as containing proper credits to be made upon the account, and the judge charged the jury that the credits shown on the cards should be made the basis of calculations by the jury, if they found, under the facts shown, that any statement of the account was required, and the verdict was rendered accordingly.

As to the contention that the suit of defendant in error, in view of the delay in bringing it and want of previous demand or notice to the surety, shows gross laches, we agree with the circuit court of appeals that the record does not disclose any such laches or change of relation affecting the rights of the surety as would relieve it of liability. Nor do we think there was such confusion of accounts or error in the admission of testimony as to require a reversal.

It therefore follows that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, affirming the judgment of the Circuit Court, must be affirmed.

Digitized by Google

[245] YAZOO & MISSISSIPPI VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY, Etienne Gele, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

MRS. ANNIE E. BREWER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 245-249.)

Error to state court — decision on non-Federal ground.

A decision of a state court adverse to the defense, in a suit over the title to real property, of the two years' limitation "from the time the cause of action accrued for or against" an assignee in bankruptcy, prescribed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5057, for suits between the assignee and a person claiming an adverse interest touching any property or rights of property transferable to, or vested in, such assignee, rests upon a non-Federal ground so as to exclude the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court, where such decision was based upon the theory that because the adverse claimants, or those under whom they claimed, were not in possession of the land when the assignee in bankruptcy was appointed, no cause of action to recover the land had then accrued.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 62.]

Argued November 12 and 13, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in a suit to establish title to real property. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 128 La. 544, 54 So. 987.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On error to state court in cases involving land titles—see note to O'Conor v. Texas, 50 L. ed. U. S. 1120.

Mr. Benjamin Ory argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Hunter C. Leake, Gustave Lemle, Charles N. Burch, and H. D. Minor, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Monte M. Lemann argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. Blanc Monroe, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit by Mrs. Annie E. Brewer as plaintiff, now defendant in error, brought in the civil district court for the parish of Orleans, in the state of Louisiana, against [246] the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad Company, one of the plaintiffs in error, to establish title to a certain portion of the square of ground known as square No. 150 in the city of New Orleans. The district court decided the case in favor of Mrs. Brewer, and the judgment was affirmed upon appeal to the supreme court of Louisiana (128 La. 544, 54 So. 987), and the case is brought here.

Both parties claim title under one Henry Parish, who in 1848 appears to have been the owner of the land. He died in New York, and on December 17, 1857, his will was there admitted to probate. By the will, the square in controversy passed to Peter Conrey in trust for the benefit of one Henry Parish Conrey, with directions that it should be conveyed to him. In December, 1859, Henry Parish Conrey died, and his succession was opened in the second district court for the Parish of Orleans. Inventory was taken, including the property now in question, and on June 9, 1860, James Grimshaw, as administrator, executed a notarial act conveying the property to George Brewer. On December 28, 1875, George Brewer was adjudged a bankrupt, and on January 15, 1876, his estate, real and personal, was conveyed to Charles H. Reed, as assignee, who, on November 23, 1876, by order of court, conveyed the property to Mrs. Annie E. Brewer, plaintiff below. This is the title upon which Mrs. Brewer relied.

The defendants claimed title from the fact that Daniel Parish on April 11, 1868, appearing as a resident of the state of New York, presented a petition to the second district court of the parish of Orleans, alleging that the will of Henry Parish had been admitted to probate in that state, and that he had qualified as one of the executors, and submitted an exemplified copy of the will and of the proceedings, and prayed that the will be executed, which was accordingly done. The executor, under an order of sale, [247] on April 25, 1871, conveyed the property in question to H. C.

Digitized by Google

Boucher. On January 15, 1872, Boucher sold to George W. Babcock, and on September 8, 1896, the widow and heirs of Babcock sold to Benjamin Recurt, and on March 31, 1897, Recurt sold to William Laferriere, Etienne Gele, and Jean Marie Gele, and these last named on November 22, 1898, sold a portion of square 150 to the railroad company.

For reasons dependent upon the law of the state, which we need not now recite, the supreme court of Louisiana held that the property had vested in Henry Parish Courey, and that subsequently, by the various means stated, had passed to the present defendant in error, plaintiff below. It also held that the title of the railroad company was fatally defective for reasons resting upon state law, which are set forth in the opinion.

It is contended by the plaintiff in error that the record presents a question decided in the supreme court of the state in such manner as to deny rights asserted in that court under a statute of the United States. This contention rests upon the prescription claimed by Laferriere and the Geles, warrantors of the railroad company (the various warrantors in title having been made parties to the suit), which is said to arise under § 5057 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which reads as follows:

"No suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintainable in any court between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee. And this provision shall not in any case revive a right of action barred at the time when an assignee is appointed."

The plaintiff in error insists that under this statute the alleged right of action of Mrs. Brewer was barred, and [248] that this defense should have been available when invoked in the state court.

The object of the statute is manifest and its purposes are kindred to other statutory provisions looking to a speedy settlement of estates in bankruptcy. The section was before this court in Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 40 L. ed. 791, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637, and it was there held that it applied "only to suits growing out of disputes in respect of property and of rights of property of the bankrupt which came to the hands of the assignee, in which adverse claims existed while in the hands of the bankrupt and before assignment." This construction of the act was adhered to in Hammond v. Whittredge, 204 U. S. 538, 550, 51 L. ed. 606, 612, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396. It therefore follows that in order to have barred the cause of action asserted by Mrs. Brewer in the present case, an adverse claim in favor of the plaintiffs in error must have existed while the property was in the hands of the bankrupt, and before assignment. It is the contention of the plaintiffs in error that the claim existed as against George Brewer, the bankrupt, and as against the assignee as soon as he was appointed, growing out of the adverse title recorded by Boucher and Babcock in 1871 and 1872. But this view was rejected by the supreme court of Louisiana, and, dealing with the prescription claimed for the warrantors because of § 5057, that court said (p. 557):

"The provision of law thus invoked applies, in terms, to causes of action which have accrued 'for or against such assignee,' but not to causes of action which arise between persons who purchase property from an assignee and other persons, long after such purchases, and long after the assignee has become functus officio; and it does not apply to this case, because, in January, 1876, when Reed was appointed assignee in bankruptcy of Brewer, the cause of action here sued on did not exist, since neither the defendant nor any of its authors pretended at that time to be in possession of the land here claimed, or had ever done anything [249] to interfere with the constructive possession following the authentic act by which Brewer acquired his title."

Citing other decisions of the supreme court of Louisiana the learned counsel for the plaintiffs in error contends that the law is otherwise,—a contention which is resisted with vigor by the learned counsel for the defendant in error. The decision of the supreme court of Louisiana in this case upon a question of Louisiana law is conclusive upon this court. The supreme court of Louisiana held that no cause of action existed when Reed was appointed assignee in bankruptcy, and that neither the defendant nor any of its authors had made any pretense of possession of the land in controversy, nor had they done anything to interfere with the constructive possession following the act by which Brewer acquired title. When the cause of action accrued to recover the land was a question of state law, not depending upon the Federal statute. In deciding that no cause of action had accrued to Brewer, available to the assignee, because the plaintiffs in error, or those under whom they claimed, were not in possession of the land, the court rested its decision wholly upon state law. The disposition of this question by the state court in the manner we have stated controlled the decision of the case, and was sufficiently broad to support the judgment without involving the denial of any Federal right asserted by the plaintiff in error. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 116, 53 L. ed. 431, 433, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

Digitized by Google

It follows that the writ of error must be dismissed.

---

[250] THOMAS R. MARSHALL, as Governor of the State of Indiana, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

JOHN T. DYE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 250–259.)

Error to state court — parties — substitution.

1. The present members of the state board of election commissioners which, under 2 Burns's Ann. Stat. (Ind.) 1908, § 6897, is a continuing board, will be substituted on motion as plaintiffs in error on a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of a state court, entered against their predecessors as composing such board, and their successors in office.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. b, 5; IV. c; Abatement, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question —republican form of government.

2. The contention that the judgment below contravened U. S. Const. art. 4, § 4, which provides that the United States shall guarantee to every state in the Union a republican form of government, presents no justiciable controversy concerning which the judgment of a state court is reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court upon writ of error, since such provision depends for enforcement upon political and governmental action through powers conferred upon Congress.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1751–1797; Courts, I. e. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — who may raise Federal question — officers.

3. Members of a state board of election commissioners and the Secretary of State have no such personal interest as entitles them to a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of a state court enjoining them, as officers of the state, from taking steps to submit a proposed Constitution to the electors because, in the court's judgment, the legislative act requiring such submission violates the state Constitution.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2068, 2069, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 401.]

Argued October 23, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Marion County, in that state, enjoining certain state officers from taking steps to submit a proposed Constitution to the electors. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, — Ind. —, 99 N. E. 1.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank S. Roby, and Dan W. Simms argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas M. Honan, Attorney General of Indiana, and Messrs. James E. McCullough and Ward H. Watson, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

While the suit was originally begun against the plaintiffs in error as officers of the state of Indiana, it was in effect a suit against the office and against the people of the state represented by the plaintiffs in error. It therefore is one of those proceedings which may be commenced with one set of officers and terminated with another set, the latter being bound by the judgment.

Thompson v. United States, 103 U. S. 480, 26 L. ed. 521; Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Martin, 53 Ohio St. 386, 41 N. E. 690; Hines v. Stahl, 79 Kan. 88, 20 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1118, 131 Am. St. Rep. 280, 99 Pac. 273, 17 Ann. Cas. 298.

The governor and his associates have authority to meet litigation and continue it to a final conclusion; otherwise, any kind of a judgment by any kind of a court, in

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see note to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal —see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

On parties to appellate proceedings in Federal Supreme Court—see note to Amadeo v. Northern Assur. Co. 50 L. ed. U. S. 723.

Digitized by Google

any kind of a case, would result in permanently preventing the laws being enforced.

Norman v. Kentucky Bd. of Managers, 93 Ky. 537, 18 L.R.A. 557, 20 S. W. 901; Barbour, Parties in Law & Eq. p. 106.

Messrs. Thomas M. Honan, James E. McCullough, Frank S. Roby, Ward H. Watson, W. V. Stuart, E. P. Hammond, Dan W. Simms, Sol. H. Esarey, and Elias D. Salsbury also filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Addison C. Harris argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ralph Kane, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The plaintiffs in error have no personal interest and have not been hurt.

Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 148, 48 L. ed. 125, 126, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; Braxton County Ct. v. West Virginia, 208 U. S. 192, 52 L. ed. 450, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

The mere averment of a Federal question is not enough to give this court jurisdiction over the judgment of a state court. A bare averment of a Federal question is not sufficient. There must be a real, and not a fictitious, Federal question apparent upon the record in order to confer jurisdiction.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 532, 37 L. ed. 267, 268, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 87, 35 L. ed. 943, 946, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

This is now a moot case, and should be dismissed.

Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 653, 40 L. ed. 293, 294, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 18 How. 421, 15 L. ed. 435; California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U. S. 308, 314, 37 L. ed. 747, 748, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; New Orleans Flour Inspectors v. Glover, 160 U. S. 170, 40 L. ed. 382, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Jones v. Montague, 194 U. S. 147, 151, 48 L. ed. 913, 914, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Tennessee v. Condon, 189 U. S. 64, 47 L. ed. 709, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; Richardson v. McChesney, 218 U. S. 487, 54 L. ed. 1121, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The case originated in a complaint filed in the circuit court of Marion county, Indiana, by John T. Dye, in which he alleged that he brought the suit for himself and other electors and taxpayers of the state of Indiana, the object of the suit being to enjoin the defendants, Thomas R. Marshall, governor, Muter M. Bachelder, and Charles O. Roemler, jointly composing the state board of election commissioners, and Lew G. Ellingham, secretary of state, from taking the steps required by statute to certify and transmit to the clerks of the several counties in the [255] state a new Constitution proposed by the legislature of the state, and from printing and publishing a statement to be printed upon the ballots in such manner that the electors might indicate their choice as to such new Constitution. Upon trial in the circuit court, an injunction was granted. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the state of Indiana the judgment of the circuit court was affirmed. 99 N. E. 1. The case was then brought here by writ of error.

A motion was filed in this court on September 24, 1913, accompanied by an affidavit, stating the death of John T. Dye, defendant in error, and the appointment of Hugh Dougherty as his executor, and his qualification as such, in compliance with the laws of the state of Indiana, and asking that he be permitted to appear and defend as such executor, which motion is granted.

There was also submitted on October 14, 1913, a motion to substitute Samuel M. Ralston, governor, and Will H. Thompson and John E. Hollett, members of the state board of election commissioners, of the state of Indiana, as plaintiffs in error. As the judgment in this case was against the defendants Thomas R. Marshall, Muter M. Bachelder, and Charles O. Roemler, composing the state board of election commissioners, and their successors in office, and as such board is a continuing board (§ 6897, 2 Burns's Anno. Stat. [Ind.] 1908), notwithstanding its change of personnel, this motion is within the principle laid down in Murphy v. Utter, 186 U. S. 95, 46 L. ed. 1070, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776, and is granted. See also Richardson v. McChesney, 218 U. S. 487, 492, 493, 54 L. ed. 1121, 1122, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43. Lew G. Ellingham, secretary of state, is one of the plaintiffs in error, and the judgment sought to be reviewed ran against him as such secretary of state, and he still occupies that office.

The statute (Acts of 1911, p. 205) under which it was proposed to submit the new Constitution of the state provided for its submission at the general election in [256] November, 1912, and required the election officials and other officers to perform like duties to those required at general elections, with a view to the submission of such questions. The supreme court sustained the contention that the act was void under the state Constitution, holding in substance that the act of 1911 was unconstitutional for want of authority in the legislature to submit an entire Constitution to the electors of the state for adoption or rejection, and that, if the instrument could be construed to be a series of amendments, it could not be submitted as such for the reason that article 16 of the Constitution of the state requires that all amendments to the state Constitution shall, before being submitted to the electors, receive the approval of two general assemblies, which was not the case here, and that article 16 further provides that while an amendment or amendments to the Constitution, which have been agreed upon by one general assembly, are awaiting the action of a succeeding general assembly or of the electors, no additional amendment or amendments shall be proposed, and that, as a matter of fact, another amendment was still awaiting the action of the electors.

Digitized by Google

The contention mainly urged by the plaintiffs in error of the denial of Federal rights is that the judgment below is in contravention of article 4, § 4, of the Constitution of the United States, which provides that the United States shall guarantee to every state in the Union a republican form of government. In Pacific States Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Oregon, 223 U. S. 118, 56 L. ed. 377, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224, this court had to consider the nature and character of that section, and held that it depended for enforcement upon political and governmental action through powers conferred upon the Congress of the United States. The full treatment of the subject in that case renders further consideration of that question unnecessary, and the contention in this behalf presents no justiciable controversy concerning which the decision is [257] reviewable in this court upon writ of error to the state court. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308, 314, 47 L. ed. 190, 193, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123. And as to all questions said to be of a Federal character, although the judgment of the supreme court was rested solely upon its interpretation of the state Constitution, the rulings are assailed because of alleged wrongs done to the plaintiffs in error in their official capacity only.

We have had frequent occasion to declare that the right of this court to review the judgment of the highest court of a state is circumscribed within the limits of § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), now § 237 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227]. See Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220, and cases there cited. Among the limitations upon this right is the principle which requires those who seek to bring in review in this court the judgment of a state court to have a personal, as distinguished from an official, interest in the relief sought and in the Federal right alleged to be denied by the judgment of the state court. This principle was laid down in Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 125, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51, in which it was held that the auditor of a county of the state of Indiana could not, upon writ of error to this court, have the judgment of the supreme court of Indiana, declaring an exemption law of that state valid and the performance of its provisions obligatory upon him, reviewed upon the ground that the act was repugnant to the Federal Constitution. The court, Mr. Justice Brown delivering the opinion, said (p. 149):

"It is evident that the auditor had no personal interest in the litigation. He had certain duties as a public officer to perform. The performance of those duties was of no personal benefit to him. Their nonperformance was equally so. He neither gained nor lost anything by invoking the advice of the supreme court as to the proper action he should take. He was testing the constitutionality of the law purely in the interest of third persons; viz., [258] the taxpayers; and in this particular the case is analogous to that of Caffrey v. Oklahoma, 177 U. S. 346, 44 L. ed. 799, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664. We think the interest of an appellant in this court should be a personal, and not an official, interest, and that the defendant, having sought the advice of the courts of his own state in his official capacity, should be content to abide by their decision."

In Braxton County Ct. v. West Virginia, 208 U. S. 192, 52 L. ed. 450, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275, it was held that, where the supreme court of West Virginia had compelled a county court by mandamus to lower its assessment so that it would be within the limit designated by a certain statute, this court would not entertain a writ of error to review the judgment of the state court, although the plaintiff in error had set up that the assessment contended for would not provide a sufficient amount to pay the expenses of the county, part of which it was alleged had by contract attached before the statute in question was passed. Speaking for the court, Mr. Justice Brewer said:

"That the act of the state is charged to be in violation of the national Constitution, and that the charge is not frivolous, does not always give this court jurisdiction to review the judgment of a state court. The party raising the question of constitutionality and invoking our jurisdiction must be interested in and affected adversely by the decision of the state court sustaining the act, and the interest must be of a personal, and not of an official, nature. Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 118, 44 L. ed. 392, 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 283, 45 L. ed. 527, 530, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 148, 48 L. ed. 125, 126, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51."

Digitized by Google

In the present case the supreme court of the state has enjoined the plaintiffs in error, as officers of the state, from taking steps to submit the proposed Constitution to the electors of the state, because in its judgment the act of the legislature of the state, requiring such submission, was in violation of the state Constitution. Whether this duty [259] shall or shall not be performed concerns the plaintiffs in error in their official capacity only. The requirement that they refrain from taking such steps concerns their official, and not their personal, rights. Applying the rule established by the previous decisions of this court, it follows the judgment of the state supreme court is not reviewable here, as it is not alleged to violate rights of a personal nature, secured by the Federal Constitution or laws.

It therefore follows that this writ of error must be dismissed.

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF THE CITY OF VICKSBURG, Appts.,
v.
W. A. HENSON, Receiver of the Vicksburg Waterworks Company, and Lelia Boykin.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 259–274.)

Appeal — final judgment — issues undisposed of.

1. A decree of a Federal district court enjoining a municipality, on grounds of estoppel by judgment, from issuing bonds for, or constructing, a waterworks plant to be put in operation when an existing private waterworks franchise should expire, is final for the purpose of an appeal to the circuit court of appeals, although there were allegations in the pleadings which permitted or required a consideration of the law under which the bonds were to be issued, and which were independent of the alleged claim of res judicata, where the record and proceedings make it evident that both the court and the parties concerned treated the bill as an attack upon the right of the municipality to proceed to build a waterworks system before the expiration of the franchise, although to be operated thereafter.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — diverse citizenship — questions subsequently arising.

2. The jurisdiction of a circuit court of appeals is not final because the jurisdiction of the district court, as originally invoked, depended solely upon diverse citizenship, where, by an amended and supplemental bill, there were added to the ground of original jurisdiction constitutional grounds which existed before the suit was begun, and which might have been averred in the original bill.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. d, 2, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — res judicata — confining decree to issues.

3. A final decree adverse to the municipality in a suit brought by a private waterworks company to enjoin municipal competition during the continuance of its franchise, on the ground that such franchise was exclusive, is not an adjudication against the right of the municipality, first asserted subsequent to such decree, to issue bonds for, and to construct, a plant not to be put in operation until after the expiration of such franchise, although there may be provisions in such decree which, read alone, without regard to the pleadings, would have that effect.

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Municipal corporations — water supply — contract against public establishment.

4. An exclusive franchise granted by a municipality to a private waterworks company to supply water for public and private use for a definite term does not prevent the municipality from issuing bonds for, and constructing, its own waterworks system, where such system is not to be put in operation until the franchise has expired.

[For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, II. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 546.]

Argued and submitted October 28, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302, and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

On appellate jurisdiction of Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

Generally as to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see notes to Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L.R.A. 79; Cummington v. Belchertown, 4 L.R.A. 131; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 13 L. ed. U. S. 648; and Huntington v. Attrill, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1123.

On the establishment and regulation of municipal water supply—see note to State ex rel. Hallauer v. Gosnell, 61 L.R.A. 34.

Digitized by Google

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi, enjoining a municipality from issuing bonds for, or constructing, a waterworks system during the term of an existing exclusive franchise. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 664, 203 Fed. 1023.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. T. C. Catchings, O. W. Catchings, and George Anderson submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. John Brunini was on the brief:

The franchise does not prohibit the city from erecting waterworks to be operated after its termination.

Denver v. New York Trust Co. 229 U. S. 123, 57 L. ed. 1101, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167, 5 L.R.A. 546, 22 N. E. 381; Thomas v. Grand Junction, 13 Colo. App. 80, 56 Pac. 665; Long v. Duluth, 49 Minn. 280, 32 Am. St. Rep. 547, 51 N. W. 913; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. ed. 585, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; El Paso Water Co. v. El Paso, 152 U. S. 157, 38 L. ed. 396, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Sioux Falls v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 69 C. C. A. 373, 136 Fed. 721.

The burden of proof is on the party asserting an estoppel by judgment.

Harrison v. Remington Paper Co. 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 954, 72 C. C. A. 405, 140 Fed. 385, 5 Ann. Cas. 314; Lewis v. Ocean Nav. & Pier Co. 125 N. Y. 341, 26 N. E. 301.

Upon an issue of res judicata all doubts must be resolved against the party pleading it.

De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 216, 39 L. ed. 956, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. ed. 214; Duckworth v. Duckworth, 35 Ala. 70; Freeman, Judgm. § 258; Hopkins v. Lee, 6 Wheat. 109, 5 L. ed. 218.

The essential conditions upon which the exception of res judicata becomes applicable are the identity of the thing demanded, the identity of the cause of the demand, and of the parties in the character in which they are litigants.

Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 24 How. 333, 16 L. ed. 650; Freeman, Judgm. § 252.

It is first necessary to inquire whether or not the cause of action in both cases was the same; for if this is so, all matters are concluded which were or might have been litigated, while otherwise only those defenses are barred which were actually asserted in the prior cause.

Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Davis v. Brown, 94 U. S. 423, 24 L. ed. 204; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 279, 36 L. ed. 972, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Crowder v. Red Mountain Min. Co. 127 Ala. 260, 29 So. 847.

It is always admissible to consult the record of the prior case to determine what was decided, and the language of the judgment or decree relied upon as an estoppel must be interpreted with relation to and limited by the issues presented.

Davis v. Brown, 94 U. S. 423, 24 L. ed. 204; Washington Gaslight Co. v. District of Columbia, 161 U. S. 316, 40 L. ed. 712, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Graham v. Chamberlain, 3 Wall. 704, 18 L. ed. 247; Barnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 122 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 1128, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1043; Freeman, Judgm. § 271.

The rule that a decree cannot go beyond the issues involved is not merely one of construction, but is a limitation upon the power of the court.

Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Munday v Vail, 34 N. J. L. 418.

Issues can only be raised by appropriate allegations of fact; and if a court goes beyond the issues so raised, its judgment is void.

Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. 483, 9 L. ed. 201; Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. ed. 429; Foster v. Goddard, 1 Black, 506, 17 L. ed. 228; Crocket v. Lee, 7 Wheat. 522, 5 L. ed. 513; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Outram v. Morewood, 3 East, 346, 7 Revised Rep. 473, 5 Mor. Min. Rep. 484; 11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 868.

Issues cannot be enlarged or extended by praying relief which the case made by the bill does not warrant. A special prayer for relief may narrow the issues presented by not asking as extensive relief as the complainant is entitled to; but it can never be so framed as to enlarge the scope of the bill.

16 Cyc. 225; Staton v. Rising, 103 Ala. 454, 15 So. 848; Thoms v. Thoms, 45 Miss. 263; English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. 595, 7 L. ed. 531; Lockhart v. Leeds, 195 U. S. 427, 49 L. ed. 263, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Hardin v. Boyd, 113 U. S. 756, 28 L. ed. 1141, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. ed. 930; Tayloe v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co. 9 How. 390, 13 L. ed. 187.

An important test of whether an estoppel exists is to compare the proof used to sustain the respective allegations of the two suits.

Stone v. United States, 12 C. C. A. 451, 29

Digitized by Google

U. S. App. 32, 64 Fed. 667, affirmed in 167 U. S. 178, 42 L. ed. 127, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Freeman, Judgm. § 259; Clark v. Blair, 4 McCrary, 311, 14 Fed. 812; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238.

The city adopted its plan to build waterworks at a time when the franchise had almost expired, to be held in readiness to supply water at that time, many years after the decision of Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; and its rights in the premises depend, therefore, upon a state of facts which has arisen since the rendition of the decree in that case. It necessarily follows that nothing which was decided at that time can constitute an estoppel.

2 Black, Judgm. § 617; Winnipiseogee Lake Co. v. Young, 40 N. H. 420; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 777; 23 Cyc. 1161, 1290.

A question cannot be held to have been adjudged before an issue on the subject could possibly have arisen.

Third Nat. Bank v. Stone, 174 U. S. 432, 43 L. ed. 1035, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759.

Courts refuse to be drawn into the determination of mere abstract principles of law; they decline to construe possible future controversies which have not yet arisen; it is not their province to deal with vague general questions as to the relative rights of parties to contracts, and to construe their provisions in advance; they do not decide moot questions.

State ex rel. Wright v. Savage, 64 Neb. 684, 90 N. W. 898, 91 N. W. 557; State v. Lambert, 52 W. Va. 248, 43 S. E. 176; New Orleans & N. W. R. Co. v. Linehan Ferry Co. 104 La. 53, 28 So. 840.

The city had threatened to build and operate a waterworks system and subject the existing company to its competition, and the aid of the court was appropriately invoked to prevent this injury. It had never threatened to build noncompeting waterworks upon the termination of the franchise, and even if this constituted an infringement of the complainant's rights, upon familiar principles, it could not have procured an injunction against the doing of an act which had never been threatened or even contemplated.

Truly v. Wanzer, 5 How. 141, 12 L. ed. 88; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 71, 14 L. ed. 55.

A judgment is conclusive by way of estoppel only as to facts without the existence and proof or admission of which it could not have been rendered.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 82; Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 18 L. ed. 550.

General expressions in an opinion which are not essential to the disposition of the case cannot control the judgment in subsequent suits.

Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. 197 U. S. 244, 49 L. ed. 739, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

An instructive case, which illustrates the liberal attitude assumed by this court in construing decrees, is that of Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 604, 17 L. ed. 191.

Appellee is now estopped to assert that the city cannot erect a waterworks system to be operated after the termination of the franchise.

Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Dubois, 12 Wall. 47, 20 L. ed. 265.

The city should not be enjoined from erecting waterworks to be operated after the expiration of the franchise, for the reason that such a decree would at this time be inequitable.

St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 81 C. C. A. 643, 152 Fed. 849.

Mr. Edgar H. Farrar argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. C. Bryson and Joseph Hirsh, filed a brief for appellees:

The decree of the district court is not final,—

1st. Because it failed to adjudicate the validity of the bond election and the right to issue bonds thereunder, irrespective of the purpose for which they were to be issued.

2d. Because it failed to dispose of the issue raised by the petition of Lelia Boykin, the intervener. She did not ask any relief on the ground that the right of the city to build waterworks during the life of the Bullock franchise had been adjudicated. On the other hand, she, by the express terms of her petition, excluded the complainant's averments in that regard, and did not pray any relief whatever predicated upon the question of res judicata, or upon the terms of the Bullock franchise. She sought relief solely on the ground that the bond election was invalid and void, and did not empower the appellant city to issue the bonds in question. That question the court pointedly declined to adjudicate or even to dismiss her petition, or a similar demand contained in complainant's proceedings.

Craighead v. Wilson, 18 How. 199, 15 L. ed. 332; Green v. Fisk, 103 U. S. 518, 26 L. ed. 485; Bostwick v. Brinkerhoff, 106 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 73, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Grant v. Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. 106 U. S. 429, 27 L. ed. 237, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 414; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Southern Exp. Co. 108 U. S. 24, 27 L. ed. 638, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Dainese v. Kendall, 119 U. S. 53, 30 L. ed. 305, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 65;

Digitized by Google

Rexford v. Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. 228 U. S. 339, 57 L. ed. 864, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 229 U. S. 476, 57 L. ed. 1286, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Keystone Manganese & Iron Co. v. Martin, 132 U. S. 91, 33 L. ed. 275, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; McGourkey v. Toledo & O. C. R. Co. 146 U. S. 536, 36 L. ed. 1079, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Covington v. First Nat. Bank, 185 U. S. 270, 46 L. ed. 906, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Thomas v. Wooldridge, 23 Wall. 283, 23 L. ed. 135; Loudon v. Taxing Dist. 104 U. S. 771, 26 L. ed. 923; New Orleans Mail Co. v. Flanders (New Orleans & B. S. Mail Co. v. Fernandez) 12 Wall. 130, 20 L. ed. 249; The Maria Martin (Martin v. Northern Transp. Co.) 12 Wall. 31, 20 L. ed. 251; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 699; Loudon v. Taxing Dist. 104 U. S. 771, 26 L. ed. 923; Groves v. Sentell, 153 U. S. 465, 38 L. ed. 785, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 898; United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 114, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Cherokee Nation v. Blackfeather (United States v. Blackfeather) 155 U. S. 218, 39 L. ed. 126, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 156, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Ex parte Russell, 13 Wall. 664, 20 L. ed. 632; Harrington v. Holler (Crawford v. Holler) 111 U. S. 796, 28 L. ed. 602, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; Re Parker, 131 U. S. 221, 33 L. ed. 123, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708.

The test of the right to appeal to this court from the circuit court of appeals is whether or not the jurisdiction of the district court was invoked solely upon any other ground than that of diverse citizenship. If a ground of Federal jurisdiction, other than diverse citizenship, be raised in the case at any time after the filing of the original bill, it cannot be considered for jurisdictional purposes.

Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galeton Cotton Mills, 184 U. S. 290, 46 L. ed. 546, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Spreckles Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 48 L. ed. 496, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Weir v. Rountree, 216 U. S. 607, 54 L. ed. 635, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 217 U. S. 247, 54 L. ed. 752, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Third Street & Suburban R. Co. v. Lewis, 173 U. S. 457, 43 L. ed. 766, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 635, 29 L. ed. 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Leather Mfrs' Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 778, 30 L. ed. 816, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 179 U. S. 335, 45 L. ed. 220, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Lovell v. Newman, 227 U. S. 412, 57 L. ed. 577, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Shulthis v. McDougal, 225 U. S. 561, 56 L. ed. 1205, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704.

Messrs. Edgar H. Farrar, J. C. Bryson, Joseph Hirsh, and Richard F. Goldsborough also filed a brief for appellees:

The litigation previously had between the parties, and the decree therein entered by the circuit court, and specifically affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, is res judicata of the issues involved in this cause.

10 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 729, 798; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 81, 46 L. ed. 815, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The effect of making the franchise a part of the bill of complaint by way of an exhibit was to set up and plead every right accruing to the water company under the franchise which had been or was threatened to be transgressed by appellant in building new works.

American Bell Tel. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co. 34 Fed. 803; 3 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 362, 363; 8 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 740; Electrolibration Co. v. Jackson, 52 Fed. 773; Samuel Cupples Envelope Co. v. Lackner, 99 App. Div. 231, 90 N. Y. Supp. 954; Miller v. Wayne International Bldg. & L. Asso. 32 Ind. App. 480, 70 N. E. 180.

A party cannot split up his cause of action for part of an indivisible demand.

Re Chiles (Texas v. White) 22 Wall. 157, 22 L. ed. 819.

The same rule is applicable to an attempt to split up a defense.

Dimock v. Revere Copper Co. 117 U. S. 559, 29 L. ed. 994, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Aurora v. West, 7 Wall. 82, 19 L. ed. 42; Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. 137, 22 L. ed. 331; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Beloit v. Morgan, 7 Wall. 619, 19 L. ed. 205.

Digitized by Google

A distinction exists between error in construction of document, to be corrected only upon appeal, and not collaterally, and lack of jurisdiction, which alone subjects a judgment to collateral attack.

United States use of Hine v. Morse, 218 U. S. 493, 54 L. ed. 1123, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37, 21 Ann. Cas. 782; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 276, 49 L. ed. 193, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

Mistake of law is mere error.

American Exp. Co. v. Mullins, 212 U. S. 311, 53 L. ed. 525, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, 15 Ann. Cas. 536.

Appellant's attack on the former decree is collateral, and nothing can now be considered except the jurisdiction to render it. If there was jurisdiction, the decree may be ever so erroneous, yet it must stand as rendered.

Case v. Beauregard (Case v. New Orleans & C. R. Co.) 101 U. S. 692, 25 L. ed. 1005.

The original Bullock franchise excluded the defendant city from erecting and maintaining during the existence of the franchise a water system of its own, even one to be operated after the Bullock franchise had expired.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253.

The case at bar falls short of many of the essential elements of estoppel.

Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 1093, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99; Bloomfield v. Charter Oak Nat. Bank, 121 U. S. 121, 30 L. ed. 923, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 326, 23 L. ed. 927; Meridian Waterworks Co. v. Meridian, 85 Miss. 515, 37 So. 927; Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 45 L. ed. 497, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit originated in the district court of the United States for the southern district of Mississippi, where an injunction restraining the appellants from constructing a waterworks system during the term of a certain franchise previously granted by the city of Vicksburg was allowed upon the complaint of W. A. Henson, receiver of the [261] Vicksburg Waterworks Company, one of the appellees herein (whom we will hereafter call "the receiver"), and the decree upon appeal was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit (121 C. C. A. 664, 203 Fed. 1023), from which affirmance this appeal is taken.

The case, as made out in the district court and shown by the record, appears to be:

The receiver alleged that in 1886 the city, under authority of an act of the legislature, by ordinance granted to Samuel R. Bullock & Company a franchise to furnish the city with water for a term of thirty years; that he had succeeded to the rights and interests of Bullock & Company; that he was paying taxes upon the property of the Vicksburg Waterworks Company, and was entitled to the rights and privileges of a taxpayer; that in 1900 the city of Vicksburg attempted to abandon the contract, and to build and operate a waterworks system of its own, and that in a suit instituted in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Mississippi, such action had been enjoined; that by the final decree therein it was, among other things, ordered "that the defendant refrain from constructing waterworks of its own until the expiration" of the franchise, and that, upon appeal to this court, such decree was affirmed. The pleadings, final decree, and opinion of this court in the former case and the franchise of 1886 were introduced into the record in this case as exhibits, and, to save repetition, reference is made to the franchise as quoted in 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, to the opinion in 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253, and the outline of the pleadings in that case as set forth in those reports.

The receiver alleged further that the city had since made efforts to free itself from the franchise, and specified various suits and negotiations to that end; that early in 1912 the appellants, by resolution and election, undertook to authorize the sale of bonds for the construction of a waterworks plant, which was not to be operated until [262] after the expiration of the franchise; that he would be compelled to pay taxes upon such bonds, and that the issuance and sale of the bonds and construction of the plant would depreciate the value of the Waterworks Company's property; that the city was commencing the construction of a plant too long before the expiration of the franchise; that the purpose of the city was really to depreciate the value of the Waterworks Company's plant so that the city might buy it at a price materially less than its actual value; and that the bond election, for several reasons, which the receiver stated, under the statutes and Constitution of Mississippi, and because of fraud, was of no effect, and the receiver offered to sell the plant at any time upon appraisement. The receiver prayed that the appellants be enjoined from issuing bonds for the construction of a waterworks system, and from taking any further steps toward the building of such plant during the term of the franchise, for the reason that the matter of construction of the plant during such time was res judicata, and that such construction would violate the franchise, and, further, that the bond election was void. The receiver also prayed for an injunction restraining the appellants from letting contracts for the laying of certain water mains, in violation of the franchise and of the decree in the former suit.

Digitized by Google

The appellants denied that the decree in the former case precluded the question raised here, and that the construction by the city of its own waterworks system would violate the terms of the franchise; that the receiver was, or was entitled to the rights and privileges of, a taxpayer, and alleged that the statement by the receiver of the dealings and negotiations between the city and the Waterworks Company was irrelevant and false. They also denied that the receiver or the Waterworks Company, as a taxpayer, would be affected by the bond issue; and alleged that, if the issuance of the bonds and construction [263] of the plant should depreciate the property of the Waterworks Company, it would be something for which it would not be responsible. They further denied that the steps taken by the city were premature, in view of the long time that must elapse before the expiration of the franchise, and that the city did not intend to build a plant; and alleged that the purpose of the Waterworks Company was to compel the city to buy its plant at an exorbitant price; and they denied that the bond election was void. The appellants further alleged that if the decree should be construed as contended for by the receiver, the court below, as a court of equity, would not at that time give the decree that effect, for the reason that the situation of the parties was so changed as to make it inequitable to prohibit the appellants from taking the action sought to be enjoined; that the receiver, by permitting the city to lay certain mains, had conceded the appellants' right to construct a waterworks plant, and was estopped from contesting such right; that the receiver and the Waterworks Company actively participated in the election, conceding appellants' right to build its own waterworks system, and therefore were estopped from asserting the contrary; that the receiver, by conceding appellants' right to construct its plant, itself construed the decree as only enjoining competition, and that the court should give effect to the decree as construed by the parties, and that the decree did not attempt to enjoin the sale of bonds, and that that is all that is sought to be restrained by this suit. The appellants also denied that the letting of contracts for laying mains would violate either the decree or the franchise.

Upon petition, Lelia Boykin, a taxpayer of the city of Vicksburg, the other appellee herein, was, upon order, admitted as a party to the suit, and by proper pleadings issues were made with reference to her as such taxpayer.

Upon final decree the court held that the receiver was [264] entitled to the relief prayed for, and ordered that the appellants be enjoined from constructing a system of waterworks and from disposing of the bonds covered by the suit during the term of the franchise, and in its opinion the court based its decision upon the decree made by it and its affirmance in 202 U. S., and decided that the matter was res judicata. Upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals the decree of the district court was affirmed upon the ground that the decree and affirmance in the case in 202 U. S. constituted an estoppel. The case was thereupon brought here upon appeal, the assignments of error asserting that the circuit court of appeals erred in affirming the decree of the district court, in holding that the decree affirmed in 202 U. S. was an estoppel, and that the appellants had no right to build a waterworks system before the expiration of the franchise, and in not deciding that the receiver was estopped to assert that appellants did not have such right.

A motion was made to dismiss the appeal, first, upon the ground that the decree was not final in the district court, and hence was not appealable to the circuit court of appeals, because it left undisposed of one of the substantial issues in the case. That contention arises from this alleged situation: The pleadings of the receiver, as well as the petition filed by the intervener, Lelia Boykin, attacked the right to issue the bonds in question upon a ground independent of the former adjudication; namely, because the election at which the bonds were authorized to be issued was illegal for the reason that the city failed to make the statutory publication of the election, and that the curative act was unconstitutional, for the reason that the city had exceeded the limit of indebtedness allowed under chapter 142 of the Laws of Mississippi for 1910, the exception in such act being unconstitutional, and for the reason that the bond election was held under an ordinance purporting to amend the charter of the city, which ordinance [265] was itself void, and for fraudulent and corrupt practices and for unlawful registration. This ground of attack, the appellees say, went to the right to issue the bonds to build a waterworks system at any time, and rendered them invalid, whether undertaken to be issued before or after the expiration of the Bullock franchise, and that such is the case is said to appear from reference to the final decree which was entered in the suit. The decree enjoined the appellants from building or constructing a system of waterworks or any part thereof within the city until after the 18th day of November, 1916,—the date of the termination of the Bullock franchise,—and it further provided:

Digitized by Google

"It is further ordered and decreed that the defendant, the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Vicksburg, be and is hereby enjoined from disposing of the issue of four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000) of bonds mentioned and described in the pleadings with a view of constructing a waterworks system, or any part thereof, in said city during the life of the said franchise; that is, between now and the 18th day of November, 1916."

So much of the decree as relates to the bonds, it is contended, leaves open the right of the city to issue them after the expiration of the Bullock franchise, although they were attacked as being wholly illegal and the city wanting authority to issue them at any time.

It is true that the original bill contained allegations which went to the validity of the issue of bonds, if the same were proposed to be issued after the expiration of the Bullock franchise, as well as before the expiration of that time, and the prayer of the original bill, among other things, asked for an injunction restraining the defendant city from issuing the bonds or taking any action to that end by virtue of the election. In the amended and supplemental bill filed in the case, however, not only allegations by way of amendment were made, but the case was restated at great length, and the prayer of the bill asked upon [266] final hearing for "a decree against the said defendant, holding the said bond election void and without effect, and the said defendant without power to issue and float said bonds for the purpose of building a waterworks plant during the life of the Bullock franchise, and for an injunction against the said defendant, restraining it from issuing bonds under the said election, and from taking any further steps looking to the building of a waterworks plant during the life of the said Bullock franchise," and for general relief. When Lelia Boykin intervened, she filed a petition averring that she was the owner of real estate in and a taxpayer of the city of Vicksburg, and a citizen and resident of Georgia, adopting the allegations of the original bill and amended and supplemental bill, except so much thereof as set up the former adjudication in favor of the Waterworks Company, and joining in the original complainant's prayer for relief, and also asking for general relief.

It may be true that there were allegations in the pleadings which permitted or required a consideration of the law under which the bonds were to be issued for the purpose of erecting a waterworks system, and which were independent of the alleged claim of res judicata, but the record and proceedings make it evident that the court and the parties concerned treated the bill as an attack upon the right of the city to proceed to build a waterworks system before the expiration of the Bullock franchise, although to be operated thereafter. The opinion of the court and the decree show that the court so regarded it, and no objection to this disposition of the case was made by any of the parties, and when the case reached the circuit court of appeals a motion was made to dismiss upon the ground that the proceeding was merely ancillary to the decree of the court, affirmed in this court (202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253), enjoining the city from constructing and operating a plant of its own during the term of the franchise. [267] The decree was final as to the city's right to do what it was then proposing to do, to issue bonds and erect a system of waterworks to be used after the expiration of the Bullock franchise. The decree as rendered prevented the city from doing this. There was no reservation of the right to a further decree as to the legality of the bonds, and no retention of jurisdiction after the decree for any purpose. Neither in the circuit court of appeals nor in the district court was there any attempt to require the court to consider the case in its further aspect, but, as we have said, both courts and all parties treated the case as presenting a controversy concerning the right of the city to proceed, as it was about to do, to sell the bonds and build a plant before the expiration of the franchise in question. The record thus considered, we think there was a final decree in the district court from which an appeal could be taken to the circuit court of appeals.

The further contention is made that the jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals was final because the jurisdiction of the district court as originally invoked depended solely upon diverse citizenship. But it appears that when the amended and supplemental bill was filed there were added to the ground of original jurisdiction allegations concerning the proper construction of the contract rights of the receiver, which attacked the proposed action of the city on the ground that it would be destructive of constitutional rights. We think those allegations brought into the case a ground of jurisdiction independent of diversity of citizenship. They were grounds which existed before the suit was begun, which might have been averred in the original bill, and which were brought into the case by the amendment. We think, therefore, that the jurisdiction of the district court did not rest solely upon diversity of citizenship, but upon the additional ground of deprivation of Federal right. In this view the decision of the circuit court of appeals is not final, and an appeal may [268] be taken to this court. Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

Digitized by Google

Coming to the question whether the former decree disposed of the rights of the parties, as was held in the court below, which judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, it is undoubtedly true that a right, question, or fact put in issue and decided by a court of competent jurisdiction must be taken as settling the rights of the parties in respect to such controversy, and while it remains undisturbed is conclusive between them. The enforcement of this rule has been repeatedly said to be essential to secure the peace and repose of society, and in order that an end may be made of controversies between parties who have once invoked and have had the determination by competent judicial tribunal of the matters in dispute between them. It is no less true that to hold upon any unsubstantial ground that a controversy has been thus concluded is to do an injustice to litigants. We must therefore be careful to see, when the contention of former adjudication is made, that the matter was actually presented and decided, and the rights of the contending parties thereby concluded. We think that an examination of the record in the former case, put in evidence in this case, does not support the contention that the matter here in issue was then adjudicated and determined. It is true there is some broad language in the decree. It provided:

"Fourth. That the said defendant refrain from in any manner accepting the benefits of or proceeding under the act of the legislature of the state of Mississippi, approved March 9th, 1900, and from issuing bonds under and by virtue of said act or any other act or ordinance for the purpose of erecting waterworks of its own during the period prescribed in said ordinance contract and franchise.

"Fifth. That the said defendant refrain from constructing waterworks of its own until the expiration of the [269] period prescribed in the said ordinance contract and franchise dated 18th day of November, 1886."

The fifth paragraph, read alone, without regard to the pleadings in the case, would broadly enjoin the city from constructing a waterworks system of its own until the expiration of the period named in the franchise held by the complainant. The fourth paragraph used language in enjoining the issuance of bonds which concluded with an injunction "from issuing bonds under and by virtue of said act or any other act or ordinance for the purpose of erecting waterworks of its own during the period prescribed in said ordinance contract and franchise." It is also true that the court, in concluding its opinion in 202 U. S., said that it found "no error in the decree of the circuit court enforcing the contract rights of the complainant, and enjoining the city from erecting its own works during the term of the contract."

It is well settled, however, that a decree is to be construed with reference to the issues it was meant to decide. Graham v. Chamberlain, 3 Wall. 704, 710, 18 L. ed. 247, 251; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 507, 51 L. ed. 1155, 1160, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; Haskell v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 224 U. S. 217, 223, 56 L. ed. 738, 741, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442. In Barnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 122 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 1128, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1043, this court, speaking by Mr. Chief Justice Waite, said (14):

"Every decree in a suit in equity must be considered in connection with the pleadings, and, if its language is broader than is required, it will be limited by construction so that its effect shall be such, and such only, as is needed for the purposes of the case that has been made and the issues that have been decided. Graham v. Chamberlain, 3 Wall. 704, 18 L. ed. 247. Here the suit was by and for creditors to set aside the mortgage to Barnes and the foreclosure thereunder, because made and had to hinder and delay them in the collection of their debts. The decree, therefore, although broader in its terms, must be held to mean [270] no more than that the foreclosure was void as to these creditors, whose claims were inferior in right to that of the mortgage, and that the Minnesota Company was restrained and enjoined from asserting title as against them."

What was the situation which confronted the parties at the time of the institution of the original suit, and what rights were the Waterworks Company striving to protect? The company contended that it had a franchise good for thirty years, and that this franchise was exclusive; at least, in so far as it would prevent the city from building a waterworks system of its own, and operating it in competition with the plaintiff company, and in destruction of its rights yet to be enjoined under its unexpired franchise. At that time the franchise had over half its term yet to run. There was no indication on the part of the city that it intended to build a waterworks system of its own, and then await the expiration of the franchise before it operated such system. The city contended for and maintained the right to erect its own system and operate it at that time and in competition with the Waterworks Company. This competition, it was contended, would be destructive of the rights and property of the complainant, and virtually destroy the exclusive privilege which the city had granted to it for the period of thirty years. It was only after the conclusion of the litigation that the city undertook to construct a waterworks system, withholding operation thereof until the expiration of the franchise belonging to the Waterworks Company. It was driven to that position by the decree against it in the former case. The building of such waterworks system, and not the one that it originally intended, was only proposed by the city after it had lost the original controversy, in which it contended for the right to erect a competing plant, to be operated during the term of the franchise. Reference to the original bill filed in the former case confirms this view, where the following appears:

Digitized by Google

[271] "By reason of said ordinance and contract [the franchise], said city has no right within the period of thirty years to engage in the business of supplying water to the inhabitants of said city in competition with said Bullock & Company, or their assigns, notwithstanding which, said act [under which the city was then proceeding to erect a plant] authorizes and permits said city to construct and maintain waterworks for said purpose;"

and the prayer, in part, asked that the defendant might be "decreed from constructing or acquiring and operating a system of waterworks in competition with your orator's waterworks." The amended and supplemental bill read, in part, as follows:

"Therefore said city, by its contract and ordinance with S. R. Bullock & Company and assigns, are precluded from issuing and selling bonds to build, construct, maintain, and operate a waterworks of its own, as provided by said legislative act and said resolution and said election of 1900, in competition with your orator against its own contract.

"The premises considered, your orator prays that this honorable court will enjoin the defendant from issuing and selling said bonds for the purpose of building and constructing waterworks of its own in competition with your orator."

In considering the rights of the parties and the position taken by them, this court, in 202 U. S. 453 et seq. 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253, said:

The rights of the Waterworks Company under its exclusive contract, it alleged, "would be practically destroyed if subjected to the competition of a system of waterworks to be erected by the city itself. . . . We think it would be a palpable injustice to the stockholders to permit the competition of the city by new works of its own; which, whether operated profitably for the municipality or not, might be destructive of all successful operation [272] in furnishing water to consumers by the private company." Stating the question of the power of the city to grant an exclusive contract: "Whether it can, in exercising this legislative power, exclude itself from constructing and operating waterworks for the period of years covered by the contract. . . . And unless the city has excluded itself in plain and explicit terms from competition with the Waterworks Company during the period of this contract, it cannot be held to have done so by mere implication. . . . These are the words of the contract, and the question upon this branch of the case is, conceding the power of the city to exclude itself from competition with the grantee of these privileges during the period named, has it done so by the express terms used? It has contracted with the company in language which is unmistakable, that the rights and privileges named and granted shall be exclusive. Consistently with this grant, can the city submit the grantee to what may be the ruinous competition of a system of waterworks to be owned and managed by the city, to supply the needs, public and private, covered in the grant of privileges to the grantee? It needs no argument to demonstrate, as was pointed out in the Walla Walla Case [172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77], that the competition of the city may be far more destructive than that of a private company. The city may conduct the business without regard to the profit to be gained, as it may resort to public taxation to make up for losses. A private company would be compelled to meet the grantee upon different terms, and would not likely conduct the business unless it could be made profitable. We cannot conceive how the right can be exclusive and the city have the right at the same time to erect and maintain a system of waterworks which may and probably would practically destroy the value of rights and privileges conferred in its grant. . . . We think it was distinctly agreed that for the term named the right of furnishing water to [273] the inhabitants of Vicksburg under the terms of the ordinance was vested solely in the grantee, so far, at least, as the city's right to compete is concerned."

Digitized by Google

And in 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 1155, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, where it was contended that the former adjudication was a bar to the rights contended for in regulating rates, this court, in construing its former decision in 202 U. S., said (506):

The former case settled the right of the Waterworks Company "under the contract, to carry on its business without the competition of works to be built by the city itself, as the city had lawfully excluded itself from the right of competition."

It is said that upon the argument in this court of the case in 202 U. S., the too broad character of the decree was brought to our attention. An examination of the briefs then filed shows that this objection rested upon the allegation that the decree would prevent the city from putting in hydrants and other facilities not covered by the contract. There was no suggestion that the city would be prevented from putting in its own waterworks for use after the expiration of the franchise.

The nature and extent of the former decree is not to be determined by seizing upon isolated parts of it or passages in the opinion considering the rights of the parties, but upon an examination of the issues made and intended to be submitted, and what the decree was really designed to accomplish. We cannot agree with the court below or with the majority of the circuit court of appeals, that the effect of the former adjudication was to preclude the rights of the parties in the present controversy.

Upon the merits, irrespective of the effect of the former decree, we think the object and purpose of the franchise granted to Bullock & Company, and their successors, was to permit and protect the operation of a system of waterworks to the end of the franchise term. After that time the city was to be free to supply its inhabitants itself, [274] if it saw fit, or make other contracts with those who could supply the wants of the city in that respect. We see no reason why the city might not, if it so determined, make preparation for water supply to its own citizens which would be available upon the expiration of the contract, the contract accomplishing that purpose until by its terms it had expired. To appropriately accomplish this required time, and we think the city was within its rights, not being obligated by any contract to purchase the works of the Waterworks Company, the company having been content to accept the franchise without this requirement, and was free to make other adequate provision to meet this essential requirement of the inhabitants of the city.

The views we have expressed require a reversal of the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, affirming the decree of the District Court. It is therefore ordered that the judgment be reversed and the case remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Mississippi, for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

UNITED STATES, Interstate Commerce Commission, and Federal Sugar Refining Company, Appts.,

v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 274-298.)

Carriers — allowance to shippers.

1. Sugar refiners whose plant is situated some 10 miles beyond the limits of the free lighterage zone established for the commercial and manufacturing river front of Greater New York by interstate trunk railway lines whose freight rail terminals are at the New Jersey shore of New York harbor are not entitled to compensation from such railway companies, under the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), as for services in aid of transportation, for lightering their sugar from refinery to such terminals, because they have their lighters stop on the way at a point within the free lighterage district, but without notifying the railway companies, or making any tender to them at that pier.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public wharves — creation by contract.

2. A fee-simple title or a lease is not essential to constitute a private dock and warehouses a public freight station, but

---

NOTE.—On the right of carrier to grant rebate or allowance to shipper for use of latter's tracks—see note to Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 551.

Digitized by Google

they may become such by a contract between railroad companies and the owners.

[Matters as to wharves, see Wharves, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — allowance to shippers — discrimination.

3. Interstate trunk railway companies whose freight rail terminals are at the New Jersey shore of New York harbor, having established a zone covering substantially the commercial and manufacturing river front of Greater New York, within which, as a part of the transportation, they perform lighterage service without additional charge to and from any public or private dock, may pay a reasonable compensation upon the tonnage basis to the owners of a water front within such zone, who are operating a sugar refinery near by, for the maintenance by them of a public freight terminal station there, and for lightering all freight between that station and the rail terminals, without allowing similar compensation to sugar refiners whose plant is situated some 10 miles beyond the limits of the free lighterage zone, for lightering their sugar from refinery to such terminals, though touching on the way at a pier within the free lighterage district, but not notifying the railway companies, or making any tender to them at the pier, since, even as to the former's own sugar shipments, the compensation made is a proper allowance under the act of June 29, 1906, as for instrumentalities furnished and services performed by the shippers in aid of transportation by the railroads, and not an allowance for accessorial services which would constitute an illegal preference or discrimination forbidden by the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 3, unless accorded to other shippers.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from commerce court — questions not raised below.

4. The contention that an arrangement between a terminal company and certain interstate railway carriers violates the commodity clause of the act of June 29, 1906, will not be considered on appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from the commerce court, to review an order enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, where there is nothing in the record showing that such a contention was pressed upon the Commission or considered by that body, or that the order rendered was in any event based upon the commodity clause,—especially where the assumption that the order was based upon that clause would necessitate the conclusion that the Commission by its order gave sanction to and permitted the continuance of the wrong which its powers were exercised to suppress.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 385.]

Argued January 16 and 17, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring certain carriers to cease paying certain allowances to shippers, which the Commission held amounted to an illegal preference or discrimination. Affirmed.

See same case below, 200 Fed. 770.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Bullitt argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

Arbuckle Brothers, in operating the Jay Street Terminal and in transporting freight by floats, etc., between Brooklyn and Jersey City, are an integral part of the through trunk line systems operating into and out of Greater New York, and as such are common carriers by railroad, and are subject to the interstate commerce act.

United States v. Union Stock Yard & Transit Co. 226 U. S. 286, 302, 304, 306, 57 L. ed. 226, 232—234, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The Hepburn act does not authorize the railroads to make the arrangement in question with Arbuckle Brothers, and to pay them for their services in transporting freight between Brooklyn and Jersey City.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Union P. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co. 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. ed. 171, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

Mr. P. J. Farrell filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The right of the carriers to discriminate between Arbuckle Brothers and the Federal Sugar Refining Company does not depend upon the question of whether the latter changed its method of shipping to avoid such discrimination.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

One provision of the act may not be seized upon and used regardless of other provisions of the same act, to justify inequalities in the treatment accorded by carriers to shippers, while this court, in speaking of the interstate commerce act as a whole, has repeatedly said that it was enacted for the purpose of preventing such inequalities.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 277, 36 L. ed. 699, 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Cincinnati, N. O. & T.

Digitized by Google

P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 197, 40 L. ed. 935, 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 219, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 172, 42 L. ed. 414, 425, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 518, 42 L. ed. 258, 260, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 439, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 477, 54 L. ed. 280, 290, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 253, 55 L. ed. 448, 457, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Union P. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co. 222 U. S. 215, 220, 56 L. ed. 171, 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 690, 37 L. ed. 896, 902, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 506, 42 L. ed. 243, 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

Mr. Ernest A. Bigelow filed a brief for the Federal Sugar Refining Company:

The finding that there is unjust discrimination is a conclusion of fact.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

The transportation of Arbuckle sugar by these carriers does not begin until the lighters are made fast to their float bridges on the New Jersey shore, that being the point of time at which the carriers accept the goods and assume responsibility therefor.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. McFadden, 154 U. S. 155, 38 L. ed. 944, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; London & L. F. Ins. Co. v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 144 N. Y. 200, 43 Am. St. Rep. 752, 39 N. E. 79; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 528, 29 L. ed. 715, 719, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

The act to regulate commerce does not allow the carriers to make a difference in rates because of differences in circumstances arising before the service of the carrier begins.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 220 U. S. 235, 55 L. ed. 448, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

The act to regulate commerce was intended to afford an effective means for redressing the wrongs resulting from unjust discrimination and undue preference, and it would be absurd to allow the incidental and wholly subordinate provisions of § 15 to frustrate the fundamental purpose of the act.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 477, 54 L. ed. 290, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

The carrier cannot pay one shipper for transportation service and enforce an arbitrary rule which deprives another of compensation for similar service.

Union P. R. Co. v. Updike Grain Co. 222 U. S. 215, 56 L. ed. 171, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

Merely to state the Commission's proposition that the Federal Company initiates the interstate transportation of its sugar, so far as these carriers are concerned, at pier 24, a point within the lighterage limits, is to answer it. This proposition depends upon whether the intention of the Federal Company as to the ultimate destination of its sugar has any bearing on its two separate contracts with the Ben Franklin Company, one to transport the sugar to pier 24, and notify the consignee; the other to transport from pier 24 to the rail terminals.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

The essential service rendered by both shippers is to get the sugar from a point within the lighterage limits to the rail terminals, and whether this involves an expensive investment in Brooklyn or a hired dock in Manhattan, and whether, in addition to this service, the Arbuckles also lighter freight for the general public, are immaterial.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 225 U. S. 326, 343, 56 L. ed. 1107, 1112, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. International Coal Min. Co. 97 C. C. A. 383, 173 Fed. 1.

Mr. George F. Brownell argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. A. Taylor, filed a brief for the Railroad Companies:

The Federal Sugar Refining Company has not the status of a shipper from New York within lighterage limits; there is a single continuous shipment of sugar by boat from Yonkers to the Jersey shore, and no new shipment originating at pier 24, North river.

Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 526, 527, 55 L. ed. 310, 320, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

279; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 183 Fed. 1005.

The petitioners are under no statutory or other legal obligation to extend their lines by rail or water.

Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 621.

The service performed by the Federal Sugar Refining Company through the medium of the Ben Franklin Transportation Company is not a transportation service of the railroad companies, but is wholly accessorial, and cannot lawfully be paid for by these appellees.

Re Allowances for Transfer of Sugar, 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 627; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 551, 84 C. C. A. 324, 156 Fed. 558; General Electric Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 237; Solvay Process Co. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 246.

Railroads may secure and maintain freight depots by contract with shippers, and such depots thereby become legally and to all intents and purposes the freight depots of the railroads.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 173; Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 277.

The Commission's decision is based on its erroneous conception of the grounds on which, under the statute, an advantage may be pronounced undue, and on its mistaken view that because of possible incidental advantages, the employment of the owner of property transported to render a service connected with such transportation, and to furnish instrumentalities to be used therein, for no more than a just and reasonable compensation for such services and the use of such instrumentalities, creates undue preferences and unjust discrimination.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

The order of the Commission is, of course, inconsistent in permitting the continuance of what it apparently considers an accessorial allowance to Arbuckle Brothers on condition of payment of another similar illegal allowance to the Federal Sugar Refining Company.

Penn Ref. Co. v. Western New York & P. R. Co. 208 U. S. 208, 52 L. ed. 456, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 190 U. S. 273, 47 L. ed. 1047, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. United States, 197 Fed. 60.

The entering into a contract with one shipper to furnish station facilities does not result in a violation of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce forbidding undue preferences and advantages even if similar contracts are not made with all competing shippers in the same locality.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, affirmed in 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 136, 35 L. ed. 73, 76, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Butchers' & D. Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 C. C. A. 290, 31 U. S. App. 252, 67 Fed. 35; United States ex rel. Morris v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 617, 40 Fed. 101; Consolidating Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 182; Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 577, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 793; Re Transportation of Fruit, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 360.

An unjust discrimination or an undue preference is not created by the action of a railroad company in employing a shipper to perform a part of the transportation service, when the shipper is paid a compensation that is reasonable for the performance of the service, simply because other shippers who are not in position to perform the same transportation service may be subject to disadvantages. For example, it is perfectly lawful to pay a shipper for elevating his own grain in transit through his own elevator, even though he may be able to treat his grain during the elevation, and thus secure incidental advantages over another competing shipper who does not happen to own an elevator. These incidental advantages accrue because of the fact that one shipper owns the elevator and the other does not. The carrier paying the allowance does not discriminate against the shipper who cannot perform the same transportation service, if the service is offered to all.

F. H. Peavey & Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 176 Fed. 409, affirmed in 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

Mr. William N. Dykman argued the cause and filed a brief for the Jay Street Terminal and Arbuckle Brothers:

The petitions present questions of law.

People ex rel. Stephenson v. Bingham, 205 N. Y. 168, 98 N. E. 384; The E. A. Packer, 140 U. S. 360, 36 L. ed. 453, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 225 U. S. 326, 330–341, 56 L. ed. 1107, 1111, 1112, 32 Sup. Ct.

Digitized by Google

Rep. 742; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 470, 54 L. ed. 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 547, 56 L. ed. 308, 311, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Stickney, 215 U. S. 98, 54 L. ed. 112, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northern P. R. Co. 216 U. S. 538, 54 L. ed. 608, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild, 224 U. S. 510, 56 L. ed. 863, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

All the services and all the instrumentalities of the Federal Company used before the delivery of its sugar to the carriers at Jersey City are accessorial to transportation, and the carrier is forbidden by the act to pay the shipper for accessorial services.

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 551, 84 C. C. A. 324, 156 Fed. 558; General Electric Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 237; Solvay Process Co. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 246; Re Allowances for Transfer of Sugar, 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 619.

The payment to Jay Street Terminal for transportation service and the refusal of the carriers to pay the Federal Sugar Refining Company for its accessorial services do not work a discrimination.

1 Drinker, Interstate Commerce Act, p. 214; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. ed. 73, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; United States ex rel. Morris v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 617, 40 Fed. 101; Consolidated Forwarding Co. v. Southern P. Co. 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 182; Worcester Excursion Car Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 577, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 793; Re Transportation of Fruit, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 360.

The payments to the Jay Street Terminal by the carriers were made for services and instrumentalities used in transportation, and are expressly permitted by the statute.

F. H. Peavey & Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 176 Fed. 409; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

When the Jay Street Terminal receives Arbuckle sugar for shipment, and issues a bill of lading for and in the name of the railroad company, two results follow:

1. Title to the merchandise changes from the consignor to the consignee.

New York Sales Act, § 127; Mee v. McNider, 109 N. Y. 500, 17 N. E. 424; Wilcox Silver Plate Co. v. Green, 72 N. Y. 17; Waldron v. Romaine, 22 N. Y. 368; Gilbert v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 4 Hun, 378; Williston, Sales, § 278.

2. The railroad journey and responsibility begin. The liability of the carrier in fact begins as soon as it receives the merchandise for carriage, even if bills of lading have not been issued or the journey commenced; the mere receipt of the goods for immediate transportation inaugurates the liability.

Hutchinson, Carr. § 89; London & L. F. Ins. Co. v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 144 N. Y. 200, 43 Am. St. Rep. 752, 39 N. E. 79; Merritt v. Old Colony & N. R. Co. 11 Allen, 82; Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. 24 How. 386, 16 L. ed. 599.

The contracts between the carriers and the Jay Street Terminal do not violate the commodities clause.

F. H. Peavey & Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 176 Fed. 409; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 56 L. ed. 83, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Mr. H. B. Closson filed a brief for the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal.

Messrs. George F. Brownell, William N. Dykman, and H. B. Closson filed a brief in reply to the government's brief:

The Jay Street Terminal is not a railroad company within the meaning of the commodities clause.

Holland v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 144 Mass. 425, 11 N. E. 674, 9 Am. Neg. Cas. 441; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 578, 9 C. C. A. 659, 27 U. S. App. 1, 61 Fed. 993; Randolph County v. Post, 93 U. S. 502, 23 L. ed. 957; Parker v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 165 N. Y. 274, 59 N. E. 81; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Taggart v. Republic Iron & Steel Co. 73 C. C. A. 144, 141 Fed. 910.

Railroad companies have always had the right to employ others to perform a portion of the duties which they owe to the public.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, affirmed in 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. ed. 73, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Re Exchange of Free Transportation, 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 40; Anacostia Citizens Asso. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 25 Inters. Com. Rep. 411.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal involves the legality of an order made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, holding that certain allowances made by the appellees to Arbuckle Brothers on sugar shipped by them over one or another of the railroad companies' lines constitute an illegal preference or discrimination in violation of the act to regulate commerce. The order of the Commission required the railroad companies to cease and desist from paying such allowances, "while at the same time paying no such allowances to the Federal Sugar Refining Company," on its sugar brought by it on lighters to the carriers at the same rail terminals. 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 200. The carriers affected filed a bill in the commerce court, alleging the invalidity and illegality of the order, and sought an injunction pendente lite and a permanent injunction against its enforcement. An injunction until the cause could be finally heard was granted [281] by the commerce court. This was appealed from by the United States and the injunction sustained as within the sound discretion of the court below. 225 U. S. 306, 56 L. ed. 1100, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817. Thereupon the cause was finally heard upon motion of the appellants to dismiss the bill for want of equity, all answers and pleas theretofore filed having been withdrawn. The commerce court denied this motion and sustained the equity of the bill. The appellants declining to further defend, the temporary injunction was made permanent. From that decree this appeal is prosecuted.

The situation out of which the questions for decision arise, shortly stated, is this:

The railroad companies held by the Interstate Commerce Commission to have discriminated in favor of Arbuckle Brothers and against the Federal Sugar Refining Company are interstate trunk lines whose freight rail terminals are at the New Jersey shore of the harbor of New York. Transportation of freights into and out of the city of New York is practicable only by means of car floats, barges, and steam lighters, operating between the city and the New Jersey shore.

To meet this condition the appellee railroads have long held themselves out as extending transportation of freights bound east to a defined area along the river front of the city, and as beginning such transportation westbound when freight is delivered at designated points within the same area. The necessary lighterage service is performed without additional cost or charge, the flat rate into or out from such points being identical with that applicable at the New Jersey rail terminals. The limits within which such lighterage service is performed as a part of the transportation assumed have long been defined and published in the several filed rate sheets of the carriers. The district embraces substantially the commercial and manufacturing river front of Greater New York, and within it the railroads hold themselves out as undertaking [282] to receive or deliver freight at any public dock, or at any accessible private dock where the shipper shall arrange for the use of the dock. Within this lighterage zone each of the appellees has established and long maintained public freight terminal stations, at which it will deliver eastbound freights and receive freights bound west. Some of these stations are owned or managed solely by one of the railroads, and some are union stations operated for the joint use of two or all of the railroads. Some of them are operated by third persons, who manage and operate them under contracts as agents for one or more of the railroads. But whether operated under contract or directly by the company or companies using them, they are represented to be public delivery and receiving stations, and are so set out in the filed tariff sheets of the companies interested.

The "allowance" to Arbuckle Brothers referred to in the order of the Commission is the consideration paid by the railroad companies to them for instrumentalities and facilities furnished and services performed in the maintenance of one of these public stations, known as the Jay Street Terminal, and for the lighterage of all freight between that station and the railroad terminals on the New Jersey shore. Arbuckle Brothers, a copartnership, are large refiners of sugar and dealers in coffee. Much of their product of sugar finds a market in the west at points upon the lines of the railroads here involved. Their refinery is upon the water front of Brooklyn. They also own a contiguous property fronting upon East river some 1,200 feet. Upon this property they have erected a dock, piers, and large warehouses for the receipt of freight intended for transportation to the railroad terminals on the New Jersey shore, or received from such terminals for consignees nearby. They also own steam lighters, car floats, barges, etc., constructed for the transfer of cars, loaded or unloaded, between this dock and the New Jersey terminals. The premises were peculiarly adapted for use [283] as a public union freight station, and for the purpose of extending transportation by their several lines to this portion of the commercial and manufacturing water front of Greater New York, the appellee railroad companies, in 1906, entered into separate, but identical, contracts with Arbuckle Brothers, the latter contracting under the business name and style of "The Terminal Company." The contracts are too lengthy to be set out. Their essential points may be thus summarized:

Digitized by Google

1. The Terminal Company agrees to maintain the premises in good order and condition for the receipt of freight, and to provide all necessary boats, car floats, docks, and piers, adequate at all times to receive, discharge, transfer, and deliver freights, loaded and unloaded, adequate to accommodate the business contemplated.

2. The Terminal Company will receive at the New Jersey terminals all freights, in or out of cars, intended for delivery at the aforesaid freight station, and safely convey the same to the premises, and there make delivery to the consignees. It will also receive and load into cars all freights which may be delivered to it at its said premises for transportation over the lines of any of said railroad companies, and carry and deliver the same to said railroad company's New Jersey rail terminals.

3. For the facilities supplied and the services performed each of the railroad companies agrees to pay on freight in and out of the station, a compensation measured by the tonnage handled for each such railroad of 4⅛ cents per hundred pounds on freight originating at or destined to points west of what is called "trunk line territory," and on freight originating at or destined to points east thereof, 3 cents per hundred pounds.

Under these contracts, consignments to or by Arbuckle Brothers are handled in the same manner as the shipments of the general public, and comprise a part of the tonnage [284] in and out of that station by which the compensation paid to the Terminal Company is measured. This fact was the basis of the complaint made by the Federal Sugar Refining Company, whose sugar seeks the same market, and who claimed that as it lightered its sugar from its own shipping dock to the terminals at the New Jersey shore, the so-called "allowance" made in respect to the sugar of Arbuckle Brothers, handled under the contracts referred to above, was an unjust and an illegal discrimination unless a like allowance was made to it.

The order of the Commission does not forbid the allowance to Arbuckle Brothers as in itself illegal or unreasonable, but forbids it only as a discrimination unless a like allowance is made to the Federal Sugar Refining Company. That there is no undue discrimination against the Federal Sugar Refining Company in refusing to make a like allowance to it will appear when the conceded circumstances and conditions are considered. This latter company is a competitor of Arbuckle Brothers in the sale and shipment of sugar to the same markets. Its refinery is located at Yonkers on the Hudson river, a point some 10 miles beyond the limits of the free lighterage district. It owns its docks and piers upon the river, but has never enjoyed the free lighterage privilege accorded to all shippers from docks and piers inside the free zone under the tariff sheets of the carriers. It has therefore been compelled to furnish its own means for lightering shipments from its docks to the New Jersey shore. This is an undoubted disadvantage in competing with Arbuckle Brothers, as well as with all other refiners and shippers of sugar within the lighterage district. For many years it had an arrangement with the Ben Franklin Transportation Company, an independent transportation company, by which the latter transported its sugar directly from its Yonkers dock to the railway terminals on the New Jersey shore. There it was delivered to one of the appellees and a bill of lading [285] signed. The freight rates under such bills were identical with the flat rate from stations and piers within the free lighterage district. This disadvantage arising from its location was made the subject of a prior complaint before the Commission, wherein it sought to have the free lighterage district extended so as to include its Yonkers docks, or to have an allowance made to it for the transportation of its sugar from its dock to the New Jersey terminals. Such relief would have removed the disadvantage under which it had long labored. But this relief was denied and its petition dismissed without prejudice. In that proceeding it was ruled by the Commission that the free lighterage arrangements theretofore made by the carriers were the only available means by which they could extend their lines to New York, and were not forbidden by the commerce act, and that by such extension the carriers had come under no obligation to extend the district to Yonkers. It was also ruled that the service rendered by Arbuckle Brothers in the lighterage of their own sugar from the Jay Street Terminal to the New Jersey shore was a service in aid of transportation, and that for the instrumentalities and services, under the very contracts here involved, they did not receive an unreasonable consideration. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 40.

After the promulgation of that opinion the methods adopted for delivering sugar from the Yonkers dock to the New Jersey terminals were changed. The manager of the company's city office at 138 Front street would notify the manager of the Refinery at Yonkers every morning of the sugar necessary to fill accepted orders. This necessary sugar was then loaded at the Yonkers dock upon the lighter Ben Johnson just as before. For this sugar the master of the lighter gave a receipt and was handed a document showing the Federal Sugar Refining Company to be the consignor and the consignee its city office, 138 Front street. This document also gave the [286] number, weight and description of the packages. The Ben Johnson would then go down the river to pier No. 24, within the free lighterage district, where the boat tied up, and the city office was notified; "thereupon," say the Commission, "the complainant issues shipping instructions to the transportation company and hands to its representative bills of lading for execution by the carrier upon delivery at the New Jersey shore." The lighter then proceeds to the Jersey shore, where the sugar is delivered to the carrier, and the blank bills of lading are signed and returned to the lighter's captain. For the service of the lighter in taking the sugar to pier 24 and then across the river to the railroad terminals, it is paid 3 cents per hundred pounds. The claim upon these facts was and is that unless an allowance is made to it identical with that made to Arbuckle Brothers for their service in respect to their own shipments of sugar, a discrimination unlawful in character will result. And this was the conclusion of the Commission.

Digitized by Google

The commerce court was of opinion that the circumstances and conditions were so dissimilar as not to make the same rule applicable, and that the result reached by the Commission was based upon manifest errors of law.

That pier 24 is within the free lighterage district, and that the defendant carriers held themselves out as ready to take freight at any public or accessible private dock within that zone, and lighter it across the river without any other charge than that published in their tariff sheets, applicable alike to freight delivered to them at such dock or pier or at the New Jersey shore, is conceded. But the carriers have not established any public station at pier 24, and the Federal Company did not notify them, nor make any tender to them at that pier of their sugar for transportation. If such sugar had been tendered to them there, and they had refused to receive it and lighter it at their own cost across the river, a very different question [287] would have arisen. That such tender was not made was obviously due to the fact that the sugar, when loaded on the Ben Johnson at their Yonkers dock, was destined for the railroad terminals at the New Jersey shore, and thence by rail to the real consignee, the purchaser of the sugar at western points on the carriers' lines. The sugar had been sold before it was loaded at Yonkers, and the stopping at this pier and the receipt of unsigned bills of lading showing the consignees and destinations was, as the commerce court held, not a break in the continuity of the transportation, but a plain subterfuge to give the transaction the appearance of a shipment from pier 24. We agree with the commerce court and the minority of the Commission in thinking that the change in method after the failure to obtain relief in the first case did not change the substance of the transaction in point of law or fact. The claim by the Federal Company is a claim for an allowance on account of lightering done for their own convenience,—a lighterage service which, under the facts of the case, the carriers were under no obligation to do as a duty of transportation. It was therefore a demand for a purely accessorial service; as much so as if they had claimed for carting their shipments to a depot or station.

Assuming, then, that the lighterage service performed by the Federal Sugar Refining Company was a service by it for its own convenience, for which the railroads were under no obligation to make compensation, we come to the question whether the facilities employed and the service performed by Arbuckle Brothers in respect to their own sugar after delivery at the Jay Street Terminal are accessorial, or services in aid of railroad transportation, for which they may be paid a reasonable compensation without discriminating unduly against the Federal Sugar Refining Company.

That the plain purpose of the contracts between the [288] several railroad companies and the Terminal Company was to constitute the dock and warehouses of that company a public freight station is too clear for extended discussion. That the premises became such a depot through contract with the owners, and not by virtue of a fee-simple title or a lease, is of no legal significance. Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 175; Cattle Raisers' Asso. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 277. Nor is there the slightest substantial evidence that in the selection of the premises of Arbuckle Brothers there was any purpose to give them, as large nearby shippers, any preference, or to unduly discriminate against competing sugar refineries. The premises were ideally adapted to meet the necessities of the great manufacturing and commercial business interests along the river front of Brooklyn, and constituted the only property reasonably obtainable by the railroads for the extension of their lines of transportation to the Brooklyn side of East river. That through instrumentalities furnished by the Terminal Company and the service by it performed transportation by the railroads begins and ends at this station is most obvious. This continuity of transportation is not questioned by the brief for the United States in this case. Thus, after referring to the instrumentalities furnished and the services performed by the Terminal Company, it is said: "In connection with the further fact that all of the railroad companies make through rates from Brooklyn and New York to western points, covering (1) the service performed by Arbuckle Brothers, and (2) the transportation by rail from Jersey City westward, show such a continuity of transportation as to render argument unnecessary that the transportation from Brooklyn to western points is by one continuous transportation by railroad. The mere fact that the physical rails stop at Jersey City does not mean that the railroad transportation there ends. It continues over to [289] Brooklyn by means of car floats, upon which further rails are laid and on which empty and loaded freight cars stand and are transported, so that the rails upon the car floats are brought into contact with the rail ends at Jersey City, and the continuation thereof at Brooklyn, and in this way the transportation by railroad is carried on without interruption from the western points directly to Brooklyn."

Digitized by Google

It is true that this clear admission by the Solicitor General is made for the purpose of establishing a contention he makes, namely, that Arbuckle Brothers, under the name of the Terminal Company, are in law and fact common carriers by railroad, who violate the commodity clause of the Hepburn act [34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288] by transporting their own products,—a view to which we later refer. The concession as to the continuity of common carrier transportation by railroad from and to this station under the published freight tariffs, which include the services performed by the Terminal Company, is not inconsistent with the view of the Commission, so far as transportation to and from that station is confined to the shipments made to or by one of the general public. Thus the Commission say: "So far as the general public is concerned, the Arbuckle dock may doubtless be regarded as a public receiving station of the defendant." It is said further: "Arbuckle Brothers not only operate their station for the defendants as a railway facility, but they also perform the lighterage service between the dock and the regular station of the defendants on the west shore."

The order of the Commission is made to rest upon an erroneous assumption that the services performed by Arbuckle Brothers in respect of their own westbound shipments of sugar after the delivery of such sugar at this station is a shipper's service, done for their convenience, with their own facilities, and, therefore, an accessorial service for which they cannot be allowed compensation [290] unless a similar compensation is allowed to the Federal Sugar Refining Company for the lighterage of its sugar to the west shore railroad terminals.

That certain advantages inured to Arbuckle Brothers from the fact that their refinery was so near this public station that their product might be trucked or carted to the station at slight cost is obvious. That this was a consideration which operated as an inducement to make these contracts may be true. But this mere advantage of nearness was one which they shared in common with every other shipper who chanced to be near a shipping station. That they were large shippers was also more or less an inducement to the railroads to place their depot in a locality which would tend to secure their shipments as against rival carriers may also be conceded. But these were business considerations which are far from showing any purpose to give them any illegal preference or to discriminate against other shippers. That the station constituted a great public utility by which the shipping public was served is too plain for argument. Although nearly one third of all westbound shipments through that station were made by Arbuckle Brothers, the remaining two thirds of the tonnage was furnished by the general public. Thus, the uncontradicted averment of the bill is that during the first six months of 1907 the shipments of general merchandise through that station numbered 92,622, of which more than 85,000 were by shippers other than Arbuckle Brothers, though the tonnage of the latter aggregated nearly one third of the total. Thus it is demonstrated that while Arbuckle Brothers are by far the largest shippers, yet the advantages of the station are availed of by thousands of the general public.

Upon all of the conceded facts of the case, we must conclude that the contracts by virtue of which the premises owned by Arbuckle Brothers were converted into a public freight station under their management as agents for the [291] several carrier lines were contracts made in good faith, and not as a cover for any fraudulent scheme to give rebates or any other illegal advantage. The case must turn here, as it did before the Commission and in the commerce court, upon the question whether the allowance to Arbuckle Brothers of compensation upon their own shipments was for instrumentalities and services accessorial in character. Thus the Commission says:

Digitized by Google

"The complainant contends that in lightering their sugar to the Jersey shore and there delivering it to the defendants, Arbuckle Brothers perform what the complainant refers to as a purely accessorial service. We incline to think this a sound view of the matter upon the facts shown of record. Neither the actual possession of their sugar nor their relation to it is in any respect changed until it is delivered into the physical possession of the defendants at Jersey City. This fact is clearly developed upon the record. Arbuckle Brothers handle their sugar out of their own refinery to their own dock, and themselves deliver it to the defendants west of the river, using in the process only property and facilities that are owned by them and employees that are paid by them. Moreover, under the terms of the contracts between them and the defendant carriers none of the duties, obligations, responsibilities, or liabilities of common carriers attaches to the defendants, with respect to the sugar of Arbuckle Brothers, until the defendants have actually received it at their regular freight stations west of the river. Yet it is here contended that, through some sort of alchemy in their provisions, these contracts transmute Arbuckle Brothers from shippers into carriers' agents while they are in the act of delivering their own sugar to themselves at their own dock. We are not necessarily controlled, however, by the face of these documents or by the merely superficial relation that they purport to establish between these shippers and the defendant carriers, if, as seems to [292] be abundantly clear upon a reading of their provisions, the real and actual relation of Arbuckle Brothers to the defendants, so far as their own sugar is concerned, is that of shippers up to the moment of time when they physically deliver their sugar to the defendants on the Jersey shore. The contracts expressly provide that until that moment the sugar is to be handled by Arbuckle Brothers at their own risk, and only from that moment does the carrier's risk begin. It is only when the defendants actually accept and physically take possession of the sugar at their receiving stations west of the river that they agree to, and do in fact, assume the liabilities of common carriers with respect to the sugar of Arbuckle Brothers."

We must now recur to the distinction drawn by the Commission between the compensation paid by the railroad companies to Arbuckle Brothers for the instrumentalities furnished and the service performed by them in respect of their own westbound shipments of sugar, and the compensation paid to them in respect to the freight handled by them through their station for the general public. The Commission find no fault with reference to the compensation paid for the latter, but do find that the compensation paid for the former is an undue discrimination unless a like compensation is made to the Federal Sugar Refining Company for the lighterage of its sugar.

We have before noticed that the order of the Commission is in the alternative. The obvious inference is that the Commission found nothing unlawful per se in the compensation paid to Arbuckle Brothers under the contract, although they are compensated upon a gross tonnage which includes their own sugar, for it sanctions its continuance upon condition that a like allowance shall be paid upon the sugar lightered by the Federal Sugar Refining Company. Penn Ref. Co. v. Western New York & P. R. Co. 208 U. S. 208, 218, 52 L. ed. 456, 460, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268.

But, as has already been shown, the railroads were [293] under no obligation to lighter the sugar of the Federal Sugar Refining Company. Upon the other hand, if the lighterage of the Arbuckle sugar was included in the through rate from the Jay Street Station, and a part of the transportation which the railroads were under obligation to perform, and that lighterage was done by Arbuckle Brothers at the instance and procurement of the carriers, they, as owners of the freight thus transported, were entitled to demand a compensation reasonably commensurate with the facilities furnished and the services performed. Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; General Electric Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 237; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Diffenbaugh, 222 U. S. 42, 46, 56 L. ed. 83, 87, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22. In the case last cited, it is said:

"The act of Congress in terms contemplates that if the carrier receives services from an owner of property transported, or uses instrumentalities furnished by the latter, he shall pay for them. That is taken for granted in § 15; the only restriction being, that he shall pay no more than is reasonable, and the only permissive element being that the Commission may determine the maximum in case there is complaint (or now, upon its own motion. Act of June 18, 1910, chap. 309, § 12, 36 Stat. at L. 539, 551, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1301). As the carrier is required to furnish this part of the transportation upon request, he could not be required to do it at his own expense, and there is nothing to prevent his hiring the instrumentality instead of owning it."

Digitized by Google

This principle is not controverted, but the Commission failed to give it application, because, as shown in the excerpt from its report, set out above, it construed this relation of Arbuckle Brothers, under the terms of the contract, in respect of their own shipments of sugar, "as that of shipper up to the moment of time when they physically deliver their sugar to the defendants at the Jersey shore." Again, the Commission say that "the [294] contracts expressly provide that until that moment the sugar is to be handled by Arbuckle Brothers at their own risk, and only until that moment does the carrier's risk begin," etc. Of course, if this was the case, their services up to the time of delivery at the New Jersey shore were shipper's services, purely accessorial, and not connected with or in aid of transportation by the railroad, and, therefore, a discrimination would result unless a like allowance was made to the Federal Sugar Refining Company. But this construction of the contract has no other basis than appears in the clause defining the responsibility of the Terminal Company to the contracting carriers while the freights remain in the Terminal Company's physical possession. That clause reads thus:

"The responsibility of said Terminal Company for eastwardly bound cars and the freights therein shall begin when the cars are placed upon its floats at the said float bridges at the aforesaid station of said railroad company, and shall continue as respects the cars until they have been returned by it, loaded or empty; and as respects the freights contained in eastwardly bound cars, its responsibility shall continue until the actual delivery thereof to and acceptance by the consignees at Brooklyn. As respects the freights to be transported westbound, said Terminal Company's responsibility shall commence at the time the same is received from the consignor at its aforesaid premises, and shall continue until said freights, loaded into cars, have been brought to the float bridge of said railroad company at its aforesaid freight station, and until the floats have been attached to the float bridge and the cars are in complete readiness for removal from the car floats by said railroad company."

That clause deals both with east and westbound freight, and covers both the freight and the cars of the railroad company. It is too plain for argument that its only purpose is to fix the responsibility upon the contracting company [295] for both the cars of the carrier and the freight of all shippers while in its physical possession. The liability imposed is between agent and principal, and is substantially that imposed by general principles of law. It is plainly not intended to affect the responsibility of the carriers to all shippers after the receipt of freight for transportation,—a responsibility which they hold themselves out as assuming by their published tariff sheets.

The contracts between the carriers and the Terminal Company make no distinction whatever between the duty and obligation of the latter company in respect to the shipments of Arbuckle Brothers as sugar refiners, and those made through their station by the general public. Nor was there any distinction recognized by the undisputed course of business under the contracts. When the shipments of Arbuckle Brothers were delivered at the station, carriers' bills of lading were then signed and delivered just as in the case of freight delivered by the general public. If carrier responsibility began at that station for the shipments of the public, it also began as to the freight there received from Arbuckle Brothers. The physical possession of the Arbuckle Sugar, as stated by the Commission, remained with them until actually placed in the possession of the carrier on the New Jersey shore. But that is equally true as to the shipments of the general public. In both cases, however, the possession after such delivery and until delivered at the New Jersey shore was, under the contract, that of Arbuckle Brothers, under the business name of the Terminal Company, as agents of the carrier over whose lines the freight was routed and whose bill of lading had been duly issued. The Commission, while seeming to recognize this relation of agency, in effect deny it as to the freight received and receipted for at the station if it constituted a shipment by Arbuckle Brothers. But neither the words, nor the purpose of the contract, nor the actual method of conducting [296] the business, furnish the slightest reason for any such distinction as that drawn by the Commission. All freight, both in and out of the station, was handled in the same way.

The suggestion in the brief of the Solicitor General for the United States that "joint published tariffs are issued by the railroads and Arbuckle Brothers" has no other foundation of fact than that found in the seventh paragraph of the contract between the Erie Railroad and the Terminal Company, where it is said that the Terminal Company "shall not be required to receive or carry any freight which may, from time to time, be classed as prohibited freights in the joint published tariffs of itself and the railroad company." But there is not a scintilla of evidence that any such joint published tariffs have ever been filed or published, nor that the Terminal Company has ever published or been required to file any tariff sheets whatever. The filed tariff sheets showing the services performed by Arbuckle Brothers, and the facilities provided for extending transportation between the New Jersey terminals and this station, are those published and filed by the railroad companies, who thereby hold themselves out as common carriers to and from this station. That it might originally have been expected that the Terminal Company might join in such published tariffs is possible. That it never did is plain.

Digitized by Google

To say that the "allowance" made to Arbuckle Brothers is an allowance for lightering their own sugar across the river is to only half state the case. This so-called allowance is not only for such lighterage service, but is also compensation for the use of all of the terminal properties, docks, warehouses, tracks, steam lighters, car floats, and every instrumentality used under the contract. It includes the services and responsibility of Arbuckle Brothers, as agents for the several lessees using the station, and their staff of employees engaged in receiving, delivering, [297] loading, and unloading freights thus received, both incoming and outgoing. As the measure of compensation is the tonnage in and out of the station, and as this compensation is paid by the several railroads maintaining the station in proportion to the tonnage which they severally handle, there is a sense in which it is in part an allowance to Arbuckle Brothers upon their own shipments. But they receive the same compensation upon the tonnage of every other shipper through that station, and it is the aggregate of the compensation which must determine the reasonableness of the allowance when we come to deal with it as an allowance to them for services or instrumentalities furnished, under the 15th section of the act to regulate commerce.

That the compensation of 3 and 4½ cents per hundred pounds upon the total tonnage in and out of this station is not unreasonable was and is not challenged, and therefore we pass that subject by.

The contention to which we have hitherto referred, that the arrangement made by the Terminal Company violates the commodity clause of the act to regulate commerce, is not necessary to be considered. There is nothing in the record showing that such a contention was pressed upon the Commission, considered by that body, or that the order rendered was in any respect based upon the commodity clause. Indeed, the order permitted the continuance of the Jay Street Terminal and the business there conducted, providing only that like rights and allowances were made to the Federal Sugar Refining Company. The order, therefore, cannot be assumed to have contemplated that the Jay Street Terminal business was a violation of the commodity clause, since, under that hypothesis, the conclusion would be inevitable that the Commission, by its order, gave sanction to and permitted the continuance of the wrong which its powers were exerted to suppress. As we do not consider the contentions [298] concerning the commodity clause as properly arising for decision, and hence do not pass on them, they are not foreclosed, and hence our action in this case will be without prejudice to the right to assert them in the future if those having the right to do so are so advised.

Viewing the whole case in a broad light, it is apparent that the disadvantage under which the Federal Sugar Refining Company labors is one which arises out of its disadvantageous location. That disadvantage would still remain if the title to the Jay Street Station was in the railroad companies, and its business in charge of a third person.

We fail to find any error in the decree of the Commerce Court holding the order of the Commission void, and its decree is accordingly approved.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

GREEN GARRETT† et al., Individually and as Constituting the Railroad Commission of Kentucky.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 298-320.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — questions not all Federal.

1. All the questions in the case, local as well as Federal, may be determined by a Federal circuit court upon an application for a preliminary injunction to restrain the enforcement of a state statute upon the †Substituted for Siler et al., sued as constituting the Railroad Commission of Kentucky.

Digitized by Google

ground of its unconstitutionality, made under the act of June 18, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 539, chap. 309), § 17, which requires a hearing before three judges, and authorizes an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Courts, 509, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court — extending review beyond Federal question.

2. The Federal Supreme Court, on an appeal from a circuit court, taken under the act of June 18, 1910, § 17, to review an order denying an application before three judges for a preliminary injunction to restrain the enforcement of a state statute on the ground of its unconstitutionality, may consider all the questions in the case, local as well as Federal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4297–4300, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegation of judicial power — rate regulation.

3. Judicial powers were not conferred upon the Kentucky Railroad Commission, contrary to Ky. Const. §§ 27, 28, 109, 135, by the act of March 10, 1900 (Carroll's Ky. Stat. 1909), § 820a, authorizing such commission, upon complaint that the rates of any railroad company are extortionate, or upon its own information to that effect, to fix reasonable rates, if, after a hearing, it finds the rates to be extortionate, such rate order to be "in full force and effect" at the expiration of ten days after notice, subject to revocation and modification by the commission.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, III. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against rate regulation — sufficiency of bill.

4. General allegations in a bill, attacking an order of a state railroad commission fixing maximum freight rates, which in substance state the judgment of the pleader as to what the evidence before the commission did not "establish" or "tend to establish," are wholly insufficient to justify a court in enjoining the enforcement of the rate-making order upon the ground that the commission either had denied the hearing contemplated by statute, or, by its arbitrary action, had been guilty of an abuse of power.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. j. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against rate regulation — discrimination.

5. The enforcement of an order of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, fixing maximum intrastate freight rates on distiller's raw materials and supplies from certain specified places of origin to the places of destination therein mentioned, will not be enjoined, if such order is otherwise valid, because the maintenance by the complaining carrier of other rates to other distillery stations on its road, not yet passed upon by the commission, may bring about the unjust discrimination and undue preference which Ky. Stat. §§ 817 and 819 forbid.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law —equal protection of the laws — rate regulation — judicial review.

6. The failure of the Kentucky act of March 10, 1900, to provide for an appeal to any court from the final order of the state railroad commission fixing maximum freight rates under the authority of that statute, or for a judicial review of the reasonableness of the prescribed rates before they become effective, does not invalidate such statute as operating to deprive the carrier of its property without due process of law, or to deny to it the equal protection of the laws, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., where the statute does not—unless by its separable penal provisions—deny the carrier the right of access to the courts for the purpose of determining any matter which would be the appropriate subject of judicial inquiry.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 266–291, 608–628, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — judicial review of rate regulation.

7. A rate-making order of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, made pursuant to the Kentucky act of March 10, 1900, authorizing such commission, upon complaint that the existing rates of a carrier are extortionate, to fix reasonable rates if, after a hearing, it finds the rates to be extortionate, is not subject to revision of the Federal courts upon the questions of fact as to the reasonableness of the particular rates existing at the time the order was made, as well as of those fixed by the commission.

[For other cases, see Courts, 205–218, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against rate regulation.— sufficiency of bill.

8. A case of confiscation entitling a carrier to injunctive relief against an order fixing maximum intrastate freight rates on certain commodities between specified points is not made by a bill which, apart from general averments, merely alleges that certain specified losses in revenue will result, without any showing as to the value of the property employed, the expense of operation, or the return which will be permitted under the rates prescribed.

[For other cases, see Injunction, I. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — rate regulation.

9. A carrier cannot assert, as against the operation of a rate-making order of the state railroad commission, made under the authority of the Kentucky act of March 10, 1900, the constitutional protection of a contract right under its charter to charge certain rates, where, subsequent to such statute, but prior to the making of such order, its charter became, by the carrier's own voluntary act, subject to legislative alteration, since the commission's order fixing rates is a legislative act under delegated power.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law 1386–1412, 1430–1434, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Digitized by Google

Statutes — invalid in part.

10. The validity of the provisions of the Kentucky act of March 10, 1900, governing rate making by the state railroad commission, is not affected by the possible invalidity of the penalty attached by the statute to the disobedience of the commission's order.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation of local rates of interstate carrier — congressional inaction.

11. Congressional inaction on the subject leaves each state free to establish maximum intrastate rates for interstate carriers which are reasonable in themselves, although the state's requirements may necessarily disturb the existing relation between interstate and intrastate rates as to places within zones of competition crossed by the state boundary line.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c; III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Parties — in suit to enjoin reparation order of railroad commission.

12. Those persons awarded specified amounts by a state railroad commission under the supposed authority of Ky. Stat. §§ 821, 829, in reparation for payments previously made to a carrier for transportation in excess of the rates found by such commission to be reasonable, which awards, on being filed, could be enforced by proceedings in the state courts, are necessary parties to a suit in a Federal court to restrain the enforcement of the reparation order.

[Necessary parties defendant, see Parties, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 23.]

Argued April 4, 1912. Decided December 1, 1913.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Kentucky to review a decree denying an interlocutory injunction to restrain the enforcement of a rate-making order of the Kentucky Railroad Commission. Affirmed.

See same case below, 186 Fed. 176.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry L. Stone and Albert S. Brandeis argued the cause, and, with Mr. William G. Dearing, filed a brief for appellant:

The McChord act violates the state Constitution by undertaking to confer upon the railroad commission judicial powers.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 222; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 335; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Roberts v. Hackney, 109 Ky. 265, 58 S. W. 810, 59 S. W. 328; Pratt v. Breckinridge, 112 Ky. 1, 65 S. W. 136, 66 S. W. 405; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 495, 46 L. ed. 295, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 499, 42 L. ed. 253, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

The fact that the Kentucky court of appeals decided that the railroad company could be compelled, in a suit brought by the state, to render a service which was essentially its duty to perform, under its charter or the general laws of the state, cannot be used to sustain the contention of the appellees that the commonwealth has a right to institute an action for a mandamus or a mandatory injunction to force a carrier to obey an order of the commission, fixing rates for the transportation of freight.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262–278, 54 L. ed. 472–479, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

The McChord act, as administered by the commission, operates to deprive the carrier of its property without due process of law, and to deny to the carrier the equal protection of the laws.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 458, 33 L. ed. 981, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 394, 399, 38 L. ed. 1022, 1024, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 224; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 460, 33 L. ed. 982, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 502, 506; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 107, 24 L. ed. 620; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 418, 42 L. ed. 221, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Violett v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 569, 31 L.R.A. 382, 53 Am. St. Rep. 825, 23 S. E. 909; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 409, 44 L. ed. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

Appellant is entitled to just and reasonable compensation for each separate service, and if compelled to accept less compensation, without a judicial hearing, it is deprived of its property in violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment.

Digitized by Google

Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Storey, 149 Fed. 499; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 102 Tex. 338, 113 S. W. 741, on rehearing, 102 Tex. 353, 116 S. W. 796; Railroad Commission v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Tex. 340, 38 S. W. 755; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. 214 U. S. 297, 53 L. ed. 1004, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 147, 52 L. ed. 723, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Railroad Commission v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 212 U. S. 414, 53 L. ed. 577, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 95, 46 L. ed. 103, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 580, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The mere fact that an increase has been made by a carrier is no evidence whatever that the rate as increased is unreasonable, nor does even a legal presumption arise from such fact that it is unreasonable.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 697, 43 L. ed. 858, 864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119, 120, 52 L. ed. 712, 713, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The McChord act, by reason of its penalty provisions, violates the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 100, 46 L. ed. 105, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 147, 52 L. ed. 723, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

To take away appellant's right to charge and collect the maximum rates fixed in its charter, there must be found a statute expressly repealing its charter in that respect.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 225; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 142, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129; Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L.R.A. 274, 76 N. W. 635; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Robbins, 33 Ky. L. Rep. 778, 111 S. W. 283.

The effect of the statute is to deny to the parties the right to introduce before the court material and competent evidence affecting the matter in contest, and, so far as concerns the carrier defendant, to deny to it the right to make a defense based upon such evidence. A statute that does this denies to the carrier due process of law. It excludes by statute such evidence from consideration in the judicial investigation, and does not differ in principle from giving to the order of the commission a conclusive effect.

Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409–413, 42 L. ed. 215–219, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; 2 Wigmore, Ev. § 1353; Birdsong v. Brooks, 7 Ga. 88; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 277, 23 L. ed. 914, 915.

The commission has no powers except such as have been expressly granted by the state Constitution or the legislature.

State ex rel. La Follette v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 16 S. D. 517, 94 N. W. 407; Railroad Comrs. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 17 Or. 65, 2 L.R.A. 195, 19 Pac. 702; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 494, 42 L. ed. 243, 251, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; 2 Elliott, Railroads, 2d ed. § 684; Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 175, 53 L. ed. 753, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 38 Ind. App. 439, 78 N. E. 338, 79 N. E. 520.

The facts established show an interference with, and burden upon, and a regulation of, interstate commerce which is prohibited by settled principles of law.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 92, 101, 45 L. ed. 765, 770, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 2, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Shepard v. Northern P. R. Co. 184 Fed. 770; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A.(N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

Messrs. Henry L. Stone, Albert S. Brandeis, William G. Dearing, and William A. Colston, also filed a brief for appellant:

The court will take judicial notice that the elements of intrastate traffic handled on interstate railroads, and the elements of interstate traffic handled on such railroads, are so intermixed, interdependent, indivisible, and inseparable that it is impossible, in connection with such railroads, to regulate or adjust the one kind of traffic without regulating, adjusting, and interfering with the other kind of traffic.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, 91 Fed. 52; McPherson, Workings of Railroads, p. 91;

Digitized by Google

Johnson, American R. Transp. pp. 272, 274; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Pilgreen, 62 Ala. 307; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 37, 54 L. ed. 355, 370, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

The authorities cited by appellees are not in conflict with appellant's proposition; and where appellees' conclusions of law in this respect are opposed to the proposition, such conclusions of law are not supported by the authorities cited.

Shepard v. Northern P. R. Co. 184 Fed. 765; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 195, 6 L. ed. 23, 69; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 564, 19 L. ed. 999, 1001; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 27, 54 L. ed. 355, 366, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 288, 31 L. ed. 149, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 180, 48 L. ed. 134, 138, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 56 L. ed. 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 26, 48 L. ed. 325, 327, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 30, 49 L. ed. 925, 930, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 562, 35 L. ed. 572, 576, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 533, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 227, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1037, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 268, 23 L. ed. 543, 547; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 328, 331, 50 L. ed. 772, 775, 776, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The Federal power over commerce is exclusive whenever a uniform rule of regulation is required.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 224, 225, 231, 6 L. ed. 23, 70, 76–78; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 319, 13 L. ed. 996, 1004; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 280, 21 L. ed. 146, 163; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 280–282, 23 L. ed. 347, 349, 350; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 272, 23 L. ed. 543, 549; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 203, 204, 29 L. ed. 158, 161, 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 92, 100, 101, 45 L. ed. 765, 769, 770, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 391, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 399, 400, 12 L. ed. 702, 750, 751; The Federalist, Nos. 7 and 22.

The Federal power over commerce is exclusive not only with respect to interstate traffic, but also with respect to intrastate traffic which extends to or affects other states.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 136, 195, 6 L. ed. 23, 55, 69; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 103, 39 L. ed. 910, 912, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 147, 52 L. ed. 723, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

The test of the validity of the state regulation is to be found in its effect upon commerce among the states.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 195, 6 L. ed. 23, 69; Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 533, 54 L. ed. 868, 871, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 227, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1037, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 27, 54 L. ed. 355, 366, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 268, 23 L. ed. 543, 547.

The record shows the commission exceeded its powers and jurisdiction, and the orders complained of are void, within the doctrine announced in Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Western Oregon Lumber Mfrs. Asso. v. Southern P. Co. 14 Inters. Com. Rep. 61; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 119, 120, 52 L. ed. 712, 713, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Lake Shore & M. S. R.

Digitized by Google

Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 697, 43 L. ed. 858, 864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 147, 52 L. ed. 723, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

The rate orders of the Kentucky Railroad Commission cannot be lawfully made final and conclusive, or beyond judicial review upon the question of the reasonableness of the rates prescribed thereby.

Ex parte Young, supra; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 335; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 56 L. ed. 308, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Railroad Commission v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 212 U. S. 414, 420, 53 L. ed. 577, 580, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

The contention of appellees' counsel that the Kentucky Railroad Commission possesses judicial powers is untenable.

Hannibal Bridge Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 194, 55 L. ed. 699, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 53 L. ed. 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

The remedy provided in the McChord act for the enforcement of the commission's rate-making orders is exclusive of all others.

Com. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 120 Ky. 91, 85 S. W. 712.

Mr. Edward W. Hines argued the cause, and, with Mr. James Breathitt, former Attorney General of Kentucky, and Messrs. Charles C. McChord, J. Van Norman, and John F. Lockett, filed a brief for appellees:

The only judicial inquiry which can be demanded as to rates fixed by law is as to whether or not they are confiscatory.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 53 L. ed. 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Noyes, Am. R. Rates, p. 211; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 331, 29 L. ed. 636, 644, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 L. ed. 176, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

The provision for penalties may be eliminated from the McChord act and the remainder of the statute upheld.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129.

It is contended that the act is void because it applies to railroad carriers alone, and not to other carriers, and thus deprives railroad carriers of the equal protection of the laws. To this objection the case of Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191, is a complete answer.

It is manifest that the court had no thought when it decided in Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 175, 53 L. ed. 753, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451, that the commission had no power to make a schedule of rates, that such a construction of the statute would of itself render the statute void.

A statute authorizing the reduction of a rate upon complaint is not objectionable as discriminating against companies against which complaints were filed.

Southern P. Co. v. Bartine, 170 Fed. 725.

The act does not confer upon the railroad commission legislative, executive, and judicial powers.

Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 53 L. ed. 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, E. L. & P. Co. 191 N. Y. 123, 18 L.R.A.(N.S.) 713, 83 N. E. 693, 14 Ann. Cas. 606; Southern P. Co. v. Bartine, supra; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Pennington v. Woolfolk, 79 Ky. 13.

The court of appeals of Kentucky has shown that it is disposed to construe liberally the provisions of the Kentucky Constitution and statutes relating to the railroad commission, in order to give that body as large powers in the regulation of the railroads of the state as is possible under the Federal Constitution.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 106 Ky. 633, 90 Am. St. Rep. 236, 51 S. W. 164, 1012; Com. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 120 Ky. 91, 85 S. W. 712.

Digitized by Google

The fact that the carrier had for many years prior to March, 1910, charged much lower rates than those it was charging at the time of the hearing before the commission made it incumbent upon the carrier to give a good reason for the change; and it does not appear from its bill that it made any attempt to do so.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Memphis Cotton Oil Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 313.

All of the objections which relate to the readjustment of rates which will become necessary if the order of the commission is obeyed go to the expediency of the order, and not to the power of the commission.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

Complainant must first present all the facts bearing on the reasonableness of the rates to the railroad commission before resorting to the Federal courts.

Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 53 L. ed. 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

Any corporation accepting the provisions of the Kentucky Constitution becomes subject to all legislation enacted after the adoption of the Constitution.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Newport & C. Bridge Co. v. Gill, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 942, 53 S. W. 650.

The order of the commission was not a regulation of interstate commerce.

Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 288, 31 L. ed. 149, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 191 U. S. 171, 180, 48 L. ed. 134, 138, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 26, 48 L. ed. 325, 327, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 30, 49 L. ed. 925, 930, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 521, 42 L. ed. 819, 840, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 519, 46 L. ed. 298, 306, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 179, 53 L. ed. 755, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

It is only where its power is exclusive that the failure of Congress to make express regulations indicates its will that the subject shall be left free from any restriction.

Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

And even as to some matters as to which the power of Congress when exercised is exclusive, any action taken by the state must be respected until Congress intervenes.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 488, 48 L. ed. 268, 272, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. 211 U. S. 612, 53 L. ed. 352, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Saunders v. Southern Exp. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 422; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

While Congress can neither delegate its own powers nor enlarge those of a state, yet it may adopt as its own the law of a state, provided the law be one which it would have been competent for it to enact.

Re Rahrer, supra.

We deny that Congress either has the power to prohibit the granting of favors to intrastate shipments as against interstate shipments, or has attempted to exercise that power.

Kehrer v. Stewart, 197 U. S. 60, 49 L. ed. 663, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Louisville & N. R. Co. v.

Digitized by Google

Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is quite as free to regulate interstate rates after the state has limited intrastate rates as it was before; and whatever regulation it may make will be purely voluntary.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Re Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 180; Hope Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 265; Saunders v. Southern Exp. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 415; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

If the power of the state to regulate intrastate rates depended upon whether or not interstate rates were made by combining intrastate rates, it would be within the power of the carrier to withdraw all intrastate rates from regulation by the state, and the power of the state would depend upon the form of the carrier's tariffs.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

If it be an injustice for Covington to have lower rates to interior Kentucky points than Cincinnati has, the injustice is one that either the carrier or the Interstate Commerce Commission may remove. But if the carrier should refuse to lower rates from Cincinnati, and the Interstate Commerce Commission should determine that the carrier ought not to be required to lower those rates, then such injustice or inconvenience as might result would be one of the unavoidable effects of our dual form of government.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

Changes in interstate rates, made from business policy, to meet changed business conditions brought about by a state regulation of intrastate rates, cannot be said to result directly from such state regulation.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

It has repeatedly been held by this court that a state statute requiring an interstate carrier to assign colored intrastate passengers to coaches other than those provided for white passenger is not a regulation of interstate commerce.

Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 179 U. S. 388, 45 L. ed. 244, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101.

The court recognizes the right of carriers to refuse to apply to interstate passengers state regulations as to intrastate passengers, even though discrimination may result; but, as a matter of business policy, the carrier finds it desirable to apply to interstate passengers the rule which the state imposes upon him as to intrastate passengers, and this the court has held he has the right to do.

Chiles v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 218 U. S. 71, 54 L. ed. 936, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667, 20 Ann. Cas. 980.

State regulations do not violate the commerce clause unless, by their "necessary operation," they affect interstate commerce; and it cannot be said that changes in interstate rates voluntarily made by a carrier, as a matter of business policy, to meet changes in intrastate rates forced upon him by the state, are a part of the "necessary operation" of the state regulation.

Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 165, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

That it is necessary for the protection of shippers that the power to require intrastate rates to be reduced shall exist somewhere cannot be doubted, and the question is whether the state or Congress shall have that power. It being clear that Congress has not the power, it follows that the state must have the power.

Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

Neither the McChord act nor the rate order complained of is a regulation of interstate commerce.

Perkins v. Northern P. R. Co. 155 Fed. 445; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hadley, 168 Fed. 317; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Campbell, 173 Fed. 957; Re Arkansas Rate Cases, 187 Fed. 290; Re Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 180; Hastings Malting Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 675; Saunders v. Southern Exp. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 415.

Complainant has an adequate remedy at law.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

The right to injunction must be free from doubt.

Ibid.; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co.

Digitized by Google

212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward W. Hines, Charles C. McChord, and J. Van Norman, filed a brief for appellees:

Regardless of any mistakes made by the commission in the inferences which it drew from the evidence, the law presumes that the rates which it has fixed are reasonable, and the burden is upon the carrier to show that they are unreasonable.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Railroad Commission v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 212 U. S. 414, 53 L. ed. 577, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

The fact that the carrier has for many years given certain rates to the principal shippers of a commodity tends to show to some extent what would be a just and reasonable rate to all shippers of that commodity, no change of conditions being shown.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 119, 52 L. ed. 705, 712, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

The court cannot assume that the evidence as to the old rate was the only evidence heard by the commission.

Railroad Commission v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. supra.

If the evidence was not preserved, the court must assume that there was some evidence to support the conclusions of the commission. There is no reason why the complainant should not at least state the substance of the evidence.

Shoemaker v. National Mechanics' Bank, 31 Md. 396, 100 Am. Dec. 73.

The allegation that the carrier will be compelled to do certain things if the order of the commission is enforced is not a statement of an existing fact, and is therefore not admitted by the demurrer.

Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 524, 54 L. ed. 868, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

There must, in any event, be an allegation that the rate or rates in question are so low as to deprive the carrier of his property without due process of law before the court can interfere upon that ground, and such an allegation is wanting here. But even if such an allegation were made, it would not be sufficient without the further allegation of some fact from which the court might conclude that the rate would deprive the carrier of his property without due process of law.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 401, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1024, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The McChord act does not confer judicial power on the railroad commission.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Gibbs v. Louisville, 99 Ky. 490, 36 S. W. 524.

The failure of the railroad company to prove before the commission the effect on other rates which the changes asked for in existing rates would have is a bar to an injunction on the ground that the effect would be to reduce other rates.

Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 12 L. ed. 111; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 17 How. 443, 15 L. ed. 123.

The carrier cannot complain that discrimination would result from the enforcement of the order of the commission.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 54 L. ed. 946, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Commerce among the states, within the meaning of the commerce clause, is only that commerce which crosses state lines.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 195, 196, 6 L. ed. 69, 70; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 573, 30 L. ed. 244, 249, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

The court has repeatedly recognized the distinction between direct and indirect burdens upon interstate commerce as affecting the validity of state regulations.

Pabst Brewing Co. v. Crenshaw, 198 U. S. 17, 49 L. ed. 925, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

The power of the state to regulate intrastate traffic is not determined by the actual effect of the regulation as shown by the proof in each case as it arises.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129.

The power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce does not impair the power of the states to adopt regulations for the protection of their people.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co.

Digitized by Google

v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

Congress, while regulating interstate rates, has elected to leave to the states the regulation of intrastate rates, and thereby has decided that there need not be uniformity of regulation.

Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from an order denying a motion for an interlocutory injunction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Siler, 186 Fed. 176. The motion was heard by three judges, and the appeal is taken under § 17 of the act of June 18, 1910, chap. 309, 36 Stat. at L. 539, 557.

The suit was brought by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Kentucky, to enjoin the enforcement of two orders made by the railroad commission of that state on August 10, 1910. One of these orders prescribed maximum freight rates for certain intrastate traffic; that is, for the transportation of corn, rye, barley, malt, empty barrels, boxes, etc., from three points of origin,—Louisville, Covington, and Newport,—to sixteen points of destination in Kentucky. The second order awarded specified amounts in reparation for payments previously made to the carrier for such transportation in excess of the rates found to be reasonable.

For many years, the railroad company had given special rates to the owners of distilleries along its lines in Kentucky for the transportation of the commodities above mentioned, which constituted their raw materials and supplies. These rates were withdrawn on March 25, 1910, and what are described as the standard rates of the company, that is, those which had theretofore been charged to others than distillers, were substituted. Thereupon, numerous distillery companies complained to the railroad commission of the state, insisting that the new rates were exorbitant and that the former rates were just [302] and reasonable. After hearing, the commission sustained the contention of the petitioners, and fixed the maximum rates in question. These rates were the same as the special rates which, prior to March 25, 1910, the railroad company had given to the distillery companies; but, by the commission's order, the rates as fixed were made applicable to the transportation between the points stated, of the described commodities, without distinction as to persons or as to the use to be made of the commodities by the consignees.

The statute under which the commission acted, in establishing these rates, is that of March 10, 1900, known as the McChord act (Ky. Stat. § 820a, Carroll's ed. 1909).† It provides in substance that when complaint shall be made to the railroad commission, accusing any railroad company of charging extortionate rates, or when the commission shall receive information or have reason to believe that such rates are being charged, it shall be its duty "to hear and determine the matter as speedily as possible." The commissioners are to give the company complained of not less than ten days' notice, stating the time and place of hearing and the nature of the complaint or matter to be investigated. They "shall hear such statements, argument, or evidence offered by the parties as the commission may deem relevant, and should the commission determine that the company or corporation is, or has been, guilty of extortion, said commission shall make and fix a just and reasonable rate, toll, or compensation, which said railroad company or corporation may charge, collect, or receive for like services thereafter rendered." The rate so fixed is to be entered as an order on the record book of the commission; a copy thereof is to be mailed to a representative of the railroad company [303] affected, and it is to be "in full force and effect at the expiration of ten days thereafter, and may be revoked or modified by an order likewise entered of record." If the railroad company, or any officer, agent, or employee thereof, charges a greater rate for like services thereafter, "said company . . . and said officer, agent, or employee, shall each be deemed guilty of extortion, and upon conviction shall be fined for the first offense in any sum not less than $500, nor more that $1,000, and upon a second conviction, in any sum not less than $1,000 nor more than $2,000, and for a third and succeeding conviction in any sum not less than $2,000 nor more than $5,000." The circuit court, in the appropriate counties as prescribed by the statute, is to have jurisdiction of such prosecutions, which are to be by indictment.

The bill attacked the statute and the action of the commission, as violative of the rights secured to the complainant by the Federal Constitution. Objections were also made under the Constitution and statutes of the state. Demurrers were filed, but upon these no decision was made. The motion for preliminary injunction was heard upon bill and affidavits. In denying the motion, the court did not pass upon the validity of the second order, as it was of the opinion that those in whose favor the award of reparation had been made were "necessary parties in interest;" these had not been brought in. 186 Fed. 176, 203.

†This statute is set forth in full in McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 483, 485, 46 L. ed. 289, 290, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165, and in Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 175, 178-180, 53 L. ed. 753-755, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451.

Digitized by Google

First. The order fixing rates.

Because of the Federal questions raised by the bill the circuit court had jurisdiction and was authorized to determine all the questions in the case, local as well as Federal. Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 175, 191, 53 L. ed. 753, 757, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451. A similar rule must be deemed to govern the application for preliminary injunction under the statute which requires a hearing before three judges, and authorizes an [304] appeal to this court. 36 Stat. at L. 557, chap. 309. This statute applies to cases in which the preliminary injunction is sought in order to restrain the enforcement of a state enactment upon the ground of its "unconstitutionality." The reference, undoubtedly, is to an asserted conflict with the Federal Constitution, and the question of unconstitutionality, in this sense, must be a substantial one. But, where such a question is presented, the application is within the provision, and this being so, it cannot be supposed that it was the intention of Congress to compel the exclusion of other grounds, and thus to require a separate motion for preliminary injunction, and a separate hearing and appeal, with respect to the local questions which are involved in the case, and would properly be the subject of consideration in determining the propriety of granting an injunction pending suit. The local questions arising under the state Constitution and statutes were therefore before the circuit court and the appeal brings them here. They may be first considered.

1. It is objected that the act of March 10, 1900, violates §§ 27, 28, 109, and 135 of the state Constitution† by undertaking [305] to confer judicial powers upon the commission. By these sections, provision is explicitly made for three distinct departments of government; the judicial power of the commonwealth is vested in the courts established by the Constitution, and no judicial power can be exercised by any other officer except those thus named unless authorized by some other provision of that instrument. Roberts v. Hackney, 109 Ky. 265, 268, 58 S. W. 810, 59 S. W. 328; Pratt v. Breckinridge, 112 Ky. 1, 65 S. W. 136, 66 S. W. 405.

So far as we are advised, the court of appeals of Kentucky has not passed upon the validity of the act in question; and this court has often expressed its reluctance to adjudge a state statute to be in conflict with the Constitution of the state before that question has been considered by the state tribunals,—to which it properly belongs,—unless the case imperatively demands such a decision. Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 144, 25 L. ed. 901; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 291, 50 L. ed. 744, 760, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459. Here, the argument against the statute is not of that compelling character.

It has frequently been pointed out that prescribing rates for the future is an act legislative, and not judicial, in kind. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 499, 42 L. ed. 243, 253, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 483, 495, 46 L. ed. 289, 295, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 226, 53 L. ed. 150, 158, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 8, 53 L. ed. 371, 378, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148. It pertains, broadly speaking, to the legislative power. The legislature may act directly, or, in the absence of constitutional restriction, it may commit the authority to fix rates to a subordinate body. Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 336, 29 L. ed. 636, 646, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 393, 394, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 19, 51 L. ed. 933, 941, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep.

†The provisions referred to are as follows:

"Section 27. The powers of the government of the commonwealth of Kentucky shall be divided into three distinct departments, and each of them be confined to a separate body of magistracy, to wit: Those which are legislative to one; those which are executive to another; and those which are judicial to another.

"Section 28. No person, or collection of persons, being of one of those departments, shall exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except in the instances hereinafter expressly directed or permitted."

"Section 109. The judicial power of the commonwealth, both as to matters of law and equity, shall be vested in the senate when sitting as a court of impeachment, and one supreme court (to be styled the court of appeals), and the courts established by this Constitution."

"Section 135. No courts save those provided for in this Constitution shall be established."

Digitized by Google

585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Hawaii, 211 U. S. 282, 291, 53 L. ed. 186, 188, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 221 [306] U. S. 400, 403, 55 L. ed. 786, 787, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537. The Railroad Commission of Kentucky was established by § 209 of the Constitution (adopted in the year 1891), which provided that "the powers and duties of the railroad commissioners shall be regulated by law," and that "until otherwise provided by law, the commission so created shall have the same powers and jurisdiction, perform the same duties, be subject to the same regulations, and receive the same compensation, as now conferred, prescribed, and allowed by law to the existing railroad commissioners;" and by § 218 of the same instrument (the long and short haul provision) the commission was authorized "in special cases, after investigation," to permit a less charge for longer than for shorter distances, and to "prescribe the extent" to which the common carrier might be "relieved from the operations" of the section. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 106 Ky. 633, 90 Am. St. Rep. 236, 51 S. W. 164, 1012, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95. It is unnecessary to review the statutes defining the powers of the then-existing commission, to which § 209 refers (Gen. Stat. [Ky.] ed. 1888, pp. 1021 et seq.; act of March 7, 1890, I Acts 1889-90, p. 25). For, while the former commission had not been authorized to fix rates, it can hardly be doubted that the Constitution, in providing that the powers and duties of the new commission should be regulated by law, contemplated that it should be available as an appropriate instrument in the supervision and regulation of railroads, and left the legislature free to adopt, if it saw fit, a practice already familiar (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 495, 496, 42 L. ed. 243, 251, 252, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896), and to call this agency to its aid in prescribing reasonable intrastate rates. This authority the legislature granted by the act of March 10, 1900, empowering the commission where, as in this case, particular rates were found to be exorbitant, to fix the reasonable rates thereafter to be charged. Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 213 U. S. 175, 197, 53 L. ed. 753, 760, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451.

[307] The contention is that, before the commission makes such an order, it is required to exercise judicial functions. It is first to determine whether the carrier has been exacting more than is just and reasonable; it is to give notice and a hearing; it is to "hear such statements, arguments, or evidence offered by the parties" as it may deem relevant; and it is in case it determines that the carrier is "guilty of extortion" that it is to prescribe the just and reasonable rate. Still, the hearing and determination, viewed as prerequisite to the fixing of rates, are merely preliminary to the legislative act. To this act, the entire proceeding led; and it was this consequence which gave to the proceeding its distinctive character. Very properly, and it might be said, necessarily,—even without the express command of the statute,—would the commission ascertain whether the former, or existing, rate, was unreasonable before it fixed a different rate. And in such an inquiry, for the purpose of prescribing a rule for the future, there would be no invasion of the province of the judicial department. Even where it is essential to maintain strictly the distinction between the judicial and other branches of the government, it must still be recognized that the ascertainment of facts, or the reaching of conclusions upon evidence taken in the course of a hearing of parties interested, may be entirely proper in the exercise of executive or legislative, as distinguished from judicial, powers. The legislature, had it seen fit, might have conducted similar inquiries through committees of its members, or specially constituted bodies, upon whose report as to the reasonableness of existing rates it would decide whether or not they were extortionate and whether other rates should be established, and it might have used methods like those of judicial tribunals in the endeavor to elicit the facts. It is "the nature of the final act" that determines "the nature of the previous inquiry." Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 227, 53 L. ed. 150, 159, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

[308] It is also urged in support of the objection that the order of the commission is to be "in full force and effect" at the expiration of ten days after notice, and that this is the equivalent of a declaration that the order shall be final and conclusive; but the finality of the act did not change its essential character. So far as it was final, unless revoked or modified by the commission, it was final as a legislative act within the commission's authority.

2. It is contended that the commission acted arbitrarily. We are referred to the allegations of the bill that there was "no testimony" before the commission "that did establish or that tended to establish" the unjust or unreasonable nature of any of the rates maintained by the appellant; that there was "no evidence" introduced in the investigation or considered by the commission "showing or tending to show" that the appellant's rates were, "in and of themselves, unjust, unreasonable, or extortionate;" that the evidence "had no proper relation" to the reasonableness of rates for transporting the commodities in question when they were to be used for distillery purposes; and that "no evidence whatsoever was adduced at the hearing and investigation aforesaid, which showed or tended to show in the slightest degree what was or might be a just or reasonable rate to be charged" for the transportation described in the commission's order.

Digitized by Google

But it appears that upon receiving the complaint of the distillers with respect to the rates which the appellant had put into effect, the commission set the matter for hearing; that the parties were heard; that each party produced a number of witnesses; and that the appellant, represented by counsel, was permitted to cross-examine the witnesses of the complainants. The rates as fixed by the commission were the same as those which for many years had been maintained by the appellant for the distillers' supplies. The evidence taken by the commission was not before the court below; and the general allegations of [309] the bill, which in substance stated the judgment of the pleader as to what such evidence did not "establish" or "tend to establish," and the statements contained in the affidavits submitted upon the application for injunction, were utterly insufficient to justify the court in enjoining the rates upon the ground that the commission either had denied the hearing which the statute contemplated, or by its arbitrary action had been guilty of an abuse of power.

It is also charged, invoking a doctrine analogous to that declared in Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 53 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298, that the commission assumed a power which it did not possess by proceeding upon the theory of a supposed equitable estoppel in favor of the distillers because they had been induced to erect and extend their plants upon the faith of the former rates. This contention finds no support in the record. The commission purported to act under its statutory authority, and, finding the rates charged by the carrier to be extortionate, fixed other rates which they declared to be reasonable.

Again, it is further said that the enforcement of the rate order should have been enjoined in order to prevent unjust discriminations and undue preferences in contravention of §§ 817 and 818 of the Kentucky statutes. Section 817 prohibits unjust discrimination in charges, as between persons, for like and contemporaneous service in transportation. Section 818 makes it unlawful to give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to one person or locality as compared with another. Section 819 prescribes penalties for violation, the prosecution to be by indictment. The point of this objection is that obedience to the commission's order with respect to the traffic from the three places of origin to the sixteen places of destination therein mentioned will bring about discrimination in intrastate rates, contrary to these statutes, as against thirty-two other distillery stations on the lines [310] of the appellant, the distillers at which, so far as appears, have not complained of the appellant's rates.

In view of the decision in Com. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 491, 46 S. W. 700, to the effect that the provisions of § 818 are too uncertain to support a criminal proceeding under § 819, it is not contended by the appellant that it would be subject to the prescribed penalties so far as § 818 is concerned. And it is urged by the attorney general of the state, on behalf of the appellees, that § 817 does not apply to discrimination as between localities.

But, aside from these considerations, we find the objection to be without merit. The commission dealt with the question before it, and, on complaint as to the rates to the sixteen points of destination, ordered what it found to be reasonable rates for that transportation. In so doing, it acted in conformity with the statute. To give legality to its order as to the particular rates in question, it was not necessary for the commission to require a reduction in other rates. Certainly, the fact that the other rates described, which had not yet been passed upon by the commission, might likewise be open to the objection of unreasonableness, and that their maintenance by the appellant might lead to unjust discrimination, would furnish no basis for restraining the enforcement of the commission's order if that order were otherwise valid.

3. The order is further attacked upon the ground that the statute under which it was made operates to deprive the carrier of its property without due process of law, and to deny to it the equal protection of the laws, contrary to the 14th Amendment.

It is insisted that the failure to provide for an appeal to any court from the final order of the commission, or for a judicial review of the reasonableness of the prescribed rates before they become effective, makes the statute [311] void. But the statute does not deny to the carrier the right of access to the courts for the purpose of determining any matter which would be the appropriate subject of judicial inquiry.

Digitized by Google

We have not been referred to any decision of the state court holding that the statute should be so construed (Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 456, 33 L. ed. 970, 980, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702). If the commission establishes rates that are so unreasonably low as to be confiscatory, an appropriate mode of obtaining relief is by bill in equity to restrain the enforcement of the order. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 459, 460, 33 L. ed. 970, 982, 983, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 659, 666, 39 L. ed. 567, 570, 573, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 166, 52 L. ed. 705, 731, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764. Presumably, the courts of the state, as well as the Federal courts, would be open to the carrier for this purpose (Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 278, 53 L. ed. 176, 184, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50) without express statutory provision to that effect. In answer to the present objection, it is sufficient to say that there is no showing here of an attempt to preclude such resort to the courts, or to deny to the carrier the assertion of its rights, unless it can be found in the severity of the penalties attached to disobedience of the order. And, if it were assumed that these would be open to objection as operating to deprive the carrier of a fair opportunity to contest the validity of the commission's action, still, the penal provisions would be separable, and the force of the remaining portion of the statute would not be impaired. Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 395, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53, 54, 53 L. ed. 382, 400, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Grenada Lumber Co. v. Mississippi, 217 U. S. 433, 443, 54 L. ed. 826, 831, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, 224 U. S. 160, 172, 56 L. ed. 710, 717, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 380, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1534, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Southern P. Co. v. Campbell, 230 U. S. 537, 553, 57 L. ed. 1610, 1625, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1027.

4. The appellant, however, submits a broader contention which concerns the scope of the review to which it is entitled in this suit, and the nature of the judicial function [312] where rates fixed by the legislature, or under its direction, are assailed as unreasonable.

It is urged that so long as a carrier's existing rates are just and reasonable for the services it performs, it is within its constitutional and statutory rights; that what constitutes a just and reasonable rate for the services it has performed is a question of fact upon which the carrier is entitled to a judicial hearing; that even more clearly is it entitled to such a hearing, if, as a consequence of a decision by the commission that it has exceeded the limits of just and reasonable compensation for past services, it "must forfeit in favor of such statutory body its rate-making power, and be deprived of that property right with respect to 'like services thereafter rendered,' as provided in the McChord act." It is said further, that under the statute the finding from the evidence that the carrier has charged more than a reasonable compensation is "the essential jurisdictional fact" which must exist before the commission can fix rates, and it is insisted that if, upon a judicial investigation and the evidence adduced by the parties, it turns out that this jurisdictional fact did not exist, then the commission's entire action must be regarded as null and void, without regard to the question whether the new rates prescribed by it, in such circumstances, are reasonable or unreasonable, compensatory or confiscatory. It is therefore contended that the appellant is now entitled to a judicial hearing upon the questions of fact as to the reasonableness of the particular rates existing at the time the order was made, as well as of those fixed by the commission; and that in this view the injunction asked for should have been granted.

These arguments are elaborated and earnestly pressed; but the questions presented have been so frequently dealt with by this court that an extended discussion is unnecessary. The right of the carrier to make its own intrastate rates is subject to the law of the state, constitutionally [313] enacted. In the absence of a legislative rate, it is the province of the courts in deciding cases that arise between shippers and carriers to pass upon the reasonableness of the compensation which the carrier has demanded for its services. In so doing, the courts apply the common law. But it is the province of the legislature to make the law; and when the legislature, or the body acting under its authority, establishes the rate to be thereafter charged by the carrier, it is the duty of the courts to enforce the rule of law so made unless the constitutional limits of the rate-making power have been transgressed. The rate-making power necessarily implies a range of legislative discretion; and, so long as the legislative action is within its proper sphere, the courts are not entitled to interpose and upon their own investigation of traffic conditions and transportation problems to substitute their judgment with respect to the reasonableness of rates for that of the legislature or of the railroad commission exercising its delegated power. It may be assumed that the statute of Kentucky forbade arbitrary action; it required a hearing, the consideration of the relevant statements, evidence, and arguments submitted, and a determination by the commission whether the existing rates were excessive. But, on these conditions being fulfilled, the questions of fact which might arise as to the reasonableness of the existing rates in the consideration preliminary to legislative action would not become, as such, judicial questions to be re-examined by the courts. The appropriate questions for the courts would be whether the commission acted within the authority duly conferred by the legislature, and also, so far as the amount of compensation permitted by the prescribed rates is concerned, whether the commission went beyond the domain of the state's legislative power and violated the constitutional rights of property by imposing confiscatory requirements. Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 331, 29 L. ed. 636, 644, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; [314] Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 397-399, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1023, 1024, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 526, 42 L. ed. 819, 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 446, 47 L. ed. 892, 896, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 8, 17, 53 L. ed. 371, 378, 381, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 41, 53 L. ed. 382, 395, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 433, 434, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1555, 1556, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729. Undoubtedly, a state may permit appeals to its courts from the rate-making orders of its railroad commission, and, upon the review of such orders, it may expressly authorize its judicial tribunals to investigate and decide questions which otherwise would not belong to them, or even to act legislatively (Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 227, 53 L. ed. 150, 159, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67). But the guaranties of the 14th Amendment do not entitle the carrier to the exercise by the courts of such extrajudicial authority.

Digitized by Google

5. With respect to the question of confiscation, the circuit court ruled that the bill did not "clearly tender an issue that could be said to involve confiscatory rates." The court also referred in its opinion to the statement in the brief of complainant's counsel that the complainant was not bound in this case "to allege or prove that the new rates were confiscatory," and also to an oral disclaimer of a purpose to rely upon any such contention. "This concession," the court said, "we think, was but natural, in view of the history of the rates which the railroad company voluntarily maintained for years prior to March 25, 1910, as before pointed out. No averment is made touching the proportions in volume of distillers' traffic and of nondistillers' traffic, and it could not be assumed that the company had been carrying distillers' supplies and products at confiscatory rates, nor that the extension of those rates to all similar traffic on the lines in question would amount to the confiscation of property." 186 Fed. 176, 191.

It is explained by the appellant that what was conceded [315] below was that the bill as amended did not aver that the rates fixed by the commission would result in the confiscation of appellant's property on its entire intrastate business, but that it is insisted, and was insisted below, that the rates would not yield a fair or reasonable compensation for the services performed, and would deprive the company of the fair and reasonable return which it is entitled to earn upon the property devoted to such services, with respect to the described traffic.

Without passing upon the general propositions advanced in argument, it suffices to say that we are of the opinion that the bill as amended wholly failed to make a case entitling the appellant to the relief sought. Apart from the merely general averments, it is alleged that the rates fixed by the order would cause an annual loss in revenue on intrastate freight of at least $15,600, and also that, in consequence of the effect on interstate rates, there would be an additional annual loss of not less than $3,000; further, that if the carrier were compelled to put in similar rates to the thirty-two other distillery stations, there would be a loss of $54,000 a year on shipments to those places; and that there would be other losses to an amount not specified, on shipments to consignees other than distillers.

But it may be supposed that, other conditions being the same, a reduction in rates found to be excessive will cause a loss in revenue; and the question is not simply as to the amount of reduction, but whether the rates as fixed would allow a fair return. The bill does not show the value of the property employed, the expenses of operation, or the return which would be permitted under the rates prescribed.

Digitized by Google

6. It is further objected that the rate-making order impairs the obligation of the contract contained in the company's charter in violation of § 10, article 1 of the Federal Constitution. It is alleged in the amended bill that by its charter granted by the act approved March 5, 1850, [316] and the amendments thereto, the appellant was authorized to charge specified maximum rates for transportation over its lines, and that the rates fixed by the commission's order are less than those which it was thus empowered to maintain.

It is provided by § 3 of the Bill of Rights contained in the state Constitution adopted in 1891, that every grant of a franchise, privilege, or exemption, shall remain subject to revocation, alteration, or amendment. Section 190 of this Constitution is as follows: "No corporation in existence at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall have the benefit of future legislation without first filing in the office of the secretary of state an acceptance of the provisions of this Constitution."

It is set forth in the amended bill that, by resolution of the board of directors of the appellant, adopted July 11, 1902, it "duly accepted the provisions of the present Constitution of the commonwealth of Kentucky, ordained September 28, 1891, and the provisions of chapter 32 of the Kentucky Statutes, being the act adopted April 5, 1893, with the amendments thereto," and that a copy of this resolution was filed with the secretary of the state of Kentucky. Chapter 32 of the General Statutes is the chapter upon private corporations. One of its provisions, contained in § 573, is that the "provisions of all charters and articles of incorporation, whether granted by special act of the general assembly or obtained under any general incorporation law, which are inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter concerning similar corporations, to the extent of such conflict, and all powers, privileges, or immunities of any such corporation which could not be obtained under the provisions of this chapter, shall stand repealed on September 28, 1897. . . . After the 28th day of September, 1897, the provisions of this chapter shall apply to all corporations created or organized under the laws of this state, if said provisions [317] would be applicable to them if organized under this chapter." By another provision of this chapter, in the article relating to railroads (§ 816), a railroad corporation charging more than a just and reasonable rate of compensation is guilty of extortion; the penalty was a fine provided for in § 819. In Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129, the court of appeals, holding that § 816 was too indefinite to be sustained as a penal statute, concluded its opinion by saying: "It may be observed further, however, that it would seem singular if such a statute, even if in all respects valid, could be enforced against a carrier whose rates, as fixed in its charter, are in excess of the rates alleged to be excessive in the indictment. And this, not because such rates are secured by an irrepealable contract (a matter not now considered), but simply because they at least remain the legal rates until changed by law."

It was after the decision in this case that the act of March 10, 1900, was passed, empowering the railroad commission to fix rates.

The amended bill states that, upon the filing of the resolution accepting the provisions of the Constitution, and the provisions of chapter 32 of the General Statutes, "thereby and thereafter the said contract (with respect to the maximum freight and passenger rates it is entitled to charge and collect on its said lines of railroad) between complainant and the commonwealth of Kentucky became and is now no longer irrevocable or irrepealable;" but, it is averred that "nevertheless, said contract remains intact, and has never been revoked or repealed by any act of the legislature," and that its obligation was in full force and effect at the time the rate order was made (August 10, 1910). That is, it is insisted that § 573 of the statutes, above quoted, is not applicable for the reason that on April 5, 1893, when the statute, of which this provision was a part, was approved, and also on September 28, 1897, [318] when the repeal provided for in that statute was to take effect, the appellant's charter was not subject to repeal or amendment, and that it did not become so subject until 1902. It is also contended that the act authorizing the commission to fix rates does not apply because that was passed two years before the appellant filed its resolution; in other words, that its contract contained in its charter is still in force because the legislature has not enacted a repealing or amending provision since the resolution was filed.

We do not find it necessary to review all the questions that are suggested. Apart from other considerations, it is manifest that the statute of March 10, 1900, was a continuing authority to the railroad commission. The order of the railroad commission in fixing rates was a legislative act, under its delegated power. It had "the same force as if made by the legislature." Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 221 U. S. 400, 403, 55 L. ed. 786, 787, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537. It is for this reason that it is a "law" passed by the state, within the meaning of the contract clause. New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31, 31 L. ed. 607, 612, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 45 L. ed. 788, 791, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 590, 52 L. ed. 630, 633, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, supra; Ross v. Oregon, 227 U. S. 150, 163, 57 L. ed. 458, 463, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220. As it had full legislative effect, the appellant could not assert against its operation the provision of a contract which had previously become subject to legislative alteration. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 274, 275, 54 L. ed. 472, 477, 478, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330. Upon the filing of the resolution, the charter provision as to the maximum rates therein specified ceased to be an obstacle, if it had been such before, to the exercise by the state of its rate-making power.

Digitized by Google

7. The remaining questions require only a brief mention. The penalty provisions of the statute in question are challenged upon the ground that they violate the [319] provisions of the 14th Amendment. But, as already stated, these provisions are separable. It is also objected that the order of the commission constitutes an unwarrantable interference with, and a regulation of, interstate commerce. The questions thus raised cannot be distinguished from those which were considered and decided in the Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Second. The order for reparation.

This order was not made under the statute of March 10, 1900, authorizing the commission to fix rates. It is conceded on behalf of the appellees that if the commission was not authorized by §§ 821 or 829 of the Kentucky statutes to award reparation, it had no authority whatever for that purpose. Section 821 provides that it shall be the duty of the railroad commissioners to see that the laws relating to railroads are faithfully executed, and to exercise a general supervision over the railroads of the state. Section 829 authorizes the commission to "hear and determine complaints" under §§ 816, 817, and 818, to the provisions of which we have already referred. It provides that such complaints shall be in writing, that the company complained of shall have notice of hearing, that the commission shall hear and reduce to writing all the evidence adduced, and that it shall render such award as may be proper. If the award be not satisfied within ten days, the chairman of the commission is to file a copy of it and the evidence heard, in the office of the clerk of the proper circuit court, whereupon it is to be docketed for trial, and summons is to be issued, as in other cases, requiring the party against whom the award has been made to show cause why it should not be satisfied. If the party fails to appear, judgment is to be rendered by default; and, if a trial is demanded, the case is to be tried as other ordinary cases, except that no evidence is to be introduced by either party save that heard before the commission, unless the court shall be satisfied by sworn testimony that [320] it could not have been produced before the commission by the exercise of reasonable diligence.

It thus appears that the two proceedings, though they were conducted at the same time, were distinct in their nature. The one resulted in a legislative rule for the future; in the other, there was an award of specific sums of money to particular persons upon the basis of past transactions, and this award, according to the provisions of the statute, on being filed, could be enforced by proceedings in the courts of the state. The persons in whose favor the award was made were not parties to the suit, and we think that the court was right in declining to determine its validity.

The order denying the application for injunction is affirmed.

STURGES & BURN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
ARTHUR BEAUCHAMP.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 320-326.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — employment of minors.

1. Prohibiting the employment of children under the age of sixteen years in various hazardous employments, as is done by Ill. Laws 1903, p. 187, does not take liberty or property without due process of law, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., although the statute is so construed by the highest court of the state that a violation

NOTE.—Constitutionality of laws fixing minimum age limit for child labor.

State legislatures may, under the police power, fix an age limit below which children may not be employed. Re Weber, 149 Cal. 392, 86 Pac. 809; Re Spencer, 149 Cal. 396, 117 Am. St. Rep. 139, 86 Pac. 896, 9 Ann. Cas. 1105; Inland Steel Co. v. Yedinak, 172 Ind. 423, 139 Am. St. Rep. 389, 87 N. E. 229; State v. Rose, 125 La. 462, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 821, 51 So. 496:

Digitized by Google

of its provisions gives a right of action on behalf of an illegally employed minor if injured in the course of such employment, even if the employer acted in good faith, relying upon the representation of the minor that he was over sixteen.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 7; IV. c, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification — employment of minors.

2. The employment of children under the age of sixteen years in hazardous occupations may be prohibited, as is done by Ill. Laws 1903, p. 187, without contravening the guaranty in U. S. Const., 14th Amend., of the equal protection of the laws.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law; IV. a, 5, Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 54.]

Submitted November 3, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Cook County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by a minor illegally employed. Affirmed.

See same case below, 250 Ill. 303, 95 N. E. 204.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Almon W. Bulkley and Clair E. More submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The common-law rule of contributory negligence applies to minors.

Mt. Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck Co. v. Frankfort Marine Acci. & P. G. Ins. Co. 111 Md. 561, 134 Am. St. Rep. 636, 75 Atl. 105; Bryant v. Skillman Hardware Co. 76 N. J. L. 45, 69 Atl. 23; People v. Ewer, 141 N. Y. 129, 25 L.R.A. 794, 38 Am. St. Rep. 788, 36 N. E. 4; People v. Taylor, 124 App. Div. 434, 108 N. Y. Supp. 796, reversed on other grounds in 192 N. Y. 398, 85 N. E. 759; New York v. Chelsea Jute Mills, 43 Misc. 266, 88 N. Y. Supp. 1085; Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. 147 N. C. 556, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 602, 61 S. E. 525, 15 Ann. Cas. 470; Lenahan v. Pittston Coal Min. Co. 218 Pa. 311, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 461, 120 Am. St. Rep. 885, 67 Atl. 642; Stehle v. Jaeger Automatic Mach. Co. 220 Pa. 617, 69 Atl. 1116, 14 Ann. Cas. 122; Collett v. Scott, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 430.

The minimum age limit upheld by these decisions ranges from twelve years (Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. 147 N. C. 556, 17 L.R.A. (N.S.) 602, 61 S. E. 525, 15 Ann. Cas. 470) to sixteen years (People v. Taylor, 124 App. Div. 434, 108 N. Y. Supp. 796, reversed on other grounds in 192 N. Y. 398, 85 N. E. 759; Collett v. Scott, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 430).

The prohibitions of these statutes are usually directed against certain prescribed occupations or employments; but this classification has generally been regarded as a reasonable one, which does not render the statute invalid.

Forbidding the employment of children under twelve years of age in factories and manufacturing establishments does not deny the equal protection of the laws. Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. supra.

Singling out manufacturing or mercantile establishments, mines, quarries, laundries, renovating works, bakeries, or printing offices, as is done by an Indiana statute which in effect prohibits the employment of persons in such occupations if under fourteen years of age, and their employment for more than sixty hours in any one week if more than sixteen years of age, does not deny the equal protection of the laws, the classification being a natural, just, and reasonable one. Inland Steel Co. v. Yedinak, 172 Ind. 423, 139 Am. St. Rep. 389, 87 N. E. 229.

The enactment of a statute forbidding the employment of children under fourteen years of age in certain enumerated industries (excluding agricultural or domestic industries and those in which not more than five persons are employed), and in certain places, including employment for work and labor in any theater, concert hall, or in and about any place of amusement where intoxicating liquor is made or sold, does not abridge privileges or immunities, or deny the equal protection of the laws, but is a valid and constitutional exercise of the legislative power. State v. Rose, 125 La. 462, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 821, 51 So. 496. The court said: "In the enactment of the statute now in question the legislature had the power to discriminate between occupations by classifying some of them as unsuited to the proper mental, moral, or physical development of children of tender years. In such a matter the judgment of the court cannot be substituted for the discretion of the lawmaker. The act might have been deemed arbitrary and unreasonable if it had prohibited the employment of children in all kinds of occupation."

A statute forbidding the employment of children under the age of fourteen years in mills and factories except canning factories is not invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as based upon an arbitrary or unreasonable classification. Mt. Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck Co. v. Frankfort Marine Acci. & P. G. Ins. Co. 111 Md. 561, 134 Am. St. Rep. 636, 75 Atl. 105.

The exception in favor of child singers or musicians in churches, schools, and academies, made by a statute prohibiting the employment of children under sixteen years of age in any dangerous or immoral occupation or business, or for public entertainment, etc., does not render the law invalid as working an unfair discrimination. Re Weber, 149 Cal. 392, 86 Pac. 809.

Forbidding the employment of any child under fourteen years of age in any mercantile institution, office, laundry, manufac-

Digitized by Google

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 409; Heimann v. Kinnare, 190 Ill. 156, 52 L.R.A. 652, 83 Am. St. Rep. 123, 60 N. E. 215.

The common-law rule of contributory negligence is not abolished by child labor statutes.

Berdos v. Tremont & S. Mills, 209 Mass. 498, 95 N. E. 876, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 797; Beghold v. Auto Body Co. 149 Mich. 14, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 609, 112 N. W. 691; Bromberg v. Evans Laundry Co. 134 Iowa, 46, 111 N. W. 417, 13 Ann. Cas. 33; Braasch v. Michigan Stove Co. 153 Mich. 652, 20 L.R.A. (N.S.) 500, 118 N. W. 366; Burke v. Big Sandy Coal & Coke Co. 68 W. Va. 421, 69 S. E. 992; Darsam v. Kohlmann, 123 La. 171, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 881, 48 So. 781; Dalm v. Bryant Paper Co. 157 Mich. 550, 122 N. W. 257; Evans v. American Iron & Tube Co. 42 Fed. 519; Leathers v. Blackwell Durham Tobacco Co. 144 N. C. 330, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 349, 57 S. E. 11; Ornamental Iron & Wire Co. v. Green, 108 Tenn. 165, 65 S. W. 399; Jacobson v. Merrill & R. Mill Co. 107 Minn. 74, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 309, 119 N. W. 510; Kirkham v. Wheeler-Osgood Co. 39 Wash. 415, 81 Pac. 869, 18 Am. Neg. Rep. 661, 4 Ann. Cas. 532; Nairn v. National Biscuit Co. 120 Mo. App. 147, 96 S. W. 679; Nickey v. Steuder, 164 Ind. 189, 73 N. E. 117; Norman v. Virginia-Pocahontas Coal Co. 68 W. Va. 405, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 504, 69 S. E. 857; Perry v. Tozer, 90 Minn. 431, 101 Am. St. Rep. 416, 97 N. W. 137; Peters v. Gille Mfg. Co. 133 Mo. App. 412, 113 S. W. 706; Queen v. Dayton Coal & tory, workshop, restaurant, hotel, or apartment house, or in the distribution of merchandise or messages, does not constitute an unfair discrimination against the particular trades mentioned. And the further clause in the statute, that no child under sixteen years of age shall work at any gainful occupation during the hours that the public schools are in session, unless such child can read English at sight and write simple English sentences, or is attending night school, is a reasonable regulation to prevent those having control of such children from working them to such an extent as to hinder them from acquiring, or endeavoring to acquire, at least the beginning of an education, before arriving at the age of sixteen; nor is a provision that nothing in the act shall be construed to prevent the employment of minors at agricultural, viticultural, horticultural, or domestic labor an unreasonable discrimination, as the character of the exempted labor is a sufficient reason for the exemption. Re Spencer, 149 Cal. 396, 117 Am. St. Rep. 139, 86 Pac. 896, 9 Ann. Cas. 1105.

---

But so much of a statute making it unlawful to employ any minor under sixteen years of age inside of any anthracite coal mine, or to employ any minor under fourteen years in any anthracite coal breaker or colliery, or around the outside workings of any anthracite coal mine, as attempts to divide the minors who had reached the age prescribed in the statute into two classes, those who could furnish certain certificates as to date of birth, baptism, etc., and those who could not, contravenes the equality clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution. Collett v. Scott, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 430.

Excepting certain counties from the operation of Md. Laws 1902, chap. 566, prohibiting the employment of children under the age of fourteen years in mills and factories, does not render the statute invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as making an unreasonable or arbitrary classification. Mt. Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck Co. v. Frankfort Marine Acci. & P. G. Ins. Co. supra.

A statute forbidding the employment of children under twelve years of age in factories or manufacturing establishments is not void because it fails to designate the kind of labor which is prohibited to children under a specified age. Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. 147 N. C. 556, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 602, 61 S. E. 525, 15 Ann. Cas. 470.

"It cannot be said, nor do we understand counsel . . . as seriously contending," said the court in Mt. Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck Co. v. Frankfort Marine Acci. & P. G. Ins. Co. 111 Md. 561, 134 Am. St. Rep. 636, 75 Atl. 105, "that under an act entitled 'An Act to Regulate the Employment of Children, Generally,' the employment of children under a certain age may not be prohibited as a part of the regulation."

A construction of the Illinois act of May 15, 1903, § 11, as giving by implication a right of action by the injured child under sixteen, employed contrary to that section, does not render the section invalid as creating a liability which is not expressed in the title, "An Act to Regulate the Employment of Children in the State of Illinois, and to Provide for the Enforcement Thereof." Beauchamp v. Sturges & B. Mfg. Co. 250 Ill. 303, 95 N. E. 204.

But an amendment to a child labor law raising to fourteen years the minimum age at which children may be employed in workshops, mines, mills, and factories, is not comprehended by the title, "An Act to Amend Chapter 159 of the Acts of 1893, Being an Act Entitled, 'An Act to Make It Unlawful to Employ a Child Less Than Twelve Years of Age in Workshops, Mines, Mills, or Factories in This State.'" Jackson v. Weis & L. Mfg. Co. 124 Tenn. 421, 137 S. W. 757.

On the constitutionality of child labor laws generally—see note to Starnes v. Albion Mfg. Co. 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 602.

On employment in violation of statute as affecting child's action for negligence—see notes to Rolin v. E. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, and Fahey v. Jephcott, 1 B. R. C. 629.

Digitized by Google

I. Co. 96 Tenn. 465, 30 L.R.A. 82, 49 Am. St. Rep. 935, 32 S. W. 460; Sharon v. Winnebago Furniture Mfg. Co. 141 Wis. 189, 124 N. W. 299; Rolin v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. 141 N. C. 300, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 53 S. E. 891, 8 Ann. Cas. 638; Roberts v. Taylor, 31 Ont. Rep. 10; Smith v. National Coal & I. Co. 135 Ky. 671, 117 S. W. 280; Sterling v. Union Carbide Co. 142 Mich. 284, 105 N. W. 755; Syneszewski v. Schmidt, 153 Mich. 438, 116 N. W. 1107.

Corporations are persons within the 14th Amendment.

Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 88, 41 L. ed. 80, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 29, 32 L. ed. 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 394, 30 L. ed. 118, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132.

The court will interfere to correct errors of state tribunals if the law is administered so as to violate the 14th Amendment.

Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275–279, 23 L. ed. 550–552; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259–273, 23 L. ed. 543–549; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703–710, 28 L. ed. 1145–1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Williams v. Mississippi, 170 U. S. 213, 42 L. ed. 1012, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356–373, 30 L. ed. 220–227, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

The defendant in error, Beauchamp, is an adult, not a child.

Allen v. State, 7 Tex. App. 298; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 263, 265, 267; Bell v. State, 18 Tex. App. 53, 51 Am. Rep. 293; Black's Law Dict. "Child;" Century Dict. "Childhood;" McGregor v. State, 4 Tex. App. 599; Quattlebaum v. Triplett, 69 Ark. 91, 61 S. W. 162.

There is a broad distinction between contributory negligence and assumption of risk. The doctrine of assumed risk is based upon the contract of employment; that of contributory negligence is based upon the action or nonaction of the party in disregard of personal safety.

Berdos v. Tremont & S. Mills, 209 Mass. 497, 95 N. E. 876, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 797; Narramore v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 46 L.R.A. 68, 37 C. C. A. 499, 96 Fed. 298; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Baker, 33 C. C. A. 468, 63 U. S. App. 553, 91 Fed. 224; Union P. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 161 U. S. 451, 40 L. ed. 766, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618.

The judgment of the Illinois courts deprives plaintiff in error of the equal protection of the laws.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Westby, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 97, 102 C. C. A. 65, 178 Fed. 619; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. p. 391; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Tucker, 230 U. S. 340, 57 L. ed. 1507, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247.

The legislature has no power to give a civil remedy to one guilty of fraud and deceit.

Black, Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 373; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Story, Const. 5th ed. § 1945; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627–657, 7 L. ed. 542–553; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914.

Reading into the statute a civil remedy, and abolishing common-law defenses, were legislative, not judicial, acts, and transcend the power of the court.

26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 597; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 601, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Re Potts, 166 U. S. 266, 41 L. ed. 995, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 18 L. ed. 869; Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 227 U. S. 278, 57 L. ed. 510, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34–45, 38 L. ed. 896–901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 34 L. ed. 767, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 202, 4 L. ed. 550; United States v. St. Anthony R. Co. 192 U. S. 524, 48 L. ed. 548, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 95, 5 L. ed. 42; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274–282, 23 L. ed. 914–917.

The statute as held and enforced is not within the police power.

Chicago v. Gunning System, 214 Ill. 628, 70 L.R.A. 230, 73 N. E. 1035, 2 Ann. Cas. 892; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 43 L. ed. 60, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133–136, 38 L. ed. 385–388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313–320, 34 L. ed. 455–458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623–661, 31 L. ed. 205–210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Ruhstrat v. People, 185 Ill.

Digitized by Google

133, 49 L.R.A. 181, 76 Am. St. Rep. 30, 57 N. E. 41, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 453; State v. Caspare, 115 Md. 7, 80 Atl. 606; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356–370, 30 L. ed. 220–226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

The maxim "No one acquires a right of action from his own wrong" applies to minors.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 311; Barham v. Turbeville, 1 Swan, 437, 57 Am. Dec. 782; Bigelow, Estoppel, 5th ed. p. 606; Commander v. Brazil, 88 Miss. 668, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1117, 41 So. 497; Coleman v. Himmelberger-Harrison Land & Lumber Co. 105 Mo. App. 254, 79 S. W. 981; 22 Cyc. 512, "Infants;" Ex parte Unity Joint Stock Mut. Bkg. Asso. 3 De G. & J. 63, 27 L. J. Bankr. N. S. 33, 4 Jur. N. S. 1257, 6 Week. Rep. 640; Edgar v. Gertison, — Ky. —, 112 S. W. 831; Ferguson v. Bobo, 54 Miss. 121; Hall v. Timmons, 2 Rich. Eq. 120; Lowery v. Cate, 57 L.R.A. 673, note; Mathews v. Cowan, 59 Ill. 341; Munden v. Harris, 153 Mo. App. 652, 134 S. W. 1076; Pace v. Cawood, 33 Ky. L. Rep. 592, 110 S. W. 414; Parker v. Elder, 11 Humph. 546; Rice v. Boyer, 108 Ind. 472, 58 Am. Rep. 53, 9 N. E. 420; Sanger v. Hibbard, 2 Ind. Terr. 547, 53 S. W. 330; Vasse v. Smith, 6 Cranch, 226, 3 L. ed. 207; Wright v. Snowe, 2 De G. & S. 321; Vinson v. State, 124 Ga. 19, 52 S. E. 79; Williamson v. Jones, 43 W. Va. 562, 38 L.R.A. 694, 64 Am. St. Rep. 891, 27 S. E. 410, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 19; Whittington v. Wright, 9 Ga. 29.

The statute in question is a penal statute, to be strictly construed.

Bandfield v. Bandfield, 117 Mich. 80, 40 L.R.A. 757, 72 Am. St. Rep. 550, 75 N. W. 287; Field v. United States, 69 C. C. A. 568, 137 Fed. 6; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 570–575, 38 L. ed. 556–558, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; The Ben R. 67 C. C. A. 290, 134 Fed. 784; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305–310, 44 L. ed. 780–782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 96, 5 L. ed. 42; American Car & Foundry Co. v. Armentraut, 214 Ill. 509, 73 N. E. 766; Strafford v. Republic Iron & Steel Co. 238 Ill. 371, 20 L.R.A. (N.S.) 876, 128 Am. St. Rep. 129, 87 N. E. 358; Illinois C. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 189 Ill. 564, 59 N. E. 1098.

Mr. George E. Gorman submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. John M. Pollock was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The Sturges & Burn Manufacturing Company is a corporation engaged in manufacturing tinware and other metal products. It employed Arthur Beauchamp, the defendant in error, who was under sixteen years of age, as a press hand to operate a punch press used in stamping sheet metal. Beauchamp was injured in operating the press, and brought an action through his next friend, in the superior court of Cook county, to recover the damages sustained, counting on the statute of Illinois, passed in 1903 (Laws of 1903, p. 187, Hurd's Stat. 1909, p. 1082), which, by § 11, prohibited the employment of children under the age of sixteen years in various hazardous occupations, including that in which the injury occurred. The trial court, refusing to direct a verdict for the defendant, instructed the jury that if the plaintiff was in fact less than sixteen years old, and when injured [325] was employed by the defendant upon a stamping machine, the defendant was guilty of a violation of the statute, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover. A verdict was rendered for the plaintiff, and judgment thereon was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 250 Ill. 303, 95 N. E. 204. The case comes here on error.

The plaintiff in error complains of the ruling that a violation of the statute gives a right of action to the employee in case of his injury, but this is a question of state law with which we are not concerned.

The Federal question presented is whether the statute, as construed by the state court, contravenes the 14th Amendment. It cannot be doubted that the state was entitled to prohibit the employment of persons of tender years in dangerous occupations. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 392, 395, 42 L. ed. 780, 791, 792, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 31, 49 L. ed. 643, 651, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 421, 52 L. ed. 551, 555, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 568, 569, 55 L. ed. 328, 338, 339, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259. It is urged that the plaintiff in error was not permitted to defend upon the ground that it acted in good faith relying upon the representation made by Beauchamp that he was over sixteen. It is said that, being over fourteen, he at least had attained the age at which he should have been treated as responsible for his statements. But, as it was competent for the state, in securing the safety of the young, to prohibit such employment altogether, it could select means appropriate to make its prohibition effective, and could compel employers, at their peril, to ascertain whether those they employed were in fact under the age specified. The imposition of absolute requirements of this sort is a familiar exercise of the protective power of government. Reg. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. 154, 44 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 122, 32 L. T. N. S. 700, 24 Week. Rep. 76, 13 Cox C. C. 138, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 1; People v. Werner, 174 N. Y. 132, 66 N. E. 667; State v. Kinkead, 57 Conn. 173, 17 Atl. 855; Ulrich v. Com. 6 Bush, 400; State v. Heck, 23 Minn. 549; State v. Hartfiel, 24 Wis. 60; State v. Tomasi, 67 [326] Vt. 312, 31 Atl. 780; Com. v. Green, 163 Mass. 103, 39 N. E. 775; 3 Greenl. Ev. § 21; 30 Am. Rep. 617–620, note. And where, as here, such legislation has reasonable relation to a purpose which the state was entitled to effect, it is not open to constitutional objection as a deprivation of liberty or property without due process of law. Shevlin-Carpenter Co. v. Minnesota, 218 U. S. 57, 70, 54 L. ed. 930, 935, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Digitized by Google

It is also contended that the statute denied to the plaintiff in error the equal protection of the laws; but the classification it established was clearly within the legislative power. Heath & M. Mfg. Co. v. Worst, 207 U. S. 338, 354, 52 L. ed. 236, 243, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Melton, 218 U. S. 36, 54, 54 L. ed. 921, 928, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 84, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Lindsley v. National Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 78, 55 L. ed. 369, 377, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 160; Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell, 222 U. S. 225, 236, 56 L. ed. 175, 180, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 529.

The judgment is affirmed.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALASIA & CHINA TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Limited, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 326–335.)

Claims — jurisdiction — treaty stipulations.

1. The broadening of the general jurisdiction of the court of claims, made by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752), which repealed all inconsistent enactments, did not destroy the established exception set forth in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1066, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739, by which such claims as grow out of, or are dependent upon, treaty stipulations, are excluded from the jurisdiction of that court.

[For other cases, see Claims, 171–178; Statutes, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Claims — jurisdiction — treaty stipulations.

2. A claim based exclusively upon the transfer of sovereignty of the Philippine Islands from Spain to the United States, upon the theory that thereby, under the principles of international law, an obligation in favor of the claimant was imposed upon the United States, is excluded from the jurisdiction of the court of claims by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1066, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739, as being one growing out of, or dependent upon, treaty stipulations.

[For other cases, see Claims, 171–178, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Claims — against United States — implied contract.

3. A claim against the United States for the annual subsidy provided for in Spanish concessions for the construction and operation of submarine cables in the Philippine Islands, which rests not simply upon the succession of the United States to sovereignty, under the treaty of December 10, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 1754), with Spain, but upon a contract to be implied from subsequent transactions between the United States and the telegraph company, is not one arising out of treaty stipulations, so as to be excluded from the jurisdiction of the court of claims by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1066, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739, but

---

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and B. Altman & Co. v. United States, 56 L. ed. U. S. 894.

On delegation by legislature of power to regulate carriers—see notes to Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, E. L. & P. Co. 18 L.R.A.(N.S.) 713, and State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 649.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in state regulation of tolls or rates—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. U. S. 92.

On state regulation generally of tolls, rates, and prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

On elements entering into determination of reasonableness of railroad rates prescribed by the state for local traffic—see notes to Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia County, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 108, and State ex rel. McCue v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1001.

On reasonableness of state limitation of railroad rates—see note to Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 44 L. ed. U. S. 417.

On contract exemptions from legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 46 L. ed. U. S. 592.

Generally, on statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

Digitized by Google

is founded upon an implied contract with the government, within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1887, defining the jurisdiction of that court.

[For other cases, see Claims, 105–127, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 419.]

Argued October 22, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review the dismissal upon demurrer of a claim against the United States. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 48 Ct. Cl. —.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Louis Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The court of claims had ample jurisdiction over this cause under the provisions of the Tucker act of March 3, 1887.

The Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 44 L. ed. 320, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 163, 40 L. ed. 95, 108, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; Respublica v. De Longchamps, 1 Dall. 111, 1 L. ed. 59; Waters v. Collot, 2 Dall. 247, 1 L. ed. 367; Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199, 228, 1 L. ed. 568, 580; Salomon v. United States, 19 Wall. 17, 22 L. ed. 46; United States v. Russell, 13 Wall. 623, 20 L. ed. 474; United States v. Jones, 131 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 90, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; United States v. Drew, 131 U. S. 21, 33 L. ed. 93, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 229, 234, 45 L. ed. 1080, 1082, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; United States v. Borcherling, 185 U. S. 231, 46 L. ed. 888, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 607; United States v. Weld, 127 U. S. 51, 32 L. ed. 62, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; United States v. Cornell S. B. Co. 202 U. S. 184, 50 L. ed. 987, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; United States v. Morgan, 39 C. C. A. 653, 99 Fed. 570; United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 32 L. ed. 442, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; United States v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 112 U. S. 645, 28 L. ed. 846, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214, 24 L. ed. 115; United States v. Bostwick, 94 U. S. 53, 69, 24 L. ed. 65, 67; Knote v. United States, 95 U. S. 149, 24 L. ed. 442.

The legislation relative to the jurisdiction of the court of claims being remedial should receive a liberal construction.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 38 Fed. 55.

The jurisdiction of a court does not depend upon its ultimate decision on the merits, but solely on the question as to whether it has the power to consider the case for the purpose of deciding, either correctly or incorrectly, as to the merits.

Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217, 28 Am. Rep. 129; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 34, 45 L. ed. 412, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 667, 718, 9 L. ed. 1233, 1258; Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 628, 37 L. ed. 867, 876, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 709, 8 L. ed. 547, 554; Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 319, 333, 11 L. ed. 283, 288; The Resolute, 168 U. S. 437, 439, 42 L. ed. 533, 534, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112.

If jurisdiction otherwise exists there is nothing in § 1066 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739) which affects such jurisdiction.

A. Even though that section had not been expressly repealed when the claim was filed, the Tucker act, then in force, superseded it, since it dealt with the entire subject of the jurisdiction of the court of claims, and embraced new provisions plainly showing that it was intended as a substitute for the former legislation relating to the jurisdiction of that court.

United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 88, 92, 20 L. ed. 153, 154; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 617, 22 L. ed. 429, 437; United States v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 546, 24 L. ed. 1082; King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395, 396, 27 L. ed. 60, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 529, 27 L. ed. 424, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; Tracy v. Tuffly, 134 U. S. 206, 223, 33 L. ed. 879, 884, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Fisk v. Henarie, 142 U. S. 459, 468, 35 L. ed. 1079, 1082, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; District of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18, 27, 36 L. ed. 60, 62, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; The Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 44 L. ed. 320, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; United States v. Rider, 163 U. S. 132, 41 L. ed. 101, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983; United States v. Hewecker, 164 U. S. 46, 41 L. ed. 345, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Mitchell v. Brown, 1 El. & El. 267, 28 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 53, 5 Jur. N. S. 707, 7 Week. Rep. 80; Ex parte Baker, 2 Hurlst. & N. 219, 26 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 155, 3 Jur. N. S. 987, 5 Week. Rep. 661; Parry v. Croydon Commercial Gas Co. 15 C. B. N. S. 568, 10 Jur. N. S. 172, 9 L. T. N. S. 694, 12 Week. Rep. 212; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596, 601, 27 L. ed. 251, 253, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Henderson's Tobacco, 11 Wall. 657, 20 L. ed. 237; United States v. Auffmordt, 122 U. S. 197, 30 L. ed. 1182, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1182; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. 429, 438, 14 L. ed. 210, 213; Henrietta Min. & Mill. Co. v. Gardner, 173 U. S. 123, 128, 43 L. ed. 637, 639, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

B. But assuming that § 1066 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739) had not been repealed when appellant's claim was filed, the court of claims nevertheless had jurisdiction, because the right sought to be enforced did not grow out of, nor was it dependent on, any treaty stipulation entered into with a foreign nation.

Digitized by Google

United States v. Weld, 127 U. S. 51, 32 L. ed. 62, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000.

Under the doctrines of international law, as well as upon common law and equitable principles, all of which are applicable here (The Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 44 L. ed. 320, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290), under the terms of the Tucker act, the claimant has made out a cause of action, since the appellee, by demurring to the question, has admitted the allegations.

Schoellkopf v. Coatsworth, 166 N. Y. 77, 59 N. E. 710.

On the acquisition by the United States of sovereignty over the Philippine Islands, the claimant's private rights of property were in no manner affected by the change of sovereignty, and the rights vested in it, both contractual and otherwise, and executory as well as executed, remained enforceable in accordance with the principles of international law.

Mutual Assur. Soc. v. Watts, 1 Wheat. 279, 4 L. ed. 91; United States v. Percheman, 7 Pet. 51, 8 L. ed. 604; Snow, International Law, p. 21; United States v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 436, 8 L. ed. 1001; Delassus v. United States, 9 Pet. 117, 9 L. ed. 71; Mitchel v. United States, 9 Pet. 711, 9 L. ed. 283; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 412, 9 L. ed. 1137, 1138; Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 20 How. 176, 15 L. ed. 891; United States v. Moreno, 1 Wall. 400, 17 L. ed. 633; Peralta v. United States, 3 Wall. 434, 18 L. ed. 221; Townsend v. Greeley, 5 Wall. 326, 18 L. ed. 547; United States v. Roselius, 15 How. 36, 14 L. ed. 590; Dent v. Emmeger, 14 Wall. 308, 20 L. ed. 838; Cessna v. United States, 169 U. S. 186, 42 L. ed. 710, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Soulard v. United States, 4 Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 938; 2 Halleck, International Law, 3d Eng. ed. 493; Hall, International Law, 97.

Under the established doctrines of international law, where a part of the territory of one nation is annexed by cession or otherwise to the territory of another, the latter, by the act of annexation, becomes bound to fulfil all the obligations which pertained to the former in respect of the territory acquired and the property therein. It practically inherits the rights and obligations of the ceding state.

Westlake, International Law, p. 69; Martens, International Law, pp. 368, 369; Field, International Code, § 23; 1 Fiore, New Treaty of International Law, § 356, p. 313; Hershey, "Succession of States," American Journal of International Law, 1911, pp. 294, 295; Fiore, International Law Codified, § 152; Bentwich, Priv. Prop. in War, pp. 70, 72; Hall, International Law, 5th ed. p. 99; Wheaton, International Law, 4th ed. p. 46; 2 Baker's Halleck, International Law, 1878 ed. p. 504; 1 Calvo, Droit International, 4th ed. p. 428; 4 Calvo, Droit International, p. 404; Heffter, Droit International de l'Europe, 4th ed. pp. 63, 64; Huber, Die Staatensuccession, § 217; Phillimore, International Law, 3d ed. pp. 204, 210, 211; Snow, International Law, p. 22.

This case must be treated precisely as it would be if the questions now presented had arisen as between private individuals.

People v. Stephens, 71 N. Y. 549; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 737, 738, 9 L. ed. 1265, 1266.

Under general principles of jurisprudence the facts set forth in the petition create an obligation on the part of the appellee to the appellant to pay the subsidy provided for in the concession so long as it shall continue to avail itself of the general and special rights and privileges which have accrued to it under the terms of the concession.

Stewart v. Long Island R. Co. 102 N. Y. 607, 55 Am. Rep. 844, 8 N. E. 200; Walton v. Stafford, 14 App. Div. 312, 43 N. Y. Supp. 1049; Cameron v. Nash, 41 App. Div. 532, 58 N. Y. Supp. 643; Frank v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 122 N. Y. 197, 25 N. E. 332; Pollard v. Shaaffer, 1 Dall. 210, 1 L. ed. 104; Probst v. Rochester Steam Laundry Co. 171 N. Y. 588, 64 N. E. 504; Greenleaf v. Allen, 127 Mass. 248; Fennell v. Guffey, 155 Pa. 38, 25 Atl. 785; Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray, 256, 64 Am. Dec. 64; Burnett v. Lynch, 5 Barn. & C. 589, 8 Dowl. & R. 368, 4 L. J. K. B. 274, 29 Revised Rep. 343; Astor v. Lent, 6 Bosw. 612; Schoellkopf v. Coatsworth, 55 App. Div. 331, 66 N. Y. Supp. 979, affirmed in 166 N. Y. 77, 59 N. E. 710; People v. Stephens, 71 N. Y. 527; Masson v. Bovet, 1 Denio, 69, 43 Am. Dec. 651; Vernol v. Vernol, 63 N. Y. 45; Mills v. Hoffman, 92 N. Y. 190; Baird v. New York, 96 N. Y. 589; Cobb v. Hatfield, 46 N. Y. 536; United States v. Russell, 13 Wall. 623, 20 L. ed. 474; Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 59, 28 L. ed. 901, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 32 L. ed. 442, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; Coleman v. United States, 152 U. S. 99, 38 L. ed. 369, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Cavalieri, "Doctrine of Succession of a State," Pisa, 1910, p. 135.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. William F. Norris, filed a brief for appellee:

The court of claims has no jurisdiction of claims where the United States is not a direct party or primarily liable, or of claims against other governments which the United States had assumed by treaty.

Digitized by Google

Ex parte Atocha (Ex parte United States) 17 Wall. 439, 21 L. ed. 696; Great Western Ins. Co. v. United States, 112 U. S. 193, 28 L. ed. 687, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103.

Jurisdiction where there is a treaty involved is conferred by special act, and the authority of the court to hear and determine the stipulations of the treaty is limited and controlled by the provisions of the act granting such jurisdiction; in questions growing out of a treaty we shall give respect to the common law, but not be governed by it; we shall be influenced by the laws and decrees of individual states regulating international conduct, such as the decisions of international tribunals, the judgments of prize courts, etc.

United States v. Kingsley, 12 Pet. 476, 484, 9 L. ed. 1163, 1166; Thirty Hogsheads of Sugar v. Boyle, 9 Cranch, 191–198, 3 L. ed. 701–703; 1 Moore, International Law Dig. p. 2, ¶ 2.

U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1066, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739, is special legislation; the Tucker act is general legislation; the latter, being subsequent to the former, does not repeal § 1066.

Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; United States v. Matthews, 173 U. S. 388, 43 L. ed. 740, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 147, 40 L. ed. 373, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; South Carolina v. Stoll, 17 Wall. 431, 21 L. ed. 654; Magone v. King, 2 C. C. A. 363, 1 U. S. App. 267, 51 Fed. 526.

The treaty being silent about the assuming of the obligation, defendant is not bound to pay the same under the laws of nations or international law.

1 More, International Law Dig. pp. 2, 402; Thirty Hogsheads of Sugar v. Boyle, 9 Cranch, 191, 198, 3 L. ed. 701, 703.

Spain was a military monarchy; the people of the Philippine Islands were not represented in the making of the contract, nor was their consent asked or given.

1 Moore, International Law Dig. p. 402.

The contract was a personal one between Spain and appellant for the general benefit of Spain.

People v. Stephens, 71 N. Y. 549; Hall, International Law, 4th ed. p. 99.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the judgment of the court of claims which dismissed, upon demurrer, the petition of the claimant for the want of jurisdiction. 48 Ct. Cl. —.

The petition averred that the claimant, a British corporation, secured from the government of Spain, in the year 1879, a concession for the construction and operation of a submarine telegraph cable between the island of Luzon and Hong Kong, with an exclusive privilege for forty years, under which it maintained a cable from Hong Kong to Bolinao; and that in 1897, the government of Spain granted a further concession for three submarine telegraph cables to provide communication between the islands of Luzon, Panay, Negros, and Zebu, in the Philippine archipelago. Among the conditions of the last-mentioned grant, a copy of which is annexed to the petition and made a part of it, are the following:

[328] "Article 9. The concessionaire undertakes to work, at his own expense and risk, the cables of this concession for a period of twenty years, the said term to begin from the date of the taking over of the cables and their adjuncts in perfect working order.

"Article 10. The concessionaire shall enjoy an annual subsidy of £4,500 (four thousand, five hundred pounds sterling), payable monthly in twelve instalments, during the whole term of the working of the cables, the said payments being made at Manila by the chief treasury office of those islands."

"Article 16. The company holding the concession shall pay the state the 10 per cent, which tax, in its application to cablegrams, is fixed after first deducting the amount of the expenses for the maintenance of the stations, calculated at £6,000 (six thousand pounds sterling) per annum, the said expenses not to exceed the amount specified.

"Article 17. It shall be obligatory to transmit official despatches, which shall enjoy precedence, at half the rates charged for those of a private character. . . ."

In March, 1898, the claimant obtained an additional concession from the government of Spain for a submarine telegraph cable between Hong Kong and Manila, which was completed in the following month.

It was further alleged that the claimant had "actually fulfilled" and continued "to fulfil" all of the conditions of the concessions, and "to perform all of the duties imposed upon it" by their terms. After setting forth the making of the treaty of Paris [30 Stat. at L. 1754], and the cession thereby to the United States of the Philippine Islands [31 Stat. at L. 1942], the petition continued:

"Thereupon the United States of America entered into the occupancy of said Philippine Islands, and proceeded to exercise sovereignty over said islands and of the inhabitants thereof, and to assume jurisdiction and control [329] over all property and property rights in and upon said Philippine Islands, including the several lines of submarine cable and telegraph land lines established, constructed, and operated by the claimant, and availed itself of all of the benefits and advantages thereof, using the said lines of cable and telegraph for its governmental and other purposes, which it has continued to do ever since and still continues to do, and it has become in all respects the successor of the government of Spain to all rights, privileges, and advantages conferred upon and secured and reserved to the government of Spain under the terms of the aforesaid concessions. . . .

Digitized by Google

"By reason of the premises the United States of America assumed all of the obligations and the performance of all the conditions accepted by the government of Spain and agreed to by it, according to the terms of the aforesaid concessions . . . and of each of them, and agreed with the claimant to perform the covenants and agreements, and to fulfil the conditions, set forth in said several concessions, and accepted and agreed to by the government of Spain.

"The United States of America has failed to perform said agreements and to fulfil the said conditions, in that it has failed and refused to pay to the claimant the annual subsidy of £4,500 sterling, as required by the terms of article 10 of the aforesaid concession . . . for the years 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, and 1909, and for each of said years, and by reason of such failure and refusal to pay it has become indebted to the claimant in the sum of £4,500 sterling for each of said years, with interest on each of said annual instalments at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from the 31st day of December of the year in which the same became payable."

And judgment was demanded accordingly for the sum of $109,462.50, with interest as stated.

The government demurred to the petition, asserting (1) [330] that it did not set forth facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the United States, and (2) that it did not disclose a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the court.

Upon hearing, the court held that it was without jurisdiction, and it was upon this ground that the petition was dismissed. 48 Ct. Cl. — .

The act of February 24, 1855 (10 Stat. at L. 612, chap. 122), creating the court of claims, provided that it should hear and determine all claims "founded upon any law of Congress, or upon any regulation of an executive department, or upon any contract, express or implied, with the government of the United States," and also all claims which might be "referred to said court by either house of Congress." It required the court to report to Congress the cases upon which it had finally acted, stating the material facts found with its opinion, and to prepare such bills as would be appropriate, if enacted, to carry its decisions into effect. Important amendments were made by the act of March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. at L. 765, chap. 92), which gave jurisdiction of set-offs and counterclaims, authorized appeals to the Supreme Court, and provided for payment of final judgments out of any general appropriation made by law for the satisfaction of private claims.† But at the same time Congress was careful to exclude from the jurisdiction of the court such claims as arose out of treaty stipulations. (Id. § 9, 12 Stat. at L. 767, chap. 92, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739.) As was said in Ex parte Atocha (Ex parte United States) 17 Wall. 439, 444, 21 L. ed. 696, 698: "All the cases of which the court could subsequently take cognizance, by either the original or amendatory act, were cases arising out of contracts or transactions between the government or its officers and claimants. . . . Those acts have since then applied only to claims made directly against [331] the United States, and for the payment of which they were primarily liable, if liable at all, and not to claims against other governments, the payment of which the United States had assumed or might assume by treaty."

The provisions of the act of 1855, as amended, relating to jurisdiction, were placed in § 1059 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 734), and § 9 of the act of 1863 became § 1066 of the revision (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739), as follows:

"Sec. 1066. The jurisdiction of the said court shall not extend to any claim against the government not pending therein on December one, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, growing out of or dependent on any treaty stipulation entered into with foreign nations or with the Indian tribes."

By the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752), the general jurisdiction of the court theretofore defined by § 1059 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 734) was broadened, and it was thus provided:

"That the court of claims shall have †cf. Act of March 17, 1866, 14 Stat. at L. 9, chap. 19; United States v. Alire, 6 Wall. 573, 576, 18 L. ed. 947, 948.

Digitized by Google

jurisdiction to hear and determine the following matters.

"First. All claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States or any law of Congress, except for pensions, or upon any regulation of an Executive Department, or upon any contract, expressed or implied, with the government of the United States, or for damages liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort, in respect of which claims the party would be entitled to redress against the United States, either in a court of law, equity, or admiralty if the United States were suable: Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall be construed as giving to either of the courts herein mentioned, jurisdiction to hear and determine claims growing out of the late Civil War, and commonly known as 'war claims,' or to hear and determine other claims, which have heretofore been rejected, or reported on adversely by any court, department, or commission authorized to hear and determine the same.

[332] "Second. All set-offs, counterclaims, claims for damages, whether liquidated or unliquidated, or other demands whatsoever on the part of the government of the United States against any claimant against the government in said court."

The statute of 1887 repealed all inconsistent enactments. The question whether § 1066 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739) was thus repealed has been raised, but not decided. United States v. Weld, 127 U. S. 51, 57, 32 L. ed. 62, 65, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Juragua Iron Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 297, 310, 53 L. ed. 520, 525, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385. Both the provisions above quoted and those of § 1066 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739) are incorporated in the Judicial Code, §§ 145, 153 [36 Stat. at L. 1136, 1138, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 198, 201]. It is argued that the act of 1887 was intended to provide a complete scheme for the bestowal of jurisdiction over all claims against the government, save those therein expressly excepted, and that, hence, it must be regarded as a substitute for the provisions of the Revised Statutes, including § 1066 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739), which should therefore be deemed to be repealed (United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 88, 92, 20 L. ed. 153, 154; The Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 684, 685, 44 L. ed. 320, 322, 323, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290). We cannot accede to this view. The question is one of legislative intent (United States v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 546, 551, 24 L. ed. 1082, 1084). The section dealt with a special class of cases. There is no essential repugnancy between the broadening of the general provisions as to jurisdiction and the maintenance of the limitation as to claims based upon treaties, and, in considering the scope and manifest purpose of the later act in relation to claims arising out of transactions between the government, or its officers and claimants, we find no warrant for concluding that, in enlarging the jurisdiction previously conferred by § 1059 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 734), it was the intention of Congress to effect such a complete substitution as would destroy the established exception set forth in § 1066 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 739). So far, then, as the petition may be viewed as one seeking to assert a claim growing out of the treaty with Spain, we are of the opinion that it was not within the jurisdiction of the court of claims.

[333] It is insisted, however, that the claim should not be treated as one dependent upon a treaty stipulation (United States v. Weld, 127 U. S. 51, 57, 32 L. ed. 62, 65, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000); that the treaty merely serves to confer upon the United States the title to the Philippine Islands (30 Stat. at L. 1754; 31 Stat. at L. 1942); and that the claim is based upon considerations of international law. It is pointed out that it was stated in the protocol that an article proposed for the assumption of contracts which had been entered into by the Spanish government was rejected by the American commissioners, while it was also set forth that it might be assumed that the United States would deal justly and equitably in respect of contracts that were binding under the principles of international law (Sen. Doc. No. 62, 55th Cong. 3d Sess. pp. 240, 241). But, if the claim of the appellant were deemed to rest exclusively upon the transfer of sovereignty, upon the theory that thereby, under the principles of international law, an obligation in its favor was imposed upon the United States, the claim would still, in our judgment, be excluded by the statute from the consideration of the court below. The words "treaty stipulation" should not be so narrowly interpreted as to permit the exercise of jurisdiction where the claim arises solely out of the treaty cession. Whether the liability asserted is said to result from an express provision of assumption contained in a treaty, or is sought to be enforced as a necessary consequence of the cession made by a treaty, it is equally within the policy and spirit of the statute; and the letter of the statute should not be otherwise construed. It is its evident purpose that the obligations of the United States, directly resulting from a treaty, should not be determined by the court of claims.

Digitized by Google

But the petition has another aspect. The grant to the appellant, as already stated, provided in article 16 for a payment of a tax of 10 per cent, and, under article 17, for precedence and half rates in the transmission of official [334] despatches. It is argued by the appellant that the fact that the United States "has received and is receiving the special tax" and "the precedence and half rates specified" must be regarded as admitted; and it is urged that under the general principles of jurisprudence the facts set forth in the petition import an obligation on the part of the United States to the appellant to pay the subsidy provided for in the concession so long as the United States shall continue to avail itself of the rights and privileges which have accrued to it under the terms of the concession.

If the petition can be fairly said to present the claim that the United States, not simply by virtue of succession to sovereignty under the treaty of cession, but through its subsequent transactions with the appellant, and by contract to be implied from such transactions, has become indebted to the appellant, we think that the claim, as thus limited, would be within the jurisdiction of the court below under the act of 1887. It is true that the averments of the petition lack definiteness. It is not specifically alleged that the United States has received the tax or enjoyed the benefit of the half rates, nor is it precisely stated what transactions have been had between the government and the appellant. But the petition alleges that the United States, since it entered into the occupancy of the Islands, has "availed itself of all the benefits and advantages" of the submarine cable and telegraph lines established by the appellant, "using the said lines of cable and telegraph for its governmental and other purposes, which it has continued to do ever since and still continues to do," and that "it has become in all respects the successor of the government of Spain to all rights, privileges, and advantages conferred upon and secured and reserved to the government of Spain under the terms of the aforesaid concession." These general allegations are not altogether inapposite with respect to a claim based upon an implied contract outside of the treaty itself, [335] and the claimant should not be denied the right to have its claim, thus considered, adjudicated. In this view, the petition would be susceptible of amendment, and its sufficiency, in law and fact, could be heard and determined.

We express no opinion upon the merits of the claim, in this aspect, as they are not before us, the court below having declined to take jurisdiction. But as we think there was jurisdiction to pass upon the claim under the limitations above stated, the judgment will be reversed and the cause remanded, with instructions to the court below to take further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

JOANNA LITTLE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
J. J. WILLIAMS et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 335–341.)

Error to state court — questions reviewable — local practice.

1. A ruling of the highest state court as to the proper interpretation of a stipulation between counsel, made for the purpose of avoiding the production of other evidence upon the subject, that certain townships, including a lake as meandered on the surveyor's map, were listed by the Secretary of the Interior as swamp lands, and patented to the state under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), is not open to review in the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2209–2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — swamp and overflowed land — passing of title.

2. Prior to identification the state acquired only an inchoate title to swamp and overflowed lands under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, although the terms of the 1st section of that act denote a present grant to the state of the swamp and overflowed lands "made unfit thereby for cultivation," since the 2d section lays upon the Secretary of the Interior the duty of identifying and listing the lands coming within the terms of the grant, and of causing patents therefor to be issued to the state "at the request of" its governor, and then declares "and on that patent, the fee simple to said lands shall vest in the said state," subject to the disposal of its legislature.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — swamp and overflowed lands — extinguishing inchoate title.

3. The inchoate title of the state of Arkansas to unidentified swamp and overflowed lands under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, was extinguished by a compromise and settlement between the state and

---

Note.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On error to state court in cases involving land titles—see note to O'Conor v. Texas, 50 L. ed. U. S. 1120.

Digitized by Google

the United States, approved by the state legislature in Ark. Laws 1897, p. 88, and by Congress in the act of April 29, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 229), by which the state accepted the lands theretofore patented, approved, or confirmed to it under the swamp land act as the full measure of lands due to it thereunder, and relinquished to the United States all other claims or demands, adjusted or unadjusted, growing out of that act.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — swamp and overflowed lands — conveyance by levee district.

4. A levee district to which had passed the state's inchoate title to unidentified swamp and overflowed lands under the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, being a mere political subdivision created by the state, and invested under Ark. Laws 1893, pp. 24, 119, with authority to construct and maintain levees to protect lands within its limits from overflow by the waters of the Mississippi river, and to levy and collect taxes and take other measures to that end, was bound by the subsequent action of the state in accepting the lands theretofore patented, approved, or confirmed to the state under the swamp land act as the full measure of lands due to it thereunder, and relinquishing to the United States all other claims or demands, adjusted or unadjusted, growing out of that act, and the levee district could not thereafter invest its grantee with a title which it no longer possessed.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. c, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 8.]

Submitted October 30, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Chancery Court of Mississippi County, in that state, dismissing the complaint in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 88 Ark. 37, 113 S. W. 340.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry Craft submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Swamp land passed to the states under the swamp land grant, though not laid off in sections.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Indiana v. Milk, 11 Biss. 197, 11 Fed. 394; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 584, 34 L. ed. 1068, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; McDade v. Bossier Levee Board, 109 La. 625, 33 So. 628; People v. Warner, 116 Mich. 228, 74 N. W. 705.

An identification of swamp land was all that was needed, and where surveys and plats show that a given area was swamp land or a shallow lake that could be reclaimed, it has a sufficient identification, whether crossed by section lines or not.

Covington v. Berry, 76 Ark. 464, 88 S. W. 1005; Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 190 U. S. 452, 460, 47 L. ed. 1134, 1137, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

I grant that the rule has been generally established that a meander line is not a boundary, and that the title and rights of a grantee of fractional sections abutting the meander line will be so extended as to include any small strip of land, or any body of land inconsiderable in comparison with the original grant, which may lie between the meander line and the body of water.

But where the established facts plainly show that a mistake was made in the survey, such as the assumption by the surveyor that another body of water was the body of water which he meandered, and it appears that the unsurveyed land lying between the meandered line and the body of water intended to be meandered is many times greater in extent than the fractional sections abutting the meandered line, then in such event, and under such circumstances, an exception to the general rule is established, and the meander line will be treated as a boundary line.

Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 40 L. ed. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988.

Another well-established exception to the general rule that official plats and surveys are conclusive, and that meander lines are not lines of boundary, arises when the facts show that that there never was a lake or stream such as the surveyors undertook to meander, or if there was any lake or stream, its actual location was such that it would not be reached by extending the lines of the sections which had been platted and surveyed as fractional sections on the meandered line.

French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 46 L. ed. 800, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

The effect of the statute was to devolve upon the Secretary of the Interior the duty, and confer upon him the power, of determining what lands were swamp and overflowed lands, and to make his office the tribunal whose decisions were to be controlling. And except in cases where he fails or refuses to act, his jurisdiction is exclusive.

Smith v. Hollis, 46 Ark. 17; Morgan v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 63 Mo. 129; Stephenson v. Stephenson, 71 Mo. 127; Carroll v. United States, 83 C. C. A. 245, 154 Fed. 425; Ogden v. Buckley, 116 Iowa, 353, 89 N. W. 1115.

How can defendants be heard to assert that there was a lake in front of their fractional sections? If there was none, then the case of French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, supra, is conclusive of the question of their riparian rights, and fixes the meandered line as a boundary line. The line being a boundary, under the rule as stated in Horne v. Smith, supra, nothing passed by riparian right from the government to the state, nor from state to its vendees, but this in no way interfered with the title passing to the state, under the swamp land act, and the patents for the townships.

Digitized by Google

What riparian rights were acquired by defendants as the vendees of the state when they acquired the fractional sections is a question of local law.

Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 328, 24 L. ed. 224, 227; Hardin v. Shedd, 190 U. S. 508, 47 L. ed. 1156, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685; Whitaker v. McBride, 197 U. S. 510, 49 L. ed. 857, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840.

No auditor, governor, or land commissioner ever undertook to sell any of the so-called lake beds. They were not admeasured, and these officials had power to sell only by the public surveys and by the acre.

State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 435, 7 N. E. 379.

As we have seen, the question of whether or not there existed any lake when the state conveyed was not a question to be considered. If the state, and all persons, would have been bound by the official survey and plat, even that was out of the way, because the Land Department, which had had the survey and plat made, had already determined that its showing was erroneous in so far as it showed a lake, and the Secretary of the Interior had pronounced the so-called lake bed to be swamp land. This finding was conclusive.

Western & H. Invest Co. v. Farmers' & T. Nat. Bank, 35 Or. 298, 57 Pac. 912.

The supreme court of Arkansas has itself in effect overruled its opinion in this cause in a well-considered opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Kirby in 1911, in Chapman & D. Lumber Co. v. St. Francis Levee Dist. 100 Ark. 94, 139 S. W. 625.

No appearance for defendants in error.

Solicitor General Davis as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit to quiet the title to about 1,200 acres of land in Mississippi county, in the state of Arkansas, lying within the meander line of what was represented on the plats of the United States survey as Walker's lake. The plaintiff claimed title through (a) the act of Congress of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), granting swamp and overflowed lands to the state; (b) an act of the state legislature in 1893 (Laws Ark. 1893, p. 172), granting to the St. Francis Levee District "all the lands of this state" lying within that district; and (c) a deed of March 11, 1903, from the levee district to the plaintiff. The defendants, in addition to denying the plaintiff's title, asserted title in themselves, in virtue of their ownership, under swamp-land patents from the United States to the state, and from the state to their grantors, of fractional sections abutting on the meander line of the lake. After a trial, the chancery court of the county entered a decree dismissing the complaint on the merits, and the decree was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 88 Ark. 37, 113 S. W. 340.

[337] The material facts, due regard being had for the findings of the supreme court, are these: The lands in the vicinity of Walker's lake were surveyed, in 1847, into two fractional townships, made so by meandering, and excluding what the surveyor designated as the lake; but the meander line, instead of approximately following the margin of the actual lake, a small, non-navigable body of water, was run about a mile distant therefrom, along a slash or slough which the surveyor probably mistook for the outer portion of the lake. The land in controversy, although then wet and swampy, as were also the lands outside the meander line, was not part of the bed of the lake, but lay between its bank, which was well defined, and the meander line. After the enactment of the swamp-land act, the surveyed lands in the two townships were listed by the Secretary of the Interior as swamp lands, and were patented to the state under that act, and the fractional sections abutting on the meander line and opposite the land in controversy were then patented by the state to the defendants' grantors. The unsurveyed land within the meander line was never selected by the state, or listed by the Secretary of the Interior, as swamp or overflowed land; nor was it ever patented to the state.

As part of a compromise and settlement between the state and the United States, negotiated in 1895, and approved by the state legislature in 1897, and by Congress in 1898, the state, subject to certain exceptions not here material, accepted the lands theretofore patented, approved, or confirmed to it under the swamp-land act as the full measure of lands due to it thereunder, and relinquished to the United States all other claims or demands, adjusted or unadjusted, growing out of that act. Senate Report No. 76, 54th Cong. 1st Sess.; Laws Ark. 1897, p. 88; 30 Stat. at L. 367, chap. 229.

Digitized by Google

In disposing of the case, the supreme court of the state, after observing that the plaintiff must recover, if [388] at all, upon the strength of her own title, and not upon the weakness of that of her adversaries, held (a) that, as the land in controversy had not been selected, listed, or patented as swamp or overflowed land under the swamp-land act, the title thereto remained in the United States, unless it had passed to the state as a riparian owner in virtue of the patents for the adjoining fractional sections; (b) that if the title had so passed to the state, it in like manner had passed thence with those sections to the defendants' grantors prior to the grant of 1893 to the levee district; and (c) that in view of the state's relinquishment under the compromise and settlement of 1895, the plaintiff, as a subsequent vendee of the district, was not in a position to question the riparian rights asserted by the defendants.

In the chancery court it was stipulated by counsel, for the purpose of avoiding the production of other evidence upon the subject, that "the townships including Walker's lake, as meandered on the map," were listed by the Secretary of the Interior as swamp lands, and patented to the state under the swamp-land act, and one of the controverted questions in the supreme court was whether this stipulation, rightly interpreted, meant that the listing and patenting embraced all the lands which would have been within the two townships if the township and subdivisional lines had been extended over the area represented on the plat as the lake, or only the surveyed lands; that is, those lying without the meander line. The court, having recourse to the plats of the survey as produced in evidence (which represented the townships as fractional by reason of the exclusion of the meandered area from the survey), as also to the government's well-known practice of patenting lands according to the legal subdivisions shown upon the plats, held that the stipulation should be taken as referring to the fractional townships, and not to the unsurveyed lands within the meander line; and in [339] that connection it was said: "It is evident that the parties meant only the surveyed lands appearing on the plat, leaving all questions as to the character of the unsurveyed territory and title thereto open to further proof and adjudication." This is assigned as error; but as no Federal question was involved, but only the proper interpretation of a stipulation of counsel, the ruling is not open to review by this court. It is not as if the patents had been in evidence, and the question had been one of their interpretation or legal import. See French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 54, 46 L. ed. 800, 803, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

In view of the finding that the land in controversy was never patented to the state, it will be perceived that a pivotal question in the case is whether the swamp-land act of 1850 in itself operated to invest the state with the title in any such sense as to be of present avail to the plaintiff. The state court answered the question in the negative, and the correctness of that ruling is now to be passed upon.

Although the terms of the 1st section of the act denote a present grant to the state of the "swamp and overflowed lands, made unfit thereby for cultivation," the 2d section lays upon the Secretary of the Interior the duty of identifying and listing the lands coming within the terms of the grant, and of causing patents therefor to be issued to the state "at the request of" its governor, and then declares: "And on that patent the fee simple to said lands shall vest in the said state," subject to the disposal of its legislature. It became necessary, in Rogers Locomotive Mach. Works v. American Emigrant Co. 164 U. S. 559, 41 L. ed. 552, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, to determine the meaning and effect of the act in the light of these provisions and of prior decisions, and it was there said (p. 570): "While, therefore, as held in many cases, the act of 1850 was in præsenti, and gave an inchoate title, the lands needed to be identified as lands that passed under the act; which being done, and not before, the title [340] became perfect as of the date of the granting act." And again (p. 574): "It belonged to him [the Secretary of the Interior], primarily, to identify all lands that were to go to the state under the act of 1850. When he made such identification, then, and not before, the state was entitled to a patent, and 'on such patent' the fee-simple title vested in the state. The state's title was, at the outset, an inchoate one, and did not become perfect, as of the date of the act, until a patent was issued." What was there said has since been regarded as the settled law upon the subject. Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 476, 43 L. ed. 772, 773, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 308, 44 L. ed. 171, 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Ogden v. Buckley, 116 Iowa, 352, 89 N. W. 1115; Birch v. Gillis, 67 Mo. 102; Carr v. Moore, 119

Digitized by Google

Iowa, 152, 159, 97 Am. St. Rep. 292, 93 N. W. 52.

As this land was never so identified, and, so far as appears, its identification was never even requested by the state, it follows that, even if, at the date of the act, the land was in fact swamp or overflowed, the state never acquired more than an inchoate title to it,—a claim which was imperfect both at law and in equity.

We have seen that by the compromise and settlement of 1895, which was approved by the state legislature and by Congress, the state accepted the lands theretofore patented, approved, or confirmed to it under the swamp-land act as the full measure of lands due to it thereunder, and relinquished to the United States all other claims or demands, adjusted or unadjusted, growing out of that act. Without any doubt this extinguished the state's incohate title, and estopped the state from thereafter asserting that title or demanding a patent.

Assuming that the inchoate title had then passed to the levee district under the act of 1893, was the district in any better situation than the state? The answer turns upon the relation of the one to the other. The district was a mere political subdivision of the state, created by the [341] latter, and invested with authority to construct and maintain levees to protect lands within its limits from overflow by the waters of the Mississippi river, and to levy and collect taxes and take other measures to that end. Laws Ark. 1893, pp. 24, 119. It was essentially a subordinate agency of the state, was exercising a power of the state for its convenience, could have no will contrary to the will of the state, held its property and revenue for public purposes, and was in all respects subject to the state's paramount authority. In view of this relation, we are quite clear that the state's action was binding upon the district, and that the latter could not, by its subsequent deed to the plaintiff, invest her with a title which it no longer possessed. In this respect the case is not distinguishable from Rogers Locomotive Mach. Works v. American Emigrant Co. 164 U. S. 559, 576, 577, 41 L. ed. 552, 559, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188.

We conclude, therefore, that the plaintiff was without title and could not maintain the suit. This renders it unnecessary to consider whether, in point of Federal law, the riparian rights asserted by the defendants are ill or well founded.

Decree affirmed.

OTTO MONSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
S. J. SIMONSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 341-347.)

Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation.

1. The restrictions upon alienation imposed upon an Indian allottee by the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), § 5, were not instantly removed by the provision in the Indian appropriation act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1067, chap. 1479), authorizing and empowering the Secretary of the Interior to issue a full and unrestricted patent to such allottee, but must be deemed to have remained in force until such patent was actually issued,—especially since other kindred provisions in the latter act relating to other allotments contained the words, not found here, "and all restrictions as to sale, encumbrance, or taxation of said lands are hereby removed."

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation — after-acquired title.

2. A title acquired by an Indian allottee through an unrestricted patent issued conformably to the Indian appropriation act of March 3, 1905, could not, by reason of any state statute, inure to the benefit of the grantee in a deed made by an allottee while the restrictions on alienation imposed by the act of February 8, 1887, § 5, were still in force, rendering such deed "absolutely null and void."

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII.; Estoppel, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 14.]

Submitted October 30, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Dakota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Roberts County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action to determine conflicting claims to a tract of land sold by an Indian allottee. Reversed.

See same case below, 22 S. D. 238, 117 N. W. 133.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Moses E. Clapp submitted the cause in behalf of Mr. M. D. Munn. Mr. Chester L. Caldwell was on the brief.

No appearance for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit to determine conflicting claims to the title to 160 acres of land in Roberts county, South Dakota. Both parties claim through Henry A. Quinn, an Indian of the Sisseton and Wahpeton tribe, to whom the land was allotted under the act of Congress of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 388, chap. 119), the 5th section of which, omitting portions not here material, reads as follows:

Digitized by Google

"That upon the approval of the allotments provided [343] for in this act by the Secretary of the Interior, he shall cause patents to issue therefor in the name of the allottees, which patents shall be of the legal effect, and declare, that the United States does and will hold the land thus allotted, for the period of twenty-five years, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the Indian to whom such allotment shall have been made, or, in case of his decease, of his heirs, according to the laws of the state or territory where such land is located, and that, at the expiration of said period, the United States will convey the same by patent to said Indian, or his heirs, as aforesaid, in fee, discharged of said trust, and free of all charge or encumbrance whatsoever: Provided, That the President of the United States may in any case, in his discretion, extend the period. And if any conveyance shall be made of the lands set apart and allotted as herein provided, or any contract made touching the same, before the expiration of the time above mentioned, such conveyance or contract shall be absolutely null and void."

In 1889, following the approval of the allotment, a trust patent or allotment certificate, conforming to this statute, was duly issued to the allottee; and on March 3, 1905, nine years before the expiration of the trust period, Congress incorporated in the Indian appropriation act of that date (33 Stat. at L. 1067, chap. 1479) the following provision:

"That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to issue a patent to Henry A. Quinn for the east half of the northwest quarter, the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter, and the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section thirty-two, township one hundred and twenty-five north, range fifty west of the fifth principal meridian, South Dakota."

The land so described is that covered by the allotment, and a patent therefor, passing the full and unrestricted title, was issued to the allottee by the Secretary of the [344] Interior, June 29, 1905, in the exercise of the authority and power given by this provision.

Upon the trial it appeared that the plaintiff claimed under two warranty deeds from the allottee, one made and acknowledged May 31, 1905, and recorded June 2, following, and the other purporting to have been made May 30, and acknowledged July 3, 1905, but not recorded. The defendant claimed under a deed from the allottee executed and delivered July 10, 1905, and recorded the same day. The matters in controversy were, (1) whether the plaintiff's deed of May 31 was void because made and delivered before the unrestricted patent was issued, (2) the real date of the acknowledgment and delivery of the plaintiff's unrecorded deed, and whether it was void for the like reason, and (3) whether the defendant purchased with notice of the plaintiff's claim under the latter deed. That deed was admitted in evidence over the objection of the defendant, and the ruling was made the subject of a special exception.

The trial court found the issues for the plaintiff, and while the finding made no mention of his deed of May 31, it did recite that his unrecorded deed was executed and delivered July 3, 1905; that he was in actual and open possession from that date until after the date of the deed to the defendant; and that the latter purchased with notice of the plaintiff's claim. Upon this finding a judgment was entered quieting the title in the plaintiff, and shortly thereafter a motion to vacate the judgment and for a new trial was interposed by the defendant, supported by divers affidavits purporting to set forth newly discovered evidence tending to discredit the plaintiff's unrecorded deed and the claim that it was acknowledged and delivered July 3, 1905. The motion was denied, and the defendant appealed to the supreme court of the state, which affirmed both the judgment and the order denying the motion. 22 S. D. 238, 117 N. W. 133. The affirmance was put upon [345] the ground that the plaintiff's deed of May 31 was valid, and, being a warranty deed purporting to convey the land in fee simple, the title subsequently acquired through the unrestricted patent inured to the plaintiff by operation of a statute of the state. Rev. Civ. Code, § 947, subdiv. 4. Reaching that conclusion, the court deemed it unnecessary to consider or decide the questions presented respecting the plaintiff's unrecorded deed and the effect to be given to it.

The Federal question presented for decision by us is whether the restrictions upon alienation imposed upon the allottee by § 5 of the act of 1887 were instantly removed by the act of March 3, 1905, or remained in force until the issuing of the patent carrying the full and unrestricted title. The defendant sought to maintain the latter view, but the state court sustained the other.

The act of 1887 was adopted as part of the government's policy of dissolving the tribal relations of the Indians, distributing their lands in severalty, and conducting the individuals from a state of dependent wardship to one of full emancipation, with its attendant privileges and burdens. Realizing that so great a change would require years for its accomplishment, and that in the meantime the Indians should be safeguarded against their own improvidence, Congress, in prescribing by the act of 1887 a system for allotting the lands in severalty, whereby the Indians would be established in individual homes, was careful to avoid investing the allottee with the title in the first instance, and directed that there should be issued to him what is inaptly termed a patent (United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 436, 47 L. ed. 532, 535, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478), but is in reality an allotment certificate, declaring that for a period of twenty-five years, or such enlarged period as the President should direct, the United States would hold the allotted land in trust for the sole use and benefit of the allottee, or, in case of his death, of his heirs, and at the expiration of that period would [346] convey to him by patent the fee, discharged of the trust, and free of any charge or encumbrance; and, as a safeguard against improvident conveyances or contracts made in anticipation of the ultimate or real patent, it was expressly provided that any conveyance of the land, or any contract touching the same, made before the expiration of the trust period, should be absolutely null and void. It is thus made plain that it was the intention of Congress that the title should remain in the United States during the entire trust period, and that, when conveyed to the allottee or his heirs by the ultimate patent at the expiration of that period, it should be unaffected by any prior conveyance or contract touching the land.

Digitized by Google

It also is plain that, in the absence of further and permissive legislation, the Secretary of the Interior was without authority to shorten the trust period and at once invest the allottee with the title in fee. Recognizing that this was so, and for reasons deemed sufficient, Congress, by the provision in the act of March 3, 1905, clothed the Secretary with such authority with respect to this allotment. That provision says: "The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to issue a patent" to the allottee. By "patent" is meant, of course, the ultimate patent passing the fee; for the trust patent or allotment certificate had issued sixteen years before. The language of the provision is permissive, not mandatory, and evidently was designed to enable the Secretary to shorten the trust period, by issuing the final patent, if, in his judgment, it seemed wise, but not to require him to do so. And it is significant that the provision contains no words directly or presently removing the existing restrictions upon alienation, while other kindred provisions in the same act, relating to other allotments, contain the words "and all restrictions as to sale, encumbrance, or taxation of said lands are hereby removed." It hardly can be said that the absence of those words in this instance [347] and their presence in others is not indicative of a difference in meaning and purpose. We conclude that the restrictions upon alienation contained in the act of 1887 were not instantly removed by the act of 1905, but remained in force as to this allotment until the Secretary of the Interior, in the exercise of the authority conferred by the latter act, terminated the trust period by issuing the final patent passing the fee.

As that patent was issued June 29, 1905, and as the deed from the allottee upon which alone the judgment of affirmance was rested was made and delivered May 31, preceding, it follows that this deed was, in the language of the statute, absolutely null and void, and that the title subsequently acquired by the allottee through the final patent could not inure to the plaintiff in virtue of his being the grantee in that deed. See Starr v. Long Jim, 227 U. S. 613, 624, 57 L. ed. 670, 675, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358. A state statute could not make it the basis of passing subsequently acquired title when the Federal statute pronounces it entirely void. See Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. 436, 450, 10 L. ed. 235, 242; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 99, 20 L. ed. 534, 536.

The judgment is accordingly reversed and the cause remanded, but without prejudice to the power of the Supreme Court of the state to proceed to a determination of the questions which were left open by its opinion. See Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 635, 636, 22 L. ed. 429, 444.

Judgment reversed.

---

[348] STREET & SMITH, a Copartnership, etc., Appts.,
v.
ATLAS MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 348–353.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — trademark case — certiorari.

An appeal to the Federal Supreme Court to review a decision of a circuit court of appeals in a case arising under the trademark act of February 20, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 724, chap. 592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1459), cannot be maintained under the Judicial Code, § 241, as one not made final by that Code, although trademark cases are not included in the enumeration, in § 128 of the Code, of the decisions which shall be final (except as reviewable under §§ 239, 240, on certified questions or by certiorari), since these sections, in view of the provisions of §§ 292, 294, 297 of the Code, bearing upon the extent to which it was intended to affect or repeal prior laws, must be read in connection with § 18 of the trademark act, placing trademark cases upon the same footing, as respects the remedy by certiorari, as cases arising under the patent laws.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. d, 2; Certiorari, 40, 41, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 618.]

Submitted November 10, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri, directed the dismissal of a suit to enjoin the infringement of a registered trademark and unfair trade. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1002, 204 Fed. 398.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Hugh K. Wagner submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. Leonard J. Langbein was on the brief.

Mr. James Love Hopkins submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. Nelson Thomas was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of a circuit court of appeals, directing the dismissal of a suit to enjoin infringement of a registered trademark and unfair trade. 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1002, 204 Fed. 398. The decree was rendered and the appeal allowed after the Judicial Code, adopted March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1087, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 128), became effective. Our jurisdiction is challenged by a motion to dismiss; and if we have jurisdiction it is solely because the case was in part one arising under the act of February 20, 1905, infra, under [350] which the trademark was registered. Whether in a case so arising the judgment or decree of a circuit court of appeals may be reviewed by this court upon an appeal or writ of error, or only upon a writ of certiorari, is the question for decision.

Section 128 of the Judicial Code declares that, except as provided in §§ 239 and 240, "the judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of appeals shall be final . . . in all cases arising under the patent laws, under the copyright laws, under the revenue laws, and under the criminal laws, and in admiralty cases." Section 239 permits the certification to this court of questions of law by a circuit court of appeals concerning which it desires instruction for the proper decision of a case within its appellate jurisdiction, and is not important here. Section 240 reserves to this court the discretionary power to require, by certiorari, upon the petition of a party, that any case in which the decision of a circuit court of appeals is made final by the Code be certified here for review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if brought here by appeal or writ of error. Section 241 declares that any case in which the decision of a circuit court of appeals is not made final by the Code may be brought here, as of right, by appeal or writ of error, if the matter in controversy exceeds $1,000, besides costs.

These provisions, it is said by counsel for the appellants, enabled them to appeal, as of right, the statutory amount being involved, and did not remit them to the discretionary writ of certiorari; the argument being that § 128 enumerates the cases in which the decisions of the circuit courts of appeals shall be final, and does not include among them cases arising under the trademark laws, and that § 241 gives an appeal or writ of error, as of right, in any case in which the decision of the circuit court of appeals is not thus made final, if, as here, the requisite amount is in controversy. If the question turned entirely [351] upon the Code provisions relied upon, the argument probably would be convincing. But there are other statutory provisions which must be considered, some within and others without the Code.

The Code does not purport to embody all the law upon the subjects to which it relates. It contains some new provisions and some that are modifications of old ones; but much of it is merely a re-enactment of prior laws with appropriate re-

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On certiorari from Federal Supreme Court to circuit courts of appeals—see note to United States v. Dickinson, 53 L. ed. U. S. 711.

Digitized by Google

gard to their proper classification and orderly arrangement. Among others, it contains the following provisions bearing upon the extent to which it was intended to affect or repeal prior laws:

"Sec. 292. Wherever, in any law not contained within this act, a reference is made to any law revised or embraced herein, such reference, upon the taking effect hereof, shall be construed to refer to the section of this act into which has been carried or revised the provision of law to which reference is so made. . . .

"Sec. 294. The provisions of this act, so far as they are substantially the same as existing statutes, shall be construed as continuations thereof, and not as new enactments, and there shall be no implication of a change of intent by reason of a change of words in such statute, unless such change of intent shall be clearly manifest. . . .

"Sec. 297. The following sections of the Revised Statutes and acts and parts of acts are hereby repealed: . . . [many sections, acts, and parts of acts are here enumerated]. Also all other acts and parts of acts, in so far as they are embraced within and superseded by this act, are hereby repealed; the remaining portions thereof to be and remain in force with the same effect and to the same extent as if this act had not been passed."

Sections 128, 239, 240, and 241 of the Code, as before described, substantially, almost literally, repeat the provisions of § 6 of the circuit courts of appeals act of March 3, 1891 (26 [352] Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488). There is but a single change deserving mention here, and it is that cases arising under the copyright laws are in § 128 added to the enumeration of cases in which the decisions of the circuit courts of appeals are declared final. But this has no bearing upon cases arising under the trademark laws, save as it indicates that Congress was extending, rather than contracting, the list of cases in which finality attaches to the decisions of the circuit courts of appeals. Passing this consideration, there is nothing in the Code denoting a purpose to change the existing appellate jurisdiction in trademark cases: it is left as it was before.

The trademark act of February 20, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 724, chap. 592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1459), dealt with the subject we are considering. By § 17 it invested the circuit courts of appeals with appellate jurisdiction of cases arising under that act, and by § 18 declared that writs of certiorari might be granted by this court for the review of decisions of those courts in such cases "in the same manner as provided for patent cases" by the circuit courts of appeals act. In placing such trademark cases upon the same footing as cases arising under the patent laws, as respects the remedy by certiorari, Congress undoubtedly intended that this remedy should have the same attributes in the one class of cases as in the other. We already have seen that the circuit courts of appeals act, in § 6, made it exclusive in cases arising under the patent laws. Before the adoption of the Code, this court said in Hutchinson, P. & Co. v. Loewy, 217 U. S. 457, 460, 54 L. ed. 838, 839, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613, a case like this: "We are of opinion that this appeal will not lie, and that the remedy by certiorari is exclusive. . . . We think that the language of § 18 places suits brought under the trademark act [February 20, 1905] plainly within the scope of the act establishing the court of appeals [March 3, 1891], and that a final decision of that court can be reviewed in this court only upon certiorari."

[353] Of course, that case and this are not to be confused with others arising under earlier trademark laws not containing any provisions respecting appellate jurisdiction such as are embodied in the act of 1905.

The provisions of that act upon this subject are not among those enumerated in § 297 of the Code as thereby repealed, and neither do they appear to have been embraced within and superseded by the Code. And while the circuit courts of appeals act, to which § 18 of the act of 1905 makes reference, has been superseded by being incorporated into the Code, that section has not thereby lost any of its original effect, for § 292 of the Code requires the reference to be construed as if naming the very sections of the Code into which the circuit courts of appeals act has been carried.

It follows that the motion to dismiss the appeal must be sustained, as was done in Hutchinson, P. & Co. v. Loewy, supra.

Appeal dismissed.

R. H. DOWNMAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 353-357.)

Constitutional law — discrimination — due process of law — taxation of mineral rights.

The assessment for taxing purposes of NOTE.—On interests of one other than the owner of the soil in mineral in situ as independent subject of taxation—see note to Wolfe County v. Beckett, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 688.

Digitized by Google

mineral rights where they have been separately conveyed and are owned by persons other than the owners of the surface estates, without any corresponding deduction from the assessments against the surface owners, does not violate U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as discriminating against the owners of the mineral rights so assessed, where it does not appear that mineral rights known to exist were consciously relieved from taxation if they belonged to the owners of the surface.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 292–336, 523–553, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 43.]

Submitted November 3, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the District Court of Llano County in that state, upheld taxation assessments of mineral rights owned by persons other than the owners of the surface estates. Affirmed.

See same case below, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 134 S. W. 787.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Robert L. Batts submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. V. L. Brooks was on the brief.

Mr. B. F. Looney, Attorney General of Texas, submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. G. B. Smedley and Knight Stith were on the brief:

It is a settled rule of the Supreme Court of the United States that it will not review the conclusions of the highest court of a state upon questions of fact.

Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 54 L. ed. 1042, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 48 L. ed. 944, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Thomas v. Texas, 212 U. S. 278, 53 L. ed. 512, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393; Rankin v. Emigh, 218 U. S. 27, 54 L. ed. 915, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672.

The Federal Constitution imposes no rigid rule of equality upon the states in the assessment and collection of their taxes, but leaves to the discretion and wisdom of the states a wide latitude; and the fact that the assessment and collection of taxes may in some instances operate unequally, or may in some cases result in double taxation, does not render the imposition of such taxes a violation of the Federal Constitution.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 364, 46 L. ed. 949, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; State R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 612, 23 L. ed. 663, 673; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 105, 24 L. ed. 616, 620; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 658; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 229, 41 L. ed. 683, 698, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Paddell v. New York, 211 U. S. 446, 53 L. ed. 275, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139, 15 Ann. Cas. 187; Nolan v. San Antonio Ranch Co. 81 Tex. 315, 16 S. W. 1064; Lick v. Austin, 43 Cal. 590; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 391.

When a separate interest in real estate is fairly valued and taxed against its owner, such owner cannot avoid payment of the tax by showing that the value of his interest in the land has been included in the assessment against the person who owns the other interest in the land.

Globe Lumber Co. v. Lockett, 106 La. 414, 30 So. 902; Lick v. Austin, 43 Cal. 590.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The state of Texas brought suit against Downman to collect taxes on "mineral rights" owned by him in 50,000 acres of land in Llano county. In his answer he contended that he was not liable because the mineral rights were not real estate, but mere licenses to work and develop mines in the future; that if real estate they had already been returned by the owners of the surface, and, as the latter had already paid taxes on the land, no additional sum could be collected from him. Further, he claimed that the assessments were void as being an unlawful discrimination against the class of persons who, like himself, owned mineral rights separate from the surface estate.

On the trial it appeared that there was no mining in the county, but in many sections there were signs indicating the existence of ore. Prior to 1907 there had been no assessment of mineral either to the owner of the surface or to persons to whom the mineral right had been separately conveyed. In that year the tax books were made up [355] as usual, grazing and agricultural lands being assessed at from $2 to $3 per acre. The tax books were then forwarded to the county commissioners for equalization of values. Acting in pursuance of instructions from the comptroller, the commissioners made order directing the county taxing officer to assess mineral rights where they were owned by persons other than the owners of the surface estate. He thereupon examined the public records and secured the names of the grantees in all deeds which conveyed such rights. Without further investigation as to the existence or value of ore, he assessed the owner on the basis of 50 cents per acre, entering the tax in the column headed, "Mineral Rights Only." No deduction was made from the amount already entered against the owner of the land proper. The books, with both classes of assessments appearing thereon, were then finally approved, and, in due course, the surface owners paid the taxes assessed against them on the land. Downman, for the reasons already stated, refused to pay the sum demanded of him as taxes on mineral rights in the 50,000 acres. His defense was sustained by the district judge, who held that when the surface owners returned real estate, that included every interest connected with the land, and consequently Downman could not be held for an additional tax on property or value which had already been assessed to the owner of the surface. The court of civil appeals recognized that if the owner of the land, in paying his taxes, had, in fact, paid on the mineral rights also, Downman could not be held liable in the present suit. But the judgment of the district court was reversed for the reason that, in approving the books having two assessments,—one against land and one against mineral rights in the same tract,—the commissioner had recognized the existence of two separate interests in the same property, belonging to two different owners. The supreme court of the state declined to interfere, and the case was brought here by [356] writ of error in which Downman renews his attack on the validity of the assessment. He contends that mineral rights, when belonging to the owner of the surface, were not included in the assessment, but were taxed as soon as they were sold; that such "a tax was discriminatory against owners who, like appellant, own mineral rights in lands, the surface estate of which was owned by others," and that such discriminatory assessment imposes upon the latter an unlawful burden of taxation, and takes his and their property without due process of law.

Digitized by Google

The Texas court recognized that if a mineral right was not an estate, but a mere license to enter and work in the future, it was not taxable. It held, however, that the deeds conveying ore, stone, and minerals were grants of property, and conveyed to Downman title to the mineral, with the right to work the same. This title and right were held to be real estate, and taxable as such. On this writ of error from the state court we are not concerned with that construction of the statute, nor with the regularity of the method by which the taxes were assessed, nor with the fairness of the valuation. The only Federal question arises out of the contention that there was a discrimination against Downman in taxing him on mineral rights when the same were not taxed if they belonged to the owner of the surface estate. In effect he claims that taxability of mineral rights was made to depend not on value, but on ownership, being taxable after they had been conveyed, but not taxable as long as they remained the property of the holder of the surface. The record, however, does not support this position, for it does not appear that the landowner was consciously relieved of taxation on mineral rights known to exist. If the mineral actually added to the value, the law required that it should be represented in the assessment of the land. But if the owner and the assessor did not know of the existence of ore, there was no injustice nor known discrimination [357] in assessing it merely as grazing land. When, however, an actual sale of the mineral rights in a particular tract was made, and the deed recorded, a new value was brought to light. There was then no reason why the taxing officers should not accept the action of the buyer in paying therefor $1.50 per acre as evidence that the mineral right had a separate value. This right, being real estate, was taxable; but if assessed against the owner of the surface, the result would have been that he would have had to pay on an interest in the land with which he had absolutely parted. Usually real estate is taxed as a unit; but as different elements of the land are capable of being severed and separately owned, the statute may authorize a separate assessment against the owners of the severed parts. Accordingly, if the title has been severed, land may be taxed to one, timber to another, or land to one and coal to another. The state court held that such was the law of Texas, in view of the general language of the statute defining real estate as including not only the land itself, but the buildings on the land and the minerals under the land. There was therefore nothing discriminatory in assessing Downman as owner of the mineral right which had been sold to him, and separately assessing the owner of the surface with what remained. That the two owners were thus separately assessed, each on his own property, appears from the fact that both values were separately entered upon the tax books,—Downman's mineral rights, for which he paid $1.50 an acre, being assessed at 50 cents an acre, and the surface estate at from $2 to $3 per acre. If the latter was overassessed, it affords Downman no defense. The record discloses no violation of a Federal right, and the judgment is affirmed.

Digitized by Google

---

[358] UNITED STATES, Petitioner,
v.
TWENTY-FIVE PACKAGES OF PANAMA HATS, Maximo Castillo, Claimant.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 358–362.)

Duties — forfeiture — undervaluation by foreign consignors.

The fraudulent undervaluation by foreign consignors in the foreign country of goods consigned to a person in New York constitutes, upon their arrival at the port of entry, an attempt to introduce them into the commerce of the United States, and when they are unloaded and placed in general order they are actually introduced into that commerce, within the meaning of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 135, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1895), § 9, as amended by the act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 97, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 904), § 28, providing for the forfeiture of any imported merchandise which the consignor or seller shall introduce or attempt to introduce into the commerce of the United States by means of any fraudulent or false invoice, although the owner might at any time within a year have withdrawn the goods and directed them to be forwarded to a foreign country without payment of duties.

[For other cases, see Duties, XII. b. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 257.]

Argued October 30, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Northern District of New York, sustaining exceptions to a libel to forfeit imported merchandise for fraud of the foreign consignors. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 115 C. C. A. 340, 195 Fed. 438.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Adkins argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

Inasmuch as the amendment of the act of June 10, 1890, was undoubtedly due to the construction placed thereon by the courts, an examination of those decisions is necessary to a proper understanding of the amendment.

United States v. One Silk Rug, 86 C. C. A. 178, 158 Fed. 974; United States v. 20 Boxes of Cheese, 163 Fed. 369; United States v. 82 Half-Boxes of Cheese, 164 Fed. 778; United States v. Mescall, 164 Fed. 580; United States v. One Trunk, 171 Fed. 772; United States v. One Trunk, 175 Fed. 1012, affirmed in 114 C. C. A. 353, 192 Fed. 913; United States v. Baker, 5 Ben. 25, Fed. Cas. No. 14,500; United States v. Cargo of Sugar, 3 Sawy. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 14,722; United States v. Legg, 45 C. C. A. 134, 105 Fed. 933.

It cannot be denied that, in amending the statute, Congress intended to make some change in the law, and it is reasonable to presume that Congress intended by the change to make the law more effective.

United States v. Mescall, 215 U. S. 32, 54 L. ed. 79, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19.

A statute should be so construed as to effectuate the legislative intent, and when the language used is susceptible of either a narrow, technical, or a broad, popular meaning, the courts must adopt that meaning which will accomplish, and not defeat, the intent.

United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 396, 18 L. ed. 832; American Security & T. Co. v. District of Columbia, 224 U. S. 491, 56 L. ed. 856, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

The commerce of the United States is all-inclusive, taking in both its domestic and its foreign commerce. The only qualification in the statute is that the goods shall be imported; and this is true, of course, when they have been brought to a port of the United States with intent to unlade.

United States v. Arnold, 1 Gall. 348, Fed. Cas. No. 14,469; Flagler v. Kidd, 24 C. C. A. 123, 45 U. S. App. 461, 78 Fed. 341.

Interstate commerce of the United States continues from the receipt of goods by the common carrier to delivery to the consignee.

Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Heyman v. Southern R. Co. 203 U. S. 270, 51 L. ed. 178, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104, 7 Ann. Cas. 1130.

The courts will adopt the meaning intended by Congress.

United States v. Chavez, 228 U. S. 525, 57 L. ed. 950, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

Mr. Albert H. Washburn argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

There has been no attempt to enter or introduce into the commerce of the United

---

NOTE.—On forfeiture for violation of revenue laws—see note to United States v. 99 Diamonds, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 185.

Digitized by Google

States merchandise in general order within the meaning of subsec. 9 of § 28 of the tariff act of August 5, 1909.

United States v. Cargo of Sugar, 3 Sawy. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 14,722; United States v. Legg, 45 C. C. A. 134, 105 Fed. 930.

Assuming that preparations were made in a foreign country by some unknown consignor in anticipation of the commission of an offense, or of an attempt to commit an offense, or of an attempt to commit an offenc, where is the overt act essential either to the offense or to the attempt to commit an offense?

Keck v. United States, 172 U. S. 434, 43 L. ed. 505, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; United States v. 1 Pearl Chain, 71 C. C. A. 500, 139 Fed. 513; People v. Youngs, 122 Mich. 292, 47 L.R.A. 108, 81 N. W. 114; People v. Murray, 14 Cal. 160; United States v. One Trunk, 171 Fed. 772, affirmed in 106 C. C. A. 459, 184 Fed. 317.

It is conceivable that the new language with respect to introducing or attempting to introduce imported merchandise into the commerce of the United States, found in subsec. 9 of § 28, was inserted in view of the language of the trial judge in the Mescall Case so as to broaden the scope of the section to include a customs weigher, even though it subsequently transpired after the passage of the act of 1909 that § 9 of the old act, as construed by this court (United States v. Mescall, 215 U. S. 26, 54 L. ed. 77, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19), was sufficiently comprehensive as it stood. This is something that Congress, of course, could not surely anticipate.

[359] Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a proceeding to forfeit, for fraud of foreign consignors, goods not technically entered at the New York customs house, but unloaded from the ship and stored in general order. The libel charges that Castillo & Company were engaged in buying and selling Panama hats shipped to them by merchants from foreign ports. These consignors, as required by law (26 Stat. at L. 131, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886), delivered to the American consular agent, at the point of shipment, three sets of invoices showing the value of the property intended for importation into the United States. One of these invoices was retained by that officer, one was sent to the collector of the port at New York, and the third was delivered to the consignor, and by him forwarded to the consignee, Castillo & Company. All the provisions of the law were complied with, except that the consignors falsely and fraudulently undervalued the merchandise. The goods arrived in New York during April, May, and June, 1910, but were not called for by the consignee. They were accordingly put in general order by virtue of customs regulations (§§ 1087, 1088, 1902; Rev. Stat. §§ 2954, 2989, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1943, 1960), whereby the collector takes possession of goods unloaded, but unclaimed. They are then stored in a general order warehouse, the consignee having the right at any time within twelve months to withdraw them and make due entry therefor. If not so entered within the year, the merchandise must be sold at public auction.

The libeled goods not having been called for, the collector, in May, 1911, caused proceedings to be instituted to have them forfeited under the provisions of § 9 of the tariff act [of 1890, 26 Stat. at L. 135, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1895, as amended by § 28] of 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 97, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 904), which declares "that if any consignor, seller, owner, importer, consignee, agent, or other person or persons, shall enter or introduce, or attempt to enter or introduce, into the commerce of the United States, any imported [360] merchandise by means of any fraudulent or false invoice . . . or shall be guilty of any wilful act or omission by means whereof the United States may be deprived of the lawful duties . . . such merchandise or the value thereof, to be recovered from such person or persons, shall be forfeited . . . and such person or persons shall, upon conviction, be fined . . . or be imprisoned . . . or both, in the discretion of the court."

Maximo Castillo, as claimant, filed exceptions to the libel on the ground that the merchandise was not subject to forfeiture because there had been no entry of the goods; contending that placing them in general order was not even an attempt to introduce them into the commerce of the United States, inasmuch as the owner might, during the year, direct them to be forwarded to a foreign country without payment of a duty here. This contention was sustained by the district judge. That judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (115 C. C. A. 340, 195 Fed. 438), and the case is here on writ of certiorari.

The prior tariff act (26 Stat. at L. 131, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886) provided for the forfeiture of the goods "if any owner, importer, consignee, agent, or other person, shall make or attempt to make any entry of imported merchandise by means of any fraudulent or false invoice." In several cases arising under that act it was held that the language used did not cover the case of fraud by the consignor, nor could the goods be forfeited for the wrongful conduct of any person if the act preceded the making of the documents or taking any of the steps necessary to enter the goods. United States v. 646 Half Boxes of Figs, 164 Fed. 778 (1908); United States v. One Trunk, 171 Fed. 772 (July, 1909). Under the statute, as thus construed, there was no penalty for the grossest fraud on the part of the consignor, notwithstanding the fact that his invoice valuation was of great importance in determining true value, as a basis for collecting the duty. And even if the consignor was [361] also consignee, it had been held that there was a locus pœnitentiæ so that he might, before entry, substitute a true for a false invoice, and thus escape a forfeiture.

Digitized by Google

In order to close those loopholes and to make the act more effective Congress, on August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 97, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 904), changed the law so as to increase the number of persons whose fraud should be punished. It also enlarged the scope of conduct for which the goods should be forfeited. Instead of punishing only for the fraud of the "owner, importer, consignee, and other persons," as under the act of 1890, provision was made for forfeiture for fraud, of the "consignor or seller." Instead of punishing only for entering or attempting to enter on a fraudulent invoice, it punished an attempt by such means "to introduce any imported merchandise into the commerce of the United States." This latter phrase necessarily included more than an attempt to enter, otherwise the amendment was inoperative against the consignor against whom it was specially aimed, for he does not, as such, make the declaration, sign the documents, or take any steps in entering or attempting to enter the goods. When he makes the false invoice in a foreign country there is no extraterritorial operation of the statute whereby he can be criminally punished for his fraud. But when the consignor made the fraudulent undervaluation in the foreign country, and on such false invoice the goods were shipped, and arrived consigned to a merchant in New York, the merchandise was within the protection and subject to the penalties of the commercial regulations of this country, even though the consignor was beyond the seas and outside the court's jurisdiction.

It was argued that the goods could only be forfeited for the same acts that would support an indictment; and inasmuch as the consignor could not be prosecuted here for making a false invoice in a foreign country, neither could the goods be forfeited for the same conduct in the [362] same place. But while punishment for the crime and forfeiture of the goods will often be coincident penalties, they are not necessarily so, nor is there any inconsistency in proceeding against the res if the wrongdoer is beyond the jurisdiction of the court. The very fact that the criminal provision of the statute does not operate extraterritorially against the consignor would be a reason why the goods themselves should be subjected to forfeiture on arrival here. Cf. American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 356, 53 L. ed. 832, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 Ann. Cas. 1047; United States v. Nord Deutscher Lloyd, 223 U. S. 512, 56 L. ed. 531, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244. The consignor's absence would not relieve the goods from the liability to be forfeited. He must be treated as having made the shipment with a knowledge that they could not remain in the vessel (Rev. Stat. § 2880, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1913), and that if, after being unloaded, they were not called for, they would be stored in general order, there to remain, free from the burden of any state legislation, and within the protection of the commerce clause of the Constitution. The foreign consignor is charged with knowledge that, if goods stored in such warehouse were not called for within the year, they were to be sold at public outcry; or if, during that period, they were taken out for shipment to a foreign port, they would start from a place of storage within the territory of the United States, and move thence in a channel of its commerce. So that in the present case, when the goods, fraudulently undervalued and consigned to a person in New York, arrived at the port of entry, there was an attempt to introduce them into the commerce of the United States. When they were unloaded and placed in general order, they were actually introduced into that commerce, within the meaning of the statute intended to prevent frauds on the customs. The judgment dismissing the libel is reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

---

[363] DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA, & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 363–373.)

Constitutional law — governmental regulation of interstate carrier — association with commodity carried.

1. Forbidding a railway company to transport in interstate commerce from market to mine an article purchased by it for use in its private business of mining, conducted under charter authority, as is done by the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 585, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1287), does not deny the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 5th Amend., but such prohibition is a valid exercise of the power of Congress to regulate commerce.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 7; Commerce, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — governmental regulation — association with commodity carried.

2. The transportation by a railway company in interstate commerce from market to mine of articles purchased by it for use by it in its private business of mining is a violation of the commodity clause of the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906, which makes it unlawful for any railway company to transport in interstate commerce any article which it may own or in which it may have any interest except such as may be necessary for its use in the conduct of its business as a common carrier.

[Governmental control of carrier, see Carriers, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — governmental regulation — association with commodity carried.

3. Hay purchased by a railway company for the use of animals employed in operating its coal mines cannot be said to have been necessary for the use of the company in the conduct of its business as a common carrier, within the meaning of the commodity clause of the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906, which makes it unlawful for any railway company to transport in interstate commerce any article it may own, or in which it may have any interest except such as may be necessary for its use in the conduct of its business as a common carrier, where the company sells for public consumption 75 per cent of the coal produced, using the remaining 25 per cent as fuel for its locomotives.

[Governmental control of carrier, see Carriers, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Sale — when title passes — delivery — acceptance.

4. An acceptance which passes title with the right to rescind as for a condition subsequent if, on later inspection, the quality is found not to correspond with the specifications, results from the receipt by a carrier at a point on its own line of hay delivered to it by the vendor in a contract by which the latter agreed to sell the hay to the carrier at a specified price f. o. b. at that point, from which the carrier was to transport it to such other points on its line as it should determine, having the right to inspect at those points before acceptance, and agreeing to pay therefor only after such inspection and acceptance.

[For other cases, see Sale, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 275.]

Argued October 17, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of New York to review a conviction of a carrier for violating the commodities clause of the Hepburn act. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. S. Jenney argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The hay in question was not owned by the railroad company during the transportation thereof from Black Rock to Scranton. The title to said hay did not pass to the railroad company until it accepted it after an inspection thereof at the mines.

Williston, Sales, §§ 274, 277, 278, 280, 472, 480, 482; Benjamin, Sales, 5th ed. pp. 341, 346, 347, 355, 748, 753; 35 Cyc. 306; Hershiser v. Delone, 24 Neb. 380, 38 N. W. 863; Stephens v. Santee, 49 N. Y. 35; Kein v. Tupper, 52 N. Y. 550; Cooke v. Millard, 65 N. Y. 352, 22 Am. Rep. 619; Nichols & S. Co. v. Paulson, 6 N. D. 400, 71 N. W. 136; Hathaway v. O'Gorman Co. 26 R. I. 476, 59 Atl. 397; Smith v. Wisconsin Invest. Co. 114 Wis. 151, 89 N. W. 829; Mechem, Sales, §§ 721, 724, 726, 729, 730, 733, 736, 1369, 1370; Blackburn, Sales, p. 129; Braddock Glass Co. v. Irwin, 153 Pa. 440, 25 Atl. 490; Dannemiller v. Kirkpatrick, 201 Pa. 218, 50 Atl. 928; McNeal v. Braun, 53 N. J. L. 617, 26 Am. St. Rep. 441, 23 Atl. 687; A. J. Neimeyer Lumber Co. v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 54 Neb. 321, 40 L.R.A. 534, 74 N. W. 670; United States v. Andrews, 207 U. S. 229, 52 L. ed. 185, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Star Brewery Co. v. Horst, 58 C. C. A. 362, 120 Fed. 246; Holmes v. Gregg, 66 N. H. 621, 28 Atl. 17; Cornell v. Clark, 104 N. Y. 451, 10 N. E. 888; Ballantyne v. Appleton, 82 Me. 570, 20 Atl. 235; Potter v. Holmes, 87 Minn. 477, 92 N. W. 411; Cefalu-Derrig Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 65 Minn. 480, 67 N. W. 1018; Grimoldby v. Wells, L. R.

NOTE.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, G. & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On the passing of title by delivery f. o. b. —see notes to Samuel M. Lawder & Sons Co. v. Albert Mackie Grocery Co. 62 L.R.A. 798, and Dentzel v. Island Park Asso. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 54.

Digitized by Google

10 C. P. 391, 44 L. J. C. P. N. S. 203, 32 L. T. N. S. 490, 23 Week. Rep. 524; Perkins v. Bell [1893] 1 Q. B. 193, 62 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 91, 4 Reports, 212, 67 L. T. N. S. 792, 41 Week. Rep. 195.

The power to regulate commerce among the states is limited by the 5th Amendment.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 336, 37 L. ed. 471, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764.

The limitations imposed by the 5th Amendment upon the exercise by Congress of the power to regulate commerce are the same as those imposed by the 14th Amendment upon the exercise of the police power by the state legislature.

Freund, Pol. Power, §§ 65, 66; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 101, 53 L. ed. 97, 107, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 410, 50 L. ed. 246, 250, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

The 5th Amendment forbids Congress, in the exercise of the power to regulate commerce, to interfere arbitrarily, unreasonably, or unnecessarily with individual rights of liberty and property. That statute is an arbitrary, unreasonable, and unnecessary interference with such rights which has no reasonable relation to the accomplishment of any legitimate public object.

Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Martin v. District of Columbia, 205 U. S. 135, 139, 51 L. ed. 743, 744, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Atlantic Coast Line Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 20, 51 L. ed. 933, 942, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Hudson County Water Co. v. McCarter, 209 U. S. 349, 52 L. ed. 828, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529, 14 Ann. Cas. 560.

The commodities clause, in its application to the facts of this case, deprived the railroad company of its liberty and property.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 589, 41 L. ed. 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

Assistant to the Attorney General Todd argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The defendant was the owner of the hay while transporting it from Black Rock (Buffalo) to Scranton.

Alden v. Hart, 161 Mass. 576, 37 N. E. 742; Allen v. Maury, 66 Ala. 10; Ballantyne v. Appleton, 82 Me. 570, 20 Atl. 235; Boothby v. Plaisted, 51 N. H. 436, 12 Am. Rep. 140; Burrows v. Whitaker, 71 N. Y. 291, 27 Am. Rep. 42; Cefalu v. Fitzimmons-Derrig Co. 65 Minn. 480, 67 N. W. 1018; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. United States, 219 U. S. 486, 55 L. ed. 305, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Cornell v. Clark, 104 N. Y. 451, 10 N. E. 888; Crofoot v. Bennett, 2 N. Y. 258; Fogel v. Brubaker, 122 Pa. 7, 15 Atl. 692; Fromme v. O'Donnell, 124 Wis. 529, 103 N. W. 3; Gass v. Astoria Veneer Mills, 121 App. Div. 182, 105 N. Y. Supp. 794; Graff v. Fitch, 58 Ill. 375, 11 Am. Rep. 85; Grimoldby v. Wells, L. R. 10 C. P. 391, 44 L. J. C. P. N. S. 203, 32 L. T. N. S. 490, 23 Week. Rep. 524; Hatch v. Standard Oil Co. 100 U. S. 124, 25 L. ed. 554; Holmes v. Gregg, 66 N. H. 621, 28 Atl. 17; Re Transportation of Company Material, 22 Inters. Com. Rep. 439; Kelsea v. Haines, 41 N. H. 246; Kuppenheimer v. Wertheimer, 107 Mich. 77, 61 Am. St. Rep. 317, 64 N. W. 952; Leonard v. Davis, 1 Black, 476, 17 L. ed. 222; Lingham v. Eggleston, 27 Mich. 324; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Macomber v. Parker, 13 Pick. 175; McCarty v. Gordon, 16 Kan. 35; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; McNeal v. Braun, 53 N. J. L. 617, 26 Am. St. Rep. 441, 23 Atl. 687; Murphy v. Sagola Lumber Co. 125 Wis. 363, 103 N. W. 1113; Perkins v. Bell [1893] 1 Q. B. 193, 62 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 91, 4 Reports, 212, 67 L. T. N. S. 792, 41 Week. Rep. 195; Pierson v. Crook, 115 N. Y. 539; Pope v. Allis, 115 U. S. 363, 29 L. ed. 393, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69; Potter v. Holmes, 87 Minn. 477, 92 N. W. 411; Riddle v. Varnum, 20 Pick. 280; Star Brewery Co. v. Horst, 58 C. C. A. 362, 120 Fed. 246; United States v. Andrews, 207 U. S. 229, 52 L. ed. 185, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; United States v. Sunday Creek Co. 194 Fed. 252; Wadhams v. Balfour, 32 Or. 313, 51 Pac. 642; Weil v. Stone, 33 Ind. App. 112, 104 Am. St. Rep. 243, 69 N. E. 698; Williston, Sales, § 472; Young Bros. v. Minkler, 14 Colo. App. 204, 59 Pac. 622.

The commodities clause is constitutional as applied to the transportation by a railroad, also engaged in production, of articles owned by it and intended for use in its operation as a producer. Hence, it is constitutional as applied to the transportation by defendant of the hay in question.

Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Cedar Hill Coal & Coke Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 15 Inters. Com. Rep. 75; Com. v. Gilbert, 160 Mass. 157, 22 L.R.A. 439, 35 N. E. 454; 2 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, note 23; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lemieux

Digitized by Google

v. Young, 211 U. S. 489, 53 L. ed. 295, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Opinion of Justices (Re House Bill No. 1230) 163 Mass. 589, 28 L.R.A. 344, 40 N. E. 713; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. ed. 1092, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789; Purity Extract & Tonic Co. v. Lynch, 226 U. S. 192, 57 L. ed. 184, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Denn ex dem. Scott v. Reid, 10 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 519; New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg, 211 U. S. 31, 53 L. ed. 75, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 34 L. ed. 767, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 53 L. ed. 836, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. ed. 458, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

The Delaware, Lackawanna, & Western Railroad Company was indicted for hauling, over its lines, between Buffalo, New York, and Scranton, Pennsylvania, twenty carloads of hay, belonging to the company, but not necessary for its use as a common carrier. This transportation [369] was charged to be in violation of the commodity clause of the Hepburn act (34 Stat. at L. 585, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1287), which makes it unlawful "for any railroad company to transport [in interstate commerce] any article . . . it may own . . . or in which it may have any interest . . . except such . . . as may be necessary . . . for its use in the conduct of its business as a common carrier."

On the trial it appeared that the defendant was not only chartered as a railroad, but had also been authorized to operate coal mines. The hay, referred to in the indictment, had been purchased for the use of animals employed in and about the mines at Scranton,—all the coal taken therefrom being sold for use by the public, except the steam coal which was used as fuel for the company's locomotives.

The defendant was found guilty and sentenced on each of the twenty counts. It brought the case here, insisting that the commodity clause violated the 5th Amendment, deprived the company of a right to contract, and prevented it from carrying its own property needed in a legitimate intrastate business, conducted under authority of a charter granted by the state of Pennsylvania, many years before the adoption of the Hepburn bill.

1. This contention must be overruled on the authority of United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 416, 53 L. ed. 835, 852, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527. It is true that the decision in that case related to shipments of coal from mine to market, while here the merchandise was transported from market to mine. But the statute relates to "all commodities, except lumber, owned by the company," and includes inbound as well as outbound shipments. Both classes of transportation are within the purview of the evil to be corrected, and therefore subject to the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce. The exercise of that power is, of course, limited by the provisions of the 5th Amendment [370] (Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 336, 37 L. ed. 471, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367), but the commodity clause does not take property, nor does it arbitrarily deprive the company of a right of property. The statute deals with railroad companies as public carriers, and the fact that they may also be engaged in a private business does not compel Congress to legislate concerning them as carriers so as not to interfere with them as miners or merchants. If such carrier hauls for the public and also for its own private purposes, there is an opportunity to discriminate in favor of itself against other shippers in the rate charged, the facility furnished, or the quality of the service rendered. The commodity clause was not an unreasonable and arbitrary prohibition against a railroad company transporting its own useful property, but a constitutional exercise of a governmental power intended to cure or prevent the evils that might result if, in hauling goods in or out, the company occupied the dual and inconsistent position of public carrier and private shipper.

It was suggested that the case is not within the statute because, as the company could buy, in Scranton, hay that had already been transported over its line, no possible harm could come to anyone if it bought the same hay in Buffalo, and then hauled it to Scranton for use at the mine, but not for sale in competition with other dealers in stock food. But the courts are not concerned with the question as to whether, in a particular case, there had been any discrimination against shippers or harm to other dealers. The statute is general, and applies not only to those particular instances in which the carrier did use its power to the prejudice of the shipper, but to all shipments which, however innocent in themselves, come within the scope and probability of the evil to be prevented.

Digitized by Google

2. In this case the hay was purchased for use in operating [371] mines where 75 per cent of the coal produced was "assorted sizes" intended to be sold for domestic purposes. The remaining 25 per cent was steam coal,—all of which was used as fuel on the company's locomotives. This steam coal was in the nature of a by-product from a mine operated primarily for the purpose of obtaining coal for sale. Hay purchased for use in such mining cannot be said to have been necessary for the use of the company in the conduct of its business as a common carrier.

3. Lastly, it was contended that the hay did not belong to the railroad company at the time of the transportation, and therefore the conviction should be set aside, since the statute only prohibits the hauling of commodities owned by the carrier.

This contention is based upon the terms of the contract, by which the Vassar Company, of Millington, Michigan, agreed to sell to the railroad company 3,000 tons No. 1 timothy hay, at $15.40 per ton, f. o. b. Buffalo, payment to be made as follows: Upon the delivery of the hay to the purchaser, at Buffalo, same will be transported by the purchaser to various points on its line of railroad, to be determined by the purchaser, at which places the purchaser shall have the right to inspect such hay before acceptance, and if, upon such inspection, said hay shall prove to be of the kind specified, the purchaser shall accept such hay and pay for the same within thirty days after such acceptance. Each of the twenty carloads of hay mentioned in the indictment was received by the company at Buffalo. Each was then reconsigned to itself at Scranton. The waybills were marked, "Freight free—Company use." After arrival at Scranton it was inspected, accepted, and used.

On these facts the defendant insists that the title did not pass until after acceptance, and many authorities are cited to support the proposition that, in a contract for the sale of personal property, not only delivery by the [372] seller, but acceptance by the buyer, is necessary for the transfer of title. But there are two kinds of acceptance,—one of quality and the other of title. They are not necessarily contemporaneous. There may be an acceptance of quality before delivery, as where goods are selected by the purchaser, delivery and transfer of title being postponed until a later time. Or, there may be an acceptance of title without an acceptance of quality; so that in many cases, after the title has passed, the purchaser may recover damages if the goods, upon inspection, prove to be of a quality inferior to that ordered. Day v. Pool, 52 N. Y. 416, 11 Am. Rep. 719; Zabriskie v. Central Vermont R. Co. 131 N. Y. 72, 29 N. E. 1006; Bagley v. Cleveland Rolling Mill Co. 22 Blatchf. 342, 21 Fed. 159 (3), 164; Miller v. Moore, 83 Ga. 684, 6 L.R.A. 374, 20 Am. St. Rep. 329, 10 S. E. 360. Again, though there may be such an acceptance as will transfer the title, the purchaser may, under the contract, have the right to rescind, as for a condition subsequent, if the goods do not correspond with the specifications. Such was the case here. When the hay was received by the purchaser at Buffalo, there was such an acceptance as to transfer title to the railroad, which accordingly took possession and exercised control in fixing when and to what point on its line the hay should be shipped. Title prima facie passes when delivery is made, and if such possession, followed by acts of ownership, did not transfer the title to the railroad company, it left the risk of unknown dangers, at unknown points, for an indefinite time, upon the seller. So hard and unusual an incident is not, under facts like these, necessarily to be implied from the use of the ambiguous phrase, "pay after inspection and acceptance," and no such construction should be given unless demanded by the explicit terms of the contract. The parties, by their conduct, showed that they did not understand that the hay remained the property of the seller after it had been delivered to the buyer, for the hay, after being received, was consigned by the company to itself, and went [373] forward from Buffalo to Scranton on waybills containing the entry, "Freight free—Company use." If the hay did, in fact, then belong to the Vassar Company, such a shipment on such a waybill would have been a departure from the published tariff, contrary to the provisions of the act to regulate commerce. No such offense, however, was committed, for the contract, both by its terms and in the light of the conduct of the parties, meant that the title should pass when delivery was accepted by the defendant at Buffalo, but that the railroad company might rescind if, on later inspection, the quality was found to be different from what had been described in the contract of sale. But after such delivery and before such rescission, the title was in the railroad company. Allen v. Maury, 66 Ala. 10; Burrows

Digitized by Google

v. Whitaker, 71 N. Y. 291, 27 Am. Rep. 42; Kuppenheimer v. Wertheimer, 107 Mich. 77, 61 Am. St. Rep. 317, 64 N. W. 952. As the hay belonged to the defendant and was intended for use in its private business of mining, the transportation over its lines, in interstate commerce, was a violation of the commodity clause.

Judgment affirmed.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK EX REL. AMOSKEAG SAVINGS BANK OF MANCHESTER, NEW HAMPSHIRE,† Plff. in Err.,

v.

LAWSON PURDY and Others, Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments of the City of New York.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 373–394.)

Evidence — burden of proof — taxation — discrimination.

1. An owner of national bank shares seeking to overthow a state taxation system on the ground that it discriminates against holders of such shares, contrary to U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502, assumes the burden of proving such discrimination.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 450–471, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — national bank shares — discrimination.

2. The imposition upon the basis of book values of a 1 per cent tax upon national bank stock under the New York tax law (Consol. Laws, chap. 60), which forbids any deductions because of the personal indebtedness of the shareholders, such as are allowed when assessing other taxable personal property, does not contravene the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502, that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens, where shareholders in state banks are subjected to precisely the same taxation, and a substantially similar burden is imposed upon shareholders in trust companies and savings banks by the franchise tax of 1 per cent on the capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits of the trust companies, and on the surplus and undivided earnings of the savings banks, while individual bankers, who are entitled to the privilege of deduction for personal debts, are taxed at the higher general tax rate locally applicable upon the amount of capital invested in the banking business.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — national bank shares — discrimination.

3. The taxing scheme of N. Y. Consol. Laws, chap. 60, cannot be said to contravene U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502, forbidding discrimination against holders of national bank stock, merely because in individual cases it may result that an owner of shares of national bank stock, who is indebted, may sustain a heavier tax than another likewise indebted, who has invested his money otherwise.

[For other cases, see Taxes, I. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 6.]

Argued December 4 and 5, 1912. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York in and for New York County to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, which had in turn affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court at Special Term, dismissing a proceeding by certiorari to review the determination of commissioners of taxes and assessments, refusing to cancel an assessment upon national bank stock. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 134 App. Div. 966, 119 N. Y. Supp. 1139; in Court of Appeals, 198 N. Y. 503, 92 N. E. 1096.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. George Richards, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

It is a violation of § 5219 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), for the commissioners of taxes to refuse to permit the Amoskeag Savings Bank to deduct from the value of its national bank stock its just debts when the owner of other moneyed capital is allowed to do so.

New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705; Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 145, 25 L. ed. 901, 902; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 311, 26 L. ed. 1044, 1049; Hills v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319, 26 L. ed. 1052; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 324, 26 L. ed. 1053, 1054; Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689, 28 L. ed. 1089, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Whitbeck v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 127 U. S. 193, 32 L. ed. 118, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep.

†This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "Amoskeag Savings Bank."

NOTE.—On state taxation of national bank—see note to McHenry v. Downer, 45 L.R.A. 737.

Digitized by Google

324; People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 191 U. S. 272, 48 L. ed. 180, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

Important classes of investors are debarred or deterred from investing in national bank stock; and, as to them, at least, and to this extent, this discriminatory measure cannot be enforced.

People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, supra.

Mr. William Herbert King argued the cause, and, with Mr. Archibald R. Watson, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The system of taxation established by the tax law of New York does not discriminate against shares of national bank stock, but, on the contrary, is favorable to capital so invested, it was desired by the banks, and it is successful and fair in its operation.

People ex rel. Bridgeport Sav. Bank v. Feitner, 191 N. Y. 96, 83 N. E. 592.

The plaintiff has failed to show that the taxes imposed upon national bank shares in New York are at a greater rate than taxes imposed upon other moneyed capital in the state.

Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 146, 101 L. ed. 901, 902; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 324, 26 L. ed. 1053, 1054; Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689, 28 L. ed. 1089, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Whitbeck v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 127 U. S. 193, 32 L. ed. 118, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; First Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 205, 219, 220, 43 L. ed. 669, 674, 675, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 191 U. S. 272, 48 L. ed. 180, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; First Nat. Bank v. Ayers, 160 U. S. 660, 40 L. ed. 573, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412.

In the absence of any material unfriendly or substantial discrimination against capital invested in national banks compared with capital of a similar and competing character, no case is presented requiring the court to interpose for the protection of shareholders in national banks, and to determine that the system of taxation is in conflict with the act of Congress.

Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689, 28 L. ed. 1089, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. 480, 23 L. ed. 112; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; First Nat. Bank v. Ayers, 160 U. S. 660, 40 L. ed. 573, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 41 L. ed. 1069, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; National Bank v. Seattle, 166 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 1079, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 996; First Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 205, 43 L. ed. 669, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 182 U. S. 556, 45 L. ed. 1227, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863; Lander v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 458, 46 L. ed. 1247, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 908; Covington v. First Nat. Bank, 198 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 963, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 562.

Mr. Lawson Purdy also argued the cause for defendants in error.

[376] Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented is the validity of certain taxes imposed in the year 1908 by the taxing officers of New York city upon some shares of stock in certain national banking associations located in that city, which shares were owned by the relator, a New Hampshire corporation doing business in its home state. The taxable value of the shares was ascertained by the commissioners of taxes and assessments, in accordance with the provisions of the law of the state of New York, by adding together the capital, surplus, and undivided profits of each bank, and dividing the amount by the number of outstanding shares. It is admitted that at the time of the making of this assessment the relator owed just debts exceeding the value of its gross personal estate, including its bank shares, after deducting therefrom the value of its property taxable elsewhere and the value of its property not taxable anywhere; that no portion of such debts had been deducted from the assessment of any of its personal property, other than the bank shares; and that no portion of the indebtedness was contracted in the purchase of nontaxable property or securities, or for the purpose of evading taxation. Relator made application to the commissioners of taxes and assessments for the cancelation of the assessment, upon the ground that it was entitled to have its indebtedness deducted from the assessed valuation of the bank shares. This application was denied, a proceeding by certiorari taken to review the determination of the commissioners was dismissed at the special term of the supreme court of New York; the appellate division affirmed the dismissal (134 App. Div. 966, 119 N. Y. Supp. 1139), upon the authority of People ex rel. Bridgeport Sav. Bank v. Feitner, 191 N. Y. 88, 83 N. E. 592, and the court of appeals affirmed the order of the appellate division, upon the same authority (198 N. Y. 503, 92 N. E. 1096). The case comes here by writ of error under § 709, Rev. [377] Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575) (Judicial Code, § 237 [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227]), upon the ground that the taxation imposed is in violation of the rights of the relator under § 5219, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502).†

Digitized by Google

The contention of the plaintiff in error, made in the state tribunals and reiterated here, is that the taxes are invalid because made without allowing any deduction for relator's debts, as alleged to be allowed by the laws of New York in the case of other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of that state; it being insisted that inasmuch as the debts of relator exceeded the valuation of the bank shares, the assessment should be wholly canceled.

The taxing laws in force at the time the assessment was made were, in the following year, consolidated and re-enacted as the "tax law." (Laws 1909, chap. 62; in effect February 17, 1909, Consol. Laws, chap. 60.) Those sections that are deemed in anywise pertinent to the matter in issue are set forth in full in the margin.‡

[378] Sec. 21 provides for the preparation of the assessment roll, and requires that it shall contain separate columns, in which the assessing officers shall set down the pertinent items, and, among others, "4. In the fourth column the full value of all the taxable personal property owned by [379] each person respectively, after deducting the just debts owing by him." This provision is held to apply equally to corporations and individuals (People ex rel. Cornell S. B. Co. v. Dederick, 161 N. Y. 195, 55 N. E. 927), and has the effect of allowing a deduction of the amount of the debts of the [380] taxpayer from the valuation of his general personal estate, not, however, including bank shares, which are dealt with in other sections. Sec. 23 requires the chief fiscal officer of every bank or banking association organized under the laws of the state or of the United States to furnish annually, [381] on or before July 1st, to the assessors of the tax district in which its principal office is located, a sworn state-

†Sec. 5219. Nothing herein shall prevent all the shares in any association from being included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares, in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the state within which the association is located; but the legislature of each state may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within the state, subject only to the two restrictions, that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by nonresidents of any state shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere. Nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real property of associations from either state, county, or municipal taxes, to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

‡Extracts from New York tax law.

Section 7:

"§ 7. When property of nonresidents is taxable.—1. Nonresidents of the state, doing business in the state, either as principals or partners, shall be taxed on the capital invested in such business, as personal property, at the place where such business is carried on, to the same extent as if they were residents of the state."

Sections 14 and 25:

"§ 14. Place of taxation of individual bank capital.—Every individual banker shall be taxable upon the amount of capital invested in his banking business in the tax district where the place of such business is located, and shall, for that purpose, be deemed a resident of such tax district."

"§ 25. Individual banker, how assessed.—Every individual banker doing business under the laws of this state must report before the 15th day of June under oath to the assessors of the tax district in which any of the capital invested in such banking business is taxable, the amount of capital invested in such banking business in such tax district on the 1st day of June preceding. Such capital shall be assessed as personal property to the banker in whose name such business is carried on."

Section 21:

"§ 21. Preparation of assessment roll.—They shall prepare an assessment roll containing nine separate columns, and shall, according to the best information in their power, set down:

"1. In the first column the names of all the taxable persons in the tax district.

"2. In the second column the quantity of real property taxable to each person, with a statement thereof in such form as the commissioners of taxes shall prescribe.

"3. In the third column the full value of such real property.

"4. In the fourth column the full value of all the taxable personal property owned by each person respectively after deducting the just debts owing by him. . . ."

Section 13:

"§ 13. Stockholders of bank taxable on shares.—The stockholders of every bank or banking association organized under the authority of this state, or of the United States, shall be assessed and taxed on the value of their shares of stock therein; said shares shall be included in the valuation of the personal property of such stockholders in the assessment of taxes in the tax district where such bank or banking association is located, and not elsewhere, whether the said stockholders reside in said tax district or not."

Section 23:

"§ 23. Banks to make report.—The chief fiscal officer of every bank or banking asso-

Digitized by Google

ment of the condition of the bank on the 1st day of June next preceding, stating the amount of its capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits, the number of shares, [382] and the names and residences of the stockholders, with the number of shares held by each. Sections 13 and 24 relate to the taxation of these shares, stockholders in state and in national banks being treated alike. Section 13 takes the place of § 13 of the tax law of 1896 (Laws 1896, chap. 908, p. 802). Section 24 of the latter act was amended by Laws 1901, chap. 550; Laws 1902, chap. 126; Laws 1903, chap. 267; Laws 1907, [383] chap. 739; and in its final form became § 24 of the tax law of 1909. In this form § 24 is evidently a more recent enactment than § 13, and, so far as inconsistent, impliedly repeals it. The provision of § 13 for taxing bank shares in the district where the bank is located remains in force. It will be observed that § 24 declares (in obedience to [384] § 5219, Rev. Stat. [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502]) that "the assessment and taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is made or assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of this state;" that the valuation of the shares of going concerns is to be ascertained by dividing the amount of capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits by the number of shares; the valuation, in the case of banks in liquidation, to be fixed by dividing the actual assets by the number of shares; that a fixed rate of tax equal to 1 per centum upon the value thus ascertained is imposed without deduction because of the personal indebtedness of the owners, or for any other reason; that the tax is in lieu of all other state taxation upon the choses in action and personal property held by the bank whose value enters into the valuation of its shares of stock; that this section is not to be construed as an exemption of the real estate ciation organized under the authority of this state, or of the United States, shall, on or before the 1st day of July, in each year, furnish the assessors of the tax district in which its principal office is located a statement under oath of the condition of such bank or banking association on the 1st day of June next preceding, stating the amount of its authorized capital stock, the number of shares, and the par value of the shares thereof, the amount of stock paid in, the amount of its surplus and of its undivided profits, if any, a complete list of the names and residences of its stockholders, and the number of shares held by each. . . . The list of stockholders furnished by such bank or banking association shall be deemed to contain the names of the owners of such shares as are set opposite them, respectively, for the purpose of assessment and taxation."

---

Section 24:

"§ 24. Bank shares, how assessed.—In assessing the shares of stock of banks or banking associations organized under the authority of this state or the United States, the assessment and taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is made or assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of this state. The value of each share of stock of each bank and banking association, except such as are in liquidation, shall be ascertained and fixed by adding together the amount of the capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits of such bank or banking association, and by dividing the result by the number of outstanding shares of such bank or banking association. The value of each share of stock in each bank or banking association in liquidation shall be ascertained and fixed by dividing the actual assets of such bank or banking association by the number of outstanding shares of such bank or banking association. The rate of tax upon the shares of stock of banks and banking associations shall be 1 per centum upon the value thereof, as ascertained and fixed in the manner hereinbefore provided, and the owners of the stock of banks and banking associations shall be entitled to no deduction from the taxable value of their shares because of the personal indebtedness of such owners, or for any other reason whatsoever. Complaints in relation to the assessments of the shares of stock of banks and banking associations, made under the provisions of this article, shall be heard and determined as provided in § 37 of this chapter. The said tax shall be in lieu of all other taxes whatsoever for state, county, or local purposes upon the said shares of stock, and mortgages, judgments, and other choses in action, and personal property held or owned by banks or banking associations, the value of which enters into the value of said shares of stock, shall also be exempt from all other state, county, or local taxation. The tax herein imposed shall be levied in the following manner: The board of supervisors of the several counties shall, on or before the 15th day of December in each year, ascertain from an inspection of the assessment rolls in their respective counties, the number of shares of stock of banks and banking associations in each town, city, village, school, and other tax district, in their several counties, respectively, in which such shares of stock are taxable, the names of the banks issuing the same, respectively, and assessed value of such shares, as ascertained in the manner provided in this article and entered upon the said assessment rolls, and shall forthwith mail to the president or cashier of each of said banks or banking associations a statement setting forth the amount of its capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits, the number of outstanding shares of the banks from taxation; and that no share of stock of such banks, by whomsoever held, is to be exempt from the tax imposed. In construing § 24, the court of appeals of New York has held (People ex rel. Bridgeport Sav. Bank v. Feitner, 191 N. Y. 88, 96, 83 N. E. 592) that the effect of introducing into the section the limitation prescribed by § 5219, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), is such that if any bank is located in a tax district where the rate is less than 1 per centum, its stockholders are entitled to a reduction to conform to the local rate.

Digitized by Google

Respecting other moneyed capital, trust companies, by § 188, are subjected to an annual franchise tax "equal to 1 per centum, on the amount of its capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits." The practical burden of such a tax (which of course falls eventually upon the stockholder) is presumably not materially different from the burden of a tax at the same rate, imposed upon the individual stockholder on a valuation of his shares, arrived at by taking into consideration the same elements of capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits. And of course the stockholder [385] has no relief from such a franchise tax because of his individual debts. By § 189 savings banks are subjected to a franchise tax of 1 per centum on the par value of the surplus and undivided earnings. These institutions are thus apparently taxed upon the basis of what they possess over and above what they owe to their depositors. The individual banker, by §§ 14 and 25, is taxed at the place where his business is located upon the "amount of capital invested in his banking business."

It is not insisted that this tax law discriminates against national banks or the stockholders thereof as compared particularly with individual bankers, trust com-

---

thereof, the value of each share of stock taxable in said county, as ascertained in the manner herein provided, and the aggregate amount of tax to be collected and paid by such bank and banking association, under the provisions of this article. A certified copy of each of said statements shall be sent to the county treasurer. It shall be the duty of every bank or banking association to collect the tax due upon its shares of stock from the several owners of such shares, and to pay the same to the treasurer of the county wherein said bank or banking association is located, and in the city of New York to the receiver of taxes thereof on or before the 31st day of December in said year; and any bank or banking association failing to pay the said tax as herein provided shall be liable by way of penalty for the gross amount of taxes due from all the owners of the shares of stock, and for an additional amount of $100 for every day of delay in the payment of said tax. Every bank or banking association so paying the taxes due upon the shares of its stock shall have a lien on the shares of stock, and on all property of the several share owners in its hands, or which may at any time come into its hands, for reimbursement of the taxes so paid on account of the several shareholders, with legal interest; and such lien may be enforced in any appropriate manner. The tax hereby imposed shall be distributed in the following manner: The board of supervisors of the several counties shall ascertain the tax rate of each of the several town, city, village, school, and other tax districts in their counties, respectively, in which the shares of stock of banks and banking associations shall be taxable, which tax rates shall include the proportion of state and county taxes levied in such districts, respectively, for the year for which the tax is imposed, and the proportion of the tax on bank stock to which each of said districts shall be respectively entitled shall be ascertained by taking such proportion of the tax upon the shares of stock of banks and banking associations, taxable in such districts, respectively, under the provisions of this chapter, as the tax rate of such tax district shall bear to the aggregate tax rates of all the tax districts in which said shares of stock shall be taxable. The clerks of the several cities, villages, and school districts to which any portion of the tax on shares of stock of banks and banking associations is to be distributed under this section shall, in writing and under oath, annually report to the board of supervisors of their respective counties, during the first week of the annual session of such board, the tax rate of such city, village, and school district for the year prior to the meeting of each such board. The said board of supervisors shall issue their warrant or order to the county treasurer on or before the 15th day of December in each year, setting forth the number of shares of bank stock taxable in each town, city, village, school, and other tax district in said county, in which said shares of stock shall be taxable, the tax rate of each of said tax districts for said year, the proportion of the tax imposed by this chapter to which each of said tax districts is entitled, under the provisions hereof, and commanding him to collect same, and to pay to the proper officer in each of such districts the proportion of such tax to which it is entitled under the provisions of this chapter. The said county treasurer shall have the same powers to enforce the collection and payment of said tax as are possessed by the officers now charged by law with the collection of taxes, and the said county treasurer shall be entitled to a commission of 1 per centum for collecting and paying out said moneys, which commission shall be deducted from the gross amount of said panies, or savings banks. The ground of complaint is that § 24, in providing that owners of bank stock (state or national) shall not be entitled to deduction from the taxable value of their shares because of their personal indebtedness, is contrary to the restriction contained in § 5219, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), that the shares of national banks shall not be taxed "at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state," because, under § 21 of the tax law, all persons are permitted to deduct their debts from their other taxable personal property in general, including, as is claimed, other moneyed capital.

Digitized by Google

Plaintiff in error relies chiefly upon the decision of this court in New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705. That case was in effect a review of the decision of the court of appeals of New York in People ex rel. Cagger v. Dolan, 36 N. Y. 59. The question was as to the validity of an assessment and taxation of national bank shares in the city of Albany under the state law of April 23, 1866 (N. Y. Laws 1866, p. 1647), without deduction because of the indebtedness of the taxpayer, in view of the fact that under other laws the owners of other kinds of personal property were entitled to have the amount of their debts deducted from the valuation for the purposes of taxation. The state court in the Dolan [386] Case had justified the method adopted in taxing the bank shares, upon reasoning that assumed "that while Congress limited the state authorities in reference to the ratio or percentage levied on the value of these shares, which could not be greater than on other moneyed capital invested in the state, it left the matter of the relative valuation of the shares and of other moneyed capital wholly taxes before the same is distributed. In issuing their warrants to the collectors of taxes, the board of supervisors shall omit therefrom assessments of and taxes upon the shares of stock of banks and banking associations. Provided, that, in the city of New York the statement of the bank assessment and tax herein provided for shall be made by the board of tax commissioners of said city, on or before the 15th day of December in each year, and by them forthwith mailed to the respective banks and banking associations located in said city, and a certified copy thereof sent to the receiver of taxes of said city. The tax shall be paid by the respective banks in said city to the said receiver of taxes on or before the 31st day of December in said year, and said tax shall be collected by the said receiver of taxes, and shall be by him paid into the treasury of said city to the credit of the general fund thereof. This section is not to be construed as an exemption of the real estate of banks or banking associations from taxation. No shares of stock of such banks and banking associations, by whomsoever held, shall be exempt from the tax hereby imposed."

Section 188:

"§ 188. Franchise tax on trust companies.—Every trust company incorporated, organized, or formed under, by, or pursuant to a law of this state, and any company authorized to do a trust company's business solely or in connection with any other business, under a general or special law of this state, shall pay to the state annually for the privilege of exercising its corporate franchise or carrying on its business in such corporate or organized capacity, an annual tax which shall be equal to 1 per centum on the amount of its capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits."

Section 189:

"§ 189. Franchise tax on savings banks.—Every savings bank incorporated, organized, or formed under, by, or pursuant to a law of this state, shall pay to the state annually for the privilege of exercising its corporate franchise or carrying on its business in such corporate or organized capacity, an annual tax which shall be equal to 1 per centum on the par value of its surplus and undivided earnings."

Section 191:

"§ 191. Tax upon foreign bankers.—Every foreign banker doing business in this state shall annually pay to the treasurer a tax of 5 per centum on the amount of interest or compensation of any kind earned and collected by him on money loaned, used, or employed in this state by such banker. The term, 'doing a banking business,' as used in this section, means doing such business as a corporation may be created to do under article 3 of the banking law, or doing any business which a corporation is authorized by such article to do. The term, 'foreign banker doing a banking business in this state,' as used in this section, includes:

"1. Every foreign corporation doing a banking business in this state, except a national bank.

"2. Every unincorporated company, partnership, or association of two or more individuals, organized under or pursuant to the laws of another state or country, doing a banking business in this state.

"3. Every other incorporated company, partnership, or association, of two or more individuals, doing a banking business in this state, if the members thereof, owning more than a majority interest therein, or entitled to more than one half of the profits thereof, or who would, if it were dissolved, be entitled to more than one half of the net assets thereof, are not residents of this state.

"4. Every nonresident of this state, doing a banking business in this state, in his own name and right only." to the control of state regulation." This court held that the clause in § 5219,—"that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital," etc., meant that the taxation upon shares should not be greater than on other moneyed capital, taking into consideration both the rate of assessment and the valuation. In other words, that the restriction contained in the act of Congress had to do with the actual incidence and practical burden of the tax upon the taxpayer.

Digitized by Google

This decision was followed by several others to the same effect. In Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 26 L. ed. 1044, it was pointed out that the decision in the Weaver Case had not the effect of declaring the New York act of 1866 void, but only of deciding that the tax there in question was void because the taxpayer had been refused the same deduction for his debts that was allowed to other taxpayers having moneyed capital otherwise invested. Hills v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319, 26 L. ed. 1052, and Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 26 L. ed. 1053, applied the same principle.

But the pertinent statutes in the Weaver Case differed from those now before us, and the authority of that decision is not controlling. The act of 1866 is quoted in full in the report, 100 U. S. at p. 540. And in that case, as the opinion shows (pp. 542, 543), it was not disputed—"that the effect of the state law is to permit a citizen of New York, who has money capital invested otherwise than in banks, to deduct from that capital the sum of all his debts, leaving the remainder alone subject to taxation, while he whose money is invested in shares of bank stocks can make [387] no such deduction. Nor, inasmuch as nearly all the banks in that state and in all others are national banks, can it be denied that the owner of such shares who owes debts is subjected to a heavier tax on account of those shares than the owner of moneyed capital otherwise invested, who also is in debt, because the latter can diminish the amount of his tax by the amount of his indebtedness, while the former cannot. That this works a discrimination against the national bank shares as subjects of taxation, unfavorable to the owners of such shares, is also free from doubt."

The tax law of New York now in question is materially different. As already shown, moneyed capital is dealt with for the purposes of taxation upon lines different from those upon which the taxation of other personal property proceeds. By §§ 13 and 24, state bank shares and national bank shares are both dealt with, and they are treated alike, being assessed not upon the basis of market values, but upon a valuation determined by a consideration of the capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits (yielding what is commonly known as "book value"), and leaving out of consideration other elements, such as good will and the like, which enter into the determination of the actual market value of such shares. On the other hand, personal property in general is by § 21 to be assessed at its full value, which presumably means market value. Sec. 24, instead of subjecting the owners of bank shares to taxation at the rate locally obtaining for other personal property, imposes a "flat rate" of 1 per centum upon the valuation, with the proviso, as held in the Feitner Case, supra, that if the local rate be less than 1 per centum, the owners of shares in the bank have the benefit of it.

Enough has been said to show that the decision in the Weaver Case, which had to do with a tax assessed upon bank stock on the basis of the same method of valuation and the same rate of assessment as personal property in [388] general, including other moneyed capital, but without allowance for the indebtedness of the taxpayer, although such allowance was made to the owners of personal property in general, including other moneyed capital, is not to be deemed conclusive upon the present controversy, in view of the differences in the taxing laws.

The Weaver Case, however, and others that followed it, did establish that the question whether an owner of national bank shares has been subjected to a state tax in excess of the limitation imposed by § 5219, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), is a practical question, to be determined by considering whether he is actually discriminated against in favor of other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the state. And the meaning of the term "other moneyed capital" has been elucidated by several decisions, of which the leading one is Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. This was a suit brought by a national bank to restrain the collection of taxes assessed upon its stockholders under New York Laws 1882, chap. 409, § 312,—an enactment that followed the general lines of the act of 1866, dealt with in the Weaver Case, and quoted in the opinion of the court therein, except that in obedience to that decision the act of 1882 required that—"in the assessment of said shares, each stockholder shall be allowed all the deductions and exceptions allowed by law in assessing the value of other taxable personal property owned by individual citizens of this state." The contention was that the state had not complied with the condition contained in § 5219 of the Revised Statutes, because it had by its legislation expressly exempted from all taxes in the hands of individual citizens numerous species of moneyed capital, while subjecting national bank shares and state bank shares in the hands of individual holders to taxation upon their full actual value, less only a proportionate amount of the real estate owned by the bank. The court (speaking by Mr. Justice Matthews), in examining and [389] disposing of this contention, after reviewing the previous decisions of this court bearing upon the subject, proceeded to expound the true intent and meaning of § 5219 of the Revised Statutes as follows (p. 153):

Digitized by Google

"It follows, as a deduction from these decisions, that 'moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens' does not necessarily embrace shares of stock held by them in all corporations whose capital is employed, according to their respective corporate powers and privileges, in business carried on for the pecuniary profit of shareholders, although shares in some corporations, according to the nature of their business, may be such moneyed capital. . . . The key to the proper interpretation of the act of Congress is its policy and purpose. The object of the law was to establish a system of national banking institutions, in order to provide a uniform and secure currency for the people, and to facilitate the operations of the Treasury of the United States. The capital of each of the banks in this system was to be furnished entirely by private individuals; but, for the protection of the government and the people, it was required that this capital, so far as it was the security for its circulating notes, should be invested in the bonds of the United States. These bonds were not subjects of taxation; and neither the banks themselves, nor their capital, however invested, nor the shares of stock therein held by individuals, could be taxed by the states in which they were located without the consent of Congress, being exempted from the power of the states in this respect, because these banks were means and agencies established by Congress in execution of the powers of the government of the United States. It was deemed consistent, however, with these national uses, and otherwise expedient, to grant to the states the authority to tax them within the limits of a rule prescribed by the law. In fixing those limits it became necessary to prohibit the states from imposing such a burden as would prevent [390] the capital of individuals from freely seeking investment in institutions which it was the express object of the law to establish and promote. The business of banking, including all the operations which distinguish it, might be carried on under state laws, either by corporations or private persons, and capital in the form of money might be invested and employed by individual citizens in many single and separate operations forming substantial parts of the business of banking. A tax upon the money of individuals, invested in the form of shares of stock in national banks, would diminish their value as an investment, and drive the capital so invested from this employment, if at the same time similar investments and similar employments under the authority of state laws were exempt from an equal burden. The main purpose, therefore, of Congress, in fixing limits to state taxation on investments in the shares of national banks, was to render it impossible for the state, in levying such a tax, to create and foster an unequal and unfriendly competition, by favoring institutions or individuals carrying on a similar business and operations and investments of a like character. The language of the act of Congress is to be read in the light of this policy."

And again (p. 157): "The terms of the act of Congress, therefore, include shares of stock or other interests owned by individuals in all enterprises in which the capital employed in carrying on its business is money, where the object of the business is the making of profit by its use as money. The moneyed capital thus employed is invested for that purpose in securities by way of loan, discount, or otherwise, which are from time to time, according to the rules of the business, reduced again to money and reinvested. It includes money in the hands of individuals, employed in a similar way, invested in loans, or in securities for the payment of money, either as an investment of a permanent character, or temporarily, with a view to sale [391] or repayment and reinvestment. In this way the moneyed capital in the hands of individuals is distinguished from what is known generally as personal property. Accordingly, it was said in Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322, 26 L. ed. 1053: 'The act of Congress does not make the tax on personal property the measure of the tax on the bank shares in the state, but the tax on moneyed capital in the hands of the individual citizens. Credits, money loaned at interest, and demands against persons or corporations, are more purely representative of moneyed capital than personal property, so far as they can be said to differ. Undoubtedly there may be said to be much personal property exempt from taxation without giving bank shares a right to similar exemption, because personal property is not necessarily moneyed capital. But the rights, credits, demands, and money at interest mentioned in the Indiana statute, from which bona fide debts may be deducted, all mean moneyed capital invested in that way.' This definition of moneyed capital in the hands of individuals seems to us to be the idea of the law, and ample enough to embrace and secure its whole purpose and policy."

Digitized by Google

The rule of construction thus laid down has been since consistently adhered to by this court. Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 667, 33 L. ed. 772, 775, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 454, 41 L. ed. 1069, 1075, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; First Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 205, 214, 43 L. ed. 669, 673, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 182 U. S. 556, 560, 45 L. ed. 1227, 1229, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863; Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

According to this practical test, it seems to us that the scheme adopted by the state of New York for taxing shares in national banks cannot upon this record be denounced as violative of the limitations prescribed by § 5219, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502). The holders of shares in state banks are subjected to precisely the same taxation, and with respect to other competitive institutions, such as trust companies, the franchise taxes imposed upon them apparently result in a substantially similar burden upon the [392] shareholder. Nor is there any discrimination in favor of savings banks. With respect to individual bankers, there is a difference, they being apparently subject to the local rate of taxation, and entitled to the privilege of deduction for personal debts; but as they are taxable upon the amount of the capital invested in the banking business, which is normally only such as remains after the deduction of debts, it is not plain that they possess any valuable privilege of reducing the tax assessment by deducting debts. Foreign bankers are separately treated, for reasons sufficiently obvious; but no criticism is made of this. If there be other forms of "moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens" of the state employed in a banking or quasi-banking business in competition with the national banks, and which are subjected to a more favorable rule of taxation, our attention is not called to them. Moreover, we agree with what was said by the court of appeals of New York in the Feitner Case (191 N. Y. 88, 96, 83 N. E. 592) that "the state is not obliged to apply the same system to the taxation of national banks that it uses in the taxation of other property, provided no injustice, inequality, or unfriendly discrimination is inflicted upon them." The court there took note of the fact that the flat rate of 1 per centum assessed upon national bank shares was more favorable to the relator than the general tax rate for the same year in the borough of Manhattan, where the banks were located. That local rate (for the year 1901) was 2.31733 per centum. In the present case it is stipulated that the general tax rate locally applicable for the year 1908 to personal property, not including bank shares, was 1.61407 per centum. There are other considerations to be weighed in determining the actual burden of the tax, one of which is the mode of valuing bank shares—by adopting "book values"—which may be more or less favorable than the method adopted in valuing other kinds of personal property. As against the owner of bank shares [393] who, by alleging discrimination, assumes the burden of proving it, and who fails to show that the method of valuation is unfavorable to him, it may be assumed to be advantageous.

Plaintiff in error contends that the statement of the New York court that "when all things are considered, the rate, even without the privilege of deducting debts, is not greater than that applied to other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the state," is based upon no facts of experience or investigation, and amounts to a pure surmise. We do not think it is to be so lightly treated; but, if it were, it still remains to be said that it was incumbent upon plaintiff in error to show affirmatively that the New York taxation system discriminates in fact against the holders of shares in the national banks, before calling upon the courts to overthrow it; and no such showing has been made.

Nor can we say that the taxing scheme contravenes the limits prescribed by § 5219, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502), merely because in individual cases it may result that an owner of shares of national bank stock, who is indebted, may sustain a heavier tax than another, likewise indebted, who has invested his money otherwise. Such is, in effect, the objection urged by plaintiff in error to the position taken by the court of appeals of New York. In other words, it is insisted that § 5219 deals with the burden of the tax upon the individual shareholder, rather than upon shareholders as a class. We think this argument is sufficiently answered by reference to the language of § 5219. The declaration is that "the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state." And this restriction is imposed upon a grant of authority to tax "all the shares of national banking associations located within the state." The language clearly prohibits discrimination against shareholders in national banks, and in favor of the shareholders [394] of competing institutions, but it does not require that the scheme of taxation shall be so arranged that the burden shall fall upon each and every shareholder alike, without distinction arising from circumstances personal to the individual.

Digitized by Google

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY COMPANY OF BALTIMORE, MARYLAND, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 394-399.)

Commerce — state taxation — commercial agencies.

Attorneys on the guaranteed list of a foreign corporation, furnished to subscribing business men and merchants, who, upon request of any such subscriber, are to inquire into and report upon the credit and standing of persons engaged in doing business within the state with whom such subscriber may contemplate business dealings, there being no direct or necessary connection between such service and the making or fulfilling of commercial contracts, are not engaged in interstate commerce so as to relieve the corporation from liability for a license tax imposed under Carroll's Ky. Stat. 1909, § 4224, upon commercial agencies, although some of the inquiries may be received from merchants without the state, in anticipation of future commercial interstate transactions.

[For other cases, see Commerce, IV, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 26.]

Argued April 21, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Mason Circuit Court of a foreign commercial agency for failing to pay a license tax. Affirmed.

See same case below, 139 Ky. 27, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 648, 129 S. W. 314, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 333.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Allan D. Cole argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. T. Cole, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. James Garnett, Attorney General of Kentucky, argued the cause, and, with Mr. D. O. Myatt, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 4224 of the Kentucky Statutes (Carroll's ed. 1909) provides as follows:

"Before engaging in any occupation or selling any article named in this subdivision of article 12 of this act, the person desiring to do so shall procure license and pay the tax thereon as follows: . . . Commercial agencies.—Each and every person, partnership, or corporation having representatives in this state, who engage in the business of inquiring into and reporting upon the credit and standing of persons engaged in business in this state, shall pay a license tax of $100."

Plaintiff in error was indicted for failing to pay the license tax required by this provision, and, upon trial, was convicted and fined. The trial court, and, on appeal, the court of appeals of Kentucky (139 Ky. 27, 39, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 648, 129 S. W. 314, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 333), overruled the contention that the business done by plaintiff in error was interstate commerce, within the meaning [396] of § 8 of article 1 of the Federal Constitution, and for that reason not subject to the taxing power of the state.

The indictment was based upon the employment by plaintiff in error of a firm of attorneys at Maysville, Kentucky, as its representatives for inquiring into and reporting upon the credit and standing of persons engaged in business in that state. Plaintiff in error is a corporation of the state of Maryland, and is engaged in the

---

NOTE.—State licenses or taxes, generally, as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburgh & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

On corporate taxation and the commerce clause—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641.

Digitized by Google

publication and distribution of a list of selected attorneys in the United States. With the several attorneys upon the list, plaintiff in error has an arrangement by which, in consideration of a fee paid by them to it, their names are inserted, and plaintiff in error guarantees to merchants and other persons sending claims to the attorneys that they will promptly and faithfully pay over all moneys collected. It furnishes the list of attorneys to business men and merchants throughout the United States. It provides the attorneys, and also the subscribers to or purchasers of the book, with blank forms upon which information respecting the business and financial standing of persons with whom a subscribing merchant desires to deal may be furnished, and the attorneys, upon request, make replies to inquiries of this character when received from subscribing members. The attorneys do not make reports to the plaintiff in error, but send them direct to the person or firm making the inquiry. The attorneys are not the agents for either buyer or seller, in the sense that any goods are bought or sold through their instrumentality. Such was the business that was done by the Maysville attorneys, as representatives of the plaintiff in error. They did not sell or offer to sell any goods, nor deliver or offer to deliver any, and had nothing to do with buying, selling, transporting, delivering, or handling any merchandise. If any commercial transaction took place between the merchant whose standing was reported and the merchant to whom the report was sent, it was due entirely to negotiations [397] between them, with which the reporting attorney had nothing to do. Correspondence in which the Maysville attorneys furnished nonresident dealers with information was only desultory, and occasional, and was not followed by the making of any contract or the transportation of any goods between the parties to the correspondence.

The contention of plaintiff in error is that the Maysville attorneys and its other representatives of the same kind are, through the means of the system employed, acting in fact as agents of merchants engaged in interstate commerce, to furnish them with information through the mails or by telephone or telegraph, as a result of which merchandise may be transported in interstate commerce, or withheld from such transportation, according to the character of the information reported; and that the service thus rendered is so connected with interstate commerce as to preclude the state of Kentucky from enacting a statute imposing a license tax whose tendency is or may be to prevent plaintiff in error from operating in that state.

The tax in question is an excise or privilege tax, and undoubtedly within the power of the state, unless it has the effect of directly burdening interstate commerce. It is only one of a great number of license taxes dealt with in a single section of the statute, and including a great variety of occupations. In the case of commercial agencies, the thing that is laid hold of as the subject of the excise is a business carried on within the state. If it have consequences extending beyond the borders of the state, and affecting interstate commerce, these are only incidental and fortuitous. The case is, we think, easily to be distinguished from McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 391, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881, and International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103, relied upon by plaintiff in error. In the McCall Case the local instrumentality that was held to be exempt from [398] interference by state taxation was an agent whose business was the direct solicitation of passengers for interstate journeys by rail. This was clearly within the reasoning and authority of Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592, and other cases of that class. In the case of the International Textbook Company, there was a systematic and continuous interstate traffic in instruction papers, text-books, and illustrative apparatus for courses of study pursued by means of correspondence, and this was held to be in its essential characteristics commerce among the states within the meaning of the Federal Constitution, and entitled thereunder to exemption from any direct burden imposed by state legislation.

In the present case it appears that there is not even systematic or continuous correspondence, much less interstate commerce resulting therefrom. There is no direct or necessary connection between the service performed by plaintiff in error through its representatives and the making or fulfilment of commercial contracts. The most that can be said is that inquiries received by those representatives in Kentucky with respect to the credit and standing of persons engaged in business in that state may be received from merchants without the state in anticipation of commercial transactions between them in the future. But, on the other hand, similar inquiries may be received from merchants in Kentucky, and may have reference alone to intrastate, and not to interstate, transactions. Or, the information may be desired as an aid in extending or refusing to extend credit for past transactions, as well as to lay the basis for future dealings. The circumstance that in a substantial number of cases —even if in the greater number—there is correspondence, by letter or otherwise, from state to state, which may perhaps have an effect upon the conduct of other parties about entering or not entering into transactions of interstate commerce, is not controlling.

Digitized by Google

[399] The present case has no close parallel in former decisions, but in some of its aspects it bears a resemblance to the case of a tax imposed upon a resident citizen engaged in a general business that happens to include a considerable share of interstate business. Ficklen v. Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810. Or the business of the live stock exchange that was under consideration in Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 592, 43 L. ed. 290, 296, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40. Or the business of a cotton broker dealing in futures or options. Ware v. Mobile County, 209 U. S. 405, 52 L. ed. 855, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526, 14 Ann. Cas. 1031.

To warrant interference with the exercise of the taxing power of a state on the ground that it obstructs or hampers interstate commerce, it must appear that the burden is direct and substantial. We do not think the present is such a case.

Judgment affirmed.

STRATTON'S INDEPENDENCE, Limited,
v.
F. W. HOWBERT, Collector of Internal Revenue in and for the District of Colorado.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 399–423.)

Internal revenue — excise on corporation — mining companies.

1. Mining corporations engaged solely in mining upon their own premises are subject to the excise tax imposed by the act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 11, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 741), § 38, upon the carrying on or the doing of business in a corporate or quasi corporate capacity, such corporations being within the general description of that section, which comprises every corporation organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares, and engaged in business, and not being among the classes of corporations specified in that section as exempt from its operation.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on corporation — income — proceeds of ore.

2. The proceeds of ore mined by a corporation from its own premises are "income" within the meaning of the act of August 5, 1909, § 38, imposing an excise tax measured by net annual income upon the carrying on or the doing of business in a corporate or quasi corporate capacity.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise on mining corporations.

3. Treating the proceeds of ore mined by a corporation upon its own premises as "income" within the meaning of the act of August 5, 1909, § 38, which imposes an excise tax measured by net annual income upon the carrying on or the doing of business in a corporate or quasi corporate capacity, does not make such excise the equivalent of a direct tax upon the property, and therefore invalid, because not apportioned to population, as prescribed by the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, I. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Internal revenue — excise upon corporation — depreciation.

4. Assuming that the depletion of the mineral supply from the process of mining is an element to be considered in determining the reasonable depreciation that, under the act of August 5, 1909, § 38, is to be deducted from the net annual income of a mining company when assessing the excise imposed by that section upon the doing or carrying on of a business in a corporate or quasi corporate capacity, the difference between the gross proceeds of the sales of ores during the year, and the amount expended in extracting, mining, and marketing such ores, cannot be treated as the value of the ore in place for such purpose.

[For other cases, see Internal Revenue, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Cases certified — scope of inquiry.

5. Only the several propositions of law that are certified by a circuit court of appeals under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 6, will be answered by the Federal Supreme Court. Questions of fact or of mixed law and fact will not be considered.

[For other cases, see Cases Certified, VI. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 457.]

Argued October 21, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit presenting questions as to the liability of a mining corporation to the Federal corporation tax, and as to the right to deduct

NOTE.—On definiteness of question to be certified—see note to Waco Water & Light Co. v. Waco, 31 L.R.A. 392.

Digitized by Google

the value of ore in place as depreciation. The last question answered in the negative. The others in the affirmative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William V. Hodges argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., filed a brief for Stratton's Independence:

A general classification of corporations in the legislative mind ordinarily excludes mining corporations. And this condition is especially pronounced in legislation relating to taxation.

Taxation of Min. Claims, 9 Colo. 639, 21 Pac. 476; Pilgrim Consol. Min. Co. v. Teller County, 32 Colo. 334, 76 Pac. 364; People ex rel. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Henderson, 12 Colo. 369, 21 Pac. 144; Foster v. Hart Consol. Min. Co. 52 Colo. 459, 122 Pac. 48; A. Leschen & Sons Rope Co. v. Allen, 110 C. C. A. 315, 187 Fed. 980; Re South Mountain Consol. Min. Co. 8 Sawy. 366, 14 Fed. 349; Ross v. Kelly, 36 Minn. 38, 29 N. W. 591, 31 N. W. 219; Re Elk Park Min. & Mill. Co. 101 Fed. 423; Re Rollins Gold & S. Min. Co. 102 Fed. 982; Re Keystone Coal Co. 109 Fed. 872; Re Woodside Coal Co. 105 Fed. 56.

Mining corporations are not engaged in carrying on business within the meaning of the act.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 428, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Clark v. Sidway, 142 U. S. 682, 35 L. ed. 1157, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Farrand v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 637; Jordan v. Soule, 79 Me. 590, 12 Atl. 786; Harris v. De Raismes, — N. J. Eq. —, 38 Atl. 637; Childers v. Neely, 47 W. Va. 70, 49 L.R.A. 468, 81 Am. St. Rep. 777, 34 S. E. 828, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 222; Judge v. Braswell, 13 Bush, 67, 26 Am. Rep. 185, 11 Mor. Min. Rep. 508; Nash v. Mitchell, 71 N. Y. 203, 27 Am. Rep. 38.

The application of the act to mining corporations results in a tax upon the capital itself; while, as applied to corporations having an income as distinguished from capital, it does not result in a tax upon capital. This inequality of operation is inherently unjust. Laying aside all questions of constitutional limitations, the act should not be so construed as to accomplish this unjust result, if there be a fair and reasonable construction to be given the act which would avoid such result.

Washington & I. R. Co. v. Cœur D'Alene R. & Nav. Co. 160 U. S. 77, 101, 40 L. ed. 346, 355, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Bate Refrigerator Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 37, 39 L. ed. 601, 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508.

The act ought not to be construed to include mining corporations unless it clearly appears that Congress intended to include them. It is an established canon of construction in this court that "duties are never imposed on the citizen upon vague or doubtful interpretations."

Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co. 117 C. C. A. 556, 198 Fed. 775; Taylor v. Treat, 153 Fed. 656; Parkview Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Herold, 203 Fed. 880.

The fact that mining corporations come within the letter of the act, if true, does not conclude the argument; for, if mining corporations be not within the spirit of the act, it is not applicable to them.

Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. 178, 10 L. ed. 408; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 486, 19 L. ed. 278, 280; Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold & S. Min. Co. 93 U. S. 634, 638, 23 L. ed. 995, 996, 13 Mor. Min. Rep 204; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

Are the proceeds of ores mined by a corporation from its own premises income within the meaning of the act?

People ex rel. Cornell University v. Davenport, 30 Hun, 180; Thorn v. de Breteuil, 86 App. Div. 416, 83 N. Y. Supp. 849; Wilcox v. Middlesex County, 103 Mass. 546; Sargent Land Co. v. Von Baumbach, 207 Fed. 423; Gray v. Darlington, 15 Wall. 63, 21 L. ed. 45; Spooner v. Phillips, 62 Conn. 68, 16 L.R.A. 461, 24 Atl. 524; Foster v. Hart Consol. Min. Co. 52 Colo. 467, 122 Pac. 48; Smith v. Hooper, 95 Md. 16, 51 Atl. 844; Vinton's Appeal, 99 Pa. 434, 44 Am. Rep. 116; Gehr v. Mount Alto Iron Co. 174 Pa. 430, 34 Atl. 638; Mercer v. Buchanan, 132 Fed. 507; Re Armitage [1893] 3 Ch. 337, 63 L. J. Ch. N. S. 110, 7 Reports, 290, 69 L. T. N. S. 619.

Assuming that the proceeds of ore are to be treated as income within the meaning of the act, we submit that such proceeds result solely from depletion of capital, and are therefore deductible as depreciation.

United States v. Nipissing Mines Co. 202 Fed. 803.

Mr. John R. Van Derlip also filed a brief for Stratton's Independence:

A corporation which has leased its property and surrendered the control and operation thereof is not carrying on or doing business in respect of such property.

Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 428, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep.

Digitized by Google

419; United States v. Nipissing Mines Co. 202 Fed. 803.

A corporation is not subject to the Federal tax merely because of the ownership and enjoyment of property.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; McCoach v. Minehill & S. H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

A corporation which amends its charter so as to disqualify it from business activity in respect of its property is not subject to the imposition of the tax.

Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 55 L. ed. 428, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Sargent Land Co. v. Von Baumbach, 207 Fed. 423.

A corporation which has leased its properties to another, which operates or develops them, and pays rentals, royalties, or earnings therefrom to the former, is not doing business and taxable.

Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, supra; United States v. Nipissing Mines Co. 202 Fed. 804; Sargent Land Co. v. Von Baumbach, supra.

Receipts from sales of capital assets, whether ore or property of other character, are not "income," but merely a conversion of property from one form to another.

Sargent Land Co. v. Von Baumbach, supra.

A mining company is entitled to deduct from its gross income from ore sales the value in place of the ore sold, as constituting a diminution or depreciation of its capital assets.

United States v. Nipissing Mines Co. 202 Fed. 803.

In so far as a company is simply engaged in disposing of its existing assets, and in putting them to the only practical and reasonable beneficial use of which they are susceptible, it falls far short of being a business corporation.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 171, 55 L. ed. 421, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; State v. Boston Club, 45 La. Ann. 585, 20 L.R.A. 185, 12 So. 895; Graham v. Hendricks, 22 La. Ann. 524; Greenough v. Police Comrs. 30 R. I. 212, 136 Am. St. Rep. 953, 74 Atl. 785; Re Elk Park Min. & Mill. Co. 101 Fed. 422; Re Chesapeake Oyster & Fish Co. 112 Fed. 960.

The proceeds of ores mined by a corporation from its own premises are not income.

People v. New York C. R. Co. 24 N. Y. 490; Braun's Appeal, 105 Pa. 415; Gehr v. Mount Alto Iron Co. 174 Pa. 430, 34 Atl. 638; Levi v. Louisville, 97 Ky. 394, 28 L.R.A. 480, 30 S. W. 973; Mundy v. Van Hoose, 104 Ga. 292, 30 S. E. 783; Sargent Land Co. v. Von Baumbach, 207 Fed. 423; Spooner v. Phillips, 62 Conn. 62, 16 L.R.A. 461, 24 Atl. 524.

Mr. William D. Guthrie filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

If a mining company should sell its land and the mine on it, it would plainly be transferring not income, but capital; and it would be wholly immaterial whether the sale was at an advance, since not even the advance would constitute income.

Gray v. Darlington, 15 Wall. 63, 66, 21 L. ed. 45, 46; Machen, Fed. Corp. Tax Law, §§ 31, 35.

It is in violation of no one's rights for a mining corporation, after it has paid its operating expenses and made proper provision for creditors and contingencies, to distribute the balance of its receipts among the stockholders as dividends (4 Thomp. Corp. 2d ed. § 3932; 1 Morawetz, Corp. 2d ed. § 442; Lee v. Neuchatel Asphalte Co. L. R. 41 Ch. Div. 24, 58 L. J. Ch. N. S. 408, 61 L. T. N. S. 11, 37 Week. Rep. 321, 1 Megone, 140; Excelsior Water & Min. Co. v. Pierce, 90 Cal. 131, 27 Pac. 44; White, Canadian Co. Law, p. 98). But it does not follow that such dividends consist of income. As matter of fact, they consist of capital.

It would, of course, be entirely proper for a corporation which had made adequate provision for its creditors to reduce the capital stock, and distribute among its stockholders the surplus of its capital over and above the amount of the reduced capital stock (5 Thomp. Corp. 2d ed. § 5312), but such a distribution, though termed a dividend, would be of capital, and not income. A mining corporation occupies an analogous position. It is permitted by law to distribute its capital among its shareholders, as its operations go forward, so long as it protects its creditors; but it is freed from the necessity of periodically reducing its nominal capital stock, because, by virtue of the very nature of the business, its nominal share capital can rarely furnish any indication of its actual capital, and hence no useful purpose would be served by changing the nominal capital from one amount to another.

Re South Mountain Consol. Min. Co. 7 Sawy. 32, 5 Fed. 403, 13 Mor. Min. Rep. 615, 8 Sawy. 366, 14 Fed. 347; 2 Morawetz, Corp. 2d ed. § 830.

In other words, a mining company is authorized to distribute its capital in dividends, not because such capital has been transmuted into income, but because its capital does not constitute a fund which it must retain and keep equivalent to the nominal amount of its share capital.

4 Thomp. Corp. 2d ed. § 3932.

Taxing acts must be strictly construed and all reasonable doubts in respect thereto resolved in favor of the citizen.

Digitized by Google

Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Herold, 198 Fed. 199, affirmed in 120 C. C. A. 256, 201 Fed. 918; Parkview Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Herold, 203 Fed. 876.

The English Income Tax Cases relied on by the government relate to statutes quite different from the one before the court, but even they serve to show that ore in place or its value is not income.

Rex v. Attwood, 6 Barn. & C. 277; Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Corning, 45 Barb. 247; Betts v. Betts, 4 Abb. N. C. 400; Jarvis, Income Tax, 1912 ed. p. 53; Addie & Sons v. Internal Revenue (1875) 12 Scot. L. R. 274; Miller v. Farie (1878) 16 Scot. L. R. 189, 6 R. 270; Alianza Co. v. Bell [1906] A. C. 18, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 44, 54 Week. Rep. 413, 93 L. T. N. S. 705, 22 Times L. R. 94, [1905] 1 K. B. 190, 74 L. J. K. B. N. S. 219, 53 Week. Rep. 257, 92 L. T. N. S. 184, 21 Times L. R. 134; Forder v. Handyside & Co. L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 233, 45 L. J. Exch. N. S. 809, 35 L. T. N. S. 62, 24 Week. Rep. 764; Gillatt v. Colquhoun, 33 Week. Rep. 258; Smith v. Westinghouse Brake Co. 4 Times L. R. 649; Edinburgh Southern Cemetery Co. v. Inland Revenue (1889) 27 Scot. L. R. 71, 17 R. I. 154; Morant v. Wheal Grenville Min. Co. 71 L. T. N. S. 758.

The value in place of ore that has been extracted from a mining property during a given year is a proper depreciation charge to be allowed in computing the tax.

T. D. 1571 Dec. 3, 1909, art. 4; T. D. 1606 Mar. 29, 1910, ¶¶ 72, 75; T. D. 1742 Dec. 15, 1911, ¶ 97; United States v. Nipissing Mines Co. 202 Fed. 803; Machen, Fed. Corp. Tax Law, §§ 53, 57.

Messrs. Charles S. Thomas, W. H. Bryant, George L. Nye, William P. Malburn, William Story, and William Story, Jr., also filed a brief as amici curiæ.

Assistant Attorney General Graham argued the cause and filed a brief for Howbert, Collector:

The corporation tax act applies to mining corporations.

Gay v. Baltic Min. Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

The proceeds of ore mined by a corporation on its own premises are income within the meaning of the act.

Ibid.; Clegg v. Rowland, L. R. 3 Eq. 368, 36 L. J. Ch. N. S. 137, 15 L. T. N. S. 385, 15 Week. Rep. 251; Daly v. Beckett, 24 Beav. 114, 3 Jur. N. S. 754, 5 Week. Rep. 514; Eley's Appeal, 103 Pa. 300; McClintock v. Dana, 106 Pa. 386; Raynolds v. Hanna, 55 Fed. 783; Shoemaker's Appeal, 106 Pa. 392; Com. v. Ocean Oil Co. 59 Pa. 61, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 126; Com. v. Penn Gas Coal Co. 62 Pa. 241, 14 Mor. Min. Rep. 163.

The rule that corporations whose capital is intended to provide a permanent means of carrying on business must first charge off depletion in plant or stock has no application to a corporation whose sole purpose is to invest its capital in a specific piece of property like a mine, and afterwards to consume the property or extract its value at a profit.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 442.

The payment of dividends by a mining company out of the proceeds of ore sold is not a payment out of capital.

Excelsior Water & Min. Co. v. Pierce, 90 Cal. 131, 27 Pac. 44; Lee v. Neuchatel Asphalte Co. L. R. 41 Ch. Div. 1, 58 L. J. Ch. N. S. 408, 61 L. T. N. S. 11, 37 Week. Rep. 321, 1 Megone, 140.

A mining company is not entitled to deduct the value in place of ore mined during the year as depreciation within the meaning of the corporation tax act.

Alianza Co. v. Bell [1904] 2 K. B. 666, [1905] 1 K. B. 184, 74 L. J. K. B. N. S. 219, 53 Week. Rep. 257, 92 L. T. N. S. 184, 21 Times L. R. 134, [1906] A. C. 18, 75 L. J. K. B. N. S. 44, 54 Week. Rep. 413, 93 L. T. N. S. 705, 22 Times L. R. 94; Coltness Iron Co. v. Black, L. R. 6 App. Cas. 315, 51 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 626, 45 L. T. N. S. 145, 29 Week. Rep. 717, 46 J. P. 20.

Mr. Justice Pitney delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought in the district court of the United States by Stratton's Independence, Limited, a British corporation carrying on mining operations in the state of Colorado upon mining lands owned by itself, to recover certain moneys paid under protest for taxes assessed and levied for the years 1909 and 1910 under the provisions of the corporation tax act, being § 38 of the act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. 11, 112, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, pp. 741, 946). The case was tried upon an agreed statement of facts, from which it appears, as to the year 1909, that the company extracted from its lands during the year certain ores bearing gold and other precious metals, which were sold by it for sums largely in excess of the cost of mining, extracting, and marketing the same; that the gross sales amounted to $284,682.85, the cost of extracting, mining, and marketing amounted to $190,939.42, and "the value of said ores so extracted in the year 1909, when in place in said mine and before extraction thereof, was $93,743.43." With respect to the operations of the company for the year 1910, the agreed facts were practically the same, except as to dates and amounts. It does not appear that the so-called "value of the ore in place," or any other sum, was actually charged off upon the books of the company as depreciation. Upon this state of facts each party moved the court for a directed verdict, at the same time presenting for consideration certain questions of law, and among them the following:

Digitized by Google

"1. Is the value of the ore in place that was extracted [407] from the mining property of the plaintiff during the years in question properly allowable as depreciation in estimating the net income of the plaintiff subject to taxation under the act of Congress of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. chap. 6, p. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 741)?

"2. Is the right to such credit affected by the fact that the plaintiff does not carry such items on its books in a depreciation account?"

The court directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiff with respect to certain amounts that were undisputed and concerning which no question is now raised; but directed a verdict in favor of the defendant with respect to so much of the taxes paid as represented the value in place of the ore that was extracted during the years in question, overruling the contention that such value was properly allowable as depreciation in estimating the net income of the plaintiff. To this ruling proper exceptions were taken. The resulting judgment having been removed by writ of error to the circuit court of appeals, that court certifies that the following questions of law are presented to it, the decision of which is indispensable to a determination of the cause, and upon which it therefore desires the instruction of this court:

"I. Does § 38 of the act of Congress entitled, 'An Act to Provide Revenue, Equalize Duties, and Encourage the Industries of the United States, and for Other Purposes,' approved August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. at L. p. 11, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 741), apply to mining corporations?

"II. Are the proceeds of ores mined by a corporation from its own premises income within the meaning of the aforementioned act of Congress?

"III. If the proceeds from ore sales are to be treated as income, is such a corporation entitled to deduct the value of such ore in place and before it is mined as depreciation within the meaning of § 38 of said act of Congress?"

[408] The provisions of § 38 are set forth in the margin.†

The principal grounds upon which it is contended that the questions ought to receive answers favorable to the company are expressed in various forms; viz., that mining corporations are sui generis, because the [409] natural enjoyment of mining lands necessarily results in the waste of the estate; that the true value thereof is impossible of accurate determination, and hence mining corporations are not included in general classifications of corporations as such classifications are employed in other legislation; that the provisions of § 38 do not fit [410] the conditions of a mining corporation; that such corporations are not in truth engaged in "carrying on business" within the meaning of the act; that the application of the act to them results in a tax upon the capital, while as applied to other corporations it does not result in such a tax, the result being an inequality of operation that is [411] inherently unjust; that the proceeds of mining operations do not represent values created by or incident to the business activities of such a corporation, and therefore cannot be a bona fide measure of a tax leveled at such corporate business activities; that the proceeds of mining [412] operations result from a conversion of the capital represented by real estate into capital represented by cash, and are in no true sense income; and that to measure the tax by the excess of receipts for ore marketed over the cost of mining, extracting, and marketing the same, is [413] equivalent to a direct tax upon the property, and hence unconstitutional. Next, assuming the proceeds of ore are to be treated as income within the meaning of the act, it is yet insisted that such proceeds result solely

†Sec. 38. That every corporation, joint stock company, or association, organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares, and every insurance company, now or hereafter organized under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory of the United States, or under the acts of Congress applicable to Alaska or the District of Columbia, or now or hereafter organized under the laws of any foreign country, and engaged in business in any state or territory of the United States, or in Alaska or in the District of Columbia, shall be subject to pay annually a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, equivalent to one per centum upon the entire net income over and above five thousand dollars received by it from all sources during such year, exclusive of amounts received by it as dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations, or insurance from the depletion of capital, and are therefore deductible as depreciation under the provisions of the act.

Digitized by Google

We do not think it necessary to follow the argument through all its refinements. The pith of it is that mining corporations engaged solely in mining upon their own premises have but one kind of assets, and that in the ordinary use of them the enjoyment of the assets and the wasting thereof are in direct proportion, and proceed pari passu; and hence that a mining corporation is not engaged in business, properly speaking, but is merely occupied in converting its capital assets from one form into another, and that a tax upon the doing of such a business, where the tax is measured by the value of the property owned by the corporation, would be in excess of the constitutional limitations that existed at the time of the passage of the act of 1909, as laid down in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, s. c., 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912.

The peculiar character of mining property is sufficiently obvious. Prior to development it may present to the naked eye a mere tract of land with barren surface, and of no practical value except for what may be found beneath. Then follow excavation, discovery, development, extraction of ores, resulting eventually, if the process be thorough, in the complete exhaustion of the mineral contents so far as they are worth companies, subject to the tax hereby imposed; or if organized under the laws of any foreign country, upon the amount of net income over and above five thousand dollars received by it from business transacted and capital invested within the United States and its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia during such year, exclusive of amounts so received by it as dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations, or insurance companies, subject to the tax hereby imposed; provided, however, that nothing in this section contained shall apply to labor, agricultural or horticultural organizations, or to fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations operating under the lodge system, and providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, and other benefits to the members of such societies, orders, or associations, and dependents of such members, nor to domestic building and loan associations, organized and operated exclusively for the mutual benefit of their members, nor to any corporation or association organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, or educational purposes, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

---

Second. Such net income shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of the income of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, received within the year from all sources, (first) all the ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid within the year out of income in the maintenance and operation of its business and properties, including all charges such as rentals or franchise payments, required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property; (second) all losses actually sustained within the year and not compensated by insurance, or otherwise including a reasonable allowance for depreciation of property, if any, and in the case of insurance companies the sums other than dividends, paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts, and the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve funds; (third) interest actually paid within the year on its bonded or other indebtedness to an amount of such bonded and other indebtedness not exceeding the paid-up capital stock of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, outstanding at the close of the year, and in the case of a bank, banking association, or trust company, all interest actually paid by it within the year on deposits; (fourth) all sums paid by it within the year for taxes imposed under the authority of the United States or of any state or territory thereof, or imposed by the government of any foreign country as a condition to carrying on business therein; (fifth) all amounts received by it within the year as dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations, or insurance companies, subject to the tax hereby imposed; provided, that in the case of a corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, organized under the laws of a foreign country, such net income shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of its income received within the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States and any of its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia, (first) all the ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid within the year out of earnings in the maintenance and operation of its business and property within the United States and its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia, including all charges such as rentals or franchise payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property; (second) all losses actually sustained within the year in business conducted by it within the United States or its territories, Alaska, or the District of Columbia, not compensated by insurance or otherwise, including a reasonable allowance for depreciation of property, if any, and in the case of insurance companies the sums other than dividends, paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts, and the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within removing. Theoretically, and according to the argument, the entire value of the mine, as ultimately developed, existed from the beginning. Practically, however, and from the commercial standpoint, the value—that is, the exchangeable or market value—depends upon different considerations. Beginning from little, when the existence, character, and extent of [414] the ore deposits are problematical, it may increase steadily or rapidly so long as discovery and development outrun depletion, and the wiping out of the value by the practical exhaustion of the mine may be deferred for a long term of years. While not ignoring the importance of such considerations, we do not think they afford the sole test for determining the legislative intent.

Digitized by Google

As has been repeatedly remarked, the corporation tax act of 1909 was not intended to be and is not, in any proper sense, an income tax law. This court had decided in the Pollock Case that the income tax law of 1894 amounted in effect to a direct tax upon property, and was invalid because not apportioned according to population, as prescribed by the Constitution. The act of 1909 avoided this difficulty by imposing not an income tax, but an excise tax upon the conduct of business in a corporate capacity, measuring, however, the amount of tax by the income of the corporation, with certain qualifications prescribed by the act itself. Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; McCoach v. Minehill & S.

---

the year to reserve funds; (third) interest actually paid within the year on its bonded or other indebtedness to an amount of such bonded and other indebtedness, not exceeding the proportion of its paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, which the gross amount of its income for the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States and any of its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia bears to the gross amount of its income derived from all sources within and without the United States; (fourth) the sums paid by it within the year for taxes imposed under the authority of the United States or of any state or territory thereof; (fifth) all amounts received by it within the year as dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, subject to the tax hereby imposed. In the case of assessment insurance companies the actual deposit of sums with state or territorial officers, pursuant to law, as additions to guaranty or reserve funds, shall be treated as being payments required by law to reserve funds.

Third. There shall be deducted from the amount of the net income of each of such corporations, joint stock companies or associations, or insurance companies, ascertained as provided in the foregoing paragraphs of this section, the sum of five thousand dollars, and said tax shall be computed upon the remainder of said net income of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company for the year ending December 31, 1909, and for each calendar year thereafter; and on or before the first day of March, 1910, and the first day of March in each year thereafter, a true and accurate return under oath or affirmation of its president, vice president, or other principal officer, and its treasurer or assistant treasurer, shall be made by each of the corporations, joint stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, subject to the tax imposed by this section, to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, has its principal place of business, or, in the case of a corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, organized under the laws of a foreign country, in the place where its principal business is carried on within the United States, in such form as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe, setting forth, (first) the total amount of the paid-up capital stock of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, outstanding at the close of the year; (second) the total amount of the bonded and other indebtedness of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, at the close of the year; (third) the gross amount of the income of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, received during such year from all sources, and if organized under the laws of a foreign country the gross amount of its income received within the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States and any of its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia; also the amount received by such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, within the year by way of dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies or associations or insurance companies, subject to the tax imposed by this section; (fourth) the total amount of all the ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid out of earnings in the maintenance and operation of the business and properties of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, within the year, stating separately all charges such as rentals or franchise payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property, and, if organized under the laws of a foreign country, the amount so paid in the maintenance and operation of its business within the United States and its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia; (fifth) the total amount of all

Digitized by Google

H. R. Co. 228 U. S. 295, 57 L. ed. 842, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; United States v. Whitridge (decided at this term, 231 U. S. 144, ante, 159, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24).

For this and other obvious reasons we are little aided by a discussion of theoretical distinctions between capital and income. Such refinements can hardly be deemed to have entered into the legislative purpose. Of course, if it were demonstrable that to read the act according to its letter would render it unconstitutional, or glaringly unequal, or palpably unjust, a reasonable ground would exist for construing it according to its spirit rather than its letter. But in our opinion the act is not fairly open to this criticism. It is not correct, from either the theoretical or the practical standpoint, to say that a mining corporation is not engaged in business, but is merely occupied in converting its capital assets from one form into another. The sale outright of a mining property might be fairly described as a mere conversion of the capital from land [415] into money. But when a company is digging pits, sinking shafts, tunneling, drifting, stoping, drilling, blasting, and hoisting ores, it is employing capital and labor in transmuting a part of the realty into personalty, and putting it into marketable form. The very process of mining is, in a sense, equivalent in its results to a manufacturing process. And, however the operation shall be described, the transaction is indubitably "business" within the fair meaning of the act of 1909; and the gains derived from it are properly and strictly the income from that business; for "income" may be defined as the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, and here we have combined operations of capital and labor. As to the alleged inequality of operation between mining corporations and others, it is of course true that the revenues derived from the working of mines result to some extent in the exhaustion of the capital. But the same is true of the earnings of the human brain and hand when unaided by capital, yet such earnings are commonly dealt with in legislation as income. So it may be said of many manufacturing corporations that are clearly subject to the act of 1909, especially of those that have to do with the production of patented articles; although it may be foretold from the beginning that the manufacture will be profitable only for a limited time, at the end of which the capital value of the plant must be subject to material depletion, the annual gains of such corporations are certainly to be taken as income for the purpose of measuring the amount of the tax.

It seems to us that the first two questions certified must be answered in the affirmative principally for two reasons. First, because mining corporations are within the general description of § 38, which comprises "every corporation, joint stock company, or association organized for losses actually sustained during the year, and not compensated by insurance or otherwise, stating separately any amounts allowed for depreciation of property, and in the case of insurance companies the sums other than dividends, paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts and the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve funds; and in the case of a corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, organized under the laws of a foreign country, all losses actually sustained by it during the year, in business conducted by it within the United States or its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia, not compensated by insurance or otherwise, stating separately any amounts allowed for depreciation of property, and in the case of insurance companies the sums other than dividends, paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts and the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve fund; (sixth) the amount of interest actually paid within the year on its bonded or other indebtedness to an amount of such bonded and other indebtedness not exceeding the paid-up capital stock of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, outstanding at the close of the year, and in the case of a bank, banking associations, or trust company, stating separately all interest paid by it within the year on deposits; or in the case of a corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, organized under the laws of a foreign country, interest so paid on its bonded or other indebtedness to an amount of such bonded and other indebtedness not exceeding the proportion of its paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, which the gross amount of its income for the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States and any of its territories, Alaska, and the District of Columbia, bears to the gross amount of its income derived from all sources within and without the United States; (seventh) the amount paid by it within the year for taxes imposed under the authority of the United States or any state or territory thereof, and separately the amount so paid by it for taxes imposed by the government of any foreign country as a condition to carrying on business therein; (eighth) the net income of such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company, after making the deductions in this section authorized. All such returns shall, as received, be transmitted forthwith by the collector to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

---

Digitized by Google

profit, and having a capital stock represented by shares, . . . and engaged in business in any state or territory of the United [416] States;" and, secondly, because the act specifies those classes of corporations that are to be exempt from its operation, and mining corporation are not among them. Those exempted are labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, fraternal beneficiary societies, orders or associations operating under the lodge system, domestic building and loan associations, corporations and associations organized and operated for religious, charitable, or educational purposes, etc. Moreover, the section imposes "a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation," etc. That mining companies are doing business, within the fair intent and meaning of this clause, seems to us entirely plain, for reasons already given. The conduct of such business results in profit, for it cannot be seriously contended that the ores are not worth more at the mine mouth than they were worth in the ground, plus the cost of mining. Corporations engaged in such business share in the benefits of the Federal government, and ought as reasonably to contribute to the support of that government as corporations that conduct other kinds of profitable business.

As to what should be deemed "income" within the meaning of § 38, it of course need not be such an income as would have been taxable as such, for at that time (the 16th Amendment not having been as yet ratified) income was not taxable as such by Congress without apportionment according to population, and this tax was not so apportioned. Evidently Congress adopted the income as the measure of the tax to be imposed with respect to the doing of business in corporate form because it desired that the excise should be imposed, approximately, at least, with regard to the amount of benefit presumably derived by such corporations from the current operations of the government. In Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 165, 55 L. ed. 107, 419, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1912, it was held that Congress, in exercising the right to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as a franchise [417] or privilege, was not debarred by the Constitution from measuring the taxation by the total income, although derived in part from property which, considered by itself, was not taxable. It was reasonable that Congress should fix upon gross income, without distinction as to source, as a convenient and sufficiently accurate index of the importance of the business transacted. And from this point of view, it makes little difference that the income may arise from a business that theoretically or practically involves a wasting of capital.

Moreover, Congress evidently intended to adopt a measure of the tax that should be easy of ascertainment and simply and readily applied in practice. The act prescribed that the tax should be "equivalent to one per centum upon the entire net income over and above $5,000 received by it from all sources during such year, exclusive of amounts received by it as dividends upon stock of other corporations," etc., or, with respect to foreign corporations, "upon the amount of net income over and above $5,000, received by it from business transacted and capital invested within the United States," etc. And the net income was to be ascertained by taking, first, the "gross amount of the income of such corporation . . . received within the year from all sources," or, in the case of foreign corporations, "from business transacted and capital invested within," etc., and deducting therefrom losses sustained, interest paid, etc. And the return was to be made under oath by the president and treasurer, or other officers having like duties, indicating in the clearest manner that it was to set forth data that with proper accounting would appear upon the books of the corporation. We have no difficulty, therefore, in concluding that the proceeds of ores mined by a corporation from its own premises are to be taken as a part of the gross income of such corporation. Congress no doubt contemplated that such corporations, amongst others, were doing business [418] with a wasting capital, and for such wastage they made due provision in declaring that from the gross income there should be deducted (inter alia) "all losses actually sustained within the year," including "a reasonable allowance for depreciation of property, if any," etc.

This brings us to the third question, which is whether such a mining corporation is entitled to deduct the value of ore in place and before it is mined, as depreciation within the meaning of § 38. This question, however, is to be read in the light of the issue that is presented to the circuit court of appeals for determination, as recited in the certificate. From that certificate it appears that the case was submitted to the trial court and a verdict directed upon an agreed statement of facts, and in that statement the gross proceeds of the sale of the ores during the year were diminished by the moneys expended in extracting, mining, and marketing the ores, and the precise difference was taken to be the value of the ores when in place in the mine.

Digitized by Google

That we do not misconstrue the certificate, and that, on the contrary, the parties advisedly adopted this definition of "value of the ore in place," is apparent not only from the form of the agreed statement of facts, but from the arguments presented here in behalf of the plaintiff. The contention is that if the proceeds of ore sales are to be treated as income, the value of the ore in place and before it is mined is to be deducted as depreciation, and that such value is to be arrived at by the process indicated. Briefs submitted in behalf of amici curiæ have suggested other modes for determining depreciation; but plaintiff stands squarely upon the ground indicated by the certificate, as the following excerpts from the brief will show: "Assuming, then, that the proceeds of ore are to be treated as income within the meaning of the act. we submit that such proceeds result solely from depletion of capital, and are therefore deductible as depreciation under the [419] provisions [of the act] set out above. . . . And we contend that if a part of the capital assets are removed and sold, the property, as it originally stood, is actually depreciated in value to the exact extent of such removal. As an actual matter of experience, the original cost of the property must, from its very nature, be highly speculative. The values in the property are invisible and impossible of determination. They may be worth many times the cost, or they may be worth nothing. . . . The value of the ore in sight does represent a part of the capital, but there is no warrant for limiting it to this amount, nor is there any warrant for limiting the value of ore bodies thereafter discovered in any case to a standard fixed before their discovery, and therefore, of necessity, purely conjectural. . . . The true capital of a mining corporation is the true value of the minerals within the limits of its properties, irrespective of developed ore bodies or those known to exist at any one moment. Investigation or development may demonstrate the existence of values theretofore unknown, but this results in no addition to the actual capital. It remains the same as it was before. . . ." And again: "With every dollar's worth removed, the land from which it is taken contains that much less of value; the corporation owns precisely that much less real property than it possessed before; for every dollar of cash received it relinquishes an equivalent amount of ore in place, and makes no gain or profit by the exchange."

Reading these extracts in connection with what is contended respecting the first and second questions,—to the effect that mining corporations are not "doing business," but are merely converting their capital assets from one form into another,—it is clear that a definition of the "value of the ore in place" has been intentionally adopted that excludes all allowance of profit upon the process of mining, and attributes the entire profit upon the mining [420] operations to the mine itself. In short, the parties propose to estimate the depreciation of a mining property attributable to the extraction of ores according to principles that would be applicable if the ores had been removed by a trespasser.

It is at the same time obvious that any method of stating the account that excludes all element of gain from the process of mining must, through one process or another, exempt mining companies from liability to tax under the act of 1909 with respect to their mining operations. And so, an affirmative answer to the third question as propounded would be the same in effect as a negative answer to the first or the second. For it is a matter of little or no moment whether it is to be said (a) that mining corporations are not "engaged in business" at all, or (b) that they are engaged in business, but the proceeds of ore mined are not income, or (c) that such proceeds are income, but that there must be allowed as depreciation all that part of the proceeds which remains after paying the bare outlays of the business. In either case mining corporations would be exempt from the tax.

In our opinion, there are at least two insuperable obstacles in the way of returning an affirmative answer to the third question as certified.

In the first place, it is fallacious to say that, whatever may have been the original cost of a mining property or the cost of developing it, if in fact it afterwards yield ores aggregating many times its original cost or market value, this result merely proves and at the same time measures the intrinsic value that existed from the beginning. We are here seeking the correct interpretation and construction of an act of legislation that was, at least, designed to furnish a practicable mode of raising revenue for the support of the government, and to do this in part by imposing annual taxes upon corporations organized for profit, and by measuring the amount of the contribution [421] to be required from each corporation according to its annual income. The act deals with corporations engaged in actual business transactions, and presumably conducted according to ordinary business principles. It was of course contemplated that the income might be derived from the employment of property in business, and that this property might become more or less exhausted in the process; and because of this, a reasonable allowance was to be made for depreciation of it, if any. But plainly, we think, the valuation of the property and the amount of the depreciation were to be determined not upon the basis of latent and occult intrinsic values, but upon considerations that affect market value and have their influence upon men of affairs charged with the management of the business and accounting of corporations that are organized for profit and are engaged in business for purposes of profit.

Digitized by Google

And, secondly, assuming the depletion of the mineral stock is an element to be considered in determining the reasonable depreciation that is to be treated as a loss in the ascertainment of the net income of a mining company under the act, we deem it quite inadmissible to estimate such depletion as if it had been done by a trespasser, to whom all profit is denied.

With respect to the proper measure of damages where ore has been unlawfully mined by one person upon the land of another, there is much conflict of authority. Different modes of determining the damages have been resorted to, dependent sometimes upon the form of the action, whether trespass or trover; sometimes upon whether the case arose at law or in equity; and often upon whether the trespass was wilful or inadvertent. See E. E. Bolles Woodenware Co. v. United States, 106 U. S. 432, 27 L. ed. 230, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398, and cases cited; Benson Min. & Smelting Co. v. Alta Min. & Smelting Co. 145 U. S. 428, 434, 36 L. ed. 762, 765, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 488; Pine River Logging & Improv. Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279, 293, 46 L. ed. 1164, 1171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 920; United States v. St. Anthony R. Co. 192 U. S. 524, 542, 48 L. ed. 548, 555, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Martin v. Porter (1839) 5 Mees. & W. 352, 2 Horn & H. 70, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 841, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 75; [422] Jegon v. Vivian (1871) L. R. 6 Ch. 742, 760, 40 L. J. Ch. N. S. 389, 19 Week. Rep. 365, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 843, 8 Mor. Min. Rep. 628; Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co. (1880) L. R. 5 App. Cas. 25, 34, 42 L. T. N. S. 334, 28 Week. Rep. 357, 44 J. P. 392, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 291; Coal Creek Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Moses, 15 Lea, 300, 54 Am. Rep. 415, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 544; Winchester v. Craig, 33 Mich. 205. See also English and American Notes to Martin v. Porter, and Jegon v. Vivian, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 873, 876, etc. We are not at this time concerned with this vexed question, beyond saying that the rules applicable to trespassers can have only a modified application to the case of a mine owner conducting mining operations upon its own lands, where the question is,—What is the income derived from the business?—and the incidental question,—What is the reasonable depreciation, if any, of the mining property?

What has been said necessitates a negative answer to the third question as certified. And we shall not go further into the question of depreciation. The case comes here under § 239, Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1157, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 228] (derived from § 6 of the Evarts act, 26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549). It is established that in the exercise of this jurisdiction this court, unless it see occasion to require the whole record to be sent up for consideration, is to make answer respecting the several propositions of law that are certified, and is not to go into questions of fact, or of mixed law and fact. Our Rule 37 requires that the certificate shall contain a proper statement of the facts upon which the questions of law arise, and we deal with the facts as thus certified, and not otherwise. Graver v. Faurot, 162 U. S. 435, 437, 40 L. ed. 1030, 1031, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Cross v. Evans, 167 U. S. 60, 63, 42 L. ed. 77, 78, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 168 U. S. 505, 512, 42 L. ed. 559, 561, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 167; Emsheimer v. New Orleans, 186 U. S. 33, 46 L. ed. 1042, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. McKeen, 149 U. S. 259, 37 L. ed. 725, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840.

It would therefore be improper for us at this time to enter into the question whether the clause, "a reasonable allowance for depreciation of property, if any," calls for an allowance on that account in making up the tax, where [423] no depreciation is charged in practical bookkeeping; or the question whether depreciation, when allowable, may properly be based upon the depletion of the ore supply estimated otherwise than in the mode shown by the agreed statement of facts herein; for to do this would be to attribute a different meaning to the term "value of the ore in place" than the parties have put upon it, and to instruct the circuit court of appeals respecting a question about which instruction has not been requested, and concerning which it does not even appear that any issue is depending before that court.

The first and second questions certified will be answered in the affirmative; and the third question will be answered in the negative.

Mr. Chief Justice White, Mr. Justice McKenna, and Mr. Justice Holmes dissent with respect to the answer made to the third question.

Digitized by Google

KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 423–457.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — accounting.

1. The authority of the Interstate Commere Commission, under the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288), to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, is not exceeded because such uniformity requirements control or tend to control the conduct of the carrier in its capacity as a public servant engaged in interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. Supp. 1913.]

Constitutional law — delegation of power — Interstate Commerce Commission.

2. Legislative power is not unconstitutionally delegated to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, authorizing the Commission to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, even though such uniformity requirements may control or tend to control the conduct of the carrier in its capacity as a public servant engaged in interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, III. b, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — accounting — operating expenses — property abandoned as incident to improvement.

3. The regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission adopted in the exercise of its power under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, do not amount to an abuse of such power because they reject the theory that the cost of property abandoned as an incident to permanent improvement should remain in the property account, rather than be charged to operating expenses.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. Supp. 1913.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — accounting — grade revision — property account — operating expenses.

4. The powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, were not abused by the adoption of regulations under which a railway company is not permitted to carry into its property account the full cost of reducing grades by removing short stretches of track to a new roadbed built on adjacent land, but is required first to deduct from such cost the estimated replacement cost of the portions of track no longer used, less salvage, carrying the difference only into the property account, and charging the estimated replacement cost to operating expenses, although had the railway company adopted the more expensive method of lowering the roadbed on the existing right of way, it could, under such regulations, have carried into its property account the full cost of the improvement.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. Supp. 1913.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — regulation of carriers — preferred stockholders.

5. The fact that preferred stockholders may be deprived of a considerable part of the noncumulative dividends from net earnings, to which they would otherwise be entitled, by the enforcement of the regulation adopted by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the exercise of its authority under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, which regulations reject the theory that the cost of property abandoned as an incident to permanent improvement should remain in the property account rather than be charged to operating expenses, does not justify the conclusion that such stockholders are thereby deprived of their property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — accounting — property account — operating expenses.

6. A carrier is not relieved from compliance with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, adopted in the exercise of its power under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, which regulations reject the theory that the cost of property abandoned as an incident to permanent improvement should remain in the property account rather than be charged to operating expenses, because they were promulgated after such carrier had mortgaged its property and issued bonds for the purpose of financing such improvement, since whatever was done with reference to authorizing the improvement and financing the cost from the bond issue was so done subject to displacement by the exercise of the powers

NOTE.—On delegation by legislature of power to regulate carriers—see note to State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 639.

Digitized by Google

previously conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. Supp. 1913.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — judicial review — accounting regulations.

7. Judicial belief that the cost of property abandoned by a carrier as an incident to permanent improvements should be charged to accumulated surplus or to profit and loss is not a sufficient ground for holding that the Interstate Commerce Commission abused its powers when exercising its authority under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, because, under these regulations, such cost must be charged to operating expenses.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — accounting — improvements — profit and loss — operating expenses.

8. The Interstate Commerce Commission in prescribing, pursuant to the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, cannot be said to have abused its powers because, under its regulations, a railway company erecting a new and enlarged shop and terminal plant upon a different location from that of the existing shop and terminal plant, which are to be abandoned, cannot charge the estimated value of such abandoned property against the accumulated surplus as represented in the profit and loss account, but must charge to operating expenses the estimated replacement cost, less salvage, of such existing shop and plant.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. Supp. 1913.]

[No. 571.]

Argued October 29 and 30, 1913. Decided December 1, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Commerce Court to review a decree dismissing the petition in an action to enjoin the enforcement of certain regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission relative to the uniform accounting and bookkeeping system prescribed for interstate railway carriers. Affirmed.

See same case below, 204 Fed. 641.

Statement by Mr. Justice Pitney:

This is an appeal from a decree of the commerce court, dismissing appellant's petition in an action brought to have certain regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission relative to the method of keeping the accounts of carriers declared invalid, and to enjoin the enforcement thereof. 204 Fed. 641. The regulations are contained in the "Classification of Expenditures for Additions and Betterments of Steam Roads," effective July 1st, 1909, and the First Revised Issue thereof, effective July 1, 1910.

The facts as set forth in appellant's brief may be summarized as follows:

Appellant is engaged in interstate commerce. Its main line is about 786 miles in length, and extends from Kansas City to Port Arthur, on the Gulf of Mexico, traversing the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas. The road was built years ago, when the country was heavily timbered and sparsely settled, and the traffic was correspondingly small. The traffic would not [426] then support, nor could capital be obtained for, an expensively constructed road; and in consonance with the general practice in the development of the country, the road was built with rather heavy ruling grades. But it was not defectively or improperly constructed or located; it had substantially the same grades as other roads then constructed in the West; and it was adequate to serve the then-existing needs of the country. A railroad with heavy grades is, of course, more cheaply constructed than a road of low grades. And a road of heavy grades is generally adequate in a new country, where the volume of traffic offered is small, the train loads light, and the trains few.

The ruling maximum grade of appellant's line as originally constructed was 1 per cent; and in the mountain district as high as 1.35 per cent. The evidence is undisputed that it was properly located, well constructed, and ample for the needs of the country. In the course of time, with the development of the country, and the resultant increase in traffic, whereby the limit of the road's capacity was being approached, the conditions warranted and rendered desirable such additions or improvements as would enlarge the road's capacity, and permit traffic to be moved more rapidly and economically.

Two methods of increasing the capacity of the road were presented: one by double-tracking, the other by lowering the grades and thus permitting traffic to be moved more rapidly. The road was in active competition with powerful rivals operating in the same general territory; among them, the Southern Pacific, the Missouri, Kansas, & Texas, the Missouri Pacific, the St. Louis Southwestern, the Texas & Pacific, the St. Louis & San Francisco, the Atchison, Topeka, & Sante Fe, and the Rock Island. The character of the road as a trunk line, having a long average haul and the prevalence of low-class traffic,—timber, coal, oil, and like commodities,—necessarily entailed a low average freight rate; its average rates per ton [427] per mile being lower than those of any of its competitors above named.

Digitized by Google

Under these conditions the management found that the most desirable plan was to lower the grades of the road, and thus to increase its capacity, procure economy in operation, and render better service to the public. Two methods of reducing the grades at various points along the line were presented: one by raising or lowering the roadbed on the existing right of way; the other by the construction of short sections of new road in substitution for portions of the road, in instances where the same result could be thus obtained at less cost. The program of improvement contemplated, therefore, not only many changes on the original right of way, but also a number of changes by the substitution of short sections of road on new ground, where that method was more economical.

The first six sections of the road where new locations were utilized are covered by the petition herein. Other similar changes are being made as the work proceeds, which will cover several years, and is estimated to cost $3,000,000. The road at these six points was in no way worn out, was fully maintained, and was capable of performing for an indefinite term the function for which it was originally constructed. All of these changes are being made for the purpose of increasing the capacity of the line, of securing economy in operation, and of rendering improved service to the public.

At the six sections of the road in question it was found by the estimates of the engineers that the cost of securing the required gradient upon the original roadbed would be $1,230,318.99; but that the same result could be obtained by means of re-locations upon adjacent land for a net expenditure of $629,399.74.

The actual expenditure on these six new locations, as ascertained on completion of the work (after the filing of the petition), was $763,798; and the testimony shows [428] that had the work been done on the original roadbed the cost would have been increased over the estimates in an equal or greater proportion; the variation being due to increase in the cost of labor, materials, etc. For present purposes, the figures set forth in the petition are adopted.

The grade revisions at the six sections of line involved herein having been completed by removing the tracks to adjacent parcels of ground, which were procured and substituted for the original parcels, the use of the latter parcels was, of course, discontinued.

The expenditure required to improve the property by bringing it to the desired grade of $\frac{4}{10}$ of 1 per cent being deemed a capital expenditure, appellant's directors determined to finance the work by applying to it the proceeds of a bond issue. It is claimed to have been necessary to finance the improvements in this way if they were to be made at all, because the appellant did not have current earnings available for these improvements, and could not have financed its program, involving the revision of about 41 per cent of the entire line and an ultimate expenditure of several million dollars, in any other way than by raising capital for that purpose through the issuance of bonds.

Appellant, in order to raise funds for this and certain other purposes, made an issue of bonds secured by a second mortgage on its property. This was duly authorized by the directors and stockholders in the month of June, 1909; a portion of the bonds was sold and an initial sum of $1,250,000 thus obtained became applicable to the improvements referred to in the petition and other improvements in the grade. Additional bonds have since been issued as the work has proceeded.

In 1907, appellant began the payment of dividends at the rate of 4 per cent per annum upon its preferred stock, the total amount of which was $21,000,000, and has continued to pay such dividends each year until the present time. [429] These dividends are noncumulative and are payable only out of the earnings of the current year. The fact that appellant had paid its dividends for several years was a factor in its credit. Preferred dividends having been established, it is claimed that their discontinuance would have affected the credit of the road so seriously that it would have been unable except on prohibitive terms to dispose of additional bonds as further money was required from time to time during the progress of the work. It is further claimed that appellant was able to finance its improvements only out of the proceeds of a bond issue; and that it could not have financed them at all except by adopting the economical method of making a considerable part of the grade reductions by means of changes off the line of the right of way.

Appellant, having paid the cost of the six improvements out of its issue of bonds, was confronted with the regulations of the Commission bearing on the method of recording the transaction in its books of account. Except for those regulations, it is said that the full cost of the improvements would have been charged to the account of "Additions and Betterments,"—a subdivision of the property accounts,—and credited to the proceeds of the bonds, because that sum had been expended for additions and betterments, and because the bonds had supplied the funds. In the balance sheet the "Assets" would have shown an increment of approximately $629,399 under the subdivision of Additions and Betterments, and, per contra, the "Liabilities" would have shown a corresponding increase under the subdivision of "Bonds."

Digitized by Google

Under the regulations in question, it was found that if the improvements had been made on the original right of way, the entries would have been made as above indicated. But, with respect to improvements made off the right of way, different treatment was prescribed. Here the appellant was not permitted to carry into its property [430] accounts the full cost of the improvement, but was required first to deduct from the cost thereof the estimated replacement cost of the portions of track no longer used, the difference only being carried into the property accounts, and a sum equal to the estimated cost of replacing the old sections of track being charged to the operating expenses of that year.

The text of the Classification of Additions and Betterments relative to revisions made on the original line is as follows: "Grade Revisions.—(Reducing of grades by cutting down summits and raising sags without materially changing the alinement).—The amount to be charged to this account is the cost of additional grading done, including as a portion of such cost the rent and cost of operation of steam shovels and work trains; building temporary tracks for steam shovels and grading outfits; tools, etc., used in the work; raising or lowering existing bridges; increasing the length of culverts and replacing riprap at culvert ends; changing grade crossings for farm or country roads, highways, and streets, including crossing gates, highway crossing alarms, and watch houses."

Relative to changes off the original line the regulation is as follows: "Changes of Line.—(Construction of new lines for the purpose of improving grade or alinement).—The amount to be charged to this account is the difference between the cost of the new line and the cost of replacing in kind the line abandoned, exclusive of right of way."

The General Instructions contained in the Classification supplement these rules and prescribe charges to Operating Expenses as follows:

"5. In case it becomes necessary directly in connection with betterment or improvement work to abandon any property, the cost of replacing the abandoned property in kind, plus the cost of removal, but less the value of salvage, should be charged to the appropriate accounts under Operating Expenses. In case, however, the amount so [431] chargeable is large, and its inclusion in a carrier's operating expenses for a single year would unduly burden the operating expense accounts for that year, the carrier may, if so authorized upon application to the Interstate Commerce Commission, charge such cost to the Property Abandoned account provided in the Form of General Balance Sheet Statement, or to the reserve account mentioned in paragraph 6.

"6. When property is abandoned and not replaced, the original cost (estimated, if not known) should be credited to the appropriate Additions and Betterments Accounts and charged, less salvage, to Profit and Loss Account, to which should also be charged all incidental expenses directly connected with the abandonment. If so authorized upon application to the Interstate Commerce Commission, however, a carrier may set up depreciation accounts under 'Maintenance of Way and Structures,' for the purpose of creating a reserve to which (instead of Profit and Loss) should be charged the original cost, less salvage, of the property (other than land or equipment) abandoned, and all incidental expenses directly connected with the abandonment."

These are the regulations as they appeared in the Classification of 1909. In the First Revised Issue (1910) there were some slight changes, but none now important.

To restrain the enforcement of the regulations so far as they required or tended to require appellant to charge against its earnings the estimated replacement value (less salvage) of the six parcels of railroad line that was abandoned as an incident to grade reduction as above set forth was the principal object of the suit.

The petition sets forth the following as a second ground of complaint. As a part of its program of improvements, appellant is engaged in erecting a new and enlarged shop and terminal plant at Shreveport, upon a different location from that of the existing shop and terminal plant, [432] which latter are incidentally to be abandoned. It is claimed that the present shop and equipment are not worn out or obsolete, but are in good condition, and capable, with ordinary running repairs, of performing for an indefinite time the functions for which they were originally constructed. Appellant desires to charge the estimated value of the abandoned shop and terminal plant, amounting approximately to $100,000.

Digitized by Google

against its accumulated surplus as represented in its Profit and Loss Account. The regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission relative to accounting, however, prohibit this charge, and require that the estimated replacement cost (less salvage) of the existing shop and terminal plant shall be charged to the Operating Expense Account. An injunction against the enforcement of the regulations in this regard also was prayed.

Mr. Samuel Untermyer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Walter C. Noyes, Arthur M. Wickwire, and Irwin Untermyer, filed a brief for appellant:

The power delegated to the Commission to prescribe the "form" of accounts cannot be extended so as to authorize the exercise of substantial powers of railway management not otherwise within its authority.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 73 Fed. 409; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 52 L. ed. 705, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. ed. 729, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

Property abandoned as an incident to permanent improvements is not an operating expense.

Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 402, 25 L. ed. 274; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Lackawanna Iron & Coal Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 176 U. S. 298, 44 L. ed. 475, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Wood v. Guarantee Trust & S. D. Co. 128 U. S. 416, 32 L. ed. 472, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Fordyce v. Omaha, K. C. & E. R. Co. 145 Fed. 544; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Doud, 52 L.R.A. 481, 44 C. C. A. 389, 105 Fed. 123; 18th Annual Rep. Statistics of Railways, p. 84; 19th Annual Rep. Statistics of Railways, pp. 11, 12.

The commerce court should have set aside the order complained of because it "was based upon the assumption by the Commission of the possession of power not conferred by law," and "the mere form given by the Commission to its action does not relieve the courts from the duty of reviewing and correcting an abuse of power."

Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 433, 55 L. ed. 283, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288.

The re-enactment of language which has long been subject to administrative interpretation, such interpretation not being manifestly contrary to the language itself, is an enactment of the administrative interpretation.

Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; United States v. Falk, 204 U. S. 143, 51 L. ed. 411, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

The term "operating expenses" had a well-understood meaning at the time this statute was enacted. Congress knew the meaning of the term, and did not intend that the operating accounts should include items which, beyond all question, are not operating expenses. The requirement that the annual reports shall show the operating expenses is an express limitation upon the grant of power to prescribe the forms of the accounts, and hence the meaning of the term "operating expenses" cannot be given a false definition by the Commission.

United States v. United Verde Copper Co. 196 U. S. 207, 49 L. ed. 449, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

Since the regulations in question compel the appellant to make false entries in its accounts, and thereby deprive the preferred stockholders of dividends to which they are lawfully entitled, the regulations are in violation of the 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722, 116 U. S. 138, 29 L. ed. 589, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385, affirmed in 118 U. S. 394, 30 L. ed. 118, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

Mr. Charles W. Needham argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The power of Congress over interstate and foreign commerce has been declared to be plenary, with all the incidents of sovereignty that attend the manifestation and exercise and application of this power.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 353, 47 L. ed. 500, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 57 L. ed. 523, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 566, 19 L. ed. 999, 1002; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 497, 52 L. ed. 308, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Second Employers' Liability Cases (Mondou

Digitized by Google

v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co.) 223 U. S. 1, 56 L. ed. 327, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 44, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 205, 56 L. ed. 729, 733, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

Forms of accounts and reports have a substantial relation to the regulation of commerce. The original cost of a railroad, and its cost kept accurately up to date by proper charges and withdrawals from its property account, have a real and substantial relation to, and connection with, the cost of the transportation regulated. The need of this information is constant and vital in the regulation of railroad rates, and must be considered by Congress and by the Commission.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 541, 544, 547, 42 L. ed. 819, 847–849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 215, 56 L. ed. 737, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The work of the Commission in preparing a detailed classification is only an extension of the congressional action. The whole must be considered as one fabric. Congress outlined the general plan, and left the details to be formulated by the agency it had created for that purpose.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 515–517, 55 L. ed. 563, 567, 568, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Light v. United States, 220 U. S. 523, 55 L. ed. 570, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 205, 56 L. ed. 729, 733, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

In prescribing the classification of accounts, bookkeeping, and an annual balance sheet, the Commission was acting in purely a legislative capacity. The act did not require that any hearing be given to the carriers. Like Congress, the Commission was to inform itself upon the subject, and, in pursuance of the general instructions of Congress, contained in the act, was authorized to prescribe a uniform classification and system of accounts for all interstate carriers. The Commission was to fill in the details, and this involved a classification of the items going into the accounts. The proceedings by the Commission fall within the general category of administrative functions.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 496, 497, 48 L. ed. 525, 535, 536, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. ed. 729, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 226, 53 L. ed. 227, 53 L. ed. 150, 158, 159, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

Depreciation is an operating expense.

Montgomery, Auditing, Theory & Practice, 1912, p. 319.

It is not a question of evidence, it is a question of power; power of Congress to determine what its public records shall show; power to determine for the public what depreciation is, and where depreciation shall be charged in the accounts of railroads subject to the act; power to declare that the property account shall not be padded with wreckage.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 496, 497, 48 L. ed. 525, 535, 536, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349.

It has been repeatedly held by this court that, even as to orders entered by the Commission when acting as a quasi judicial body, it is a question of power, and not of expediency; that if the Commission had power to make the order, and it acted within the statute, and not arbitrarily or in bad faith, the courts will not review the Commission's conclusions of fact, or substitute the judgment of the court for the judgment of the Commission. If this be true of quasi judicial orders, it must be pre-eminently true of orders to effectuate a law of Congress. This has been uniformly held in reference to general orders made in pursuance of an act of Congress, from the decision in Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495, to that of the Goodrich Transit Co.'s Case, 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. ed. 729, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436. To determine otherwise, and in favor of the contentions of the appellant, would be to overthrow this whole line of decisions.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thurlow M. Gordon, filed a brief for the United States:

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. ed. 729, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, settled the right of Congress to grant to the Commission this power to prescribe accounts, and therefore the only question here is whether the grant has been exceeded.

In dealing with such a question it is important to keep in mind that the function of the Commission in this class of matters is not even quasi judicial, but exclusively administrative, and so open to no review in any matter of opinion.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 470, 54 L. ed. 280, 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 515–517, 55 L. ed. 567, 568, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Interstate Commerce

Digitized by Google

Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 547, 56 L. ed. 308, 311, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

In requiring that abandoned property (over and above salvage) should not be continued as an asset, the Commission does not act arbitrarily or injuriously.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 56 L. ed. 729, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Nor did the Commission act arbitrarily and injuriously in requiring that property abandoned in connection with improvements should be charged off through operating expense instead of through surplus.

(a) The policy of the Commission is to allow an indulgence to the railroads by permitting them to maintain a basis for higher rates until the abandoned property has been paid for.

(b) Obsolescence is depreciation, and a proper and authoritatively recognized part of the definition of "operating expense."

Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Louisville, 187 Fed. 637; Eastern Case, Re Advances in Rates, 20 Inters. Com. Rep. 243; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 212, 56 L. ed. 736, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Montgomery, Auditing, Theory & Practice, 1912 ed. p. 319; People ex rel. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. v. Tax Comrs. 69 Misc. 646, 127 N. Y. Supp. 825; People ex rel. Queens County Water Co. v. Woodbury, 67 Misc. 490, 123 N. Y. Supp. 599; San Joaquin & K. R. Canal & Irrig. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 191 Fed. 875; Whitten, Valuation of Public Service Corp. §§ 450, 451–454, 458, 481, 487.

(c) Even if dividends should be lost, owing to the abandonment of property, such loss is no reason for invalidating this order.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265.

(d) But there is no reason to assume that the Commission will refuse to spread the charge so as to avoid such a result.

Mr. Justice Pitney, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The contention of appellant in the commerce court and in this court is, that the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission relative to the method of keeping the accounts of common carriers, so far as they are here questioned, are unreasonable, beyond the power or authority of either Congress or the Commission, and violative of the Fifth Article of Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, as being a deprivation of property without due process of law. It is claimed that the effect of enforcing the regulations under the circumstances of the case is to reduce the amount of net earnings applicable to dividends, and thereby cause an irreparable loss to the [438] preferred stockholders, whose dividends are noncumulative, and payable only out of the income of the current year; that the property accounts become inaccurate, because while appellant has actually expended something more than $600,000 in the improvement of its property, and its bonded indebtedness has been in fact increased by the like amount, the accounts will declare that for this expenditure the company has obtained a net accretion to its property of only a little over $200,000 ($629,399.74 less $386,484, or $234,747.74); that the Operating Expense Accounts will be improperly swollen by the inclusion therein of the sum of $386,484, to the deception of the stockholders and the investing public, and the impairment of the financial credit of the company; and that under the requirements of the Commission this sum of $386,484 cannot be charged to and finally taken out of the proceeds of the bonds, but must be charged to operating expenses, and thus taken from operating revenue, because of which (as is claimed) this amount, which has already been paid out of the proceeds of bonds, must ultimately be restored in cash to the bond account, and returned to the trustee or otherwise accounted for to the bondholders. As to the Shreveport shop and terminal plant that are to be abandoned, it is contended that it is unreasonable to require the cost of abandonment to be charged to operating expenses, and that this is a proper charge against the accumulated surplus, as represented in the Profit and Loss Account.

The authority of the Commission rests upon § 20 of the "act to regulate commerce" (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), as amended by the Hepburn act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1288).† The constitutional [439] validity of this legislation was sustained in Interstate Commerce Commission

†"Sec. 20. That the Commission is hereby authorized to require annual reports from all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and from the owners of all railroads engaged in interstate commerce as defined in this act, to prescribe the manner in which such reports shall be made, and to require from such carriers specific answers to all questions upon which the Commission may need information. Such annual reports shall show in detail

Digitized by Google

v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 211, 214, 56 L. ed. 729, 736, 737, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The authority conferred by Congress upon the commerce court (act of June 18, 1910, 36 Stat. at L. 539, chap. 309; [440] Judicial Code, § 207 [36 Stat. at L. 1148, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 216]) with respect to enjoining or setting aside the orders of the Commission, like the authority previously exercised by the Federal circuit courts, was confined to determining whether there had been violations of the Constitution, or of the power conferred by statute, or an exercise of power so arbitrary as virtually to transcend the authority conferred. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 470, 54 L. ed. 280, 287, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, 547, 56 L. ed. 308, 311, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Proctor & G. Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 297, 56 L. ed. 1091, 1096, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 225 U. S. 326, 340, 56 L. ed. 1107, 1111, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

As to the intent and meaning of § 20, it is first insisted that the power conferred upon the Commission to prescribe the forms of accounts, records, and memoranda to be kept by the carriers, recognizes a distinction between the form and the substance; and that while the Commission, in order to obtain full and accurate information concerning the affairs of each corporation, must have power to require any reports, schedules, and accounts necessary to show the true financial condition of each carrier; yet that the grant must by fair interpretation, and in order not to amount to an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, stop short of the point where the regulation in its essence goes not to the form, but to the substance, and involves interference with the internal affairs of the corporation. We do not, however, think that any such distinction between the form and the substance is admissible with respect to the declared object of standardizing railroad accounts and obtaining therefrom full and accurate information concerning the affairs of the respective corporations. The very object of a system of accounts is to display the pertinent financial operations of the company, and throw light upon its present condition. If they are to truly do this, the form must correspond with the substance. In order that accounts may be standardized, [441] it is necessary that the accounts of the several carriers shall be arranged under like headings or titles; and it is obviously essential that charges and credits shall be allocated under the proper headings,—the same with one carrier as with another. Unless "Additions and Betterments," on the one hand, and "Operating Expenses," on the other, are to indicate the same class of entries upon the books of one carrier that they indicate upon the books of other carriers, there is no possibility of standardization. So far as such uniformity requirements control or tend to control the conduct of the carrier in its capacity as a public servant engaged in interstate commerce, they are within the authority constitutionally conferred by Congress upon the Commission. There is no direct interference with the internal affairs the amount of capital stock issued, the amounts paid therefor, and the manner of payment for the same; the dividends paid, the surplus fund, if any, and the number of stockholders; the funded and floating debts and the interest paid thereon; the cost and value of the carrier's property, franchises, and equipments; . . . the amounts expended for improvements each year, how expended, and the character of such improvements; the earnings and receipts from each branch of business and from all sources; the operating and other expenses; the balances of profit and loss; and a complete exhibit of the financial operations of the carrier each year, including an annual balance sheet. Such reports shall also contain such information in relation to rates or regulations concerning fares or freights, or agreements, arrangements, or contracts affecting the same as the Commission may require; and the Commission may, in its discretion, for the purpose of enabling it the better to carry out the purposes of this act, prescribe a period of time within which all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act shall have, as near as may be, a uniform system of accounts, and the manner in which such accounts shall be kept.

---

. . . . . .

The Commission may, in its discretion, prescribe the forms of any and all accounts, records, and memoranda to be kept by carriers subject to the provisions of this act, including the accounts, records, and memoranda of the movement of traffic as well as the receipts and expenditures of moneys. The Commission shall at all times have access to all accounts, records, and memoranda kept by carriers subject to this act, and it shall be unlawful for such carriers to keep any other accounts, records, or memoranda than those prescribed or approved by the Commission, and it may employ special agents or examiners, who shall have authority under the order of the Commission to inspect and examine any and all accounts, records, and memoranda kept by such carriers. This provision shall apply to receivers of carriers and operating trustees."

Digitized by Google

of the corporation; and if any such interference indirectly results, it is only such as is incidental to the lawful control of the carrier by the Federal authority, and to this the rights of stockholders and bondholders alike are necessarily subject.

It is said, however, that the meaning of the term "operating expenses" was well defined at the time of the passage of the act of 1887, and that during the period intervening between the beginning of the work of the Commission thereunder and the passage of the Hepburn act in 1906, the term had never been construed to include any charge for property abandoned in the course of improvements; and that this settled construction, upon familiar principles, must be deemed to have entered into the purpose of Congress when it re-enacted the language of § 20 in the latter year, and added to it authority to the Commission to prescribe in its discretion the forms of accounts and a prohibition against keeping any others than those prescribed or approved by the Commission. But it will be observed that § 20, as originally enacted, authorized the Commission "in its discretion, for the purpose of enabling it the better to carry out the purposes of this act, [442] [to] prescribe . . . a period of time within which all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act shall have, as near as may be, a uniform system of accounts, and the manner in which such accounts shall be kept." Congress, when it enacted the Hepburn act in 1906, must have known that the Commission had not as yet found occasion to enforce this provision; and at the same time may be deemed to have contemplated that the authority then for the first time conferred upon the Commission to determine and prescribe the maximum rates to be charged by the carriers for the services to be performed by them furnished a new and more cogent reason for establishing a uniform system of accounts.

The contention that the term "operating expenses" had a well-understood and defined meaning, either recognized at the time of the passage of the act of 1887, or established by the constant practice of the Commission from that time until the Hepburn act, so that the use of the term in the latter act amounted to an express limitation upon the grant of power to prescribe the forms of the accounts, is not well founded. Congress, in authorizing the Commission to prescribe a uniform system of accounts, recognized that accounting systems were not then uniform; and in reiterating this authorization in 1906, and adding a prohibition against the keeping of other accounts than those prescribed, manifested a purpose to standardize and render uniform the accounts of the different carriers with respect to matters that entered into property and the improvements thereof, on the one hand, and the current operations of the company, on the other. By the very terms of § 20, Congress at least outlined the classification of the carriers' accounts, for it required the annual reports to show "the amount of capital stock issued, the amounts paid therefor, and the manner of payment for the same . . . the surplus fund, if any, . . . the funded and floating [443] debts, . . . the cost and value of the carrier's property, franchises, and equipments; . . . the amounts expended for improvements each year, how expended, and the character of such improvements; the earnings and receipts from each branch of business and from all sources; the operating and other expenses; the balances of profit and loss; and a complete exhibit of the financial operations of the carrier each year, including an annual balance sheet." By the same section the Commission was authorized to require these annual reports from all carriers subject to the act, and to prescribe the manner in which the reports should be made, and for this and other purposes to require carriers to have "as near as may be, a uniform system of accounts, and [to prescribe] the manner in which such accounts shall be kept."

Plainly, the lawmaking body recognized the essential distinctions between property accounts and operating accounts, between capital and earnings; it recognized that the practice of different carriers varied in respect to these matters; and that no system of supervision and regulation would be complete without requiring the accounts of all the carriers to speak a common language.

There is here no unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. The reasoning adopted in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Goodrich Transit Co. 224 U. S. 194, 210, etc., 56 L. ed. 729, 735, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, is controlling. And since, as just shown, uniformity in accounting is dependent upon the adoption and enforcement of precise classification, the authority to define the terms of the classification necessarily follows. It amounts, after all, to no more than laying down the general rules of action under which the Commission shall proceed, and leaving it to the Commission to apply those rules to particular situations and circumstances by the establishment and enforcement of administrative regulations.

It is contended that the regulations of the Commission, in respect to the matters now under consideration, are [444] so unreasonable and arbitrary as to constitute an abuse rather than an exercise of the powers conferred by § 20, and consequently that they ought to be set aside by judicial action. This is not on the ground that the Commission did not proceed with due deliberation and after proper inquiry. Respecting this, the record abundantly shows that in the year 1906, and shortly after the passage of the Hepburn act, the Commission undertook, and for nearly three years prosecuted, a most thorough investigation into the current practice of the principal railroad lines, procuring reports and recommendations from experts, and submitting tentative plans for the classification of accounts to the executives of the railroad lines and to a committee of accounts created by the Association of American Railway Accounting Officers, which association was made up of members representing practically every important railroad in the country.

Digitized by Google

The present attack upon the classification as adopted is, and must be, rested at bottom upon the contention that the regulations embodied in it are so entirely at odds with fundamental principles of correct accounting as intrinsically to manifest an abuse of power.

There is evidence in the record that substantially the same method of distributing charges for so-called "Additions and Betterments" between the Property Accounts and the Operating Accounts is and has long been pursued by important railroad carriers, and has received the sanction of at least one recent text-book writer,—Whitten, Valuation of Public Service Corporations, §§ 450, 451, 458, etc. Nevertheless, it is insisted with emphasis that property abandoned as an incident to permanent improvements is not an operating expense, and, in effect, that no matter what practice may be pursued by railroad accounting officers, it cannot properly be treated as such.

We are thus brought back to the fundamental distinction between (a) the property or capital accounts, designed [445] to represent the investment of the stockholders, and to show the cost of the property as originally acquired, with subsequent additions and improvements; these assets being balanced by the liabilities, including the amount of the capital stock and of bonded and other indebtedness, with net profits or surplus, whether carried under the head of "profit and loss" or otherwise; and (b) the operating accounts, designed to show, on the one side, gross receipts or gross earnings for the year, and on the other side, the expenditures involved in producing those gross earnings and in maintaining the property, the balance being the net earnings.

Since the regulation of the railroad carrier by the public authority, and especially the fixing of the rates to be charged, depend primarily upon two fundamental considerations, (a) the value of the property that is employed in the public service, and (b) the current cost of carrying on that service, it is clear that the maintenance of a proper line of distinction between property accounts and operating accounts is essential to the execution by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the supervisory and regulatory powers conferred upon it by Congress.

Appellant contends, inter alia, that since the original locations were necessary in the development of its railroad line, and were abandoned only as an incident to the improvement and development of the property, the cost thereof, being, as it is termed, a part of the "cost of progress," should remain in the property account, as representing a part of the stockholders' present investment.

Support for this contention is sought in previous decisions of this court. In Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 402, 25 L. ed. 274, a decision that turned upon the meaning and effect of an act of 1862 for aiding the construction of the railroad (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120), it was said, at p. 420: "As a general proposition, net earnings are the excess of the gross earnings over the expenditures defrayed [446] in producing them, aside from, and exclusive of, the expenditure of capital laid out in constructing and equipping the works themselves. It may often be difficult to draw a precise line between expenditures for construction, and the ordinary expenses incident to operating and maintaining the road and works of a railroad company. Theoretically, the expenses chargeable to earnings include the general expenses of keeping up the organization of the company, and all expenses incurred in operating the works and keeping them in good condition and repair; whilst expenses chargeable to capital include those which are incurred in the original construction of the works, and in the subsequent enlargement and improvement thereof." In Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700, the Commission had held (206 U. S. 449, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 544) that while repairs were properly chargeable to current operating expenses, yet expenditures for improvements and equipment "should not be taxed as part of the current or operating expenses of a single year, but should be, so far as practicable and so far as rates exacted from the public are concerned, projected proportionately over the future." And in this court it was said (p. 462): "It would seem as if expenditures for additions to construction and equipment, as expenditures for original construction and equipment, should be reimbursed by all of the traffic they accommodate during the period of their duration, and that improvements that will last many years should not be charged wholly against the revenue of a single year." And, after pointing out that the case of the Union Pacific Railway Company in 99 U. S. had to do not with rates of transportation or the like, but with the construction of the words "net earnings" in an act of Congress, the court, in pointing out the difference between the position of the government in that case and the position of a shipper of commodities in the case sub judice, said, with respect to the latter (p. 463): [447] "His right is immediate. He may demand a service. He must pay a toll, but a toll measured by the reasonable value of the service. The elements of that value may be many and complex, not always determinable, as we have seen, with mathematical accuracy; but, we think, it is clear, that instrumentalities which are to be used for years should not be paid for by the revenues of a day or year; and this is the principle of returns upon capital which exists in durable shape."

Digitized by Google

The expressions quoted were properly employed with respect to the questions then presented for decision. As expressions of the general principle, we see no occasion now to qualify them. In both cases it was recognized that in so complicated a matter as the construction, maintenance, and operation of a railroad line, it is difficult to define and perhaps more difficult to consistently apply a precise distinction between capital and expense accounts; and while the propriety of distributing improvement costs over a series of years was recognized, the impossibility of scientific accuracy in that regard was acknowledged. The question now is, whether the regulations of the Commission under attack do violence to these general principles,—rather, it is whether those regulations are so clearly contrary to these and other applicable principles that they should be set aside as being in excess of the powers conferred by Congress upon the Commission.

We are unable to see that there is substantial inconsistency with principle, much less gross violation thereof. The contention of the appellant that property, originally acquired because necessary in the construction of the road, and afterwards abandoned only because rendered unnecessary by the improvement and development of the property, should remain in the property account as a part of the stockholders' investment, will be found, upon analysis, to rest upon the unwarrantable assumption that all capital expenditures result in permanent accretion to the [448] property of the company. This in effect ignores depreciation,—an inevitable fact which no system of accounts can properly ignore. A more complete depreciation than that which is represented by a part of the original plant that through destruction or obsolescence has actually perished as useful property, it would be difficult to imagine. The fact that the original investment was necessary in order that the second investment might be made is not a conclusive test. Reference is made to the cost of the scaffolding used in the erection of a house, and discarded when the house is completed; and to the cost of the paper that goes to the waste-basket, rather than to the printer, in the preparation of a literary composition; but these are fanciful analogies, and do not assist us here, where the real question is not how shall original cost be ascertained, but, how shall subsequent depreciation in value be reckoned and accounted for?

In Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, this court had to do with a similar element of depreciation, and, after pointing out that such a plant as was there in question begins to depreciate in value from the moment of its use, and that before coming to the question of profit at all, the company was entitled to earn a sufficient sum annually to provide not only for current repairs, but for making good the depreciation and replacing the parts of the property when they should come to the end of their life, the court proceeded to say (p. 14): "If, however, a company fails to perform this plain duty and to exact sufficient returns to keep the investment unimpaired, whether this is the result of unwarranted dividends upon overissues of securities, or of omission to exact proper prices for the output, the fault is its own. When, therefore, a public regulation of its prices comes under question, the true value of the property then employed for the purpose of earning a return cannot be enhanced by a consideration of the errors in management which have been committed in the past."

[449] And since one of the manifest objects of Congress in authorizing the supervision and standardization of carriers' accounts, as is done in § 20 of the interstate commerce act, was to enable the Commissioners to intelligently perform their duties respecting the regulation of carriers' rates for the services performed, and since it is settled that the property investment which is to be taken into consideration as one of the elements in fixing such rates is the property then in use (Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 546, 42 L. ed. 819, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 442, 47 L. ed. 892, 894, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 41, 53 L. ed. 382, 395, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 434, 454, 458, 57 L. ed. 1511, 1555, 1563, 1565, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728), it is obvious that, so far as the regulations of the Commission now under consideration discard the "cost of progress" theory, they need no further vindication.

Digitized by Google

It is insisted that if the appellant, having expended in round figures $600,000, secured by the sale of bonds for improvements, can be compelled to charge $400,000 of that amount to the operating expense of one year, or to distribute it among the operating expenses of a series of years, and if it be forbidden to keep any other record representing the transaction, it will have in its possession no kind of record from which it can report accurately either the cost of its property or the cost of improvements or its operating expenses. This, we think, is a misapprehension of the effect of the regulations. They do not require appellant to falsify its books or to change in any way the evidential character of the original entries. The source of the money, and the disposition made of it as expended, may and should be correctly shown. The regulations do require that the contemporaneous abandonment of other property be likewise shown, and the replacement cost, less salvage, charged to the appropriate accounts under operating expenses. This, if observed, of course results [450] in enforcing a prescribed distinction between capital expense and operating expense. It does not require that the record of the expenditure be obliterated; but it does of course affect the results as they work out upon the balance sheet. If this be fairly done, there is no transmutation of new property into operating expenses, but only an insistence upon the requirement that new property added shall not alone be the measure of the accretion to the property account, and that the depletion attributable to contemporaneous abandonment of other property shall likewise be reflected upon the books.

Stress is laid upon the fact that if the grade reductions in question had been made upon the line of the original right of way, even though made at double the expense, the cost would have gone into "additions and betterments," and would have stood as a permanent increment of assets in the property account; while with respect to similar improvements made off the line of the original right of way, appellant is not permitted to carry into the property account the full cost of the improvement, but must first deduct therefrom the estimated replacement cost (less salvage) of the portions of track no longer used, charging this to the account of operating expenses.

So far as the comparative expense of the different modes of improvement is concerned, little need be said. The accounting regulations do not seek to control railroad companies in the exercise of their discretion respecting what shall be done and how it shall be done, but only to systematize their accounts with respect to whatever is done. It is to be presumed that boards of directors will select that method of accomplishing a needed grade revision that shall be preferable from the engineering standpoint and suited to the financial condition and prospects of the company; not that they will adopt an inferior or more costly method of improvement because of the accounting requirements.

[451] The distinction drawn between grade improvements "off the line" and those made "on the line" rests upon the view that the discarding of sections of the original line of road is a loss or depreciation that in correct accounting should be taken out of the property account. If this is to be done, its value must be charged, directly or indirectly, as an expense incident to the operation of the road. Whether it should be charged against the accumulated profits of previous years, as reflected in the Profit and Loss Account, or against the profits of present and future years, may depend upon circumstances. The theory upon which the Commission has acted in formulating its regulations is fairly stated in its brief herein as follows: The abandonment of property incident to grade revision is "depreciation," and such depreciation is of two kinds,—(1) that which is not replaced in kind, and (2) that which is replaced by improved materials, track, or equipment. If a trunk line of road has a branch extending into a territory not served by its main line, and, finding the branch unprofitable, abandons it, taking up the track, without constructing any substitute to serve the same territory, the abandoned branch ceases to be an earning instrumentality; the stockholders can thereafter derive no profit from it; it has served its purpose, and only past operations have benefited from it. So far as the profits of past operations have not been distributed to the stockholders, they are represented in the Profit and Loss Account, and therefore such an abandonment or depreciation is properly chargeable to that account unless a special depreciation account has been established in anticipation of such abandonments; and for such an account, provision is made in the regulations. The other kind of depreciation is the result of changes attributable to the inadequacy of the existing property to meet the demands of the future. The road or the structures have to be replaced with stronger or more efficient instrumentalities. Abandonments [452] occasioned by changes of this character are therefore chargeable to future earnings, for the reason that the improved condition of the road is not only designed to meet the demands of the future, but presumably will result in economies of operation; and so the resulting benefits will be reaped by those who hold the stock of the company in the present and in the future. The railroad company may, if it sees fit, anticipate general depreciations, and make provision for them by establishing a reserve for the purpose; but if no such provision has been made, the abandonment should be taken care of by charging them to present or future operating expense. In case, however, the amount is so large that its inclusion in a carrier's operating expenses for a single year would unduly burden the operating expense account for that year, the carrier may, if so authorized by the Commission, distribute the cost throughout a series of years.

Digitized by Google

A statement of the theory is sufficient to show that the regulation is not arbitrary in the sense of being without reasonable basis. And there is evidence to show that the Commission was warranted in adopting it, as sustained by expert opinion and approved by experience.

One of the reasons for the distinction made in accounting between improvements made on, and those made off, the old right of way, is that in the former case the improvements show themselves in the physical structures, and can be inventoried and appraised by witnesses; the deepening of cuts and increasing of fills, while involving some abandonments (and these under the regulations are to be taken out of the operating account), yet in the main are visible upon the ground, and capable of mensuration and appraisement. To the suggestion that cuts filled up and embankments reduced would not be thus manifest, it is sufficient to say that if such cases occur they must be most extraordinary. When a railroad is originally constructed, cuts and fills are made to overcome natural [453] inequalities of surface; if any undue grades are permitted to remain, it is usually because, for reasons of economy, cuts have been made less deep and fills less high than otherwise they would have been made. Therefore grade revisions upon the line of the original right of way are normally required for the purpose of removing summits in cuts and raising sags in fills; not vice versa.

It is said that the effect of the regulations, if complied with, is to deprive the preferred stockholders of a considerable part of the noncumulative dividends from the net earnings of the company, to which they would otherwise be entitled. The preferred stockholders, as such, are not before the court, and this is not a proper occasion for determining their rights. Supposing, however, that the enforcement of the accounting system does require them to forego their current dividends, we do not concede that this amounts to an unlawful taking of their property. Assuming (as of course we must) that the management of the company has acted prudently in making these extensive improvements within a short time, instead of distributing them throughout a series of years, and without providing in advance any fund applicable to them, still it must be presumed that the improvements are necessary to the general welfare of the company, and will result in its increased prosperity, and therefore make better the assurance of dividends for the preferred stockholders in the future.

But, aside from that, the interstate commerce act deals with the carrier in its capacity as a servant of the public, and as a distinct entity, amenable to the legitimate regulation of Congress and the Commission. If in this aspect the carrier is not unwarrantably injured or deprived of its property by the exercise of the regulatory powers, the operation of such regulations cannot be restrained on the ground of agreements made by the stockholders amongst themselves for apportioning profits to one or the [454] other class of stockholders. To admit this might materially hamper the Federal control over interstate carriers, and evidently would tend to render impracticable the standardization of methods of accounting.

Much stress is laid upon the situation that results from the circumstance that (as is claimed) these regulations were promulgated after appellant had mortgaged its property and issued bonds for financing the improvements in question. It is not contended that the regulations impair the rights of either party under the mortgage. The contention is that the company had the right to finance the full cost of the improvements out of the proceeds of a bond issue, and that the regulations amount in effect to a veto upon the action of the directors in this respect. Supposing this to be true, we are unable to perceive that the appellant is thereby relieved from compliance with the regulations. Whatever was done about authorizing the improvements and financing the cost from the bond issue was done subject to being displaced by the exercise of the powers conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission by the act of 1906. The regulations do not affect the administration of the borrowed money. It was borrowed inter alia specifically for use in "reducing grades to ½ of 1 per cent on three full operating divisions, aggregating 41 per cent of the total length of the line." And by the mortgage appellant covenanted to use the bonds and the proceeds thereof in calling in and redeeming an outstanding loan, "and for the general improvement of its property." In short, so far as appears, there is nothing in the regulations to prevent the appellant from devoting the money strictly to the purposes for which it was borrowed, although they do prevent the keeping of the accounts in such manner as to make it appear that the book value of the company's assets is enhanced to the full extent of the moneys disbursed in the improvements.

Digitized by Google

[455] When it is said that the amount of $386,484, which, under the requirements of the Commission, must be charged to operating expenses, must for that reason be ultimately restored in cash to the bond account and returned to the trustee, or otherwise accounted for to the bondholders, this does not mean that any obligation of that kind is imposed upon appellant by the classification. We are not referred to anything in the classification, in the provisions of the mortgage, or in the law, that imposes any such duty. What is meant (as we presume), is that if the operating expenses are increased and the operating revenue decreased by the amount mentioned, in accordance with the regulations, and the payment of dividends should nevertheless continue, the books would make it appear that the dividends were paid not from earnings, but from the proceeds of the bonds. In other words, the regulations of the Commission prevent the proceeds of the bond issue from being used, in whole or in part, to maintain dividend payments without that fact appearing upon the accounts; and since it is improbable that appellant would be willing to have the accounts bear such an interpretation, it is probable that the proceeds of the bonds will not be employed for dividend purposes, and unless required for further improvements, may as well be returned to the trustee for the bondholders. Since one of the very purposes of establishing the accounting system is to deter the payment of dividends out of capital, the criticism, upon analysis, bears its own refutation.

The same may be said of the argument that enforcement of the regulations will impair the credit of appellant by diminishing apparent earnings, preventing continuance of dividends upon preferred stock, and keeping down the aggregate value of "assets" upon the property accounts. Presumably the regulations have a tendency to place the accounting system upon a sound basis in these respects; and to accomplish this was one of the legitimate [456] objects at which Congress aimed in the enactment of § 20 of the interstate commerce act.

It is further insisted that even the theory upon which the accounting regulations rest does not, when analyzed, justify a charge of abandoned property to operating expenses, but at most a charge to profit and loss. The suggestion apparently has force; but, upon consideration, we are unable to see that it furnishes ground for judicial interference with the course pursued by the Commission. Except for the contention (already disposed of) that the value of the abandoned parcels should be permanently carried in the property account as part of the cost of progress, it is and must be conceded that sooner or later it must be charged against the operating revenue, either past or future, if the integrity of the property accounts is to be maintained; and it becomes a question of policy whether it should be charged in solido to profit and loss (an account presumptively representative of past accumulations) or to the operating accounts of the present and future. If abandoned property is not charged off in one way or the other it remains as a permanent inflation of the property accounts, and tends to produce, directly or indirectly, a declaration of dividends out of capital. If it be charged off to the surplus account, it tends to prevent the declaration of dividends based upon a supposed accumulation of past earnings. If charged to operating expenses of the current and future years, it has a tendency to prevent the declaration of dividends from current earnings until the amount of the depreciation shall have been made up out of the earnings.

But, did we agree with appellant that the abandonments ought to be charged to surplus or to profit and loss, rather than to operating expenses, we still should not deem this a sufficient ground to declare that the Commission had abused its power. So long as it acts fairly and reasonably within the grant of power constitutionally conferred [457] by Congress, its orders are not open to judicial review.

Digitized by Google

What has been said respecting the enforced disposition of the charges for property abandoned in grade revision applies as well to the abandonment of the present shop and terminal plant at Shreveport.

Decree affirmed.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY COMPANY OF CANADA and Detroit, Grand Haven, & Milwaukee Railway Company, Appts.

v.

MICHIGAN RAILROAD COMMISSION, Cassius L. Glasgow, Lawton T. Hemans, George W. Dickinson, and Franz C. Kuhn, Attorney General of the State of Michigan.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 457–473.)

Carriers — governmental regulation — judicial interference.

1. The Federal courts will not disturb, on the theory of any interference with interstate commerce, an order of a state railroad commission suspending an interstate railway company's supplemental tariff, in order to give the commission an opportunity to investigate, where the conclusion that such order does so interfere must rest upon the balancing of conflicting affidavits.

[For other cases, see Carriers, 239, 240, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — conflicting state and Federal regulation — interchange of railway traffic.

2. Congress has not so taken over the whole subject of terminals, team tracks, switching tracks, sidings, etc., of interstate railways, as to invalidate all state regulations relative to the interchange of traffic.

[For other cases, see Commerce, I. c, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — compelling interchange of railway traffic.

3. The tracks and terminals of a railway company within the corporate limits of Detroit are not appropriated for the use and benefit of other railroads, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., forbidding the taking of property without due process of law, by an order of the state railroad commission in aid of the enforcement of Mich. Acts 1909, act. No. 300, as amended by Pub. Acts 1911, act No. 139, under which the company may be compelled to receive and transport at reasonable rates loaded cars between junction points with other carriers within such corporate limits and its own team tracks, and between such team tracks and industrial sidings on its own line.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458–466, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — invalid in part.

4. The possible invalidity of the penalty provisions of Mich. Pub. Acts 1909, act No. 300, as amended by Pub. Acts 1911, act No. 139, which are in a section by themselves, as precluding, by reason of their severity, an appeal to the courts to restrain the enforcement of the provisions of that statute for the compulsory interchange of railway traffic, does not affect the validity of the latter provisions.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — interchange of traffic — intra-city transportation.

5. Railway companies cannot assert, as against the power of the state to compel the interchange of traffic within the corporate limits of a city, that they were not incorporated for intra-city transportation.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 382.]

Argued October 23 and 24, 1913. Decided December 8, 1913.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan to review an order refusing to restrain the enforcement of an order of the Michigan Railroad Commission, suspending the tariff of an interstate railway company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 198 Fed. 1009.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George W. Kretzinger, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George W. Kretzinger and A. B. Browne, filed a brief for appellants:

One carrier cannot be required to allow to another carrier the use of its terminals, and to do the switching necessary to that end. The duty of a carrier to accept goods tendered at its station does not extend to the acceptance of the cars offered to it at an arbitrary point near its terminus by a competing road, for the purpose of reaching and using its terminal station. A state Constitution requiring such services of a common carrier is unconstitutional.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock

Note.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107, and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On power to compel railroad to build, maintain, or connect with, side tracks for accommodation of shippers—see note to State ex rel. Mt. Hope Coal Co. v. White Oak R. Co. 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1013.

Generally, on statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

Digitized by Google

Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 145, 53 L. ed. 441, 446, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

A fortiori, therefore, a statute requiring such services and all orders of a state commission, however general or specific may be the powers conferred upon it by the state to demand such duties of a carrier, are void. Such is the order of the Michigan Railroad Commission, dated April 10, 1912. In the case just cited the delivery points were 8 miles apart.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 133 Ky. 148, 97 S. W. 780.

A carrier need not give the use of its terminals to other carriers except on such terms and conditions as it may impose; and it may choose the carriers to whom it will allow the use of those terminals.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 498, 499, 49 L. ed. 1135, 1141, 1142, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; United States v. Terminal R. Asso. 224 U. S. 403, 56 L. ed. 817, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513.

This is particularly true where the use of the terminal facilities cannot be granted to all carriers alike without such congestion as to render prompt and adequate service to any impossible.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 499, 49 L. ed. 1137, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745.

To require a carrier to receive and transport over its tracks the merchandise and cars of any other corporation or individual having connecting tracks is to require it to give the use of its tracks and terminal facilities to another railroad engaged in like business.

Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. 26 L.R.A. 192, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 854, 11 C. C. A. 417, 27 U. S. App. 380, 63 Fed. 775; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 473.

A carrier cannot be required to give its team tracks for the service of loading a car to be turned over to another carrier at a junction point within the same city. Nor can it be required to turn over its own cars to such another carrier to make delivery for it within the same city, where it has its own terminals, whether the car has come from within or without that city.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 571, 48 L. ed. 565, 569, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339.

The business of intra-city switching, or transportation between junction points of carriers and other points all within the same city, is a very different business from that of ordinary transportation, or hauls the width or breadth of one or more states.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Terminal R. Asso. 182 Mo. 296, 81 S. W. 395; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 145, 53 L. ed. 441, 446, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

Such intra-city transportation, or switching service, is beyond the calling of a railroad company, not incorporated for such a purpose, and this it cannot be compelled to do. Even the Constitution of a state, so far as it requires such service, is void.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. supra.

This is particularly the law where such regulations, as shown in the bills filed herein, result in interference with interstate commerce.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. 198 U. S. 483, 498, 499, 49 L. ed. 1135, 1141, 1142, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; United States v. Terminal R. Asso. 224 U. S. 403, 56 L. ed. 817, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513.

The Congress of the United States having acted under the interstate commerce act as to terminals and switching services of carriers engaged in interstate commerce, and having enacted therein that carriers subject to that act shall not be required to give the use of their tracks or terminal facilities to other carriers engaged in like business, any authority given by state statute to make such requirements is now superseded. This service the interstate carriers are not required to give.

Morris Iron Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 26 Inters. Com. Rep. 240; Railroad Commission v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 24 Inters. Com. Rep. 295; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 378, 379, 56 L. ed. 237, 239, 240, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 26, 27, 56 L. ed. 74, 75, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 3 N. C. C. A. 822.

Where a carrier is engaged in both state and interstate commerce, and its facilities are used in common for both such classes of commerce, an act of Congress relating to the use of such facilities and the manner of carrying on business therewith supersedes all state legislation on the subject.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 375, 378, 379, 56 L. ed. 237–240, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 26, 27, 56 L. ed. 72, 74, 75, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 3 N. C. C. A. 822; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 227 U. S. 59, 57 L. ed. 417, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Pedersen v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 229 U. S. 146, 57 L. ed. 1125, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 3 N. C. C. A. 779; St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 57 L. ed. 1129, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Digitized by Google

The expression of the intention of Congress to bring the subject within its control is alone sufficient. Though there be no act of Congress operative, and no regulation in force, such expression, as soon as uttered in legislative form, at once supersedes and excludes all power of a state to legislate on or enforce legislation with reference to the subject.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 222 U. S. 370, 378, 379, 56 L. ed. 237, 239, 240, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160.

A service that interferes with interstate commerce cannot be imposed by a state. A statute imposing such service is void.

Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 327, 328, 50 L. ed. 772, 774, 775, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 7, 27, 37, 54 L. ed. 355, 357, 366, 370, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 65, 54 L. ed. 378, 385, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 162, 54 L. ed. 423, 429, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 268, 23 L. ed. 543, 547; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 319, 330, 34 L. ed. 455, 457, 461, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

The mere extension of a facility to the public by a carrier which it is not required under the law to give will not prevent such carrier from withdrawing that facility from the use of the public at any time it may see fit.

Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 26, 29 L. ed. 791, 802, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 628; Providence Coal Co. v. Providence & W. R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 368; Douglas & Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. R. Co. 21 Inters. Com. Rep. 102.

These statutes, by reason of the heavy fines provided for all violations thereof, with no opportunity given therein to test their validity as to the provisions complained of in these bills without incurring the risk of these penalties, are unconstitutional on their face.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 148, 52 L. ed. 714, 724, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

Mr. Hal H. Smith argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

An interchange of traffic at a terminal midway on the line haul does not involve the use of a carrier's tracks and terminals.

Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 381, 37 Fed. 630; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 537, 59 Fed. 400.

Neither does an interchange of traffic after it had crossed the limits of a city, but was still several miles from its ultimate destination.

Cardiff Coal Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 460; St. Louis, S. & P. R. Co. v. Peoria & P. Union R. Co. 26 Inters. Com. Rep. 226.

A carrier can be compelled to perform the intra-city switching service.

Iowa v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 425, 33 Fed. 391.

The order is not in conflict with the doctrine of this court in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

(a) That case dealt with a constitutional provision providing for interchange of traffic, but making no provision for compensation.

(b) That case dealt with the delivery of live stock at stock yards,—a service distinguishable from that in question here.

North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 123 U. S. 727, 31 L. ed. 287, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Covington Stock-Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. ed. 73, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 175 Ind. 630, 95 N. E. 364.

The order is not void as imposing "intra-city switching" upon the appellant railroads. The appellants as railroads are incorporated to do switching and perform a terminal service.

Bridwell v. Gate City Terminal Co. 127 Ga. 520, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, 56 S. E. 624; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Terminal R. Asso. 182 Mo. 284, 81 S. W. 395.

Neither the order complained of nor the statute of Michigan under which the order is made imposes any burdens upon interstate commerce, nor are they void by reason of any conflict with any provisions of the interstate commerce act.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 511, 46 L. ed. 303, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Com. 102 Va. 599, 49 S. E. 911; Iowa v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 425, 33 Fed. 391; Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. ed. 1043, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

The order was intended to facilitate commerce and to compel carriers to perform transportation services for the benefit of the public which, as common carriers, they should perform. The statute and order are therefore in aid of commerce; they tend to promote the safe and prompt delivery of goods. The order should be sustained as an order to compel the performance of a duty by a common carrier, which, in the absence of the statute, it should perform.

Digitized by Google

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Mazursky, 216 U. S. 122, 54 L. ed. 411, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378: Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Crovo, 220 U. S. 364, 55 L. ed. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

Mr. Grant Fellows, Attorney General of Michigan, also filed a brief for appellees:

The requirement that one carrier shall accept for transportation local carload traffic originating at one point in a city, and consigned to another point in the same city, or offered to the delivering carrier at a junction point in said city, does not require the use of the tracks or terminal facilities of one carrier by another. The service thus required of a carrier is essentially a transportation service; it is not a mere switching service, and therefore does not, as such, constitute the use of another carrier's terminal facilities.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 203, 29 L. ed. 158, 161, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Dixon v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 110 Ga. 173, 35 S. E. 369; Akron Gravel & S. Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (June 2, 1911) Ohio R. Com.; Cardiff Coal Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 468; Michigan R. Commission v. Michigan C. R. Co. 168 Mich. 230, 132 N. W. 1068; Enterprise Fuel Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 219.

Complainant is a foreign corporation, and by coming into the state, it has submitted itself to the laws of the state, and has agreed to do the very things required by act No. 300 of the Public Acts of 1909, as amended by act No. 139 of the Public Acts of 1911, and it cannot therefore attack such laws.

Home Ins. Co. v. Davis, 29 Mich. 239; 19 Cyc. 1251: Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 655, 39 L. ed. 297, 300, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610. 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

Even if complainant had not subjected itself to the laws of Michigan requiring interchange of traffic, and could complain of such laws, such laws are valid and do not deprive a railroad company of its property without due process of law, in contravention of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa, 336, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 436, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 584, 31 Am. St. Rep. 477, 48 N. W. 98; Jacobson v. Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. 71 Minn. 532, 40 L.R.A. 389, 70 Am. St. Rep. 358, 74 N. W. 893; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 221, 7 N. W. 795; Michigan R. Commission v. Michigan C. R. Co. 168 Mich. 230, 132 N. W. 1068; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hunt, 171 Ind. 189, 86 N. E. 328; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 175 Ind. 630, 95 N. E. 364; State ex rel. Lamar v. Jacksonville Terminal Co. 41 Fla. 377, 27 So. 225; Inman v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 14 Tex. Civ. App. 39, 37 S. W. 37; Peoria & P. Union R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 109 Ill. 139, 50 Am. Rep. 605; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 296, 45 L. ed. 194, 199, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 263, 46 L. ed. 1156, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Bloomington Coal Co. v. Chicago, etc. R. Co. (May 25, 1909) Ind. R. Com.; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 126, 24 L. ed. 84.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Appeal from a decree of the district court, three judges sitting, denying a motion of appellants for interlocutory [459] injunction against an order of the Michigan Railroad Commission, and the denial of a motion of appellants for the continuance of a restraining order theretofore entered in the case.

The Commission was constituted by the Public Acts of the state, and invested with quite full and detailed powers of regulation of the railroads of the state. Act No. 300 of the Public Acts of Michigan of 1909, as amended by act No. 139, 1911.

Section 7, as originally enacted and as amended, is alone specially relevant to the discussion, and is inserted in the margin, subdivision (d) being the amendment.†

[460] After the amendment took effect, and on July 29, 1912, the Grand Trunk System, which is constituted of a number of railroad lines, published a tariff of charges, to be effective September 1, 1911, which, among other things, set forth the rates for the designated services within the corpo-

†(55) Sec. 7. (a) All railroads subject to the provisions of this act shall afford all reasonable and proper facilities by the establishment of switch connections between one another and the establishment of depots and otherwise for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of passengers and property to and from their several lines and those connecting therewith, and shall transfer and deliver without unreasonable delay or discrimination any freight or cars or passengers destined to any point on its own line or on rate limits of the city of Detroit, and as to team track services, as follows:

Digitized by Google

"In case team track deliveries are required for the unloading of shipments received from other carriers, or when [461] such team tracks are used for the unloading of shipments for delivery to other carriers, $3 per car in excess of the charge made for switching to or from industrial sidings will be assessed."

This tariff also provided a charge of $5 for switching to and from industrial sidings, and a charge of $8 for team track delivery from junction points with other roads within the switching limits of Detroit.

A complaint was made by one John S. Haggerty to the Commission of this difference as discriminatory. Haggerty, it is said in one of the briefs, conducts a brick-making plant, having a siding on one of the railroads in Detroit, and to supply his trade ships carloads of freight over various railroad lines doing business in the city, among which are the lines of the Grand Trunk System.

An answer was filed to the complaint by the Grand Trunk Western Railway Company. After hearing, the Commission held that the difference in rates was discriminatory, and the railway company was ordered to file a tariff removing the discrimination; that is, the discrimination between the charges for industrial switching and for switching between junction points and team tracks; and to publish and make effective "like charges for the movement of a carload shipment received from an industry in the city of Detroit, upon said Grand Trunk Western Railway, consigned for delivery upon a team track or other siding of said road, within the same city, and for a like shipment received by said Grand Trunk Western Railway from a connecting carrier at a junction point within the corporate limits of the city of Detroit, consigned to a team track or other siding upon said road within the same city."

Subsequently to the making of such order the Grand Trunk System published a new tariff, to be effective March 16, 1912, naming a rate of $5 between industrial any connecting line, and shall not discriminate in their rates and charges between such connecting lines: Provided, precedence may be given to live stock and perishable property. Nothing in this act shall be construed as requiring any railroad to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another railroad engaged in like business. Any person or any officer or agent of any corporation or company who shall deliver property for transportation to any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall have the right and privilege of routing such shipments, and of prescribing and directing over what connecting line property so shipped shall be transported, and it shall be the duty of the initial carrier to observe the direction of such person or such officer or agent of any corporation or company, and to cause such freight to be transported over such connecting line as may be directed and required by such shipper.

---

(57) (c) Every corporation owning a railroad in use shall, at reasonable times and for a reasonable compensation, draw over the same the merchandise and cars of any other corporation or individual having connecting tracks; providing such cars are of the proper gauge, are in good running order, and equipped as required by law, and otherwise safe for transportation, and properly loaded; Provided further, if the corporations cannot agree upon the times at which the cars shall be drawn, or the compensation to be paid, the said commission shall, upon petition of either party and notice to the other, after hearing the parties interested, determine the rate of compensation and fix such other periods, having reference to the convenience and interests of the corporation or corporations and the public to be accommodated thereby, and the award of the commission shall be binding upon the respective corporations interested therein until the same shall have been revised.

(57a) (d) Every common carrier operating within this state shall receive and transport at reasonable rates any and all carload traffic offered for transportation under the usual conditions, locally consigned between points in the same city or town, and shall receive and transport at reasonable rates from any junction point or transfer point or intersection with another railroad in such city or town any and all such carload freight destined to team tracks or other sidings on any line operated by the delivering carrier, and shall deliver such car or cars upon such team tracks or sidings in the city or town where such car or cars are received from such connecting line, when required so to do; Provided, that when delivery is requested, which will involve the use of a private siding not owned or controlled by consignee, said consignee shall file with both receiving and delivering carriers written permission, signed by the owner or lessee of such private siding, authorizing the use of same. When the particular delivery desired cannot be accomplished, owing to the congestion of cars upon such siding or team tracks, it shall be the duty of the delivering carrier to notify consignee of such conditions, and it shall be the duty of such consignee, upon receipt of such notice, to advise upon what other siding delivery will be accepted, or whether or not it is desired that such car or cars shall be held awaiting the opportunity for delivery upon the siding originally designated as the destination.

Digitized by Google

tracks, and a like rate between junction points with connecting [462] carriers, within the switching district of Detroit, and industrial tracks within the said limits; $8 between junction points with other railroad companies, within said limits, and team tracks within said limits; and $8 between team tracks on the railway's own lines. The tariff was duly filed with the Commission and with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Haggerty filed a supplementary petition with the Commission, complaining that the new rates were unreasonable and exorbitant, and, on March 15, 1912, the Commission ordered the postponement of the same until April 29th to give the Commission an opportunity for investigation into "the reasonableness of such proposed rate and the matter set forth in the complaint." Thereupon the Grand Trunk System issued a supplement to its tariff, suspending the intrastate rates named in its tariff, and, on March 30th, published a new tariff, canceling all rates between industries having private sidings on the System, and hold or team tracks on that System, and all rates between junction points with other carriers within the corporate limits of Detroit and the team tracks of the System. The effect of this tariff was to withdraw all intrastate and interstate switching movements, except as to the Detroit & Toledo Shore Line, with which the Grand Trunk was under contract for terminal switching.

On April 10th the Commission suspended this supplemental tariff in order to give it opportunity to investigate, and two days afterward the bill in this case was filed. On April 27th an amended bill was filed, and, on the same day, the Detroit, Grand Haven, & Milwaukee Railway Company filed its bill.

We may observe that the order of the Commission of April 10th is the only one in controversy. The other orders of February 6th and March 15th, 1912, were directed against the Grand Trunk Western Railway, and when it came to the knowledge of the Commission that [463] that road did not enter the city, the orders were canceled.

The bills prayed that the acts referred to and the order of the Commission be declared null and void as to complainants, that injunctions interlocutory and perpetual be granted restraining appellees from executing the order, and from taking any steps or proceedings to enforce any of the penalties or remedies of the statute.

Answers were filed to the bills, and supporting and attacking affidavits. The district court, upon hearing, denied an injunction and vacated the restraining order, but suspended the formal entry of its orders. Subsequently the cases were consolidated for the purposes of an appeal, and an appeal allowed. The bond was fixed at $100,000, and the restraining orders continued in force pending the appeal.

The two suits may be treated as one, the material points being identical, except as to the territory through which the roads run and the diversity of citizenship which exists only in the first suit filed. The foundation of both suits is the same, that the order of the Commission and the acts of the state under which it was made, in so far as the order and the acts require of complainants or their property any of the services above set forth or so threatened to be required, constitute the taking of their property without due process of law, in contravention of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; and is also a violation of the commerce clause of that instrument. The specification under the latter is "that Congress has taken over the whole subject-matter of terminals, team tracks, switching tracks, sidings, etc., of carriers engaged in interstate commerce, and has enacted that such carriers shall not be required to give the use of such terminal facilities to other carriers engaged in like business."

It is further objected against said order that the companies [464] were not incorporated for the purpose of local or intrastate switching or drayage business, but for the purpose of interstate and intrastate commerce; and, further, the penalties prescribed by the acts under which the Commission purported to have acted are so drastic that a resort to court to test the validity thereof is at the risk of imprisonment in the jails of the various counties where the lines of the companies run, and, therefore, the companies are denied the equal protection of the laws, and their property is taken without due process of law.

The question in the case is whether, under the statutes of the state of Michigan, appellants can be compelled to use the tracks it owns and operates in the city of Detroit for the interchange of intrastate traffic; or, stating the question more specifically, whether the companies shall receive cars from another carrier at a junction point or physical connection with such carrier within the corporate limits of Detroit for transportation to the team tracks of the companies; and whether the companies shall allow the use of their team tracks for cars to be hauled from their team tracks to a junction point or physical connection with another carrier within such limits, and be required to haul such cars in either of the above-named movements or between industrial sidings.

Digitized by Google

It is contended that the order is an interference with interstate commerce. The contention is premature, if not without foundation. Section 7, before its amendment, required all railroads subject to it to establish switching connections between one another, and to establish depots, and otherwise, for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of property and passengers to and from their several lines and those connecting therewith, and also for the transfer and delivery of cars without unreasonable delay or discrimination to any point on their own lines or on any connecting line, and forbidding discrimination [465] in rates and charges. And the respective companies were required to draw over their roads the merchandise and cars of any other corporation or individual having connecting tracks when the cars are of proper gauge, equipment, and properly loaded. Power was given to the Commission, if the compensation could not be agreed on by the roads, to fix such compensation. In other words, the duty of investigation was imposed on the Commission, and the duty to render such judgment as was suitable to the situation, and to award compensation to the carriers for any service required of them.

We have seen from the statement of facts that the first concern of the Grand Trunk was the right to charge what it pleased or discriminate between the services. Inconvenience to its interstate business seems to be an afterthought. Besides, the fact of inconvenience is disputed. It is charged, it is true, in an affidavit filed by appellants; but there was a counter affidavit, and it was averred that the interchange of traffic required by the legislature of the state did not impede interstate business, but, on the contrary, facilitated it and intrastate commerce, and relieved, not caused, congestion on the tracks of the various railroads in the city. And, as we have seen, the order of the Commission was suspensory only of the tariff of the appellants, not a final determination against it, or of the conditions which might or might not justify it. It is too late in the day to question the competency of a state to create a commission and to give it the power of regulating railroads, and necessarily of investigating the conditions upon which regulation may be directed. If a judicial interference is sought with the exercise of such power, it must be clearly shown to have been transcended, not left as a conclusion from the balancing of conflicting affidavits, or even, it may be, as held by the district court, on ex parte affidavits. Courts are reluctant to interfere with the laws of a state or with the tribunals constituted [466] to enforce them. Doubts will not be resolved against the law, nor the decision of its tribunals prevented or anticipated unless the necessity for either be demonstrated. Upon these principles the district court acted, and rightly acted.

We will not dwell on the contention of appellants that Congress has taken over the whole subject of terminals, team tracks, switching tracks, sidings, etc. We need make no other comment than that it cannot be asserted as a matter of law that Congress has done so; and where the accommodation between intrastate and interstate commerce shall be made, we are not called upon to say on this record.

Before proceeding to the more important contention of appellants, that is, movement between junction points and other points, it is well to observe that a distinction is alleged to exist between team tracks and industrial sidings or tracks. The allegation (which is neither admitted nor denied in the answer) is that the lands upon which the latter are located are held, owned, or were acquired for the purpose of accommodating the tracks without expense to appellants, either in the acquisition or maintenance of the lands or tracks. Appellants, it is urged further, are not responsible for cars placed on such tracks, nor are appellants required to police them. Team tracks are laid upon the ground acquired by appellants and were constructed and are maintained by them. The latter, therefore, are distinctly accessories or facilities in the receipt and delivery of freight in transportation, both within and to and from points outside of the city. The industrial sidings have, it may be said, more special character. But upon this distinction no point is made in the argument, and the district court left it untouched in its decision, no doubt because in that court, as here, no emphasis was put upon the distinction. In other words, because it was considered that it falls under the principles [467] which related to the team tracks; and we may so regard it.

The proposition of appellants is, as said by the district court, that such service and team track service "are not in a proper sense transportation, but are essentially distinguishable therefrom;" or, to put it another way,—and one which expresses more specially the contention of appellants, —they are mere conveniences at the destination or initial point of the transportation, and hence are terminal facilities merely, and their use is not required to be given to other railroads. The district court did not regard them in the latter character. After stating the conditions which exist in Detroit and its extent, the court said of them: "Such tracks are necessary to prevent the congestion which would result from requiring all carload freight, both in and out, to be delivered at the freight depots of the respective roads, and in a very proper sense are shipping stations." The court concluded that the services were transportation, and that the statute of the state validly empowered the Commission "to require local transportation by a railroad between its own shipping stations within a city, whether such plurality of shipping stations has been voluntarily established by the railroad, as here, or has been required by the Commission, under its lawful powers; and provided such transportation is for such substantial distance and of such a character as reasonably to require a railroad haul, as distinguished from other means of carriage." The court further said: "It is also clear that a statute validly may, and the statutes we are considering do, authorize the employment of such depots, side tracks, and team tracks of a railroad for transporting carload freight to or from the junction of such road with another road as a substantial part of a continuous transportation routing, where such junction is outside the city limits." [198 Fed. 1016, 1017.] And it was remarked that the fact that the freight movement begins and ends within [468] the limits of a city does not take from it its character "of an actual transportation between two termini," the other conditions obtaining. We concur in the conclusion of the court.

Digitized by Google

The extent of Detroit is about 22 miles, and its population about 500,000. The effect of the order is simply that the companies shall accept freight at the designated points for shipment to the other designated points. This, except in an extreme sense, is not a use of the tracks and terminals; or, rather, it is only a proper use,—the use for which the roads were constituted to afford. An area of 22 miles is attempted by appellants to be localized and made a destination point. A city may, in a sense, be such a terminal unit, but considering the extent of Detroit, it is competent, we think, for the state, under the conditions which this record presents, to consider points within it the beginning and destination of traffic. And to call the service necessary to such intrastate movement of freight a taking of terminals is misleading, and puts out of view the full signification of the question which the record presents, which is, Is there a distinct and sufficient movement between places which the companies can be required to perform, or which, to put it another way, constitutes transportation, and therefore such as the companies were created to perform? That cars may be delivered or received is but an incident. The statute, therefore, is a regulation of the business of appellants, not an appropriation of their terminal facilities for the use and benefit of other roads. It is therefore justified by the doctrine of Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115. See also Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900. In the Jacobson Case an order of the Railroad Commission of the state of Minnesota was considered which required two railroads of the state to make track connections. The statute of the state provided that all common carriers subject to its provisions [469] should provide at all points of connection, crossing, or intersection at grade, where it was necessary for interstate commerce, ample facilities for transferring cars used in the regular business of their respective lines of road from other lines or tracks to those of any other carrier whose lines or tracks might connect with, cross, or intersect their own, and should provide facilities for the interchange of cars, and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of passengers, property, and cars to and from their several lines and those of other carriers connecting therewith, without discrimination in rates and charges. And it was provided that one carrier should not be required to furnish its tracks, equipment, or terminal facilities to another without reasonable compensation, the cost of connections to be proportionately divided between the carriers; and in case of disagreement, it was to be settled by the Commission. The roads were required to establish reasonable joint through rates at the demand of any person or of the Commission. And it was provided that carload lots should be transferred without unloading the cars unless it be done without cost to the shipper or receiver, and without unreasonable delay.

Under this statute track connections were required to be made by the Wisconsin &c. R. R. Co., with an intersecting road. In its answer before the State Railroad Commission it alleged that to construct a connecting track would require it to go outside of its right of way and to condemn land for that purpose. In addition it urged that to compel such connection would violate the commerce clause of the Constitution and the 14th Amendment. The Commission directed the connection to be made, and its order was affirmed by the local state court to which an appeal was taken, as provided by the statute. This court affirmed the order, deciding that it was a proper exercise of the power of regulation of the business of the companies. The reasoning to sustain this [470] conclusion need not be reproduced. It rested upon the ultimate proposition that railroad companies "are organized for the public interests and to subserve primarily the public good and convenience." And deciding this to be the purpose of the creation of the roads, and that government had power to secure it, it was held that where a provision for regulation is reasonable and appropriate, when considered with regard to the interests both of the company and of the public, the legislation is valid, and will furnish ample authority for the courts to enforce it, even though eminent domain must be exercised or cost incurred. This principle, illustrated by the facts of the case, is apposite to the regulation under review. If the establishment of track connections by intersecting roads, with the necessary accessories of sidings and switches, be required, and acceptance and delivery of loaded cars as a convenience of transportation, surely team tracks and sidings in Detroit and the delivery and acceptance of loaded cars are as much so.

Digitized by Google

This view is not opposed by Louisville & M. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co., 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246. There a provision of the Constitution of the state of Kentucky which required a carrier to deliver its cars to a connecting carrier was held invalid because it did not provide adequate protection for their return, or compensation for their use. It was hence held that it amounted to a taking of property without due process of law. But the court was careful to say that "in view of the well-known and necessary practice of connecting roads, we are far from saying that a valid law could not be passed to prevent the cost and loss of time entailed by needless transshipment or breaking bulk, in case of an unreasonable refusal by a carrier to interchange cars with another for through traffic." The point of the decision was that compensation should be provided, and by the law. As it is expressed in the opinion: "The law itself must save the parties' rights, and not leave them [471] to the discretion of the courts." This as a condition was explained, for it was said: "We do not mean, however, that the silence of the [state] Constitution might not be remedied by an act of legislature or a regulation by a duly authorized subordinate body if such legislation should be held consistent with the state Constitution by the state court." These conditions exist in the case at bar.

There is another part of the case which is more applicable to the contentions of the parties hereto, and determine, it is urged, against the statute under consideration and the order of the Commission. The judgment reviewed required the railroad company to receive at its connection with the Southern Railway Company, and to switch, transport, and deliver, all live stock consigned from the Central Stock Yards (the stock depot of the Southern Railway) to anyone at the Bourbon Stock Yards (the stock depot of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad). This part of the judgment was based also upon the Constitution of the state. We said: "If the principle is sound, every road into Louisville, by making a physical connection with the Louisville & Nashville, can get the use of its costly terminals and make it do the switching necessary to that end, upon simply paying for the service of carriage. The duty of a carrier to accept goods tendered at its station does not extend to the acceptance of cars offered to it at an arbitrary point near its terminus by a competing road for the purpose of reaching and using its terminal station. To require such an acceptance from a railroad is to take its property in a very effective sense, and cannot be justified, unless the railroad holds that property subject to greater liabilities than those incident to its calling alone."

It will be observed that the beginning of traffic was at the Central Stock Yards, the stock yards of the Southern, and was to be hauled by that road to its connection with the Louisville & Nashville, and by the latter from that [472] point to the Bourbon Stock Yards, the stock depot of the latter railroad. The yards were the terminals of the respective roads for live stock delivery, and the case turned upon the point that the roads were competitive, and that the point of delivery was an arbitrary one, and that thereby the terminal station of one company was required to be shared with the other company.

In the case at bar a shipper is contesting for the right, as a part of transportation. The order of the Commission was a recognition of the right, and legally so. Considering the theater of the movements, the facilities for them are no more terminal or switching facilities than the depots, side tracks, and main lines are terminal facilities in a less densely populated district. A precise distinction between facilities can neither be expressed nor enforced. Transportation is the business of railroads, and when that business may be regulated and to what extent regulated may depend upon circumstances. No inflexible principle of decision can be laid down. This was recognized in Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115. There the court was careful not to say that under no circumstances could an order requiring track connections between intersecting roads be a violation of constitutional rights. "It would depend," it was said, "upon the facts surrounding the cases in regard to which the judgment was given. . . . And in many cases questions of degree are the controlling ones by which to determine the validity, or the reverse, of legislative action." Indeed, no case could better illustrate the value of the principle than does this case, where the exceptional situation of Detroit as shown by the record, the relation of the tracks in controversy to that situation, their length and their functions, as respects the commerce of Detroit, which, in the nature of things, they perform, not merely as instruments of terminal service and delivery, but of railway transportation in the completest sense, are essential and controlling factors in the determination of [473] the question presented. To which controlling conditions there must, of course, be added the fact that the railroad itself for a long period of time had recognized the situation, and had applied the tracks to uses of transportation in the proper sense as distinguished from mere terminal service,—a use which was only abandoned or sought to be abandoned when authority was exerted to prevent unreasonable and to secure reasonable charges for the services.

Digitized by Google

It is contended by appellants that the statute is void upon its face because the severity of the penalties preclude an appeal to the courts against its provisions except at such risks and costs that they should not be compelled to incur, and Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764, is adduced. But the provision for penalties is in a section by itself, and when their enforcement is attempted, their constitutionality can then be determined. Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Garrett, 231 U. S. 298, ante, 229, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

As we have determined that the tracks or terminal facilities of appellants are not taken by the order of the Commission, we need not consider a subdivision of § 7 which provides that nothing in the act shall be construed as requiring any railroad to give the use of its tracks or terminal facilities to another railroad engaged in like business.

The contention of appellants that they were not incorporated for the purpose of intra-city transportation is untenable. They were incorporated for the purpose of transportation, and geographical limitations under the circumstances which this record exhibits cannot prevail against the power of the state to regulate.

Decree affirmed.

---

[474] FRANK F. GRAHAM and the Title Guaranty & Surety Company, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 474–481.)

Bonds — of public contractor.

1. Compliance with the formal requirements as to the mode of annulling a contract for a public work in case the contractor fails to prosecute the work diligently in the judgment of a designated official is not a prerequisite to the maintenance of an action upon the contractor's bond, where he has refused to proceed with the work.

[For other cases, see Bonds, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Principal and surety — discharge of surety — extension — modification.

2. Waiving the original time limit, and calling upon the contractor, through correspondence, for extra work, for which he is paid, does not discharge the surety upon the bond of a contractor for a public work, where the bond in terms contemplated an extension of time as possible, and the contract provided for a waiver of the time limit, and for written modifications.

[For other cases, see Principal and Surety, III. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

United States — contracts — construction.

3. The obligation to furnish the necessary cars rests upon the contractor rather than the government, under a contract by which the former agrees to transport from the quarry, cut, box, and deliver complete, all the granite required for a public work, to be furnished by the government f. o. b. cars at the quarry, even if certain recitals in the preliminary descriptions and conditions can be construed to mean that, as between the quarryman and the government, the latter is bound to furnish the cars, where other recitals indicate that bidders were invited to step into the government's shoes and assume a like obligation to it.

[For other cases, see United States, VI. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — instructions — action on bond of public contractor.

4. The defendant in a suit on the bond of a public contractor for a breach of his contract to transport, cut, box, and deliver the granite needed for a public work, to be furnished by the government f. o. b. cars at the quarry, has no ground for valid complaint of an instruction to find in his favor if the jury shall determine that, on a fair average, the rough stone furnished did not comply with the stipulation that it should be furnished in "net dimension blocks," as they find the meaning and intention of that stipulation was understood by the parties to the contract, there being conflicting evidence as to the meaning of this phrase.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Trial, VII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — misleading instructions.

5. The possibility that a reference to the period as to which the court understood there was special complaint, when instructing the jury to find for the defendant in a suit on the bond of a public contractor if they should find that the stone furnished to the contractor by the government did not comply with the stipulation that it should be furnished in net dimension blocks, as they find the meaning and intention of that stipulation was understood by the parties to the contract, might be understood by the jury as importing a limitation of time, is not ground for reversal, where the matter was not called to the attention of the trial court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 4, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — submitting case to jury — comment of court on evidence.

6. A Federal trial judge may direct the jury's attention to a portion of the testimony of a party if he leaves the decision of the case to them.

[For other cases, See Trial, VI. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — prejudicial error — argument or remarks of counsel.

7. Counsel's action when putting in evidence a letter from the surety company in an action on the bond of a public contractor, in reading the letter head containing the words, "Capital and surplus over $1,000,000," and in stating in argument that "there is no room for sympathy for the poor defendant in this case," does not call for reversal of the judgment where the judge charged the jury that it was not a case for sentimental consideration of any kind.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 76.]

Argued November 13 and 14, 1913. Decided December 8, 1913.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Maryland in favor of plaintiff in an action on the bond of a public contractor. Affirmed.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 465, 188 Fed. 651.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles F. Harley and George R. Gaither argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John B. A. Wheltle and Burdette B. Webster, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The successive prayers of the plaintiff, which the jury could not possibly understand, operated virtually as an instruction to find for the plaintiff, and thus rid themselves of difficulties as to pleas which they never understood, and, indeed, never saw.

Hitchins Bros. v. Frostburg, 68 Md. 117, 6 Am. St. Rep. 422, 11 Atl. 826; Hughes, Instructions, § 53; Sackett, Instructions, § 214; 11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 154; Adams v. Somerset County, 106 Md. 201, 66 Atl. 695.

The million dollar argument was prejudicial error.

Southern R. Co. v. Bryant, 105 Ga. 316, 31 S. E. 182; 4 Enc. Ev. 27; Sun Life Assur. Co. v. Bailey, 101 Va. 443, 44 S. E. 695; Bennett v. Beam, 42 Mich. 350, 36 Am. Rep. 442, 4 N. W. 8; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Seitz, 111 Ill. App. 243; Johnson v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 135 Mich. 360, 97 N. W. 760; Hillman v. Detroit United R. Co. 137 Mich. 184, 100 N. W. 399; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Boyd, 67 Md. 42, 1 Am. St. Rep. 362, 10 Atl. 315; 5 Enc. L. & P. 346, 365; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Musa, 80 Ill. App. 223; White v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 145 Iowa, 408, 124 N. W. 309; Southwestern Teleg. & Teleph. Co. v. Taylor, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 118 S. W. 188; Ft. Worth Belt R. Co. v. Johnson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 125 S. W. 387; United States Cement Co. v. Cooper, 172 Ind. 599, 88 N. E. 69; Lane v. State, 85 Ala. 11, 4 So. 730; Sullivan v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 119 Iowa, 464, 93 N. W. 367; Bjoraker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 103 Minn. 400, 115 N. W. 202; Dallas Consol. Electric Street R. Co. v. Black, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 415, 89 S. W. 1087; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Crow, 32 Ky. L. Rep. 1145, 107 S. W. 807; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Proctor, 122 Ky. 92, 89 S. W. 714; Union P. R. Co. v. Field, 69 C. C. A. 536, 137 Fed. 14; Saxton v. Pittsburg R. Co. 219 Pa. 492, 68 Atl. 1022; Chicago City R. Co. v. Henry, 62 Ill. 145.

There was prejudicial error in the court's remarks.

Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545, 30 L. ed. 257, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, 10 Am. Neg. Cas. 574; Freiberg v. Beach Hotel & S. Improv. Co. 63 Tex. 455; Deshler v. Beers, 32 Ill. 368, 83 Am. Dec. 274; Cronkhite v. Dickerson, 51 Mich. 177, 16 N. W. 371; Williams v. West Bay City, 119 Mich. 395, 78 N. W. 328; Hudson v. Hudson, 90 Ga. 581, 16 S. E. 349; West v. Black, 65 Ga. 647; Knox v. Fuller, 23 Wash. 34, 62 Pac. 135; Kane v. Kinnare, 69 Ill. App. 81.

The whole question of damage is disposed of in a manner absolutely in conflict with the elementary principles of Hadley v. Baxendale, 6 Eng. Rul. Cas. 617.

Digitized by Google

It can hardly be said that the jury were "left free to consider the evidence for themselves."

Lincoln v. Power, 151 U. S. 442, 38 L. ed. 227, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387.

The instructions had a tendency to withdraw from the consideration of the jury a considerable amount of important and pertinent testimony.

Jewell v. Jewell, 1 How. 219, 11 L. ed. 108; M'Lanahan v. Universal Ins. Co. 1 Pet. 170, 7 L. ed. 98; Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426, 23 L. ed. 286.

Technical language constitutes a well-known exception to the rule that the interpretation of contracts is for the courts.

17 Cyc. 685.

It is true inter partes, when the language of a contract is uncertain, the acts and conduct of the parties may be considered to discover the meaning of the language used, but the parties cannot testify as to their understanding or interpretation of the contract.

Diamond v. Shriver, 114 Md. 643, 80 Atl. 217; American Syrup & Preserving Co. v. Roberts, 112 Md. 23, 76 Atl. 589; Dexter Sulphite Pulp & Paper Co. v. McDonald, 103 Md. 381, 63 Atl. 958; Mitchell v. Wedderburn, 68 Md. 139, 11 Atl. 760.

But even a party is not bound by "any construction which he may have put upon the instrument."

Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Harr. & G. 11, 18 Am. Dec. 250; Hutchins v. Dixon, 11 Md. 40; Varnum v. Thurston, 17 Md. 500; Stockham v. Stockham, 32 Md. 209.

The jury could not distinctly understand that what is said as to the facts is only advisory, and in no wise intended to fetter the exercise of their own independent judgment.

Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426, 23 L. ed. 286.

It cannot be said that therein "all matters of fact are ultimately submitted to the determination of the jury.

Lovejoy v. United States, 128 U. S. 171, 32 L. ed. 389, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

The thing is to find out the real intention of the parties as shown by their contract.

Hurst v. Altamont Mfg. Co. 73 Kan. 422, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 928, 117 Am. St. Rep. 525, 85 Pac. 551, 9 Ann. Cas. 549; R. J. Meuz Lumber Co. v. E. J. McNeeley & Co. 58 Wash. 223, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1007, 108 Pac. 621.

When the work covenanted to be done was not finished and completed within the time fixed, and Graham was permitted to go on with the work, the sealed instrument was at an end.

Jewell v. Schroeppel, 4 Cow. 564; Burn v. Miller, 4 Taunt. 745, 14 Revised Rep. 655; Lucas v. Godwin, 3 Bing. N. C. 737, 4 Scott, 502, 3 Hodges, 114, 6 L. J. C. P. N. S. 205; Orem v. Keelty, 85 Md. 344, 36 Atl. 1030; Kendrick & Roberts v. Warren Bros. Co. 110 Md. 74, 72 Atl. 461.

Such changes and alterations were made in the contract without the surety company's consent as entitled it to release from its surety obligation.

Miller v. Stewart, 9 Wheat. 680, 6 L. ed. 189; Smith v. Montgomery, 3 Tex. 199; 2 Brandt Suretyship, §§ 427, 748; Schaeffer v. Bond, 72 Md. 507, 20 Atl. 176; Stearns, Suretyship, §§ 72, 79; Erfurth v. Stevenson, 71 Ark. 199, 72 S. W. 49; Judah v. Zimmerman, 22 Ind. 388; United States use of Schumacker v. McIntyre, 111 Fed. 590; Orleans & J. R. Co. v. International Constr. Co. 113 La. 409, 37 So. 10; Reese v. United States, 9 Wall. 13, 19 L. ed. 541; United States v. Freel, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L. ed. 1177, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875; Mundy v. Stevens, 9 C. C. A. 366, 17 U. S. App. 442, 61 Fed. 77; Zeigler v. Hallahan, 66 C. C. A. 1, 131 Fed. 205; Fidelity & D. Co. v. United States, 70 C. C. A. 204, 137 Fed. 866; Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 528, 35 L. ed. 843, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 424, 48 L. ed. 243, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 202, 50 L. ed. 440, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Plumley v. United States, 226 U. S. 545, 57 L. ed. 342, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139.

The question of waiver is one for the jury, under the instruction of the court.

Spring Garden Mut. Ins. Co. v. Evans, 9 Md. 1, 66 Am. Dec. 308; Caledonian Ins. Co. v. Traub, 80 Md. 224, 30 Atl. 904; Pentz v. Pennsylvania F. Ins. Co. 92 Md. 444, 48 Atl. 139; Walter v. Victor G. Bloede Co. 94 Md. 90, 50 Atl. 433; Sumwalt Ice & Coal Co. v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 112 Md. 444, 77 Atl. 56.

When a matter is left by the contracting parties to the judgment, sanction, or approval of a designated party, such judgment, sanction, or approval is conclusive only in the absence of bad faith.

Sweeney v. United States, 109 U. S. 618, 27 L. ed. 1053, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185, 34 L. ed. 917, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Kihlberg v. United States, 97 U. S. 398, 24 L. ed. 1106; United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 44 L. ed. 284, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228; Filston Farm Co. v. Henderson, 106 Md. 367, 67 Atl. 228; Chism v. Schipper, 51 N. J. L. 1, 2 L.R.A. 544, 14 Am. St. Rep. 668, 16 Atl. 316; Church v. Shanklin, 95 Cal. 626,

Digitized by Google

17 L.R.A. 210, 30 Pac. 789; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Brydon, 65 Md. 225, 57 Am. Rep. 318, 3 Atl. 306, 9 Atl. 126; Doll v. Noble, 116 N. Y. 230, 5 L.R.A. 554, 15 Am. St. Rep. 398, 22 N. E. 406.

This question of good faith vel non should have gone to the jury.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Brydon, 65 Md. 198, 57 Am. Rep. 318, 3 Atl. 306, 9 Atl. 126; Sonnentheil v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. 172 U. S. 401, 43 L. ed. 492, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Warner v. Norton, 20 How. 448, 15 L. ed. 950; Thompson v. Sioux Falls Nat. Bank, 150 U. S. 231, 37 L. ed. 1063, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 39 L. ed. 289, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; People's Sav. Bank v. Bates, 120 U. S. 556, 30 L. ed. 754, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Rowe v. United States, 164 U. S. 546, 41 L. ed. 547, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 206; Bush v. Jones, 6 L.R.A. (N.S.) 774, note.

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The obligation of the United States was merely to furnish the granite "without unnecessary delay, and without charge, free on board cars at the quarry at Bethel, Vermont." These words of the contract, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, imposed upon Graham alone the duty of furnishing the cars.

Samuel M. Lawder & Sons Co. v. Albert Mackie Grocery Co. 97 Md. 1, 62 L.R.A. 797, 54 Atl. 634; Hocking v. Hamilton, 158 Pa. 107, 27 Atl. 836; Baltimore & L. R. Co. v. Steel Rail Supply Co. 59 C. C. A. 419, 123 Fed. 655; Evanston Elevator & Coal Co. v. Castner, 133 Fed. 409; Sutherland v. Allhusen, 14 L. T. N. S. 666.

While the trial judge very properly called the jury's attention to certain specific evidence which seemed to him to have an important bearing on the question, he nevertheless stated this evidence with entire accuracy, and left the whole question to the jury. In this respect the charge is not open to objection.

Rucker v. Wheeler, 127 U. S. 85, 93, 32 L. ed. 102, 105, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1142.

When Graham wholly abandoned the contract, as it is clear he did, the United States immediately acquired the right to treat the breach as absolute, and to hold him without more saying for any damages accruing to it, the measure of such damages being the increased cost of completing the work.

United States v. O'Brien, 220 U. S. 321, 328, 55 L. ed. 481, 484, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; United States v. McMullen, 222 U. S. 460, 471, 56 L. ed. 269, 273, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

The defense of extension of time for completion is not available to a surety who assented to a stipulation in the contract waiving the time limit.

United States v. McMullen, supra.

The claim for extra work, which was paid, was based on alterations agreed upon in the manner provided by the contract, and inasmuch as the surety assented to such alterations, he cannot object.

United States v. McMullen, supra.

The rule strictissimi juris should not be applied to these professional bonding companies to release them from their just obligations where slight changes have been made in the contract, not injuring them in the least.

United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Golden Pressed & Fire Brick Co. (United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. United States) 191 U. S. 416, 426, 48 L. ed. 242, 246, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 197, 50 L. ed. 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Atlantic Trust & D. Co. v. Laurinburg, 90 C. C. A. 274, 163 Fed. 696.

The giving of special charges by a Federal judge is unnecessary. The matter may be presented in his own way, provided the law is correctly stated.

Continental Improv. Co. v. Stead, 95 U. S. 161, 166, 24 L. ed. 403, 406.

The cardinal purpose of the prosecution of the writ of error is delay; the judgment below should therefore be affirmed, with damages at 10 per cent, in accordance with the provisions of rule 23, ¶ 2, of this court.

Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co. 226 U. S. 102, 106, 57 L. ed. 140, 143, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action upon a bond against a contractor and his surety, for breach of a contract made under the act of March 3, 1903, chap. 1007, 32 Stat. at L. 1102, with Green, superintendent of construction, acting under the direction of the regents of the Smithsonian Institution, for the United States, party of the first part, which the bond was given to secure. The contractor, Graham, agreed to "transport from the quarry, cut, box, and deliver complete, all of the Bethel granite, to be furnished by the party of the first part free on board cars at the quarry at Bethel, Vermont, required for" a part of the National Museum in Washington, described in the specifications, "and to do all other things needful to carry out all and singular the several requirements of the said specifications, the drawings therein referred to, and the instructions and general conditions," for a gross sum. In case of failure to prosecute the work diligently in the judgment of the superintendent of construction, Green or his successor was given power, "with the sanction of the regents of the Smithsonian Institution, to annul" the contract by notice in [476] writing, whereupon payments under the contract were to cease, etc., and the United States was given the right to recover from Graham any excess over the contract price expended for completing the contract, which it was authorized to proceed to do. There were provisions for an extension of time by the superintendent, for written modifications of the contract as to the character or quantity of the labor or material, and for payment of 90 per cent as the progress of the work might warrant. The bond was for the performance of the contract according to its true intent and during any period of extension granted by the United States.

Digitized by Google

On March 7, 1908, after the time fixed for the completion of the work, Graham discharged his workmen and stopped work, the contract not having been performed. On March 11, the superintendent wrote to him, saying that he had heard that Graham apparently had stopped work indefinitely, and asking for immediate correct information. On the 14th Graham's lawyer answered that Graham had stopped work; that the step was necessary for his financial welfare in view of the damage that he had sustained through the government's conduct, and that "if this matter can be in any way amicably adjusted," he would be glad to do anything fair. On the 16th the superintendent replied that if he received no immediate assurance that the work was to be resumed promptly, he must proceed to annul the contract; and on the 18th notified Graham that the contract was annulled with the sanction of the regents of the Smithsonian Institution. To this Graham's lawyer rejoined that they could not concede any default, that the government alone was to blame, but that they were willing to do what was fair, and to let the government use their plant if the damage sustained could be adjusted. The superintendent had written on the 18th to the secretary of the board of regents, recommending the so-called annulment and notice [477] to the contractor and his surety, and had received his approval, expressed to be on behalf of the board of regents. Afterwards the United States completed the work. There was a long trial which resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff for the penalty of the bond, $50,000, subject to exceptions. The judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 110 C. C. A. 465, 188 Fed. 651.

Before considering the excuses alleged by Graham, we will dispose of a preliminary objection that the suit cannot be maintained because the secretary of the board of regents did not consult the board before undertaking to sanction the "annulment" of the contract. It is unnecessary to pass upon the argument that, under the statute, the board could have no voice, and that by custom and practice, as well as by necessity, in view of the constitution of the board, the secretary represented it in matters like this. The provision as to annulment, construed in United States v. McMullen, 222 U. S. 460, 471, 56 L. ed. 269, 273, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128, and cases cited, referred to cases where there was a failure to prosecute the work diligently in the judgment of the secretary, and allowed a revision of that judgment in cases of that sort, before the United States should decline to proceed further and complete the work by other means. But when Graham refused to go on, there was no question of judgment to be revised, but a plain breach of the contract unless the refusal was justified, and a right of action accrued without the need of a ceremony that would have had no meaning or use. The letters from March 7 to March 18, 1908, appear to us to show a clear refusal by Graham to do any further work. The expressions as to adjustment suggest nothing but a compromise of mutual claims, to be followed by the government's not Graham's, use of Graham's plant.

Another objection not going to the merits of Graham's case is that the surety was discharged by a waiver of the [478] original time limit without its assent, and by Graham's being called on for some extra work, due to a slight enlargement of the diameter of the dome, for which he was paid. The bond in terms contemplated an extension of time as possible, and the contract provided, as we have said, for a waiver of the time limit and for written modifications. The modifications were exhibited in letters, but perhaps it is unnecessary to consider how far a surety whose undertaking extends to modifications of the principal contract is concerned with the form in which they are made. The surety was not discharged. United States v. McMullen, 222 U. S. 460, 468, 469, 56 L. ed. 269, 272, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

The only question of substance is whether Graham's refusal to finish the work was justified or excused by the conduct of the other party. The first and only serious matter of complaint on his part was delay in furnishing him granite. The undisputed testimony is that this delay was due to their being unable to get cars at the quarry to take the stone, and so, under the instructions, the jury must have found; so that the responsibility for it depends upon who was bound to furnish the cars. By the contract the government was to furnish the granite free on board the cars at the quarry, and Graham agreed to transport it from that place. On such an undertaking, as Graham was to do the transporting, and moreover was made responsible for safe delivery on the site of the Museum building, and as the railroad would be his bailee, he naturally would be held to furnish the cars. No different conclusion seems to us to follow from the language of the preliminary description and conditions. These recite that "the necessary Bethel granite stock, in net dimension blocks, is to be furnished to the government by the present contractor, free on board cars at the quarry in Bethel, ready for the contractor for the cutting of the granite, to transport it to his cutting yard for that purpose." They go on: "Bidders for the Bethel granite work [479] will therefore bid on the basis and understanding that the granite in net dimension blocks, one block for each separate pattern, will be furnished to them without unnecessary delay and without charge, free on board cars at the quarry at Bethel, Vermont." The first passage does not mean that because the quarryman was to furnish the granite free on board and ready for transportation, the quarryman was to furnish the cars. It may mean that, as between him and the government, the government was bound to do it; but, by the same reasoning, the second passage means that bidders were invited to step into the government's shoes and assume a like obligation towards it, as by the agreement, when made, Graham did. It follows that he cannot charge the United States with delay due to lack of cars. Furthermore, in a letter of February 10, 1908, when the delay had ceased, he wrote that the work was nearly finished, and that he intended to devote his whole yard to it until it should be about completed. This is wholly irreconcilable with the defense that a month later he abandoned the work because of the delay.

Digitized by Google

The next excuse put forward is that the granite was not furnished in "net dimension blocks." There was contradictory evidence as to the meaning of the phrase, Graham contending, in the face of his contract to cut, that it meant perfect blocks. But he admitted that he did not have that understanding when he contracted, and although on February 14, 1907, he complained of the size, in the letter just mentioned of February 10, 1908, he wrote that the work "has had to be cut and shipped, but it is now nearly finished, and I intend [redacted] my entire yard to Museum work, until I see the work about completed." The judge left it to the jury "whether, on a fair average, the rough stone furnished complied with the stipulation that it should be furnished in net dimension blocks, as you find the meaning and intention of that stipulation was understood by the parties to the contract." [480] He added: "If you find that in the latter part of February and the early part of March the stone, in point of its dimensions and roughness, did not comply with the contract, . . . Graham could not be held to the further performance of his contract; and your verdict should be for the defendants." The reference to February and March did not import a limitation of time, but simply a reference to the period as to which the judge understood that there was special complaint. No attention was called to the matter as it should have been if any misunderstanding was feared. The charge on the point was adequate and fair. It is objected that the judge called the jury's attention to Graham's testimony concerning his expectation when he contracted. The judge had a right to do more than that if he left the decision to them. Universal distrust creates universal incompetence. In the courts of the United States the judge and jury are assumed to be competent to play the parts that always have belonged to them in the country in which the modern jury trial had its birth. Rucker v. Wheeler, 127 U. S. 85, 32 L. ed. 102, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1142.

The ground on which Graham testified that he stopped work was that he could not get any money; but there seems to be no evidence that the government failed in its obligations as to payment, and this point is not one of those most pressed. We have examined the places in the record referred to by the defendants, and think it enough to say that we discover no error of which they can complain.

Much emphasis was laid in the argument on what seem to us meticulous objections to every detail in the conduct of the trial. One that was dwelt upon was that, in putting in a letter from the surety, showing notice to it of Graham's default, and the position taken by it, the counsel was allowed to read the letter head, which contained the words "Capital and Surplus over $1,000,000," as well as the letter itself (which last was not objected to), and that in argument the counsel for the government said: "There is no [481] room for sympathy for the poor defendant in this case." The document went in as a whole, properly enough, and the judge charged the jury that it was "not a case for sentimental considerations of any kind," with more in the same direction. It would be absurd to upset a verdict upon a speculation that the jury did not do their duty and follow the instructions of the court. As to various remarks made by the judge in the course of the trial, it is enough to refer to what we have said already as to his power, and that we discover nothing that could have created a prejudice against the defendants, or have been open to objection, even if he had been more strictly tied down by law than he was.

Digitized by Google

We find no error on the question of damages. The judge instructed the jury that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, of course not exceeding the penalty of the bond, the difference between "the reasonable and necessary cost to the plaintiff for transporting, cutting, and delivering the granite mentioned in this case . . . and the amount specified in the contract" to be paid to Graham. There was some cavil at the phrase "granite mentioned in this case" but obviously it meant the granite in controversy. There was evidence warranting a finding, and the measure followed the contract and was correct. United States v. McMullen, 222 U. S. 460, 471, 56 L. ed. 269, 273, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128. A superfluous number of prayers was submitted and exceptions were taken at every step. We deem it enough to say in regard to them all that the instructions to the jury were fair, the rulings on the questions in the case correct, and that nothing appears that would warrant us in ordering the case to be retried.

Judgment affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE took no part in the decision of this case.

---

[482] LUCIANO CHAVEZ et al., Appts.,
v.
ELOISA LUNA DE BERGERE et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 482–491.)

Deed — what constitutes — executed or executory instrument.

1. An executory contract for a conveyance, and not a present transfer with further assurance, was imported by an informal unacknowledged document, signed by both parties, which recites that one of such parties has sold and transferred to the other certain property supposed to be an unconfirmed Mexican grant, and will execute the documents of conveyance as soon as another specified grant shall be confirmed, the vendees to have possession in the interim.

[For other cases, see Deeds, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — relevancy — ejectment.

2. Proof that the heirs of the vendor in an agreement reciting that he had sold and transferred certain lands, and would execute the documents of conveyance when a certain Mexican land grant should be confirmed, have advantageously sold or disposed of certain claims acquired under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 765), §§ 17, 18, as amended by the acts of February 21, 1893 (27 Stat. at. L. 470, chap. 149), and June 27, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 495, chap. 504, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 776), within the limits of such grant after it had been rejected, is not admissible in an ejectment suit brought against those in possession, claiming under the vendees in such grant, either as tending to show that they treated the agreement as executed rather than executory, or upon the theory that, even if executory, they could not recover in the action without first surrendering the advantages obtained through such claims.

Adverse possession — vendor and purchaser — private land claims.

3. The mistaken belief that the surveyor general had power to adjudicate and approve unconfirmed Mexican land grants, entertained by both parties to an executory contract for the sale of land, investing the vendees with possession until such action by that official, prevents such possession from becoming adverse after he recommends the rejection of the grant, and such possession continues to be in virtue of the agreement until a final adverse decision by the proper legal authorities.

[For other cases, see Adverse Possession, I. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Ejectment — claims — adverse possession.

4. A demand for surrender of possession is not a prerequisite to the maintenance of an action in ejectment, brought by the heirs of the vendor in an executory contract for the sale of land, where those claiming under the vendees continued in possession without right, after their right to do so in virtue of the agreement had terminated, and were asserting full title in themselves.

[For other cases, see Ejectment, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Estoppel — vendor and vendee.

5. Those in possession of land as conditional vendees are estopped to call in question their vendor's title when sued by him in ejectment.

[For other cases, see Estoppel, 322, 334a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 5.]

Submitted October 30, 1913. Decided December 8, 1913.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a NOTE.—As to when vendee is estopped to dispute the title of his vendor—see note to Watkins v. Holman, 10 L. ed. U. S. 873.

Digitized by Google

judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Santa Fe County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiffs in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 14 N. M. 352, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 93 Pac. 762.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. B. Renehan submitted the cause for appellants:

The statute of limitations was a complete defense even if the contract was originally executory.

Maxwell Land Grant Co. v. Dawson, 151 U. S. 586, 38 L. ed. 279, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Teall v. Schroder, 158 U. S. 172, 39 L. ed. 938, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 533, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Ewing v. Burnet, 11 Pet. 41, 9 L. ed. 624; Simmons Creek Coal Co. v. Doran, 142 U. S. 417, 35 L. ed. 1062, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Smith v. Gale, 144 U. S. 521, 36 L. ed. 525, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Zeller v. Eckert, 4 How. 296, 11 L. ed. 982; Willison v. Watkins, 3 Pet. 43, 7 L. ed. 596; Jackson ex dem. Bradstreet v. Huntington, 5 Pet. 429, 8 L. ed. 180; McClaskey v. Barr, 42 Fed. 613; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 803, 805; Ellicott v. Pearl, 10 Pet. 412, 9 L. ed. 475.

A presumption of grant and deed arises from lapse of time.

Fletcher v. Fuller, 120 U. S. 534, 30 L. ed. 759, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667; United States v. Chavez, 175 U. S. 520, 44 L. ed. 258, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Van Gunden v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 3 C. C. A. 294, 8 U. S. App. 229, 52 Fed. 856; Fuller v. Fletcher, 44 Fed. 37; United States v. Devereus, 32 C. C. A. 564, 61 U. S. App. 548, 90 Fed. 187; Zeller v. Eckert, 4 How. 297, 11 L. ed. 982; Woodson v. Scott, 1 Dana, 472; Downing v. Ford, 9 Dana, 393; Brock v. Savage, 46 Pa. 83.

The statute of limitations was set in motion September 7, 1881, for then Oter's right of re-entry ripened, if he ever had it.

25 Cyc. 1065–1067; Mahoning County v. Young, 8 C. C. A. 27, 16 U. S. App. 253, 59 Fed. 96; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 502, note 9.

Demand of possession or notice to quit was a prerequisite to suit.

Gregg v. Von Phul, 1 Wall. 282, 17 L. ed. 538; Costigan v. Wood, 5 Cranch, C. C. 507, Fed. Cas. No. 3,265; Jones v. Temple, 87 Va. 210, 24 Am. St. Rep. 649, 12 S. E. 404; Williamson v. Paxton, 18 Gratt. 475; Stackhouse v. Doc, 5 Blackf. 570; Getty v. Peters, 82 Mich. 661, 10 L.R.A. 465, 46 N. W. 1036.

But the tenant may forfeit that right.

Gregg v. Von Phul, 1 Wall. 282, 17 L. ed. 538; Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Niven, 10 Johns. 335; Hotaling v. Hotaling, 47 Barb. 167.

The court should have sustained the motion to dismiss the cause because no notice to quit had been given, and because it was not shown that the exceptions and reservations from the deed by Miguel E. Pino to Manuel Antonio Otero were not the very lands claimed by the defendants or somebody else.

Maxwell Land Grant Co. v. Dawson, 151 U. S. 586, 38 L. ed. 279, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. ed. 190; Taylor v. Taylor, 3 A. K. Marsh. 18.

The plaintiffs are estopped by laches to have or recover the premises.

Kirk v. Hamilton, 102 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 82; Naddo v. Bardon, 2 C. C. A. 335, 4 U. S. App. 642, 51 Fed. 493; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618.

Mr. T. B. Catron submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. R. C. Gortner was on the brief:

The instrument is plainly an executory contract to convey and to make title deeds upon the happening of a certain contingency, and to vest the possession and enjoyment of the fruits and products in the proposed vendee in the interim.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 93; Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 76, 42 L. ed. 667, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Jackson v. Moncrief, 5 Wend. 29; Ogden v. Brown, 33 Pa. 248; Phillips v. Swank, 120 Pa. 84, 6 Am. St. Rep. 691, 13 Atl. 712; Bell v. McDuffie, 71 Ga. 264; Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Niven, 10 Johns. 335; Neave v. Jenkins, 2 Yeates, 107; Sherman v. Dill, 4 Yeates, 295, 2 Am. Dec. 408; Stouffer v. Coleman, 1 Yeates, 393; Stokely v. Trout, 3 Watts, 163; Stewart v. Lang, 37 Pa. 201, 78 Am. Dec. 414; Jackson ex dem. Green v. Clark, 3 Johns. 424; Schenley v. Pittsburgh, 104 Pa. 472.

A possession so taken is not adverse. It is expressly a possession in recognition of, and on behalf of, the owner.

1 Cyc. 1047; Hart v. Bostwick, 14 Fla. 178; Tyler, Ejectment, 875; Brandt ex dem. Walton v. Ogden, 1 Johns. 156; Jackson ex dem. Bonnell v. Sharp, 9 Johns. 163, 6 Am. Dec. 267; Jackson ex dem. Gansevoort v. Parker, 3 Johns. Cas. 124; Gay v. Moffit, 2 Bibb, 507, 5 Am. Dec. 633; McGee v. Morgan, 1 A. K. Marsh. 62; Kirk v. Smith, 9 Wheat. 241, 6 L. ed. 81; Jackson v. Berner, 48 Ill. 203; Floyd v. Mintsey, 7 Rich. L. 181; Williams v. Cash, 27 Ga. 507, 73 Am. Dec. 739; Jackson ex dem. Young v. Camp, 1 Cow. 605; Woods v. Dille, 11 Ohio, 455; McManus v. Matthews, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 55 S. W. 589; Durst v. Skillern, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 45 S. W.

Digitized by Google

840; Greeno v. Munson, 9 Vt. 37, 31 Am. Dec. 605; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 810; Tilghman & West v. Little, 13 Ill. 241; Alderson v. Marshall, 7 Mont. 288, 16 Pac. 576; Jones v. Pelham, 84 Ala. 208, 4 So. 22; Brunson v. Morgan, 84 Ala. 598, 4 So. 589; Estes v. Long, 71 Mo. 605; Parish Bd. of School Directors v. Edrington, 40 La. Ann. 633, 4 So. 574; Avery v. Baum, Wright (Ohio) 576; Thayer v. Society of United Brethren, 20 Pa. 62; Bidwell v. Evans, 156 Pa. 30, 26 Atl. 817; Davis v. Hurst, — Tex. —, 14 S. W. 610; Udell v. Peak, 70 Tex. 547, 7 S. W. 786; Wild v. Serpell, 10 Gratt. 405; Red v. Shepley, 6 Vt. 602; Holley v. Hawley, 39 Vt. 534, 94 Am. Dec. 350; Swann v. Thayer, 36 W. Va. 46, 14 S. E. 423; 1 Cyc. 1045, 1061; Adams v. Fullam, 47 Vt. 558; Pratt v. Canfield, 67 Mo. 50; Lucas v. Brooks, 18 Wall. 436, 21 L. ed. 779; Kirk v. Smith, 9 Wheat. 241, 6 L. ed. 81; Heermans v. Schmaltz, 10 Biss. 323, 7 Fed. 566; Stansbury v. Taggart, 3 McLean, 457, Fed. Cas. No. 13,292; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 799; Graydon v. Hurd, 5 C. C. A. 258, 6 U. S. App. 610, 55 Fed. 724; Clinton Wire Cloth Co. v. Gardner, 99 Ill. 151; Moshier v. Reding, 12 Me. 418; Gwynn v. Jones, 2 Gill & J. 173; Lyebrook v. Hall, 73 Miss. 509, 19 So. 348; Carson v. Broady, 56 Neb. 648, 71 Am. St. Rep. 691, 77 N. W. 80; Den ex dem. Decker v. Adams, 12 N. J. L. 99; People ex rel. Chrome Steel Co. v. Paulding, 22 Hun, 91; Jackson ex dem. Corson v. Cairns, 20 Johns. 301; Huntington v. Mattfield, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 55 S. W. 361; Holman v. Bonner, 63 Miss. 131; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Miller, 115 Mo. 158, 21 S. W. 915.

The tenancy relation applied to the successors of Sena y Baca.

1 Cyc. 1049, 1062; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 811; Bedlow v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. 112 N. Y. 265, 2 L.R.A. 629, 19 N. E. 800; Whiting v. Edmunds, 94 N. Y. 309; Potts v. Coleman, 67 Ala. 221; Russell v. Erwin, 38 Ala. 44; Jackson ex dem. Duncan v. Harder, 4 Johns. 202, 4 Am. Dec. 262; Blackwell v. Ryan, 21 S. C. 112; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Miller, 115 Mo. 158, 21 S. W. 915; Fulkerson v. Brownlee, 69 Mo. 371; Jackson ex dem. Griswold v. Bard, 4 Johns. 230, 4 Am. Dec. 267; Ketchum v. Spurlock, 34 W. Va. 597, 12 S. E. 832; Timmons v. Kidwell, 138 Ill. 13, 27 N. E. 756; Quinn v. Quinn, 27 Wis. 168.

A claim once filed remains sub judice before the surveyor general and Congress, subject to "adjudication and approval" at any time.

United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 427, 44 L. ed. 531, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466.

No notice to quit was necessary in this case.

15 Cyc. 56; Williams v. Cash, 27 Ga. 507, 73 Am. Dec. 739.

[483] Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action in ejectment to recover the possession of 317 acres of land in Santa Fe county, New Mexico. The defenses interposed were the general issue and that the cause of action did not accrue within ten years before the action was begun. A trial to the court without a jury resulted in a judgment for the plaintiffs, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory (14 N. M. 352, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 93 Pac. 762), and the case was then brought here. A statement of the facts, in the nature of a special verdict, and of the rulings and exceptions upon the rejection of certain evidence, was made and certified by the appellate court agreeably to the act of April 7, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 80), § 2.

Briefly stated, the principal facts are as follows: On June 22, 1878, Manuel A. Otero and Jesus M. Sena y Baca entered into an agreement written in Spanish, a translation of which is as follows:

Know all men by these presents: That I, the undersigned, Manuel Antonio Otero, resident of the county of Valencia, in the territory of New Mexico, for consideration, have sold and transferred in favor of Jesus M. Sena y Baca and Agapita Ortiz, his wife, a ranch known as the ranch of Galisteo, which is situated in the county of Santa Fe and territory aforesaid, known as the ranch which was formerly of the deceased Don Miguel E. Pino; and that I will give and execute the documents of conveyance of the said ranch, in favor of Jesus M. Sena y Baca and Agapita Ortiz, as soon as there shall be adjudicated and approved by the surveyor general the grant of Bartolomé Baca of a tract which was ceded to him by the Governor Melgarez in the year 1819, and the which is situate in the county of Valencia in the territory of New Mexico; and furthermore, they will take possession of the aforesaid ranch, and will have and enjoy all the products [484] of the same, until the proper documents may be executed, and in conformity with the above stated; and the said Jesus M. Sena y Baca so agrees and has signed here jointly with me.

In witness whereof, we sign the present in La Constancia, county of Valencia, this 22d day of June, A. D. 1878.

Manuel A. Otero.
Jesus M. Sena y Baca.

At that time the Galisteo ranch and the

Digitized by Google

Bartolomé Baca tract were supposed or claimed to be unconfirmed Mexican grants, the former of 24,000 acres and the latter of a vastly greater area. Otero had some substantial right in the former, and Sena y Baca was asserting an undivided interest in the latter, as an heir of the original grantee. As part of the transaction between them, Otero was to receive, and a few days after the signing of the agreement did receive, from Sena y Baca, a deed for the latter's asserted interest in the Bartolomé Baca tract.

The alleged grant from Mexico of that tract was thereafter presented to the surveyor general for New Mexico for examination and report under § 8 of the act of July 22, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 308, chap. 103). That officer, on September 7, 1881, made a report recommending, upon the proofs then before him, that the grant be not confirmed, but rejected; and this report was duly laid before Congress for such action thereon as it should deem just and proper. While the matter was awaiting action by Congress, the court of private land claims was created by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 765), and was invested with jurisdiction of proceedings looking to the confirmation or rejection of such grants. The Bartolomé Baca grant was then appropriately brought before that court for consideration and adjudication, and was confirmed to the extent of 11 square leagues; but in 1897, on an appeal to this court, [485] the judgment of confirmation was reversed and the grant rejected as invalid because resting upon a forged signature of the governor. United States v. Bergere, 168 U. S. 66, 42 L. ed. 383, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

In the meantime the Galisteo grant was presented to the court of private land claims for consideration and adjudication, and was by that court confirmed as a valid grant for 317 acres only, the confirmed area being the land here in controversy.

The plaintiffs are heirs at law of Otero, who died in 1882, and the defendants are the successors in interest of Sena y Baca and his wife under the agreement of 1878. The mesne conveyances through which the defendants became such successors were quitclaim deeds, and were accompanied by a delivery of the original agreement.

Sena y Baca and his wife went into possession of the land in controversy under and pursuant to that agreement, and they and their successors continued in possession, farmed the land, made such improvements thereon as were incidental merely to its use in that way, received the rents and profits, paid some, but not all, of the taxes, and exercised other possessory rights ordinarily incident to ownership, but all consistent with the rights conferred by the agreement of 1878.

In the proceeding in the court of private land claims relating to the Galisteo grant, the successors of Sena y Baca and his wife sought to secure a confirmation of the grant for the full 24,000 acres theretofore claimed, and in that connection traced their right through the agreement with Otero, thus recognizing his title.

The present action was begun April 3, 1901, without any prior demand for the possession. At that time the defendants were openly claiming full title in themselves, notwithstanding the prior adjudication of the invalidity of the Bartolomé Baca grant, and notwithstanding there had been no conveyance by Otero or his heirs of the Galisteo grant, as contemplated by the agreement.

[486] Other facts disclosed in the certified statement will be noticed in connection with particular questions upon the decision of which it is claimed they have a bearing.

The territorial courts held that the agreement of 1878 was not a conveyance, but an executory contract for a conveyance in the event, and only in the event, of the favorable adjudication and approval of the Bartolomé Baca grant; that this event became an impossible one when, in 1897, this court rejected that grant as invalid; that the defendants' rights under the agreement were thereby terminated and extinguished; that the possession of Sena y Baca and his wife, which was continued by their successors, was acquired and held under the agreement and in recognition of Otero's title, and therefore was not adverse; and that upon all the facts the plaintiffs were entitled to recover.

While it does not appear to be claimed that the question of title as between these litigants was adjudicated by the court of private land claims in the Galisteo Case, it is well to observe that the act creating that court and defining its jurisdiction declared in subdivision 5 of § 13: "No proceeding, decree, or act under this act shall conclude or affect the private rights of persons as between each other, all of which rights shall be reserved and saved to the same effect as if this act had not been passed; but the proceedings, decrees, and acts herein provided for shall be conclusive of all rights as between the United States and all persons claiming any interest or right in such lands." See United States v. Conway, 175 U. S. 60, 71, 44 L. ed. 72, 76, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

1. It is urged here that the agreement of 1878 in itself transferred the title to the Galisteo grant from Otero to Sena y Baca and his wife, and that the conveyance which was to be executed upon the adjudication and approval of the other grant was to operate only by way of a further assurance. Like the territorial courts, we think otherwise. [487] Although containing some words adapted to a present transfer, the instrument, taken in its entirety, shows that it was a mere contract to convey upon the contingency specified, with a provision investing the prospective vendees with the right of possession in the meantime. Had a present conveyance been intended, the right to a further assurance hardly would have been conditioned upon a contingency in no wise bearing upon the adequacy of the original conveyance, and, equally, the provision respecting the possession in the interim would have been superfluous. Then, too, the informality of the instrument, the signing by both parties, and the absence of an acknowledgment, make against the claim of a conveyance in præsenti. Bearing in mind that the question is one of intent, and judging of this by what appears upon the face of the instrument, we think it clearly was designed to be a contract to convey, and not a conveyance. See Williams v. Paine, 169 U. S. 55, 76, 42 L. ed. 658, 667, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279.

Digitized by Google

2. In 1898 and 1899, after the Bartolomé Baca grant was adjudged invalid, the plaintiffs severally made application, under §§ 17 and 18 of the act of 1891, as amended February 21, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 149), and June 27, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 495, chap. 504, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 776), for small-holding claims of 160 acres each within the limits of the rejected grant; and upon the trial the defendants sought to make proof of the advantageous sale or disposal of those claims. The evidence was rejected, and this, it is contended, was prejudicial error because, first, what was done tended to show that the plaintiffs treated the agreement of 1878 as executed rather than executory, and, second, even if the agreement was executory, the plaintiffs could not recover in the action without first surrendering to the defendants the advantages obtained through those claims. The contention is untenable. The right to those claims did not arise out of the agreement of 1878, or out of the rejected Bartolomé Baca grant, but arose, if at all, because the [488] plaintiffs were in possession and the United States permitted the acquisition of title to public land in New Mexico in that way. The alleged Bartolomé Baca grant being out of the way, whether the plaintiffs secured title to the 160-acre tracts and what they did with them were matters which did not concern the defendants.

3. Another contention is that the facts certified demonstrate that the defendants and their predecessors had been in adverse possession for more than ten years when the action was begun, and therefore that the defense of the statute of limitations was well founded. In our opinion, the territorial courts rightly held otherwise. Sena y Baca and his wife went into possession in virtue of a right so to do which was expressly given by the agreement, and was to continue until the happening of the event whereby their right to a conveyance was to be determined. Thus, their possession was not hostile or adverse, but in subordination to the Otero title, and the possession of their successors was plainly of the same character up to the time of the determinative event. There had been no unequivocal repudiation of the relation created by the agreement, for all that was done was consistent with a holding under it. Not until the conditional right to a conveyance was terminated did the possession cease to be a permissive one under the agreement, and that conditional right was not terminated until this court adjudged the Bartolomé Baca grant invalid and rejected it. That was less than four years before the action was begun.

We do not overlook the reference in the agreement to the surveyor general as the one whose decision was to be determinative, or his adverse report, which preceded the action by more than ten years. While the agreement uses the words, "shall be adjudicated and approved by the surveyor general," the naming of that officer evidently resulted from a misconception of his power and duty. Under the act of 1854, in force at the time, he was [489] not intrusted with power to adjudicate and approve Mexican grants, but was required to examine into their status and report thereon as a convenient means of aiding Congress in determining what should be done. His action was merely advisory, the power to decide and to approve or reject being reserved to Congress. United States v. Ortiz, 176 U. S. 422, 427, 44 L. ed. 529, 531, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466. But notwithstanding the mistake, the intention of the parties is manifest and full effect should be given to it. To them the important thing was the adjudication and approval of the Bartolomé Baca grant, and the particular governmental agency from which such action should come was of secondary consideration. They could make their future acts and rights dependent upon the former, as was done, but were without power to designate the latter. Evidently they named the surveyor general in the belief that the power to adjudicate and approve had been lodged in him, their meaning being the same as if they had said, "shall be adjudicated and approved by the proper authority." This, in our opinion, is the true construction of the agreement. Of course, an authorized adjudication and approval was contemplated, not one that would be without authority and of no effect.

Digitized by Google

Being in the nature of a recommendation only, the adverse report of the surveyor general was not final, and bound no one. It did not even preclude him from making a further examination and basing a favorable report thereon. United States v. Ortiz, supra. Had Congress disapproved his adverse report and confirmed the grant, we entertain no doubt that the confirmation would have satisfied the condition of the agreement, and have entitled Sena y Baca and his wife to the stipulated conveyance; and a like result would have ensued had the decision of this court been one of confirmation instead of rejection.

It follows that the relation created by the agreement was not terminated by the surveyor general's report in 1881, but continued until the adverse decision of this [490] court in 1897, and that the possession in the interim, like that before, was in virtue of the agreement, and not adverse.

4. After the agreement was terminated by the adverse decision upon the Bartolomé Baca grant, the continued possession of the defendants was without right; and when the action was begun, almost four years thereafter, they were asserting full title in themselves. Therefore, a demand that they surrender the possession was not a prerequisite to the maintenance of the action.

5. We are asked to say that the findings do not show title in the plaintiffs' ancestor, Manuel A. Otero, or, at least, are so conflicting upon that point as to afford no basis for the judgment. The findings to which attention is invited may be summarized as follows: (a) At the date of the agreement the title to the land in controversy was in Otero; (b) as confirmed, the Galisteo grant consists of the land in controversy, but prior to confirmation it was claimed to embrace a much larger area; (c) Otero's title to the grant was founded upon a conveyance in 1856 which excepted three designated parcels theretofore transferred to others; and (d) the plaintiffs' proofs did not disclose whether the land in controversy passed under that conveyance or was within the excepted parcels.

While recognizing that these findings are confusing, if not conflicting, we think the judgment is adequately sustained by other findings which show that the agreement of 1878 did not contain the exceptions shown in the conveyance of 1856; that Sena y Baca and his wife went into possession of the land in controversy under that agreement; and that the possession which passed from them to their successors, including the defendants, was likewise a possession in virtue of the agreement. In short, the defendants acquired possession as conditional vendees of Otero, and so are estopped from calling his title in question. As is said in Tyler on Ejectment (p. 543):

[491] "There is a class of cases in which the defendant is not permitted to controvert the title of the claimants in an action of ejectment on the ground of estoppel. These are cases where a privity exists between the defendant and the plaintiff, or those from whom he derives title. If a privity in estate has subsisted between the parties, proof of title is ordinarily unnecessary on the part of the plaintiff, for the reason that a party is not permitted to dispute the title of him by whom he has been let into possession. In all these cases, therefore, the proof is directed to the question as to whether such a relation exists between the parties as to operate as an estoppel, and thereby supersede the necessity of introducing any evidence to establish the title of the claimant."

And again (p. 559): "Although, strictly speaking, the relation of landlord and tenant is not created between vendor and vendee, yet the vendee, in ejectment by the owner against him, is absolutely estopped from either showing title in himself, or setting up an outstanding title in another; and the same rule applies to one coming into possession under the vendee, either with his consent, or as an intruder."

Of like import are Lucas v. Brooks, 18 Wall. 436, 451, 21 L. ed. 779, 782; Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Walker, 7 Cow. 637, 642; Towne v. Butterfield, 97 Mass. 105; Lacy v. Johnson, 58 Wis. 414, 423, 17 N. W. 246.

As we find no error in the record, the judgment is affirmed.

---

[492] UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JOHN H. CARTER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 492-495.)

Appeal — review by government in criminal case — jurisdiction.

1. The decision of a Federal district court quashing as "bad in law" certain counts of an indictment purporting to charge violations of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3497, is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564), as based upon the construction of the statute on which the indictment was founded, since such ruling may as well have rested upon the opinion of the court as to the mere insufficiency of the indictment.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review by government in criminal case — jurisdiction.

2. The Federal Supreme Court will not examine the entire record in order to resolve in favor of its appellate jurisdiction a doubt as to whether a ruling of a district court, quashing certain counts of an indictment as "bad in law," was based upon a construction of the statute on which the indictment was founded, within the meaning of the criminal appeals act of March 2, 1907, or was rested upon the mere insufficiency of the indictment.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 722.]

Submitted December 1, 1913. Decided December 15, 1913.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of North Carolina to review a judgment quashing as "bad in law" certain counts of an indictment. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Solicitor General Davis submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Francis B. Carter and W. A. Blount submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Memorandum opinion by Mr. Chief Justice White, by direction of the court:

At the threshold we must consider a motion to dismiss. The case is a criminal one over which we have only the jurisdiction conferred by the criminal appeals act (34 Stat. at L. chap. 2564, p. 1246). There were two indictments containing, the one 54 and the [493] other 26 counts, purporting to charge alleged offenses against the national banking laws as embodied in Rev. Stat. § 5209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3497. On demurrer the court quashed 43 of the counts because they were "bad in law." It is settled that under the criminal appeals act we have no authority to revise the mere interpretation of an indictment, and are confined to ascertaining whether the court in a case under review erroneously construed the statute: United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 53 L. ed. 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Stevenson, 215 U. S. 190, 196, 54 L. ed. 153, 156, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35. Our power to review the action of the court then in this case can alone rest upon the theory that what was done amounts to a construction of the statute. But it is obvious that the ruling that the counts which were quashed were bad in law did not necessarily involve a construction of the statute, and may well have rested upon the opinion of the court as to the mere insufficiency of the indictment.

It is, however, insisted on behalf of the United States that by referring to the counts which were held good, and comparing them with those which were quashed, by a process of exclusion and inclusion, it will be possible to ascertain that the action of the court was based upon a construction of the statute, and we are asked to review the case upon this theory. At best, this proposition amounts to the contention that in every case where there is doubt as to whether the court construed the statute or interpreted the indictment, such doubt should be solved by an examination of the entire record. But the right to a review in a criminal case, being controlled by the general law, it follows that a case cannot be brought within the control of the special rule provided by the criminal appeals act unless it clearly appears that the exceptional, and not the general, rule applies. Aside from this consideration, we cannot give our approval to the suggestion made by the government, since in effect it virtually calls upon us to analyze and construe the indictment [494] as a prerequisite basis for the exertion of the limited power to review the action of the court in interpreting the statute. Indeed, to follow the suggestion would be to frustrate the purposes which manifestly the jurisdictional act was enacted to accomplish; because the intent to expedite in criminal cases the decision of questions involving statutory construction which was plainly one of the ends for which the law was intended would be of little avail if the right to review be extended by implication so as to embrace cases not within the purview of the statute, thereby multiplying appeals and delaying the speedy decision of such cases. Besides, we think, in consequence of the ambiguity of the ruling, a case like this is not within the scope of the fundamental evil intended to be guarded against by the reviewing statute; that is, to afford a direct and immediate remedy to correct an erroneous construction of a statute before final judgment, and thus to prevent the harm which otherwise might

NOTE.—On review by government in criminal case—see note to United States v. Stevenson, 54 L. ed. U. S. 153.

Digitized by Google

result by the application of the construction to other cases, if the power to review could only be exerted after final judgment.

To suggest that if the mere form in which a ruling is clothed be made the test of the power to review, it will result that the exertion of the authority may be rendered unavailing in every case, is without foundation. It is not to be assumed that trial courts will not seek rightfully to discharge their duty. But, even if it were possible to indulge in such an assumption, to do so would disregard the power which exists as an incident to the exercise of appellate jurisdiction to compel, in a case which requires it, such action as will prevent a destruction of or render practically unavailing the reviewing power. There can be, however, no ground in this case for indulging the forebodings which we have just answered, because there is nothing in the record showing any request made to the trial court for an expression of opinion in such form as to manifest clearly whether its action proceeded upon a [495] construction of the statute, or merely upon the meaning which was given to the indictment. In saying this we are not unmindful of the fact that it is stated in the brief for the United States that when a bill of exceptions was, after the trial, presented to the court for settlement, a request was made and refused for a more specific statement of the reasons which led to the quashing of the accounts of the indictment. But, obviously, the refusal to grant a request made at the time and under the circumstances stated affords no reason for an exertion of a power to review which we do not possess.

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
DEER LODGE COUNTY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 495–512.)

Commerce — state taxation — life insurance.

Insurance is not commerce, and a foreign life insurance company may therefore be subjected to the annual tax imposed under Mont. Rev. Code 1907, § 4073, upon the basis of the excess of premiums received over losses and expenses incurred within the state during the previous year, although its manner of business is such that all risks are accepted, and contracts made, modified, and discharged at its home office, and the premiums are transmitted to such office, and all advances and loans to policy holders are consummated there.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 52-54, 382-382b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 56.]

Argued November 11, 1913. Decided December 15, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Montana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Deer Lodge County, in that state, in favor of defendant in a suit by a foreign life insurance company to recover back the amount of taxes paid under protest, on the ground that the tax was an illegal burden on interstate commerce. Affirmed.

See same case below, 43 Mont. 243, 115 Pac. 911.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. James H. McIntosh and Roscoe Pound argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert L. Clinton, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The issue here differs from prior insurance cases.

Church v. La Fayette F. Ins. Co. 66 N. Y. 222; Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall. 410, 19 L. ed. 972; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Liverpool & L. Life & M. Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Oliver) 10 Wall. 566, 19 L. ed. 1029; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 591, 29 L. ed. 997, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Nutting v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 553, 46 L. ed. 324, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

The issue here differs from labor or emigration agencies, bucket shops, and private banks.

Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Ware v. Mobile County, 209 U. S. 405, 52 L. ed. 855, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526, 14 Ann. Cas. 1031; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. ed. 186, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

The course of the company's business is within the very object of the commerce clause.

Bancroft, History of U. S. Const. chap. 4; Bryce, Studies in History & Jurisprudence, 222; Montgomery v. Royal Exch. Assur. Corp. 5 Ala. App. 318, 59 So. 508; 1 Far-

NOTE.—On insurance as interstate commerce—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 645.

Digitized by Google

rand, Records of Federal Convention, 243, 247, 275, 496, 501, 546; 3 Farrand, Records of Federal Convention, 666.

The course of business here is within International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103, and the Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 57 L. ed. 523, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 391, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Richmond v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 761, 43 L. ed. 1162, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126.

If Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357, is decisive of this case, then it is also decisive against the court's decision in the International Textbook and Lottery Cases.

Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 647, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A. (N. S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Babcock, 104 Ga. 67, 42 L.R.A. 88, 69 Am. St. Rep. 134, 30 S. E. 273; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Xenos v. Wickham, L. R. 2 H. L. 296, 36 L. J. C. P. N. S. 313, 16 L. T. N. S. 800, 16 Week. Rep. 38, 13 Eng. Rul. Cas. 422.

The proposition that the company's business as performed by it is interstate commerce is in line with all the decisions of the court, and not in conflict with any decision.

Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 176, 52 L. ed. 443, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Butler Bros. Shoe Co. v. United States Rubber Co. 84 C. C. A. 167, 156 Fed. 1; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Hoke v. United States, 227 U. S. 308, 57 L. ed. 523, 43 L.R.A.(N.S.) 906, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 905; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102, 9 L. ed. 648; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Richmond v. Southern Bell. Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 766, 43 L. ed. 1164, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126.

The object and purpose of the commerce clause sustains the plaintiff's claim.

1 Hamilton, Works, 179, 203; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; 2 Madison Papers, 859; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Report of Committee on Ins. Law, 29 Am. Bar Asso. 557; South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4, 23 L. ed. 782; 1 Wilson, Works, 335.

Writers on constitutional law criticize the interpretation of Paul v. Virginia except as limited to the facts before the court in that case.

Innes, Insurance in its Relation to Commerce, 39 Am. L. Rep. 717; Prentice & E. Commerce Clause of Fed. Const. 46; Report of Committee on Ins. Law, 29 Am. Bar Asso. 538; 1 Watson, Const. 520, 521; 2 Willoughby, Const. §§ 294, 296.

The tax is void.

Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

Mr. D. M. Kelley argued the cause, and, with Mr. Albert J. Galen, Attorney General of Montana, and Mr. W. H. Poorman, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The statute in question does not violate the interstate commerce clause of the Federal Constitution for the reason that the business of insurance is not commerce.

Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lewis & Clarke County, 28 Mont. 484, 98 Am. St. Rep. 572, 72 Pac. 982; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 202 U. S. 246, 50 L. ed. 1013, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619, 6 Ann. Cas. 317; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. ed. 365; Nutting v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 553, 46 L. ed. 324, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Ducat

Digitized by Google

v. Chicago, 10 Wall. 410, 19 L. ed. 972; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff in error, called herein plaintiff, as it was such in the courts below, brought suit against the defendant in error, herein called defendant, to recover the sum of $209.79, with interest, the amount of taxes paid by plaintiff under protest to defendant.

The tax was levied under a law of the state requiring every insurance corporation or company transacting business in the state to be taxed upon the excess of premiums received over losses and ordinary expenses incurred within the state during the year previous to the year of listing in the county where the agent conducts the business, properly proportioned by the corporation or company at the same rate that all other personal property is taxed. It is provided that the agent shall render the list, and if he refuses, or to make affidavit that the same is correct to the best of his knowledge and belief, the amount may [499] be assessed to the best knowledge and discretion of the assessor. The corporations and companies are subject to no other tax under the laws of the state except on real estate, and the fees imposed by law.

It was alleged in the complaint that the "tax was and is illegal, unlawful, and void for that said defendant was without jurisdiction to levy or collect said tax, and the levy and collection thereof was and is a burden upon interstate commerce, contrary to § 8 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States."

A summary of the allegations of the complaint, which is very long, is as follows:

The plaintiff is a New York corporation, with its home office in New York city, and has transacted and does transact the business of life insurance on a large scale in all of the states of the United States, and with persons residing in every country of the civilized world. It commenced to transact its business with residents of Montana in 1869, and its business has progressively increased until its total insurance in force in that state amounts to $10,023,445, calling for premiums amounting to $343,664.93. This total insurance is made up of policies averaging $2,000 each, and these are subject to sale, assignment, and transfer, and are used for collateral security and other commercial purposes, and are valuable for such purpose and for other general purposes of trade and commerce.

The company transacts its business through agents, who solicit insurance, collect the first premium, and deliver the policy, which is prepared and transmitted from the home office to him for such purpose. The company also employs an agency director by contract in writing directly with the home office through the mails, who supervises the work of soliciting agents and recommends those who desire to become such. The company also employs medical examiners, with specified duties, their employment being negotiated through the mails, and their [500] reports are made through the mails, and if further information is desired, the home office obtains it by correspondence through the mails. It has also a confidential employee called an inspector, whose employment is intended to be secret, and who transmits information through the mails. In Butte, in the state of Montana, the company maintains a cashier, appointed from the home office, whose authority, however, is limited to making and supervising such records as the business of the office requires, receiving from the soliciting agents and medical examiners applications for new insurance solely for transmission to the home office, receiving the reports of the home office of its action on such applications, and receiving policies, and the premiums which are paid on the new policies and not transmitted directly to the home office, mailing premium notices made out at the home office, and sent to him for that purpose; receiving renewal premiums when specially authorized; depositing the amount thereof in bank at Butte to the credit of the company and to be drawn upon by it, and not by him; keeping account of the insurance obtained by the soliciting agents and settling with such agents the commission. The company has never had any office or place of business except said office at Butte and one other at Helena, with like duties and authority.

Forms for the use of the several transactions are prepared at the home office and transmitted by mail to the company's employees. No agent is authorized to accept risks of any kind or make or modify contracts, nor have they ever done so. The officers of the company reside and have always resided in and near the city of New York, and had and have their offices and places of business at the home office. All risks are accepted and contracts made, modified, and discharged at the home office.

The manner of taking applications for insurance and the final issue of policies is alleged, which shows that the [501] ultimate judgment of their character and acceptance is reserved for the home office. The manner of paying premiums is alleged to be either directly to the home office through the mails, or to the cashier of the company at its office in Butte, and that the several policies provide for advances, and that the company has outstanding advances or loans to its policy holders in the state, aggregating the sum of $432,878. The loan is made by transmitting an application to the home office, where it is considered and acted upon, and, if accepted, a loan agreement is transmitted to the applicant, who, after executing it, returns it to the home office, and the proceeds of the loan are forwarded by mail to the policy holder by the company's check on its bank account in New York. And the use of the mails is alleged in payment of premiums and proofs of death.

Digitized by Google

On account of this manner of doing business it is alleged on information and belief to be interstate commerce and within the meaning of the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

The laws of the state by virtue of which the tax was imposed are set out. They finally became § 4073 of the Revised Codes, 1907.

The company did not have any property within Deer Lodge county at any time during the year 1910. It paid without protesting the tax imposed by § 4017 of the Revised Codes for the year 1909, amounting to $3,496.85. It also, during said year, paid to the state licenses and fees aggregating the sum of $234. In 1909 it received from policy holders residing in the county, premiums aggregating the sum of $14,233.41. Its losses and expenses amounted to the sum of $8,888.41. The excess of premiums over losses for said year was the sum of $5,345, upon which there was imposed the sum sued for. The company paid the tax under protest.

A demurrer was sustained to the complaint and a [502] judgment entered dismissing the action. It was sustained by the supreme court of the state.

The same contention is made here as in the state courts; that is, that the tax is a burden on interstate commerce; and an elaborate argument is presented to distinguish this case from those in which this court has decided that insurance is not commerce. These cases are: Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357 (1868); Ducat v. Chicago, 10 Wall. 410, 19 L. ed. 972; Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Oliver) 10 Wall. 566, 19 L. ed. 1029; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 30 L. ed. 342, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Intern. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; and Nutting v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 553, 46 L. ed. 324, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238.

If we consider these cases numerically, the deliberation of their reasoning, and the time they cover, they constitute a formidable body of authority and strongly invoke the sanction of the rule of stare decisis. This we especially emphasize, for all of the cases concerned, as the case at bar does, the validity of state legislation, and under varying circumstances the same principle was applied in all of them. For over forty-five years they have been the legal justification for such legislation. To reverse the cases, therefore, would require us to promulgate a new rule of constitutional inhibition upon the states, and which would compel a change of their policy and a readjustment of their laws. Such result necessarily urges against a change of decision. In deference, however, to the earnestness of counsel, we will consider more particularly (1) what the cases decide, and (2) whether they are wrong in principle.

Paul v. Virginia is the progenitor case. A law of Virginia precluded any insurance company not incorporated under the laws of the state, doing business in the state without previously obtaining a license for that purpose, which could only be obtained by a deposit with the state treasury of bonds of a specified character to an amount varying from thirty to fifty thousand dollars. A [503] subsequent law required the agent of a foreign insurance company to take out a license.

Paul was appointed the agent of several fire insurance companies incorporated in the state of New York. He applied for a license, offering to comply with all the provisions of the law excepting the deposit of bonds. The license was refused and he, notwithstanding, undertook to act as agent for the companies, offered to issue policies in their behalf, and in one instance did issue a policy in their name to a citizen of Virginia. For this violation of the statute he was indicted and convicted in one of the state courts, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of appeals of the state. Error was prosecuted from this court, based on, as one of its grounds, the alleged violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

Replying to the argument to sustain the contention, the court said, by Mr. Justice Field, that its defect lay in the character of the business done. "Issuing a policy of insurance is not a transaction of commerce. The policies are simply contracts of indemnity against loss by fire, entered into between the corporations and the assured, for a consideration paid by the latter. These contracts are not articles of commerce in any proper meaning of the word. They are not subjects of trade and barter, offered in the market as something having an existence and value independently of the parties to them. They are not commodities to be shipped or forwarded from one state to another, and then put up for sale. They are like other personal contracts between parties which are completed by their signature and the transfer of the consideration. Such contracts are not interstate transactions, though the parties may be domiciled in different states. The policies do not take effect—are not executed contracts—until delivered by the agent in Virginia. They are, then, local transactions, and are governed by the local law. They do [504] not constitute a part of the commerce between the states any more than a contract for the purchase and sale of goods in Virginia by a citizen of New York, whilst in Virginia, would constitute a portion of such commerce."

Digitized by Google

The doctrine announced, that insurance was not commerce, but a personal contract, was emphasized by illustrations. Nathan v. Louisiana, 8 How. 73, 12 L. ed. 992, was cited, where a tax on money and exchange brokers who dealt in the purchase and sale of foreign bills of exchange was sustained as not conflicting with the constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce. The individual thus using his money, it was said (quoting the cited case), "is not engaged in commerce, but in supplying an instrument of commerce. He is less connected with it than a shipbuilder, without whose labor foreign commerce could not be carried on." The doctrine was further illustrated by bills of exchange, foreign and domestic, which it was said were subject to the regulating and taxing laws of the states. And it was pointed out that the Federal government taxed not only foreign bills, but domestic bills and promissory notes, whether issued by individuals or banks,—a power the government could not have, it was said, if bills and notes were commerce. It was finally said: "If foreign bills may thus be the subject of state regulation, much more so may contracts of insurance against loss by fire."

We have taken the trouble to make this long excerpt from the opinion because, as we have said, the case is the primary one, and because its argument is really exhaustive of the general principle. We shall consider presently whether there is anything in the case at bar which takes it out of the principle.

In Ducat v. Chicago, a law of Illinois came up for review. It was a regulation of insurance companies not incorporated by the state, and required their agents to be licensed upon the performance of certain conditions. [505] Subsequently, by the act incorporating Chicago, the legislature imposed on all foreign insurance a tax of $2 upon the $100, and at that rate upon the amount of all premiums which should be received. It was made unlawful for any company to transact business until the payment was made. The state supreme court sustained the tax and this court affirmed its action, resting the decision on Paul v. Virginia, the reasoning of which, it was said, it was not necessary to repeat.

Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts. The subject came up again for consideration in passing upon a statute of Massachusetts which levied a tax upon all premiums charged or received by any fire, marine, and fire and marine insurance company not incorporated under the laws of the state. The law was sustained. It was said: "The case of Paul v. Virginia decided that the business of insurance, as ordinarily conducted, was not commerce, and that a corporation of one state, having an agency by which it conducted that business in another state, was not engaged in commerce between the states."

Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York. A statute of New York imposing taxes and conditions upon insurance companies of other states was considered and sustained. Paul v. Virginia was cited for the view that "issuing a policy of insurance is not a transaction of commerce."

We may say here that Paul v. Virginia was also cited for the proposition that the right of a foreign corporation to do business in a state other than that of its creation depends wholly upon the will of such other state. This proposition, it was said, was sustained by previous cases, and it has been sustained by many subsequent cases. Necessarily it could not be applied to foreign insurance companies if the business of insurance is commerce. In other words, that right exists and has only an exception, as was said in Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207, "where a corporation created by one state rests its right to enter [506] another and to engage in business therein upon the Federal nature of its business." And that was the contention in Hooper v. California, asserting the invalidity of the statute of the state making it a misdemeanor for any person in that state to procure insurance for a resident in the state from an insurance company not incorporated under its laws. The argument was that in as much as the contract involved was one for marine insurance, it was a matter of interstate commerce, and as such beyond the reach of state authority, and included among the exceptions to the rule. It was replied by the court: "This proposition involves an erroneous conception of what constitutes interstate commerce. That the business of insurance does not generically pertain to such commerce has been settled since the case of Paul v. Virginia." To the attempt to distinguish between policies of marine insurance and policies of fire insurance, and thus take the former out of the rule of Paul v. Virginia, it was answered: "It ignores the real distinction upon which the general rule and its exceptions are based, and which consists in the difference between interstate commerce or an instrumentality thereof on the one side and the mere incidents which may attend the carrying on of such commerce on the other." And it was pointed out that if the power to regulate interstate commerce applied to all of the incidents of such commerce and "to all contracts which might be made in the course of its transaction, that power would embrace the entire sphere of mercantile activity in any way connected with trade between the states; and would exclude state control over many contracts purely domestic in their nature." And then, sweeping away the distinction between the different subject-matters of insurance contracts, and the different events indemnified against, and declaring the principle applicable to all and determinative of the regulating power of the states over all, it was said: "The business of insurance is not commerce. [507] The contract of insurance is not an instrumentality of commerce. The making of such a contract is a mere incident of commercial intercourse, and in this respect there is no difference whatever between insurance against fire and insurance against 'the perils of the sea.'"

Digitized by Google

This declaration was repeated and applied in Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 368, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, and in New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962. The latter case has special application, for the plaintiff in error here was the plaintiff in error there, and the case concerned life insurance companies and their policies. In that case it was contended that a policy of mutual life insurance was an interstate contract and the parties might choose its "applicatory law." The contention was made in many ways and with great amplitude of argument and illustration. It was urged that on account of the mutual character of the company it was the administrator of a fund collected from its policy holders in different states and countries for their benefit. And the extent of the business was displayed by a stipulation of the parties as follows: "That during the year 1886 and prior to the issuance of the policy sued upon, the amount of policies issued by defendant to citizens of Missouri was $1,617,085, and the amount of insurance in force on the lives of citizens of Missouri on December 31st, 1886, was $8,886,542, and the total amount of policies issued by defendant in said year 1886 was $85,178,294, and the total amount of policies in force on December 31st, 1886, issued by defendant, was $304,373,540."

It was also urged that modern life insurance had taken on essentially a national and international character, and that when Paul v. Virginia was decided the business was "to a great extent local; that is, conducted through the domestic contracts by stock companies. The great and commanding organizations of the present day had hardly begun the amazing developments which have made them [508] the greatest associations of administrative trusts of the business world."

These contentions were earnestly made; the reply to them deliberately meditated and its extent fully appreciated. The ruling in Paul v. Virginia and other cases was applied. We omitted the reasoning by which they demonstrated, we said, the correctness of their conclusion. We, however, repeated that "the business of insurance is not commerce. The contract of insurance is not an instrumentality of commerce. The making of such a contract is a mere incident of commercial intercourse, and in this respect there is no difference whatever between insurance against fire and insurance against the 'perils of the sea,'" and, we added, that "against the uncertainty of man's mortality."

In Nutting v. Massachusetts a statute of the state was sustained which required a licensing of the agent of a foreign insurance company not admitted to do business in the state, and made it a crime to solicit insurance of a resident in violation of the statute. The principle of the prior cases which we have referred to was affirmed.

This detail shows what the cases decided. Were they rightly decided? The reasoning of the cases anticipate and answer the question, and it would rack ingenuity to attempt to vary its expression or more aptly illustrate it. A policy of insurance, the cases declare, is a personal contract, a mere indemnity, for a consideration, against the happening of some contingent event which may bring detriment to life or property, and its character is the same no matter what the event insured against, whether fire or hurricane, acts of man or acts of God, storms on land or storms on sea, death or lessor accident. The same event may involve both life and property, precipitating the obligation of the policies. Nor does the character of the contracts change by their numbers or the residence of the parties. The latter is made much of in this case. It [509] was made much of in the Cravens Case. The effort has been to give a special locality to the contracts and determine their applicatory law, and, indeed, to a centralization of control, to employ local agents, but to limit their power and judgment. To accomplish the purpose there is necessarily a great and frequent use of the mails, and this is elaborately dwelt on by the insurance company in its pleading and argument, it being contended that this and the transmission of premiums and the amounts of the policies constitute a "current of commerce among the states." This use of the mails is necessary, it may be, to the centralization of the control and supervision of the details of the business; it is not essential to its character. And we may say, in passing, that such effort has led to regulating legislation, but that it cannot determine its validity was decided in the Cravens Case. See also Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements (Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus) 140 U. S. 226, 36 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

Digitized by Google

This legislation is in effect attacked by the contention of the insurance company. We have already pointed out that if insurance is commerce and becomes interstate commerce whenever it is between citizens of different states, then all control over it is taken from the states, and the legislative regulations which this court has heretofore sustained must be declared invalid.

The number of transactions does not give the business any other character than magnitude. If it did, the department store which deals with every article which covers or adorns the human body, or, it may be, nourishes it, would have one character, while its neighbor, humble in the variety and extent of its stock, would have another. Nor, again, does the use of the mails determine anything. Certainly not that which takes place before and after the transaction between the plaintiff and its agents in secret or in regulation of their relations. But put agents to one side and suppose the insurance company and the applicant negotiating or consummating a contract. That they may [510] live in different states and hence use the mails for their communications does not give character to what they do; cannot make a personal contract the transportation of commodities from one state to another, to paraphrase Paul v. Virginia. Such might be incidents of a sale of real estate (certainly nothing can be more immobile). Its transfer may be negotiated through the mails and completed by the transmission of the consideration and the instrument of transfer also through the mails.

It is contended that the policies are subject to sale and transfer, may be used for collateral security and other commercial purposes. This may be, but this use of them is after their creation,—a use by the insured, not by the insurer. The quality that is thus ascribed to them may be ascribed to any instrument evidencing a valuable right. The argument was anticipated in Paul v. Virginia, citing Nathan v. Louisiana, where, as we have seen, a tax on money and exchange brokers who dealt in the purchase and sale of foreign bills of exchange was sustained as not conflicting with the constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce among the states or with foreign nations.

It is contended that Paul v. Virginia and the cases which follow it must be limited, as it is contended "the facts herein did limit them, to intrastate, not interstate, contracts," and that if they be not so limited the Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561, and International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103, cannot stand.

The basis of this contention necessarily is the insistence that the contracts in Paul v. Virginia and the succeeding cases were intrastate contracts while the contracts in the case at bar are interstate contracts. But this is a false characterization of the contracts. The decision of the cases is that contracts of insurance are not commerce at all, neither state nor interstate. This is the obstacle to the contention of the insurance company. The company [511] realizes it to be an obstacle and has attempted to remove it by detailing the manner of conducting its business as demonstrating that its policies are interstate contracts. We have replied to the attempt and shown that its manner of business has no such effect. It follows necessarily, therefore, that neither the Lottery Case nor the Pigg Case impugns the authority or the application of the cited cases. They, the Lottery Case and the Pigg Case, were concerned with transactions which involved the transportation of property, and were not mere personal contracts.

Digitized by Google

There are cognate cases to the cited cases, of contracts incident to commerce, but not of themselves commerce. In Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. ed. 186, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128, there was levied by the state of Georgia a tax upon each emigrant agent or employer or employee of such agent, doing business in the state. The law imposing the tax was attacked as a violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. Commerce was defined, quoting Mr. Justice Field, in Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 702, 26 L. ed. 238, 241, to "consist in intercourse and traffic, including in these terms navigation and the transportation and transit of persons and property, as well as the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities." The court considered the definition comprehensive enough for the purpose of the case, and, testing its application, said, by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller: "These agents were engaged in hiring laborers in Georgia, to be employed beyond the limits of the state. Of course, transportation must eventually take place as the result of such contracts, but it does not follow that the emigrant agent was engaged in transportation." The conclusion was supported by cases, among others, Paul v. Virginia and Hooper v. California. On the authority of the same cases and New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, in Ware & Leland v. Mobile County, 209 U. S. 405, 52 L. ed. 855, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526, 14 Ann. Cas. 1031, it was held that contracts by brokers for the sale of [512] cotton for future delivery, where the transactions were closed by contracts completed and executed in one state, although the orders were received from another state, were legally subject to a tax. Such contracts, it was said, were not "the subjects of interstate commerce, any more than in the insurance cases, where the policies are ordered and delivered in another state than that of the residence and office of the company."

In Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 55 L. ed. 128, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, a law of New York forbade individuals or partnerships to engage in the business of receiving deposits of money for safe-keeping or for the purpose of transmission to another, or for any other purpose, without a license from the comptroller. It was attacked as a violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution. The case was decided to be similar in principle to Ware & Leland v. Mobile County and Williams v. Fears, and the law was sustained.

Further discussion, we think, is unnecessary; and we have gone beyond the citing of the authoritative cases only in deference to the able and earnest argument of counsel.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Hughes and Mr. Justice Van Devanter dissent.

---

[513] ARTHUR GREEY, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Schwab-Kepner Company, Appt.,
v.
JOHN E. DOCKENDORFF.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 513-517.)

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings below.

1. Findings of fact by the master and the two lower courts as to insolvency and knowledge of the parties in the determination of a dispute between an assignee of the bankrupt's accounts and the trustee in bankruptcy, over the ownership of the proceeds of such accounts, will ordinarily be accepted by the Federal Supreme Court on appeal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4920-4930, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — to Federal Supreme Court — bankruptcy case.

2. A dispute between the assignee of the bankrupt's accounts and the trustee in bankruptcy, over the ownership of the proceeds of the assigned accounts collected by the trustee, which is presented by a petition filed in the bankruptcy proceedings, is a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings within the meaning of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), § 24, governing the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals and the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 804, 805, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — voidable transfers — assignment of accounts.

3. Successive assignments of accounts by way of security, in pursuance of a contract under which advances were made to enable the assignor to get the goods, on the faith of the undertaking that the accounts should be assigned, made without knowledge of the assignor's insolvency, and without conscious fraudulent intent, were not bad as against the bankrupt assignor's general creditors without lien because the contract embraced

---

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court in bankruptcy cases—see note to James v. Stone & Co. 57 L. ed. U. S. 573.

On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

Digitized by Google

all accounts, and the lien thereunder was a secret one.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI, b, 2, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 544.]

Argued December 2, 1913. Decided December 15, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the District of New Jersey, in favor of the claim of an assignee of the bankrupt's accounts, to have paid over to him the proceeds of such accounts collected by the trustee. Affirmed.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 597, 203 Fed. 475.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Benjamin G. Paskus argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Ralph Wolf, James N. Rosenberg, and Garrard Glenn, filed a brief for appellant:

The appellee's motion to dismiss the appeal should be denied.

Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 1117, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720, 11 Ann. Cas. 789; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412.

Dockendorff, in asking to have the proceeds of the accounts transferred to him, is seeking the affirmative relief of this court as a court of equity.

Johnston v. Huff, A. & M. Co. 66 C. C. A. 534, 133 Fed. 704; Re The Leader, 190 Fed. 624; Carozza v. Boxley, 122 C. C. A. 69, 203 Fed. 674; Re Stiger, 202 Fed. 791; Central Trust Co. v. West India Improv. Co. 169 N. Y. 314, 62 N. E. 387: Holroyd v. Marshall, 10 H. L. Cas. 209, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 193, 9 Jur. N. S. 213, 7 L. T. N. S. 172, 11 Week. Rep. 171, 10 Eng. Rul. Cas. 426; Laclede Bank v. Shuler, 120 U. S. 511, 30 L. ed. 704, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

He was entitled to it only if his conduct in the matter had been free from fraud, actual or constructive.

Primeau v. Granfield, 114 C. C. A. 549, 193 Fed. 912; Re Friedman, 164 Fed. 131; Binghamton Trust Co. v. Gregory, 148 App. Div. 525, 132 N. Y. Supp. 950; Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008.

We discard, and we have the right to ask this court to discard, the master's inferences, as distinct from his actual findings.

Re People's Department Store Co. 159 Fed. 287; Re Big Cahaba Coal Co. 190 Fed. 901; Baumhauer v. Austin, 108 C. C. A. 306, 186 Fed. 260; Re C. J. McDonald & Sons, 178 Fed. 487.

If facts appear which, under well-settled rules, justify the conclusion of fraud, then, however the lower court may find that there was no volition of fraud, the case is one of fraud, and the consequences must follow.

Coleman v. Burr, 93 N. Y. 31, 45 Am. Rep. 160.

The current of judicial decision in this country has set steadily against secret arrangements of this character.

Ryall v. Rowles, 1 Ves. Sr. 348; Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 633, 23 L. ed. 993, 994; Hennequin v. Naylor, 24 N. Y. 140; Frelinghuysen v. Nugent, 36 Fed. 229; Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L. ed. 779; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Gill v. Griffith, 2 Md. Ch. 271; Wood v. Lowrey, 17 Wend. 496; Millikin v. Second Nat. Bank, 206 Fed. 14; Re Noel, 137 Fed. 694; Potts v. Hart, 99 N. Y. 172, 1 N. E. 605; Blackburn v. Irvine, 205 Fed. 226; New York Security & T. Co. v. Saratoga Gas & E. L. Co. 159 N. Y. 137, 45 L.R.A. 132, 53 N. E. 758; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 267, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1083, 82 N. E. 127; Titusville Iron Co. v. New York, 207 N. Y. 203, 100 N. E. 806; Re Marine Constr. & Dry Dock Co. 75 C. C. A. 451, 144 Fed. 649; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 22 L. ed. 758; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall. 392, 19 L. ed. 117; Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 174 U. S. 674, 43 L. ed. 1130, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Northern P. R. Co. v. Boyd, 228 U. S. 482, 57 L. ed. 931, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Ferguson v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 17 App. Div. 336, 45 N. Y. Supp. 172; Central Improv. Co. v. Cambria Steel Co. 120 C. C. A. 121, 201 Fed. 811; Keech v. Stowe-Fuller Co. 205 Fed. 890; Edgell v. Hart, 9 N. Y. 213, 59 Am. Dec. 532; Rogers v. Page, 72 C. C. A. 164, 140 Fed. 596, affirmed in 211 U. S. 575, 53 L. ed. 332, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Re Brener, 166 Fed. 930; Re Southern Textile Co. 98 C. C. A. 305, 174 Fed. 523.

The tendency of even early cases has been toward the discouragement of sweeping transfers of one's assets, whether by way of sale or hypothecation.

Small v. Oudley, 2 P. Wms. 427; George M. West Co. v. Lea Bros. 174 U. S. 590, 43 L. ed. 1098, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475; People v. Mercantile Credit Guarantee Co. 166 N. Y. 422, 60 N. E. 24.

The transactions between Dockendorff and the bankrupt amounted to a general assignment of the latter's assets.

People v. Mercantile Credit Guarantee Co. supra.

Digitized by Google

Such an act is a fraud upon the rights of the creditors as defined in the bankruptcy laws.

George M. West Co. v. Lea Bros. 174 U. S. 590, 43 L. ed. 1098, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

After committing such an act of insolvency, it is fraudulent to incur credit for goods purchased without notifying the vendor of the facts.

Mitchell v. Worden, 20 Barb. 253.

An unusual occurrence, out of the ordinary mode of transacting such a business, is prima facie evidence of fraud, and throws the burden of proof on the purchaser to sustain the validity of his purchase.

Walbrun v. Babbitt, 16 Wall. 577, 21 L. ed. 489.

The master erred in his refusal to admit the books in evidence for the purpose of showing the insolvency of the company.

Deakers v. Temple, 41 Pa. 242; 20 Cyc. 775, 776; White v. Benjamin, 150 N. Y. 266, 44 N. E. 956; Smith v. Collins, 94 Ala. 406, 10 So. 334; Towns v. Smith, 115 Ind. 480, 16 N. E. 811; Woolridge v. Boardman, 115 Cal. 74, 46 Pac. 868; Loos v. Wilkinson, 110 N. Y. 195, 1 L.R.A. 250, 18 N. E. 99; Ernst v. Mechnics' & M. Nat. Bank, 200 Fed. 295; Re Docker-Foster Co. 123 Fed. 190; Hackney v. Hargreaves Bros. 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 169; Flour City Nat. Bank v. Widener, 163 N. Y. 276, 57 N. E. 471; Hotopp v. Huber, 160 N. Y. 531, 55 N. E. 206; State Bank v. Brown, 165 N. Y. 216, 53 L.R.A. 513, 59 N. E. 1.

Mr. Julius Henry Cohen argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Gerard B. Townsend and Theodore B. Richter, filed a brief for appellee:

This is not a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings. This appeal should therefore be dismissed.

Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Re Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 56 L. ed. 725, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Re Streator Metal Stamping Co. 205 Fed. 280; Re Friend, 67 C. C. A. 500, 134 Fed. 778; Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co. 100 C. C. A. 647, 177 Fed. 337; Collier, Bankr. 433, 437.

Both the district court and the circuit court of appeals held that the questions involved are questions of fact. The report of the special master evidences the most painstaking and thorough examination of the record. His findings have been accepted by both the district court and the circuit court of appeals. Under these circumstances this court will not disturb those findings.

Merillat v. Hensey, 221 U. S. 333, 55 L. ed. 758, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 370, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Ann. Cas. 1912D, 497; Manson v. Williams, 213 U. S. 453, 53 L. ed. 869, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 53 L. ed. 332, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

Actual fraud is required to invalidate a lien or transfer under the bankruptcy act.

Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Van Iderstein v. National Discount Co. 227 U. S. 575, 57 L. ed. 652, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343.

It certainly cannot be successfully asserted that a concern not known by its active manager to be insolvent, and which is not shown to have been insolvent, which was making efforts to prepare itself to meet its maturing obligations, and in fact was discounting them right along, has purchased merchandise with the intent not to pay for it. The fact that upon being thrown into bankruptcy there were bills that remained unpaid is not sufficient basis for the trustee's elaborate theory of fraudulent intent and bad faith. The defect of this theory is that it involves the building of inference upon inference, with the result that the entire theory is no more than a conjecture. Such processes of reasoning are not sanctioned by the courts.

Ruppert v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 154 N. Y. 93, 47 N. E. 971, 3 Am. Neg. Rep. 711; Pinder v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 173 N. Y. 519, 66 N. E. 405, 13 Am. Neg. Rep. 417.

If our construction of the facts is justified by the record there can be no fraud.

Re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309; Studley v. Boylston Nat. Bank, 229 U. S. 523, 57 L. ed. 1313, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 806; Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co. supra.

There is no equitable estoppel here available to the trustee.

Brown v. Bowen, 30 N. Y. 541, 86 Am. Dec. 406; Ackerman v. True, 175 N. Y. 362, 67 N. E. 629; New York Rubber Co. v. Rothery, 107 N. Y. 310, 1 Am. St. Rep. 822, 14 N. E. 269; Wiser v. Lawler, 189 U. S. 260, 47 L. ed. 802, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 630; Viele v. Judson, 82 N. Y. 32; Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 96, 29 L. ed. 811, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. Arrott, 68 C. C. A. 388, 135 Fed. 756; Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 96 U. S. 720, 24 L. ed. 744; Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 326, 23 L. ed. 927; The Ottumwa Belle, 78 Fed. 643; Winegar v. Fowler, 82 N. Y. 315; Jewett v. Miller, 10 N. Y. 402, 61 Am. Dec. 751; Andrews v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 85 N. Y. 334; Hardin v. Dolge, 46 App. Div. 416, 61 N. Y. Supp. 753; Crosthwaite v. Lebus, 146 Ala. 525, 41 So. 853.

The failure to notify the debtors of the assignment of the accounts receivable cannot be attacked upon the ground of bad faith. The authorities make it equally clear that the failure to give such notification in no wise militates against the validity of the assignment.

Digitized by Google

Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. 360, 22 L. ed. 568; Young v. Upson, 115 Fed. 192; Stackhouse v. Holden, 66 App. Div. 423, 73 N. Y. Supp. 203; White v. Platt, 5 Denio, 269; Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Board of Education v. Duparquet, 50 N. J. Eq. 234, 24 Atl. 922.

In the absence of bad faith, the fact that secrecy is observed with reference to transactions affecting property of this character will not invalidate them.

Sexton v. Kessler & Co. 225 U. S. 90, 56 L. ed. 995, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657.

A trustee who attacks a transaction as preferential has the burden of establishing that the transfer was made within the statutory period while the bankrupt was insolvent, with the intent on his part to prefer, and with knowledge or reasonable cause to believe, on the part of the creditor, that a preference was intended.

Getts v. Janesville Wholesale Grocery Co. 163 Fed. 417; Grant v. First Nat. Bank, 97 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 971; Re Bartlett, 172 Fed. 679; Re Pfaffinger, 154 Fed. 523; Calhoun County Bank v. Cain, 82 C. C. A. 114, 152 Fed. 983; Re Hines, 144 Fed. 142; Hardy v. Gray, 75 C. C. A. 562, 144 Fed. 922; Tumlin v. Bryan, 21 L.R.A.(N.S.) 960, 165 Fed. 166; Lopez v. Campbell, 163 N. Y. 340, 57 N. E. 501; Paulding v. Chrome Steel Co. 94 N. Y. 334; Re Rogers Constr. Co. 79 App. Div. 419, 79 N. Y. Supp. 444; Swan v. Stiles, 94 App. Div. 117, 87 N. Y. Supp. 1089; Reed v. Helois Carbide Specialty Co. 64 N. J. Eq. 231, 53 Atl. 1057.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a petition by the appellee, Dockendorff, filed in the bankruptcy proceedings against the bankrupt, the [514] Schwab-Kepner Company, to have paid over to him the proceeds of accounts receivable alleged to have been assigned to him by the bankrupt. The defenses set up were that the assignment was a preference, and that it was made without present consideration, with intent to defraud creditors of the bankrupt concern. The case was referred to a special master, who found that it did not appear that either the petitioner or the bankrupt knew that the latter was insolvent at the time of the supposed preference, or that there were any transfers with intent to defraud creditors, and found for the petitioner. His finding of facts and conclusion were concurred in by the district court and circuit court of appeals. 121 C. C. A. 597, 203 Fed. 475.

A part of the appellant's brief is devoted to the attempt to show that the findings below as to insolvency and the knowledge of the parties was wrong, and a distinction is urged between what are called the master's inferences and the facts upon which those inferences were based. But no sufficient reason is shown for departing from our ordinary rule, where the master, the court of first instance, and the circuit court of appeals, have agreed, and in the course of the hearing this was admitted. Merillat v. Hensey, 221 U. S. 333, 55 L. ed. 758, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 370, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 497. On the other side it is argued that this is not a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings within § 24 of the bankruptcy act, and that therefore the appeal should not have been allowed. This contention, if open, seems to be answered sufficiently by Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412. But the appellant's main proposition is that the transactions with the appellee were fraudulent in law, however unconscious of it the parties may have been, and so it is necessary to make a short statement of the facts.

The bankrupt, a New Jersey corporation, did business in New York as a cotton converter. It bought raw [515] material from the mills, ordered it sent to bleacheries designated by it, sold the goods when finished, and had them shipped from the bleacheries to the buyers. Dockendorff, on favorable statements of the company's condition, made successive agreements to procure loans not exceeding $175,000 at any one time, the bankrupt giving demand notes, assigning as security all its accounts receivable thereafter to be created, and paying certain commissions. In May, 1910, the agreement now in question was made. By this the bankrupt was to assign within seven days after shipment the accounts receivable of credit sales made by it; upon that security Dockendorff was himself to lend 80 per cent of the net face value of such as he should approve, less commissions and discounts, up to $175,000; the bankrupt was to give its notes, deliver the shipping documents, furnish evidence of actual receipt of the merchandise when required, notify Dockendorff of any return of goods or counterclaims, deliver the proceeds of such accounts as were proper, and permit him to examine its books and correspondence, etc.; Dockendorff's lien was to be for all sums due, and to cover all accounts, but he was not bound to lend on accounts not approved by him. Further details do not need to be stated in view of the establishment of the parties' good faith. On November 29, 1910, an involuntary petition was filed, the bankrupt then owing Dockendorff $252,838.54 for advances under the agrement, and he having received assignments of accounts from the bankrupt as it received orders; that is, after the contract of sale was made, but before the delivery of the goods.

Digitized by Google

The trustee relies upon the general application of the lien under the agreement as constituting a fraud in law. Whatever effect it might have as evidence must be laid on one side, in view of the findings below. The question here is whether successive assignments of accounts by way of security, in pursuance of a contract under which advances [516] were made to enable the assignor to get the goods, on the faith of the undertaking that the accounts should be assigned, were bad because the contract embraced all accounts, although neither party contemplated any fraud. The rule of the English statutes as to reputed ownership may extend to debts growing due to the bankrupt in the course of his business, but we have no such statute. The advances were the means by which the bankrupt got the ownership of the goods. The contract of itself would operate as a conveyance as soon as the rights to which it applied were acquired. Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435. We do not see why, in the interval between the acquisition of the goods and the specific assignment of accounts, the right of general creditors without lien should intervene to defeat a security given in good faith, when, but for the promise of it, the property never would have come into the bankrupt's hands. There may have been a moment when the goods could have been attached, or when, if insolvency had been made known, as in National City Bank v. Hotchkiss, Nov. 3, 1913 [231 U. S. 50, ante, 115, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20], it would have been too late to make the promised lien good. But in this case, the lien was acquired before any knowledge of insolvency, and before any attachment intervened. See Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 47 L. ed. 717, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co. 227 U. S. 575, 583, 57 L. ed. 652, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343. It is objected that this lien was secret. But notice to the debtors was not necessary to the validity of the assignment as against creditors (Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508, 522), and merely keeping silence to the latter, whether known or unknown, created no estoppel (Wiser v. Lawler, 189 U. S. 260, 270, 47 L. ed. 802, 809, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 630; Ackerman v. True, 175 N. Y. 353, 363, 67 N. E. 629). There was no active concealment and no attempt to mislead anyone interested to know the truth.

We content ourselves with this very general answer to an argument that dealt with many details that we have not mentioned, because those details were material only to a [517] reconsideration of the findings of fact. Probably a hope of securing such a reconsideration was one of the inducements toward bringing the case here.

A subordinate question was raised on the exclusion of some of the bankrupt's books, as to which it seems to us enough to say that it does not appear that any wrong has been done.

Decree affirmed.

JAMES A. KINDER,† Trustee, Plff. in Err.,
v.
EDWARD SCHARFF et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 517-521.)

Limitation of actions — suit to set aside conveyance by bankrupt — fraud.

The two years' limitation after the closing of the estate, prescribed by the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 546, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3421), § 11d, for suits by or against trustees in bankruptcy, bars an action by a former trustee to set aside a conveyance made by the bankrupt as in fraud of creditors, brought after he had had the bankruptcy proceedings reopened for that purpose, on the ground that he had just discovered the facts, where, during the pendency of the original proceedings, the trustee suspected the alleged fraud and made some inquiries, but dropped the matter because he thought it would not pay to go farther.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, III. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 99.]

Argued December 4 and 5, 1913. Decided December 15, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the District Court for the Parish of Calcasieu in that state, dismissed a suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy, to set aside a conveyance made by the bankrupt, as in fraud of creditors. Affirmed.

See same case below, 129 La. 218, 55 So. 769.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Hannis Taylor and A. P. Pujo argued the cause, and, with Messrs. L. A.

†Death of James A. Kinder suggested, and appearance of Edgar N. Collins, his successor as trustee, filed and entered December 1, 1913, as plaintiff in error herein.

Digitized by Google

Goudeau and W. B. Williamson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Paragraph D, § 11, of the bankrupt act of 1898, as amended, providing that "no suit shall be brought by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed," is a statute of limitation, and when pleaded as a bar to a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent sale must be construed and applied as other statutes of limitation.

Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342–350, 22 L. ed. 636–639.

Where fraud is the foundation of the action, the limitation of two years under the bankrupt act does not begin to run, in the absence of negligence or laches of the plaintiff, until the discovery of the fraud.

Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528–542, 29 L. ed. 467–471, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

In suits in equity, where relief is sought on the ground of fraud and the party injured remained in ignorance of the fraud without fault or want of diligence on his part, limitation does not begin to run until the fraud is discovered, although there are no special circumstances and no effort on the part of the party committing the fraud to conceal it.

Levee Comrs. v. Tensas Delta Land Co. 204 Fed. 736.

A suit by a trustee to recover assets alleged to have been fraudulently transferred by the bankrupt within four months prior to the filing of the petition ought not to stand like a suit between private parties.

United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233–240, 29 L. ed. 110–112, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

Courts of the United States follow their own adjudications in the interpretation, administration, and enforcement of Federal statutes, and not those of state courts.

Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 182 U. S. 499–510, 45 L. ed. 1200–1206, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 381.

Mr. Charles A. McCoy argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Leland H. Moss and Robert L. Knox, filed a brief for defendants in error:

This is a statute of limitation. It is precisely like other statutes of limitation, and applies to all judicial contests between the assignee and other persons touching the property or rights of property of the bankrupt, transferable to or vested in the assignee, where the interests are adverse and have so existed for more than two years from the time when the cause of action accrued, for or against the assignee. Such is almost the language in which the provision is expressed in § 5057 of the Revised Statutes.

Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 22 L. ed. 636.

There must be reasonable diligence; and the means of knowledge are the same thing in effect as knowledge itself.

Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135, 25 L. ed. 807; Johnson v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 370, 37 L. ed. 485, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 554; Pearsall v. Smith, 149 U. S. 236, 37 L. ed. 717, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 833; Kirby v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 120 U. S. 130, 30 L. ed. 569, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Burke v. Smith (Putnam v. New Albany & S. C. Junction R. Co.) 16 Wall. 390, 21 L. ed. 361; Johnson v. Atlantic, G. & W. I. Transit Co. 156 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup Ct. Rep. 520; Bates v. Preble, 151 U. S. 162, 38 L. ed. 111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Foster v. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. 146 U. S. 88, 36 L. ed. 899, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Norris v. Haggin, 136 U. S. 389, 34 L. ed. 426, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 942.

Whatever is notice enough to excite attention to a fact and put a party on his guard and call for an inquiry is notice of everything to which such inquiry might have led. When a person has sufficient information to lead him to a fact, he shall be deemed conversant with it.

Johnson v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 370, 37 L. ed. 485, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 554; Dauphin's Succession, 112 La. 139, 36 So. 287; Poirier v. Burton-Swartz Cypress Co. 127 La. 936, 54 So. 292; Citizens' Bank v. Jeansonne, 120 La. 399, 45 So. 367.

Concealment must be the result of positive acts; mere silence is insufficient.

Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135, 25 L. ed. 807; Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317, 36 L. ed. 719, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Pearsall v. Smith, 149 U. S. 236, 37 L. ed. 717, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 833; Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 343, 22 L. ed. 636.

[520] Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover land alleged to have been conveyed by the bankrupt in fraud of creditors. The defendant pleaded that the estate had been closed and that the action was barred by the lapse of two years, under § 11d of the bankruptcy act, and also that he purchased the land for its full value and in good faith. The estate had been closed and the two years had run, but after they had elapsed, the former trustee petitioned to have the proceedings reopened on the ground that he had just discovered the facts, and that the sale should be set aside. The petition was granted, this suit was brought, and the judge of first instance ordered a reconveyance. The supreme court of Louisiana found, as it was compelled to by the testimony of the trustee himself, that during the pendency of the original proceeding the trustee suspected the alleged fraud, made some inquiries, but dropped the matter because he thought that it was not worth while; that is, that it would not pay to go farther: He "voluntarily abstained from availing himself of the means put in his hand by the law itself for the ascertainment of a suspected fact," by examining the bankrupt and otherwise. On this ground the court held that he could not remove the bar of the statute, reversed the judgment, and dismissed the suit. 129 La. 218, 55 So. 769.

Digitized by Google

We are of opinion that the decision of the supreme court was right. It is not necessary to consider whether the running of the two years after the estate is first closed is a bar to all suits upon claims that might have been collected if they had been known, or to controvert the conclusion of Bilafsky v. Abraham, 183 Mass. 401, 67 N. E. 318, that such suits are not barred. But it is obvious that there must be some limits if the promise of repose after two years in § 11d is not to be a mirage. The power to reopen [521] estates given in § 2 (8) "whenever it appears [that] they were closed before being fully administered" [30 Stat. at L. 546, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3421] cannot be taken to put it into the power of the court of bankruptcy to remove the bar of § 11 at its own will simply because a trustee may have changed his mind. It was argued that the court of first instance found fraud, and that we could not review the findings of fact. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 97, 53 L. ed. 417, 424, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220. But if so, we equally are barred from reviewing the findings of the supreme court, that the trustee was chargeable with knowledge of the fraud, if there was one. Therefore, a part from the difference between the statutes considered there and here, cases like Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 22 L. ed. 636, and Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 29 L. ed. 467, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155, where the cause of action for fraud was concealed, do not apply. The question is simply whether, when, after an estate is closed, and more than two years later a trustee comes to the conclusion that he undervalued a claim that he knew of and might have sued upon, or finds that the value has risen since, the bankruptcy court may reopen the estate for the sole purpose of getting rid of the statute, and allowing the trustee to sue. See Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135, 25 L. ed. 807; Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185, 196, 28 L. ed. 395, 399, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382.

The judge had no power, by an ex parte order reopening the estate, to remove the bar that was completed, and that there was no ground for removing. Whether it be put on the construction of the bankruptcy act or on the ground that the estate was fully administered quoad hoc, or of laches on the part of the trustee, it comes to the same thing. The claim in controversy cannot be made the ground of a suit.

Judgment of the Supreme Court affirmed.

Mr. Justice Pitney concurs in the result.

---

[522] CLIFFORD G. LUDVIGH, as Trustee in Bankruptcy of the Estate and Effects of Philip Horowitz and Joseph Horowitz, Individually and as Copartners, etc., Appellant,

v.

AMERICAN WOOLEN COMPANY OF NEW YORK and the Niagara Woolen Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 522–530.)

Bankruptcy — assets — bailment or sale — validity as to creditors.

An agreement between woolen manufacturers and a corporation formed to represent a firm of dealers in woolens must be construed to amount to a bailment in the nature of a consignment arrangement, with the net proceeds of sale to be accounted for to the consignor, and with the right to return the unsold goods, which agreement, in the absence of fraud, is good as against creditors in the event of the bankruptcy of the firm, where, after providing for the delivery to the corporation of woolens, the title to which is to remain in the manufacturers until sold, such agreement binds the corporation to sell the same and to collect and pay over to the woolen company the proceeds, less the difference between invoice and selling price, to guarantee the payment of bills and accounts, to pay the invoice price of any goods not accounted for under the above provision, and to return to the possession of the manufacturers immediately upon the termination of the agreement all merchandise, the possession of which is held by the corporation under such agreement.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 55.]

Argued November 7 and 10, 1913. Decided December 15, 1913.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court for the Southern District of New York, in favor of a trustee in bankruptcy in a suit by him to set aside certain transactions of the bankrupts as fraudulent. Affirmed.

Digitized by Google

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 180, 188 Fed. 30.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Abram I. Elkus argued the cause, and, with Mr. Garrard Glenn, filed a brief for appellant:

In the present case every fact is present which would prevent this transaction from being one of factorage, and none of the essential elements of a factor's obligations appear. And per contra, every element of a sale appears.

1. In a consignment arrangement the principal selects the goods which he desires to be sold. Here the so-called factor selected the goods, bargaining about the price.

2. The so-called factor could not return any goods which had once been ordered. This is incompatible with the idea of a consignment, and renders the transaction one of sale.

Helby v. Mathews [1895] A. C. 471, 64 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 465, 11 Reports, 232, 72 L. T. N. S. 841, 43 Week. Rep. 561, 60 J. P. 20; Re Zephyr Mercantile Co. 203 Fed. 576.

3. It is inconsistent with the idea of a consignment agreement that one becomes a factor before the goods are delivered to him.

12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d. ed. 631; Wright v. Campbell, 4 Burr. 2046, 1 H. Bl. 628; Ommen v. Talcott, 112 C. C. A. 239, 188 Fed. 401; Ryberg v. Snell, 2 Wash. C. C. 294, 403, Fed. Cas. Nos. 12,189, 12,190.

4. The factor's duty to keep the principal's goods separate from his own was not performed or required.

Clarke v. Tipping, 9 Beav. 284; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 1089.

5. The factor's duty to turn over the moneys to his principal as received was not required.

Wallace v. Castle, 14 Hun, 106; Bills v. Schliep, 62 C. C. A. 103, 127 Fed. 103; Re Galt, 56 C. C. A. 470, 120 Fed. 64.

6. The other business methods of the parties are inconsistent with a consignment and show a sale.

7. It is inconsistent with a consignment agreement that the factor can sell when he desires and for what price he desires, but must pay his principal at a fixed price whether he sells or not. This constitutes a sale.

Ex parte White, L. R. 6 Ch. 397, 40 L. J. Bankr. N. S. 73, 24 L. T. N. S. 45, 19 Week. Rep. 488, affirmed sub nom. Towle v. White, 29 L. T. N. S. 78, 21 Week. Rep. 465; Stoneman v. Van Vechten, 46 App. Div. 370, 61 N. Y. Supp. 513, affirmed in 165 N. Y. 666, 59 N. E. 1131; Re Wells, 140 Fed. 752; Banker Bros. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 222 U. S. 210, 56 L. ed. 168, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38.

8. Even if the majority of the circuit court of appeals be right in their construction of the agreements, and Horowitz was not bound to pay for the goods at any fixed time or so long as they remained unsold, still, as Horowitz had the absolute right to pay for the goods at invoice prices, no consignment relation arose.

Ex parte White, and Stoneman v. Van Vechten, supra; Re Penny, 176 Fed. 141.

When the language of a contract is ambiguous, it is elemental that the contract should be construed in the light of the attending circumstances.

Atty. Gen. v. Drummond, 1 Drury & War. 366, affirmed in 2 H. L. Cas. 837, 14 Jur. 137; District of Columbia v. Gallaher, 124 U. S. 505, 31 L. ed. 526, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Lowrey v. Hawaii, 206 U. S. 206, 51 L. ed. 1026, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Guaranty Trust Co. v. Koehler, 115 C. C. A. 475, 195 Fed. 669; Frankfort Broom Co. v. Western Warehouse Co. 118 C. C. A. 550, 200 Fed. 398; Nelson v. Ohio Cultivator Co. 112 C. C. A. 394, 188 Fed. 620; Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 55 L. ed. 502, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 24.

The rule applicable to this case is that any security arrangement, whether chattel mortgage or conditional sale, whether recorded or not, that allows the debtor to deal with the property as his own while the lien lasts, is void as against the creditors of the debtor.

Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 22 L. ed. 758; Re Wells, 140 Fed. 752; Re Penny, 176 Fed. 141.

Any conditional sale or chattel mortgage has the effect of allowing the debtor to deal with the property as his own if it permits him to sell the goods at whatever price he pleases, and allows him to do anything with the proceeds other than turn them over to the mortgagee or vendor (Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed 87; Re Penny, 176 Fed. 141), or if it permits him to retain even the expenses of his business out of the proceeds (Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790).

To be valid against the vendee's creditors it must require that the identical moneys received from each sale be turned over to the vendor as and when it is collected, in extinction of the debt, and without deduction for any purpose of the vendee's convenience.

Edgell v. Hart, 9 N. Y. 213, 59 Am. Dec. 532; Russell v. Winne, 37 N. Y. 591, 97 Am. Dec. 755; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N.

Digitized by Google

Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Re Howland, 109 Fed. 869; Ludden v. Hazen, 31 Barb. 650.

The validity of the arrangement under review as against the bankrupts' creditors is to be determined entirely by the law of New York, where the transactions occurred.

Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. ed. 457, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 577, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 49 L. ed. 956, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Re Marine Constr. & Dry Dock Co. 75 C. C. A. 451, 144 Fed. 649; Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Re Howland, 109 Fed. 869.

A chattel mortgage or a conditional sale secures a debt, the debt being owed in the one case for a loan and in the other for the purchase price, and in either case the debtor has no legal title to the property.

Cole v. Berry, 42 N. J. L. 308, 36 Am. Rep. 511.

The New York cases start with the proposition that possession of goods should accompany ownership; hence the separation of the two is often presumptively fraudulent, and where they are separated and also the possession is coupled with such a right of dominion as a power of resale, given in advance by the one in whom the title is vested, the vesting of such power renders the whole transaction fraudulent, as matter of law, as against the other creditors of the debtor.

Edgell v. Hart, 9 N. Y. 213, 59 Am. Dec. 532; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790.

That leads to this: that the creditor should not permit the debtor to resell the mortgaged property.

Conkling v. Shelley, 28 N. Y. 363, 84 Am. Dec. 348; Brackett v. Harvey, 91 N. Y. 214; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 22 L. ed. 758; Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Re Perkins, 155 Fed. 237; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 147 Fed. 280; Re Rasmussen, 136 Fed. 704; Re Hickerson, 162 Fed. 345; Re Galt, 120 Fed. 443; Re Gilligan, 81 C. C. A. 595, 152 Fed. 605; Edgell v. Hart, 9 N. Y. 213, 59 Am. Dec. 532.

People must be held to the natural consequences of their acts, however strong might be the inward justification. And if the facts appear which, under well-settled rules, justify the conclusion of fraud, then, however the court may find that there was no volition of fraud, the case is one of fraud, and the consequences must follow.

Coleman v. Burr, 93 N. Y. 31, 45 Am. Rep. 160.

The corporate identity of the Niagara Woolen Company cannot operate to defeat the claims of the creditors of Horowitz as above discussed.

Re Watertown Paper Co. 94 C. C. A. 528, 169 Fed. 252; Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Cook, Corp. 6th ed. § 663; Re Muncie Pulp Co. 71 C. C. A. 530, 139 Fed. 546; Re Rieger, 157 Fed. 609; Holbrook, C. & R. Corp. v. Perkins, 77 C. C. A. 462, 147 Fed. 166; Brundred v. Rice, 49 Ohio. St. 640, 34 Am. St. Rep. 589, 32 N. E. 169; First Nat. Bank v. F. C. Trebein Co. 59 Ohio St. 316, 52 N. E. 834; United States v. Milwaukee Refrigerator Transit Co. 142 Fed. 247; Booth v. Bunce, 33 N. Y. 139, 88 Am. Dec. 372; Re Darby [1911] 1 K. B. 101, 80 L. J. K. B. N. S. 180, 18 Manson, 10; Anthony v. American Glucose Co. 146 N. Y. 413, 41 N. E. 23.

Mr. Daniel P. Hays argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin D. Hays, filed a brief for appellees:

The merchandise in question was delivered to the Niagara Company merely on consignment. The title thereto never passed out of the Woolen Company.

Re Smith & N. Piano Co. 79 C. C. A. 53, 149 Fed. 111; Dows v. National Exch. Bank, 91 U. S. 618, 630, 23 L. ed. 214, 217; Re Galt, 56 C. C. A. 470, 120 Fed. 64.

Even if the transaction between the Woolen Company and the Niagara Company was not a consignment of the merchandise, nevertheless the Woolen Company retained title to the merchandise until payment was made, and, if the transaction was a sale, it was a conditional sale, valid under the laws of the state of New York.

Empire State Type Founding Co. v. Grant, 114 N. Y. 40, 21 N. E. 49; Adams v. Roscoe Lumber Co. 159 N. Y. 176, 53 N. E. 805; Fennnikoh v. Gunn, 59 App. Div. 132, 69 N. Y. Supp. 12; Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 435, 156 Fed. 545; Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Re New York Economical Printing Co. 49 C. C. A. 133, 110 Fed. 514; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 345, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; William W. Bierce v. Hutchins, 205 U. S. 340, 51 L. ed. 828, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Conkling v. Shelley, 28 N. Y. 360, 84 Am. Dec. 348; Brackett v. Harvey, 91 N. Y. 214.

The entire distinction between the cases where the conditional sales and chattel mortgages are held valid and where they are invalid is based upon this question as to whether the vendee, who sells the goods, can consume the proceeds by using them for his own benefit, or whether he must turn them over to the vendor.

Brackett v. Harvey, 91 N. Y. 220; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 524, 22 L. ed. 763;

Digitized by Google

Conkling v. Shelley, 28 N. Y. 360, 84 Am. Dec. 348; Edgell v. Hart, 9 N. Y. 213, 59 Am. Dec. 532; Russell v. Winne, 37 N. Y. 591, 97 Am. Dec. 755; Re Howland, 109 Fed. 869; Re Penny, 176 Fed. 141; Re Garcewich, 53 C. C. A. 510, 115 Fed. 87; Re Wells, 140 Fed. 752; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790; Pontiac Buggy Co. v. Skinner, 158 Fed. 858; Re Marine Constr. & Dry Dock Co. 75 C. C. 451, 144 Fed. 649; Smith v. Williams, 90 App. Div. 507, 85 N. Y. Supp. 506; Dunlop v. Mercer, 86 C. C. A. 435, 156 Fed. 545; Re Hartman, 185 Fed. 196; Re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a suit in the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York by Ludvigh, as trustee in bankruptcy of the firm of Philip Horowitz & Son, to set aside as fraudulent certain transactions of the bankrupts with the American Woolen Company of New York (which we will call the "Woolen Company"), and to recover for goods taken from the bankrupts by the Woolen Company prior to the institution of proceedings [523] in bankruptcy. The district court held in favor of the trustee and sustained his right to recover the value of the goods so taken (176 Fed. 145). Upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit the judgment of the district court was reversed (110 C. C. A. 180, 188 Fed. 30), and the case is here upon appeal.

The facts as found by both courts are very little in dispute. It appears that Horowitz & Son, the bankrupts, had had a contract in writing with the Woolen Company which expired on December 1, 1902, whereby goods were to be consigned to Horowitz & Son, the title to the merchandise or its proceeds to remain in the Woolen Company until fully accounted for, all bills of such consigned goods to be payable to the Woolen Company and acounts of sales to be rendered to that company at least once a month. The Horowitzes were also to give security to protect the Woolen Company from any failure to perform the contract; the profit of the Horowitz firm was to be the difference between the invoice prices and the selling prices of the goods; they were to have 7 per cent discount for payment within four months, and any increase in profits by varying the terms of trade was to go to them, and they were to have a drawing account of $1,200 a month, provided the goods sold by them warranted such payment. In 1902, for reasons which do not distinctly appear in the record, the Woolen Company expressed its desire to have the Horowitz firm incorporated, and a corporation was formed under the name and style of The Niagara Woolen Company (which we will designate the "Niagara Company"), for the purpose of contracting and dealing with the Woolen Company and of dealing in fabrics received therefrom. One hundred and ninety-five of the two hundred shares of the Niagara Company were issued to Philip Horowitz, as fully paid up, in consideration of a mortgage by him on certain real estate for $19,500. A contract in writing was entered into by the [524] terms of which it was agreed that the Woolen Company would deliver such merchandise to the Niagara Company as it saw fit, and that the Niagara Company would accept possession of the merchandise upon the following conditions: The Niagara Company should hold and care for the merchandise as the property of the Woolen Company, the title thereto or proceeds therefrom being vested in the latter company, and the merchandise being at all times under its control. The title to the merchandise was to pass directly from the Woolen Company to the purchaser. The property was to be insured for the benefit and in the name of the Woolen Company. The Niagara Company was to be given the usual discounts allowed by the Woolen Company, and was restricted to the city of Elmira, New York, and the state of Montana in doing a merchandise business other than as provided in the contract. The Niagara Company agreed to execute such other documents as the Woolen Company deemed advisable to carry out the agreement, and the Woolen Company had the option to terminate the agreement upon the breach of any condition by the Niagara Company. The agreement further provided:

"IV. Said party of the second part [the Niagara Company] agrees to sell such merchandise to such persons as they shall judge to be of good credit and business standing, and to collect for and in behalf of the party of the first part [the Woolen Company], all bills and accounts for the merchandise so sold, and to immediately pay over to the said party of the first part any amount collected as aforesaid, immediately upon its collection, minus, however, the difference between the price at which said merchandise so collected for has been invoiced to the party of the second part, and the price at which said merchandise has been sold as aforesaid by the party of the second part.

"V. Said party of the second part does hereby guarantee the payment of all bills and accounts for merchandise, [525] possession of which is delivered to it under this agreement, and it hereby agrees, in case any merchandise delivered under the provisions of this agreement by the party of the first part to the party of the second part is not accounted for to the party of the first part under the provisions of clause IV. of this agreement, to pay to the party of the first part the invoice price of said merchandise, and thereupon title to said merchandise, or to the proceeds thereof, so paid for, shall pass to the party of the second part, and shall then be exempted from the provisions of this agreement.

Digitized by Google

. . . . . .

"VIII. This agreement shall continue for one year. If, for any reason, this agreement terminates, all of the merchandise, possession of which is held by the party of the second part under this agreement, shall at said termination be immediately returned to the possession of the party of the first part."

At the same time an agreement was made by the Woolen Company and Horowitz & Company and one Jeremiah P. Murphy, whereby Horowitz & Company guaranteed the performance of the contract of the Niagara Company, and the Horowitzes, in accordance with the contract, transferred 197 shares of that company's stock to Murphy, who really represented the Woolen Company, in trust, the stock to be voted as the Woolen Company directed, except that so long as the Niagara Company and the Horowitzes performed their agreements, the stock should be voted for whomsoever they designated for president of the Niagara Company, and should be used in all meetings as though the Horowitzes had control of it, and they were to receive the dividends thereon. Upon breach the stock was to be transferred to the Woolen Company or whomsoever it designated. Horowitz was elected president of the Niagara Company, and one of the Woolen Company's employees was made treasurer of the [526] company: the by-laws of the Niagara Company provided that checks on the funds of the company were to be signed by the president and treasurer jointly. The Niagara Company had an office in part of the premises of Horowitz & Company with a sign on the outside door, under that of Horowitz & Company. Afterwards the Woolen Company put in a bookkeeper who kept an account of the goods billed to the Niagara Company and of sales and payments reported by the Horowitzes. The goods were sold in the name of the Niagara Company, and until May, 1904, when Philip Horowitz began to embezzle the funds of the Niagara Company by indorsing checks payable to the company for sales made by it, and depositing them in his personal account, such funds were deposited in the bank account of the Niagara Company. An amendment to this contract, extending it for another year, and changing it in respect to discounts, requiring the Niagara Company to make monthly accounts of sales, giving to it a discount of 8 per cent upon all invoices the amounts of which were turned over to the Woolen Company within sixty days after sale by the Niagara Company, and then a further discount of 2 per cent, but obliging the Niagara Company to pay 6 per cent interest in invoices the amounts of which were not turned over to the Woolen Company within sixty days, was made on November 11, 1903; otherwise it continued in force.

On October 26, 1904, a suspicious fire occurred on the premises and Philip Horowitz immediately left the country and has not been heard of since. On or about that date the Woolen Company removed from the premises of Horowitz & Company 760 pieces of goods which had been consigned to the Niagara Company, and for the value of which this suit was brought by the trustee, bankruptcy proceedings having been instituted shortly thereafter.

Both courts found that, whatever the true character of the Niagara Company was, there was no actual fraud [527] in the transaction. It is quite probable that the Woolen Company desired the method of doing business through the medium of the Niaraga Company because it was deemed to be a better legal form, and because it wanted to more effectually check up the transactions of the Horowitzes. The opinion of the district court, as well as the opinion of the circuit court of appeals, shows that the case has been made to turn mainly upon the interpretation of §§ 4 and 5 of the agreement with the Niagara Company, which, the district court found, was only another name for the Woolen Company, and which, the circuit court of appeals found, was a sort of cash box for the Woolen Company, and a check upon the transactions of Horowitz & Company. We think an examination of §§ 4 and 5, when read in connection with § 8, shows most clearly that the Niagara Company was not obliged to pay for goods in its possession and unsold.

By the provisions of § 4 the party of the second part, the Niagara Company, was obliged to sell to persons adjudged to be of good credit and business standing, and to collect for the party of the first part, the Woolen Company, accounts for merchandise sold, and immediately pay over to it the amounts collected, less the difference between the price of the merchandise as invoiced to the Niaraga Company, and the price at which it was sold. In § 5 of the contract the Niagara Company guaranteed the payment of bills and accounts, and agreed, in case any merchandise delivered was not accounted for under the provisions of clause 4, to pay to the Woolen Company its invoice price, whereupon title to the merchandise or proceeds thereof was to pass to the Niagara Company, and they were to be exempt from the terms of the agreement. That part of § 5 relating to goods not accounted for refers specifically to the provisions of clause 4 of the agreement, which deals with goods sold [528] only. The entire contract must be read to ascertain the purpose of the parties, and we find in clause 8, limiting the agreement to one year, the provision that if for any reason the agreement terminated, all of the merchandise, the possession of which was held by the Niagara Company under the agreement, should be immediately returned to the Woolen Company. The district court held that this agreement, §§ 4 and 5, obligated the Niagara Company to pay for each and every piece of goods delivered under the contract with it, but for the reasons we have stated we cannot agree with this construction. We find that the agreement was really one of bailment for the purpose of sale, with the right to return the unsold goods. There is nothing illegal in such contracts when made in good faith. As this court held in Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 330, 37 L. ed. 1093, 1100, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99, an agency to sell and return the proceeds or the specific goods stands upon the same footing as a bailment where the identical article is to be returned in the same or altered form, and title to the property is not changed. It therefore follows that, if there are no other circumstances controlling the situation and establishing that this contract was a mere cover for a fraudulent or illegal purpose, there is nothing in its terms operating to transfer the title to the goods to the Niagara Company, or to prevent the return of those unsold to the Woolen Company, or their being retaken by that company upon the happening of the contingency shown in this case.

Digitized by Google

But it is insisted by the counsel for the appellant that the conduct of the parties shows that their real purpose and understanding were to make an effectual sale; and that the writing, even if interpreted to withhold the title by its terms, was merely a convenient resort to fortify the right to take the goods in event of disaster overtaking the Horowitz concern. Some of the most cogent of the circumstances relied upon will be noticed. It is said that the Horowitzes selected the goods, whereas, under the [529] contract, the Woolen Company had the right to turn over any it saw fit; but this circumstance may be readily explained, for the Horowitzes were familiar with and of course interested in their own trade, and more likely than anyone else to make proper selections for it, and from the sale of the goods chosen they were to make their profits.

A letter in evidence, written in December, 1903, by an agent of the Woolen Company in answer to a request to take back goods, contained the statement that the Woolen Company could not, at that late date, consent to have fall goods made expressly for the Horowitzes and delivered in accordance with the terms of the agreement turned back in the stock. It is true that this circumstance is more consistent with the idea of sale than of bailment, but it had reference to goods which were delivered, and evidenced the desire of the Woolen Company to have them sold under the consignment as the parties intended.

It is urged that the goods were not kept separately, but it appears that the tags of the Woolen Company were left upon the goods, and it is not shown that any creditor relied upon mismarking or misbranding. And memoranda are in evidence showing the names of certain salesmen thereon, but on these same bills it is stated that the goods were furnished under the agreement already referred to.

Against these considerations are the positive terms of the agreement, found to be free from fraud and fairly entered into, which, as we interpret them, permitted goods unsold to be returned. There is the further undisputed fact that until Philip Horowitz began, in the spring of 1904, to violate the agreement, checks for sales were quite uniformly deposited to the credit of the Niagara Company and the proceeds turned over to the Woolen Company; that the Woolen Company had a bookkeeper in the Horowitz place, who kept account of the goods consigned and sold; that checks were required to be indorsed by Horowitz and [530] a representative of the Woolen Company, and that an agent of the Woolen Company frequently visited the concern, inquiring into the sales, and urging prompt collections. The Horowitzes and the Niagara Company were not permitted to keep the proceeds of the sales or to use them for their own benefit, and this was only done through the fraudulent conduct of Philip Horowitz, in violation of the agreement and the purpose of the parties.

We are unable to find that this contract was either actually or constructively fraudulent, and hold, as was found in the Circuit Court of Appeals, that it was what it purported to be,—a consignment arrangement with the net proceeds of sales to be accounted for to the consignor, and with the right to return the unsold goods. Finding no error in the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals, the same is affirmed.

Digitized by Google

MARY R. PEABODY,† Saco & Biddeford Savings Institution, Samuel Ellery Jennison, and the Portsmouth Harbor Land & Hotel Company, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 530–540.)

Eminent domain — taking — apprehension of firing from government batteries.

Lands over which is the most suitable field of fire for practice and other purposes of an adjacent coast defense battery in times of peace cannot be said to have been appropriated by the government so as to raise an implied agreement on its part for compensation because of the impairment of the value of the lands, due to the apprehension of a repetition of the firing over and across them, where the guns have been so fired on but two occasions, both shortly after installation, and not at all within the last eight years, and there is nothing to show any intention on the part of the government to repeat such firing.

[For other cases, see Eminent Domain, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 289.]

Argued February 27, 1913. Decided December 15, 1913.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing petitions for compensation for land alleged to have been taken by the United States for public use. Affirmed.

See same case below, 46 Ct. Cl. 39.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John Lowell argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William Frye White and Chauncey Hackett, filed a brief for appellants:

Property may be defined as certain rights in things which pertain to persons, and which are created and sanctioned by law. These rights are the right of user, the right of exclusion, and the right of disposition.

Old Colony & F. River R. Co. v. Plymouth County, 14 Gray, 161, Hare, Am. Const. Law, p. 357; 1 Bentham's Works, 1843 ed. 308; "Property," New Oxford Dict.; Morrison v. Semple, 6 Binn. 94; Jackson ex dem. Pearson v. Housel, 17 Johns. 281; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Englewood Connecting R. Co. 115 Ill. 385, 56 Am. Rep. 173, 4 N. E. 246; Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113, 2 Pac. 6; St. Louis v. Hill, 116 Mo. 527, 21 L.R.A. 226, 22 S. W. 861; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 738, 25 L. ed. 496, 508; 1 Lewis, Em. Dom. 3d ed. pp. 51, 52; 2 Austin, Jur. 1051.

In the early cases a taking was held to be the actual physical appropriation of the property or a devesting of the title of it.

Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, 2d ed. pp. 456, 458.

The conception that a taking required actual appropriation of the property or a devesting of the title of it has been gradually broadening.

1 Lewis, Em. Dom. pp. 56, 57; Stockdale v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 28 Utah, 211, 77 Pac. 849; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; 1 Hare, Am. Const. Law, p. 388; Chappell v. United States, 34 Fed. 673, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co. 51 N. H. 504, 12 Am. Rep. 147; Grand Rapids Boom. Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308; Thompson v. Androscoggin River Improv. Co. 54 N. H. 545; Peabody v. United States, 43 Ct. Cl. 16; United States v. Welch, 217 U. S. 338, 54 L. ed. 789, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, 19 Ann. Cas. 680; United States v. Grizzard, 219 U. S. 180, 55 L. ed. 165, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1135, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 162; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; United States v. Alexander, 148 U. S. 186, 37 L. ed. 415, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Sprague v. Dorr, 185 Mass. 10, 69 N. E. 344; 15 Cyc. 660, note 41, and pp. 661–670, and notes.

The claimants' land extends in contemplation of law usque ad cœlum.

Co. Litt. 4a; 2 Bl. Com. 18; 3 Kent, Com. 401; Webb's Pollock, Torts, p. 423; Lyman v. Hale, 11 Conn. 177, 27 Am. Dec. 728; Wandsworth Bd. of Works v. United Teleph. Co. L. R. 13 Q. B. Div. 912, 53 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 449, 51 L. T. N. S. 148, 32 Week. Rep. 776, 48 J. P. 676, 12 Eng. Rul. Cas. 630; Humphries v. Brogden, 12 Q. B. 739, 20 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 10, 15 Jur. 124, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 407; Roberts v. Haines, 6 El. & Bl. 643, 7 El. & Bl. 625, 27 L. J. Exch. N. S. 49, 3 Jur. N. S. 886, 5 Week. Rep. 631; 13 Mor. Min. Rep. 668; 2 Erskine, Principles, title 9, § 11; 1 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 577; Lemmon v.

†Death of Mary R. Peabody, one of the appellants herein, suggested, and appearance of Amory Eliot filed and entered February 24, 1913, as a party appellant herein.

NOTE.—Generally, as to what constitutes a taking of private property for public use —see notes to Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Birmingham, S. & T. River R. Co. 18 L.R.A. 166; D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 156; Sweet v. Rechel, 40 L. ed. U. S. 188; and Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 42 L. ed. U. S. 853.

On consequential damages, generally, see notes to D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 156, and Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 42 L. ed. U. S. 853.

Digitized by Google

Webb [1895] A. C. 1, 64 L. J. Ch. N. S. 205, 11 Reports, 116, 71 L. T. N. S. 647, 59 J. P. 564; Corbett v. Hill, L. R. 9 Eq. 671, 39 L. J. Ch. N. S. 547, 22 L. T. N. S. 263.

The line of cases in this court in which it has been held that the acts complained of did not constitute a taking within the meaning of the 5th Amendment are clearly distinguishable from the case at bar.

Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 217, 48 L. ed. 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349.

The claimants' property has been taken; the United States has taken title to the whole of the claimants' property commanded by the guns by acquiring the value thereof and assuming dominion thereof in perpetuo.

United States v. Lynah, supra; Co. Litt. 4b; Peabody v. United States, 43 Ct. Cl. 18.

Mr. Frederick De C. Faust argued the cause, and with Assistant Attorney General Thompson, filed a brief for appellee:

There has been no taking of appellants' property or any of its uses within the rule established by the decisions of this court.

Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Sharp v. United States, 191 U. S. 341, 48 L. ed. 211, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Manigault v. Springs, 199 U. S. 473, 50 L. ed. 274, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; United States v. Welch, 217 U. S. 338, 54 L. ed. 789, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, 19 Ann. Cas. 680; United States v. Grizzard, 219 U. S. 180, 55 L. ed. 165, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1135, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 162; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 642, 25 L. ed. 338; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 542; Radcliff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195, 53 Am. Dec. 357.

The injury of which appellants complain is not the result of a taking of any part of their property or a direct invasion thereof, but is consequential damage for which no right of compensation attaches.

Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 224, 48 L. ed. 417, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 642, 25 L. ed. 338; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Western Turf Asso. v. Greenberg, 204 U. S. 361, 51 L. ed. 521, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. Coons, 6 Watts & S. 101; Lansing v. Smith, 8 Cow. 146; Booth v. Rome, W. & O. Terminal R. Co. 140 N. Y. 267, 24 L.R.A. 105, 37 Am. St. Rep. 552, 35 N. E. 592; Hurdman v. North Eastern R. Co. L. R. 3 C. P. Div. 168, 47 L. J. C. P. N. S. 368, 38 L. T. N. S. 339, 26 Week. Rep. 489; Beseman v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 50 N. J. L. 235, 13 Atl. 164; Carroll v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 40 Minn. 168, 41 N. W. 661; Benner v. Atlantic Dredging Co. 134 N. Y. 156, 17 L. R. A. 220, 30 Am. St. Rep. 649, 31 N. E. 328; Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 549, 3 Am. Rep. 269.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the court of claims, dismissing petitions for compensation for land alleged to have been taken by the United States for public use. 46 Ct. Cl. 39. Separate suits were brought by Samuel Ellery Jennison, the owner at the time the taking is said to have occurred, by his mortgagees, Mary R. Peabody and the Saco & Biddeford Savings Institution, and by his grantee, the Portsmouth Harbor, Land, & Hotel Company. These suits were consolidated and the merits were heard. The following facts are shown by the findings:

The land in question, comprising about 200 acres, forms the southern corner of Gerrish island, the southernmost point on the coast of Maine. It lies about 3 miles from Portsmouth, bordering on the south and [536] east the Atlantic ocean, and on the west the entrance to Portsmouth harbor. Its value consists almost entirely in its adaptability for use as a summer resort, and it had been improved for this purpose by the erection of a hotel, cottage, outbuildings, and pier, by the construction of roads, and by the provision of facilities for summer recreations.

In 1873, long before Jennison acquired title and improved the property, the United States began the construction of a twelve-gun battery upon a tract of 70 acres lying north and west of the land in suit and abutting upon it. This battery was to be one of the outer line of defenses of Portsmouth harbor, for which appropriation had been made by the act of February 21, 1873, 17 Stat. at L. 468, chap. 175. See also act of April 3, 1874, 18 Stat. at L. 25, chap. 74. By the year 1876, a large sum had been expended upon the work, which had reached an advanced stage of construction. Operations were closed in September of that year, however, for want of funds, and the fortification was not occupied by the United States thereafter until work was resumed in 1898. The government then constructed on the same site a battery consisting of three 10-inch guns and two 3-inch rapid fire guns. It was practically completed on June 30, 1901, and was transferred to the artillery on December 16, 1901, being named Fort Foster.

Digitized by Google

No part of the fort encroaches upon the land in suit; the fort is within 200 feet of its northwestern corner and about 1,000 feet from the hotel. The claimants' land lies between the fort and the open sea to the south and southeast; and the guns have a range of fire over all the sea front of the property. As the government reservation on its western side borders the entrance to the harbor, the court found that there was an available portion of the shore belonging to the reservation which permitted the firing of the guns in a southwesterly direction [537] "for practice and for all other necessary purposes in time of peace" without the projectiles passing over the land in question. This conclusion was reached by applying the local law governing the boundary lines of contiguous proprietors where there is a curvature of the shore. Emerson v. Taylor, 9 Me. 42, 23 Am. Dec. 531. It may be noticed here that the petitioners insist that the guns could not be fired over the narrow area thus found to be a part of the reservation without endangering life and property along the New Hampshire coast, and they present in their brief a map to support their assertion. The government urges that this map has not been identified and is wholly incompetent; and that, as the question is one of fact, the finding must be deemed conclusive. But while thus finding that there was a line of fire available to the government over its own shore property, the court also found that the most suitable field of fire for practice and other purposes in time of peace would be over the claimants' land.

On or about June 22, 1902, two of the guns were fired for the purpose of testing them at a target off the coast, the missiles passing over the land in suit; and another gun was fired for the same purpose and to the same effect on September 25, 1902, the resulting damage to buildings and property amounting to $150.

None of the guns has been fired since, but they have been kept in good condition by a detail from Fort Constitution, which is situated across the Piscataqua river. The court below further states in its findings that "it does not appear from the evidence that there is any intention on the part of the government to fire any of its guns now installed, or which may hereafter be installed, at said fort in time of peace over and across the lands of the claimants so as to deprive them of the use of the same or any part thereof, or to injure the same by concussion or otherwise, excepting as such intention can be drawn from the fact that the guns now installed in said fort are so fixed as to make it possible [538] so to do, and the further fact that they were so fired upon the occasions as hereinbefore found."

In the years 1903 and 1904, the hotel, which had previously been profitable, was conducted at a loss; since 1904, it has been closed and the cottages have been rented only in part and at reduced rates. It is found that the erection of the fort and the installation of the guns have materially impaired the value of the property, and that this impairment will continue so long as the fort and artillery are maintained. This is found to be due to the apprehension that the guns will be fired over the property.

The question is whether, upon this showing, the petitioners were entitled to recover.

It may be assumed that if the government had installed its battery, not simply as a means of defense in war, but with the purpose and effect of subordinating the strip of land between the battery and the sea to the right and privilege of the government to fire projectiles directly across it, for the purpose of practice or otherwise, whenever it saw fit, in time of peace, with the result of depriving the owner of its profitable use, the imposition of such a servitude would constitute an appropriation of property for which compensation should be made. The subjection of the land to the burden of governmental use in this manner might well be considered to be a "taking" within the principle of the decisions (Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 177, 178, 20 L. ed. 557, 560; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 469, 47 L. ed. 539, 548, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; United States v. Welch, 217 U. S. 333, 339, 54 L. ed. 787, 789, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 385, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, 19 Ann. Cas. 680), and not merely a consequential damage incident to a public undertaking, which must be borne without any right to compensation (Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 642, 25 L. ed. 336, 338; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 164, 45 L. ed. 126, 137, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 217, 224, 48 L. ed. 414, 417, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Jackson v. United States, 230 U. S. 1, 23, 57 L. ed. 1363, 1374, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011).

But, in this view, the question remains whether it satisfactorily [539] appears that the servitude has been imposed; that is, whether enough is shown to establish an intention on the part of the government to impose it. The suit must rest upon contract, as the government has not consented to be sued for torts, even though committed by its officers in the discharge of their official duties (Gibbons v. United States, 8 Wall. 269, 275, 19 L. ed. 453, 454; Langford v. United States, 101 U. S. 341, 343, 25 L. ed. 1010, 1011; Schillinger v. United States, 155 U. S. 163, 169, 39 L. ed. 108, 110, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Russell v. United States, 182 U. S. 516, 530, 45 L. ed. 1210, 1215, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899; Harley v. United States, 198 U. S. 229, 234, 49 L. ed. 1029, 1030, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634); and a contract to pay, in the present case, cannot be implied unless there has been an actual appropriation of property (United States v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 112 U. S. 645, 656, 657, 28 L. ed. 846, 850, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306).

Digitized by Google

The contention of the petitioners, therefore, is plainly without merit so far as it rests upon the mere fact that there is a suitable, or the most suitable, field of fire over their property. Land, or an interest in land, cannot be deemed to be taken by the government merely because it is suitable to be used in connection with an adjoining tract which the government has acquired, or because of a depreciation in its value, due to the apprehension of such use. The mere location of a battery certainly is not an appropriation of the property within the range of its guns.

The petitioners' argument assumes that the guns, for proper practice, must be fired over the land in suit, and, hence, that this burden upon it was a necessary incident to the maintenance of the fort. The fact of the necessity of practice firing is said to be established by the finding with respect to the line of fire over the government's portion of the shore, in which it is said that this would be sufficient "for purposes of practice and for all other necessary purposes in time of peace." But, in the light of other findings, this is far from affording a sufficient foundation for the conclusion upon which the petitioners insist. On the contrary, that no such necessity as is now asserted can be assumed from the mere fact that the fort is maintained [540] is demonstrated by the facts of this case. This suit was tried in the latter part of the year 1910, and it appeared that none of the guns had been fired for over eight years. When the suit was brought in 1905, nearly two years and a half had elapsed since the firing of a shot. The guns have been fired only upon two occasions, or three times in all, and this firing took place in 1902, shortly after the installation of the guns, for the purpose of testing them. It may be that practice in firing the guns would be highly desirable, but it is too much to say upon this record that the fort would be useless without it. Nor are we at liberty to conclude that the government has taken property, which it denies that it has taken, by assuming a military necessity in the case of this fort which is absolutely contradicted by the facts proved.

Reduced to the last analysis, the claim of the petitioners rests upon the fact that the guns were fired upon two occasions in 1902, as stated, and upon the apprehension that the firing will be repeated. That there is any intention to repeat it does not appear, but rather is negatived. There is no showing that the guns will ever be fired unless in necessary defense in time of war. We deem the facts found to be too slender a basis for a decision that the property of the claimants has been actually appropriated, and that the government has thus impliedly agreed to pay for it.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

---

[541] J. W. SPRINGSTEAD, J. C. Burwell, W. A. Fulton, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CRAWFORDSVILLE STATE BANK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 541-543.)

Federal courts — jurisdictional amount — attorney's fee.

1. An attorney's fee, payment of which is provided for in a promissory note if suit should be brought, may be considered in determining whether the amount necessary to sustain the original jurisdiction of a Federal court is involved in an action on the note.

[For other cases, see Courts, V. c, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — allegations of citizenship — amendment.

2. Failure to allege the citizenship of the original payee of a note does not compel the dismissal of an action brought by the assignee in a Federal court in which the necessary diversity of citizenship as between plaintiff and defendant is alleged, since the error is susceptible to correction by amendment.

[For other cases, see Pleading, II. c, 2, a; I. n, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — amendment — allegations of citizenship — jurisdiction.

3. Curing by amendment in a Federal court the failure to allege the citizenship of the original payee in an action brought by the assignee of a note is not open to the objection that it gives that court a jurisdiction which it no longer possesses because, after the suit was begun, but before

---

Note.—As to whether amount of attorney's fee expressly stipulated for is to be included in computing amount involved for purpose of ascertaining jurisdiction—see note to Parks v. Granger, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 157.

Digitized by Google

the amendment, the jurisdictional amount was by the Judicial Code increased to a sum in excess of that involved in the suit, since the saving clause of § 299 of that Code covers the case.

[For other cases, see Pleading, I. n, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 93.]

Submitted December 4, 1913. Decided December 22, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action on a promissory note. Reversed and remanded, with directions to allow plaintiff to amend, otherwise to dismiss for want of jurisdiction.

Mr. J. C. Davant submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

The term "matter in dispute" is, in itself, a term with well-recognized meaning.

Lee v. Watson, 1 Wall. 337, 339, 17 L. ed. 557, 558; Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 167, 32 L. ed. 895, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

It has been held that an attorney's fee could not, under the laws of the state of Georgia, be considered where dependent upon a statute providing for a reasonable attorney fee when suit was brought upon an insurance policy after nonpayment for a period of sixty days.

Peters v. Queen Ins. Co. 182 Fed. 113.

The present case seems to be within the distinction between the principal demand and the accessory demand, as defined in the case of Brown v. Webster, 156 U. S. 328, 39 L. ed. 440, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377.

When suit is brought on a negotiable instrument of the character sued on here, the assignee can bring suit in the Federal courts only where diversity of citizenship is the ground for the jurisdiction of the court, in the event the original payee could have brought suit on such instrument in such courts; and the fact of the necessary diversity of citizenship between the maker and the payee of the note sued on must, of necessity, be shown affirmatively; else such court has no jurisdiction.

Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 28 L. ed. 462, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; King Iron Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. Otoe County, 120 U. S. 225, 30 L. ed. 623, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Parker v. Ormsby, 141 U. S. 81, 35 L. ed. 654, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Plant Invest. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 152 U. S. 71, 38 L. ed. 358, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 483; Emsheimer v. New Orleans, 186 U. S. 33, 46 L. ed. 1042, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Messrs. Peter O. Knight and C. Fred Thompson submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Where, by express stipulation, valid in the state where made, a debtor becomes liable for a reasonable attorney's fee in case the debt is collected by suit, such fee may be added to the amount of the debt for the purpose of making up the jurisdictional amount. Such a fee is not a part of the costs, which are to be excluded under the judiciary acts of 1887 and 1888.

Brown v. Webster, 156 U. S. 328, 39 L. ed. 440, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377; Continental Casualty Co. v. Spradlin, 95 C. C. A. 112, 170 Fed. 322; Howard v. Carroll, 195 Fed. 646; Less v. English, 29 C. C. A. 275, 56 U. S. App. 16, 85 Fed. 471; Rogers v. Riley, 80 Fed. 759.

Attorneys' fees expressly stipulated for in promissory notes are not considered costs, but are calculable in determining the amount in controversy.

Almand v. Almand, 95 Ga. 204, 22 S. E. 213; Altgelt v. Harris, — Tex. —, 11 S. W. 857; Baxter v. Bates, 69 Ga. 587; Beach v. Atkinson, 87 Ga. 288, 13 S. E. 591; Blankenship v. Wartelsky, — Tex. —, 6 S. W. 143; Brown v. Webster, 156 U. S. 328, 39 L. ed. 440, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377; Clark v. Brown, 48 Tex. 212; Continental Casualty Co. v. Spradlin, 95 C. C. A. 112, 170 Fed. 322; 1 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 715, note 4; Fix v. Sissung, 83 Mich. 561, 21 Am. St. Rep. 616, 47 N. W. 340; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Seymour, 44 Fla. 557, 33 So. 424; Hill v. Haas, 73 Ga. 122; Howard v. Carroll, 195 Fed. 646; Less v. English, 29 C. C. A. 275, 56 U. S. App. 16, 85 Fed. 471; Moore v. Fay, 4 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 298, 15 S. W. 199; Rogers v. Riley, 80 Fed. 759; Warder, B. & G. Co. v. Raymond, 7 S. D. 451, 64 N. W. 525; Waters v. Walker, 4 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 463, 17 S. W. 1085; Parks v. Granger, 96 Miss. 503, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 157, 51 So. 716, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 232.

A stipulation for the payment of a reasonable amount as attorneys' fees is valid in the state of Florida.

Adams v. Fry, 29 Fla. 318, 10 So. 599; Carhart v. Allen, 56 Fla. 763, 48 So. 47; Cooper Grocery Co. v. Citizens' Bank & T. Co. 62 Fla. 142, 56 So. 435; Durham v. Stephenson, 41 Fla. 112, 25 So. 284; Kellogg v. Singer Mfg. Co. 35 Fla. 99, 17 So. 68; L'Engle v. L'Engle, 21 Fla. 131; Logan v. Slade, 28 Fla. 699, 10 So. 25; Long v. Herrick, 26 Fla. 356, 8 So. 50; Merrell v. Ridgely, 62 Fla. 546, 57 So. 352; Taylor v. Brown, 32 Fla. 334, 13 So. 957.

A Florida case as to principle involved and as to form of declaration is conclusive of this case.

Digitized by Google

Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Seymour, 44 Fla. 557, 33 So. 424.

The court will take judicial cognizance of the fact that attorneys' fees in controversy are of some value.

Colley v. Wolcott, 109 C. C. A. 425, 187 Fed. 595.

When the declaration is not sufficiently precise as to form, leave will be given to amend without remanding the cause for that purpose.

Williams v. Molther, 117 C. C. A. 220, 198 Fed. 462.

Plaintiff's allegations of value govern in determining the jurisdiction, except where, upon the face of his own pleadings, it is not legally possible for him to recover the jurisdictional amount.

Howard v. Carroll, 195 Fed. 646; Schunk v. Moline, M. & S. Co. 147 U. S. 500, 37 L. ed. 255, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416; Smithers v. Smith, 204 U. S. 642, 51 L. ed. 660, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; Upton v. McLaughlin, 105 U. S. 640, 26 L. ed. 1197.

Memorandum opinion by Mr. Chief Justice White, by direction of the court:

This is a direct writ of error to determine a question of jurisdiction. The action arose prior to the adoption of the Judicial Code, and was on two promissory notes, each for $1,000 and each providing for the payment of a reasonable attorney's fee if suit were brought. Could [542] such an attorney's fee be considered in determining whether the jurisdictional amount was involved? We think so. Clearly such fee was no part of the costs, nor was it interest. It may be that the agreement to pay an attorney's fee in the event of suit created only an accessory right (though under Brown v. Webster, 156 U. S. 328, 39 L. ed. 440, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377, this is doubtful), but nevertheless it gave a right to recover and created a legal obligation to pay. It is true its effectiveness was dependent upon suit being brought, yet the moment suit was brought the liability to pay the fee became a "matter in controversy," and as such to be computed in making up the requisite jurisdictional amount. Ibid., and this has been the rule since applied by lower Federal courts. Rogers v. Riley, 80 Fed. 759; Continental Casualty Co. v. Spradlin, 95 C. C. A. 112, 170 Fed. 322; Howard v. Carroll, 195 Fed. 646.

It is further urged that though the case is within the jurisdictional amount, nevertheless it was not within the competency of the court below because of a failure to allege the citizenship of the original payee of the notes. Act of August 13, 1888, 25 Stat. at L. p. 433, chap. 866, § 1, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508. The contention is clearly well taken. King Iron Bridge Co. v. Otoe County, 120 U. S. 225, 30 L. ed. 623, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Parker v. Ormsby, 141 U. S. 81, 83, 35 L. ed. 654, 655, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912. However, as between the plaintiff and the defendants the necessary diversity of citizenship was alleged, we are of opinion that the failure to allege the citizenship of the assignor of the paper does not compel the absolute dismissal of the case, as the error in that particular is susceptible to correction by amendment. King Iron Bridge Co. v. Otoe County, supra; Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 44 L. ed. 842, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

The argument that because, subsequent to the institution of suit, the jurisdictional amount was increased, to allow the amendment at this time would be giving the lower court jurisdiction of a case to which its authority does not now extend, is without merit, in view of the saving [543] clause of § 299 of the Judicial Code [36 Stat. at L. 1169, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 246], which was intended to cover such a case as this.

Reversed and remanded, with direction to allow plaintiff to amend by alleging the citizenship of the original parties to the paper, within such time as the court shall think proper, and upon failure to do so, to dismiss for want of jurisdiction.

ÆTNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner,
v.
JOHN T. MOORE, Administrator of John A. Salgue, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 543-560.)

Insurance — untrue statements in application — good faith of insured.

1. Variations from the truth in the statements made by the insured in his application for life insurance, which are by the

---

NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351; Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 5 L.R.A. 508; and Snare & T. Co. v. Friedman, 40 L.R.A. (N.S.) 380.

On the effect of nonwaiver agreement upon conditions existing at inception of insurance policy—see note to Gish v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 826.

On the effect of knowledge by insurance agent of falsity of statements in application policy expressly made the basis of the insurance contract, will, under the construction given to Ga. Code, §§ 2479, 2480, by the courts of that state, avoid the policy if such untruths are such as change the nature, extent, or character of the risk, whether they are made in good faith, without knowledge of their untruth, or are made fraudulently or wilfully.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Insurance, V. a, 3; V. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — prejudicial error — refusing instruction.

2. Error in refusing to instruct the jury in an action on a policy of life insurance that untrue answers in the application, if material, avoid the policy, regardless of the good faith of the insured, calls for the reversal of a judgment entered on a general verdict against the insurance company, where the evidence as to the untruthfulness of the answers is conflicting, since, the verdict being general, it is not possible to say what view the jury took of the conflict, or that it was necessary to resolve it in view of the charge of the court, or how they would have resolved it if the instructions requested had been given.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 4, b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Insurance — untrue answer in application — application for other insurance.

3. The answer "no" to the question in the insured's application for life insurance whether any proposal or application to insure his life was pending in another company, or, if made, had not been granted, calling for particulars and the names of all such companies, associations, or agents, is

---

—see note to Clemans v. Supreme Assembly, R. S. G. F. 16 L.R.A. 33.

What constitutes failure or refusal to issue life insurance which will falsify representations as to previous applications.

The ruling in ÆTNA L. INS. CO. v. MOORE, that the denial by an applicant that he had ever applied for insurance which had not been granted is not saved from being false because, after an unfavorable medical examination, he withdrew the application upon the advice of the soliciting agent before it reached the insurance company, is in harmony with decisions in analogous cases.

Thus, in Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 132, 45 C. C. A. 648, 106 Fed. 808, it was held that the refusal of an applicant for insurance to furnish a sample of urine to the medical examiners after answering the required questions in the application blank, because of which the application is rejected, does not annul the negotiations so as to justify a statement in an application to another company that no proposal or application for insurance has ever been made upon which a policy has not been issued.

The answer "none other" to the question in an application for insurance whether any proposition or negotiation or examination for life insurance had been made in this or any other company on which a policy had not been issued is false where there had previously been an informal unwritten examination by a medical examiner of another insurance company, terminated by the examiner as useless, not based upon a written application, and not reported to the company. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Nichols, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 24 S. W. 910, affirmed in — Tex. Civ. App. —, 26 S. W. 998.

And where, in an action upon an insurance policy, it appears that the applicant stated in his application that no proposal or application to insure his life had ever been made to any company or agent upon which a policy had not been issued, and that no physician had given an unfavorable opinion upon his life with reference to life insurance, and that such questions were truthfully answered, and to be considered as an essential part of the application, and as forming with it the basis of the proposed contract; and there was evidence that he had previously applied to become a member of another association, and that his application had been destroyed on failure to forward the medical examination, and that he was examined by the medical examiner, who found traces of Bright's disease, and so informed the applicant, but failed to inform the grand medical examiner on request of the applicant, and that the applicant, upon afterwards being urged to join another association, told a member he was not eligible, — a verdict should be directed in favor of the defendant, the only testimony tending in any way to lessen the force of this evidence being the answers made by the applicant to the questions in the application itself, and some inconsistent statements of the medical examiner, and the fact that the records of the lodge did not show the previous application, it having been shown that no record was made of an application unless accompanied by a report of a medical examiner. Ferris v. Home Life Assur. Co. 118 Mich. 485, 76 N. W. 1041.

The general rule seems to be that of Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, supra, that a failure or refusal to issue a policy which will falsify a denial by the applicant results not only when he has been examined and rejected because found to be an unsatisfactory risk, but also whenever, through any circumstances, a completed application does not result in actual insurance.

And see Prudential Ins. Co. v. Moore, 231 U. S. 560, post, 367, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191, where the court held that untrue answers material to the risk which, under Ga. Code, §§ 2479, 2480, as construed by the courts of that state, avoid the policy, were given by the insured in his application made a part of the insurance contract, where he answered "no" to the question whether "any company or association ever such a variation from the truth as changes the nature, extent, and character of the risk, and therefore, under Ga. Code, §§ 2479, 2480, avoids a policy which makes the statements in the application the basis of the insurance contract, where, having made an application for insurance to the local agent of another company, whose medical examiner refused to pass him, the insured had withdrawn the application on the advice of such agent before it reached the insurance company.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Insurance, V. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Insurance — estoppel of insurer — knowledge of local agent.

4. Knowledge of the actual conditions and circumstances by the local agent who prepared the application for a policy of life insurance will not estop the insurance company from enforcing a condition rendering the policy void if material untrue statements are made in such application, where it was expressly agreed between the parties that "no statement or declaration made to any agent, examiner, or other person, and not contained in" the application, should "be taken or construed as having been made to or brought to the notice or knowledge of" the company, "or as charging it with any liability by reason thereof," and the insured specifically expressed his understanding to be that the company, or one or more of its executive officers, and no other person, could grant insurance or make any agreement binding upon the company.

[For other cases, see Insurance, VII. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — rules of decision — following decisions of state courts.

5. The question as to the effect of the knowledge of the local agent upon the right of a life insurance company to insist upon a condition rendering the policy void if material untrue statements are made in the application is one of general jurisprudence, upon which the Federal courts are not controlled by the decisions of state courts.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 33.]

Argued November 3, 1913. Decided December 22, 1913.

ON Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the declined to grant insurance" on his life, failed to answer the further question, "If 'yes,' give name of company or companies and when," and mentioned but one other company in answer to the question whether application for insurance was then pending in any other company, while in fact he then had applications in two other companies pending, and where, having made an application for insurance to the local agent of another company whose medical examiner refused to pass him, he had withdrawn such application upon the advice of the agent, before it reached the insurance company.

---

The answer "no" to the question, "Have you ever made an application for life insurance upon which a policy was not issued, or, if issued, upon a different plan from the one applied for," is clearly false where the applicant had made an application to another company a few days before, and had been told by the medical examiner for that company that he was postponed for a further examination. Fletcher v. Bankers L. Ins. Co. 135 App. Div. 295, 119 N. Y. Supp. 801.

Where an applicant for insurance applies to the agent of an insurance company, as such agent, for a policy upon his life in such company, and is furnished by the agent with a blank application, which the applicant fills up, signs, and delivers to the agent, the applicant has done all he is required to do; and where the medical examiner, who is his physician, pronounces him unfit for insurance without examination, the application has been made, and has not been successful, so as to render false a warranty made on a subsequent application to another company that applications made by him previously for insurance on his life have always been successful, and so as to invalidate a policy issued on the subsequent application, notwithstanding the refusal of the physician to examine him. Edington v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 564, reversing 13 Hun, 543, subsequent appeal in 100 N. Y. 536, 3 N. E. 315.

And the test, in an action upon such an insurance policy, as to whether or not there had been a breach of such a warranty, is whether or not such previous applications had been granted, and not whether the medical examiner had authority finally to reject the application; if the medical examiner was utterly without authority to dispose of it, and the company for that reason never acted upon it, there was at least an application to the company which was not successful, and did not end in an accepted insurance. Edington v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 100 N. Y. 536, 3 N. E. 315.

So, a denial by an applicant for insurance in his application, that he had applied for other insurance and been refused, is false, where a company which had insured his life failed, and another company agreed to insure its risks, but refused this applicant on account of his age. Gessel v. Republic L. Ins. Co. 1 Ohio L. J. 189.

And a failure upon the part of an insurance company to issue a policy to an applicant renders false a subsequent warranty on his part, in an application for insurance to another company, that he had never applied to any other company for insurance on his life without receiving a policy of the exact kind and amount applied for, and had never been declined or postponed by any company, although such failure and rejection were not because of any physical defect, but because of a request on his part to have the policy dated back one year for the purpose of enabling him to

Digitized by Google

Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Georgia in favor of plaintiff in an action on a policy of life insurance. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. L. Miller argued the cause, and, with Messrs. M. D. Jones, George S. Jones, Walter Defore, Wallace Miller, and Charles H. Hall, Jr., filed a brief for petitioner:

What the company required of the applicant, as a condition precedent to any binding contract, was that he would observe the utmost good faith towards it, and make full, direct, and honest answers to all questions, without evasion or fraud, and without suppression, misrepresentation, or concealment of facts with which the company ought to be made acquainted, and by so doing, and only by so doing, would he be deemed to have made fair and true answers.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 403; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 122, 45 C. C. A. 648, 106 Fed. 808; Jeffries v. Economical Mut. L. Ins. Co. 22 Wall. 47, 22 L. ed. 833; Farrell v. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. 60 C. C. A. 374, 125 Fed. 684; Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 345, 28 L. ed. 450, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 91 U. S. 510, 23 L. ed. 401.

The contract sued on is a Georgia contract.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 402; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements (Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus) 140 U. S. 226, 35 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. McCue, 223 U. S. 234, 56 L. ed. 419, 38 L.R.A. (N.S.) 57, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

In the case of a warranty the answers must be true to justify a recovery. The agreement of the parties that the statements made in the application are true, and if untrue in any respect the policy is void, removes the question of their materiality from the consideration of the court or jury.

Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 91 U. S. 510, 23 L. ed. 401.

Under the contract (policy) in this case, procure it at a less premium. Union Nat. Bank v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. 52 La. Ann. 36, 26 So. 800.

---

Where an applicant for insurance, however, stated in his application that no physician had ever given an unfavorable opinion upon his life with reference to life insurance, except as therein stated, and it appeared that he had applied to the Royal Arcanum for membership, and his application was reported favorably by the examining physician, but rejected by the chief medical examiner on account of a fact which in itself did not constitute good ground for rejection, and which never affected the health of the applicant, and did not exist at the time of the latter application, and the reason for such action was never communicated to anyone, and the applicant was never informed of it, the misstatement will be deemed to have been innocently made so far as his application for membership in the Royal Arcanum was concerned, or, if regarded as a misrepresentation, will be deemed immaterial to the risk. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Miller, 34 C. C. A. 211, 63 U. S. App. 717, 92 Fed. 63.

And see Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 122, 45 C. C. A. 648, 106 Fed. 808, for a holding that a statement by an applicant for insurance that no physician had ever given an unfavorable opinion upon his life with reference to life insurance is not rendered false by an unfavorable opinion previously given by a physician to the medical examiner of a company applied to for insurance, privately communicated without the knowledge of the applicant.

The word "issued" in a warranty in an application for insurance that the applicant had applied for no insurance for which a policy had not issued does not include within its meaning a technical delivery; and where he had previously applied to another insurance company for $10,000 on his life, and the company declined to issue for the full amount, but wrote him for $5,000, and sent the policy to the medical examiner for delivery upon payment of the first premium, and the first premium was not paid, and the policy eventually was returned, there is no breach of warranty. Kansas Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Coalson, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 64, 54 S. W. 388.

An indorsement upon an application for insurance, "Declined by Ex.," signed with the initials of the authorized medical examiner of the company, is competent evidence of the action of the insurance company in declining the application, in an action brought upon a subsequent policy issued by another company, to prove the falsity of a statement in the application for the subsequent policy, that no previous insurance had been applied for and declined, as such memoranda are made by the examiner, not for himself, but for the company as evidence of the action it has taken, and are not therefore in the nature of declarations of a third party. Elliot v. Mutual Ben. Life Asso. 76 Hun, 378, 27 N. Y. Supp. 696.

On the general subject of forfeiture of life insurance by false representations with respect to previous applications for insurance—see note to Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 122.

As to the character of insurance or company covered by question in application as to other insurance, or as to previous rejection of application—see note to Wright v. Fraternities Health & Acci. Asso. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 461.

Digitized by Google

the questions and the answers thereto made by Salgue in the application and to the medical examiner are warranties, and he was bound by the truthfulness of his answers to these questions

Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 328, 47 S. E. 940.

The contract made each and every question and answer material. The law does not forbid parties contracting for life insurance to stipulate that the validity of a policy shall depend upon conditions or contingencies such as are embodied in the Ætna policy sued on.

Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 341, 28 L. ed. 449, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 646, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500.

Where an applicant for life insurance covenants in his application that the statements made to the medical examiner are true, and these statements are made a part of the contract of insurance, and form the basis of such contract, any variation in any of them, which is material, whereby the nature or extent or character of the risk is changed, will avoid the policy, whether the statement was made in good faith or wilfully or fraudulently.

Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 328, 337, 47 S. E. 940.

Parties may by their contract make material a fact which would be otherwise immaterial, or make immaterial a fact that would be otherwise material.

Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 646, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500.

Salgue's failure to give the name and address of each and every physician consulted by him during the specified time voided the policy.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 408; Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 345, 28 L. ed. 450, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466.

The court was asked to instruct the jury that if it appeared from the evidence that an application had been previously made by Salgue to the Penn Mutual upon which insurance had not been granted, then his denial would be a material misrepresentation of fact, and whether the answer was in good faith or not, it would render the policy void. Certainly, the question was material, and the company was entitled to an answer which spoke the truth. To answer honestly, Salgue must have answered "Yes." This would have put the company on inquiry as to why the policy had not been granted, and would have disclosed his entire transaction with the Penn Mutual Company. The untruthful answer was a distinct violation of that good faith required of him by law, and was such a variation from the truth as to make the policy void.

Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 5 L.R.A. 122, 45 C. C. A. 648, 106 Fed. 809, 61 C. C. A. 383, 126 Fed. 635.

Where it is shown that a material statement made in such application was false, that its falsity was known to the insurer at the time it was made, that it was made with a view to procuring the insurance, that the company had no notice of its falsity, and that the company acted upon it to its injury, the law will conclusively presume an intent to deceive, and a case of actual fraud will be made out, although the insured may not have really intended to prejudice the rights of the company.

Northwestern L. Ins. Co. v. Montgomery, 116 Ga. 799, 43 S. E. 79.

The honesty, good faith, and truthfulness of the person whose life is insured forms the actual foundation of the agreement of life insurance. It is for this reason that contracts of life insurance are said to be uberrimæfidei, and any material misrepresentation or concealment is fatal to them.

Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. McElroy, 28 C. C. A. 365, 49 U. S. App. 548, 83 Fed. 636.

Salgue is held in law to know the contents of the application signed by him, and that upon this application the policy would be issued, if issued at all. It was his duty to read the application he signed.

New York L. Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519, 529, 29 L. ed. 934, 937, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

Contracts in writing, if unambiguous, must be permitted to speak for themselves, and cannot by the court, at the instance of one of the parties, be altered or contradicted by one of the parties.

Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 183 U. S. 361, 46 L. ed. 234, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133.

Representations made in writing in an application for insurance, in response to written questions, and warranted by the applicant to be true, as the basis of the contract, are thus made material by the action of the parties in so treating them; and their materiality is a matter of law arising from the contract, to be declared by the court, and not a question for the jury. Carrollton Furniture Mfg. Co. v. American Credit Indemnity Co. 59 C. C. A. 545, 124 Fed. 26.

Where the policy furnishes the only way by which its terms can be waived, and expressly provides against modifications by customs of trade or manufacture, or by agents, and its provisions are unambiguous, courts cannot admit parol testimony to alter the written words of the contract.

Digitized by Google

Penman v. St. Paul F. & M. Co. 216 U. S. 311, 54 L. ed. 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312.

Whether the statements and answers contained in the application of the assured were the same statements made by him to the agents of the company securing his application, and to the medical examiner of the company, or not, yet, when he afterwards received the policy with a copy of the application attached and a memorandum indorsed thereon, calling his attention to the copy thus attached, with the request that any errors in the application be reported to the company for correction, it was his duty to report any answers incorrectly written down, and thus enable the company to correct them, and by his failure to do so he must be presumed to have accepted the policy upon the faith of the answers therein contained, and to have acquiesced and agreed that the application should remain as the basis of the contract of insurance.

Swan v. Watertown F. Ins. Co. 96 Pa. 43; American Ins. Co. v. Neiberger, 74 Mo. 173; Goddard v. Monitor Mut. F. Ins. Co. 108 Mass. 57, 11 Am. Rep. 307; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 534, 29 L. ed. 939, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

One who deals with an agent knowing that he is clothed with a circumscribed authority, and that his acts transcend his powers, cannot hold his principal; and this is true whether the agent is general or special; for a principal may limit the authority of one as well as of the other.

Slocum v. New York L. Ins. Co. 228 U. S. 374, 57 L. ed. 884, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Penman v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 216 U. S. 311, 54 L. ed. 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312; Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 183 U. S. 362, 46 L. ed. 235, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519, 29 L. ed. 934, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

Messrs. Jesse Harris and Minter Wimberly argued the cause, and, with Mr. Alexander Akerman, filed a brief for respondent:

The testimony of John T. Moore shows conclusively that Salgue told the agents of the Ætna Life Insurance Company that he had made other applications, and that Dr. Little had stated that he had heart trouble. All of these facts were made known to the agents of the defendant company. Surely it cannot be said that there was any fraudulent concealment as to these questions by the insured. This being true, the policy will not be void.

Ley v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 120 Iowa, 203, 94 N. W. 568; Patten v. United States Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 141 N. Y. 589, 36 N. E. 739; 25 Cyc. 796.

The falsity of an answer warranted to be true according to the honest belief of the assured, will not defeat recovery on the policy unless such falsity was known, or reasonably could have been known, to the assured.

O'Connell v. Supreme Conclave, K. D. 102 Ga. 143, 66 Am. St. Rep. 159, 28 S. E. 282.

While it is stated that answers in the application which are expressly made warranties must be strictly and literally true or the policy will be voided, still the general rule is that substantial truth in representations is all that is required.

Farrell v. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. 60 C. C. A. 374, 125 Fed. 684.

There was a conflict as to the truth of the representations, and under the Georgia authorities, this was a jury question, and the court very properly refused the request and submitted the issue to the jury.

Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 338, 47 S. E. 940.

The insurance company is estopped from denying the truth of these answers, as the agents who solicited the insurance and the medical examiner for the company, who examined the deceased, acted as the agents of the insurance company, and the insurance company is bound thereby.

Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 222, 20 L. ed. 617; American L. Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 21 Wall. 152, 22 L. ed. 593; New Jersey Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Baker, 94 U. S. 610, 24 L. ed. 268; Clubb v. American Acci. Co. 97 Ga. 502, 25 S. E. 333; German American Mut. Life Asso. v. Farley, 102 Ga. 735, 29 S. E. 615; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Chamberlain, 132 U. S. 304, 33 L. ed. 341, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Price, 132 Ga. 687, 64 S. E. 1074; Johnson v. Ætna Ins. Co. 123 Ga. 404, 107 Am. St. Rep. 92, 51 S. E. 339; Mechanics' & T. Ins. Co. v. Mutual Real Estate Bldg. Asso. 98 Ga. 262, 25 S. E. 457; Wood v. American F. Ins. Co. 149 N. Y. 382, 52 Am. St. Rep. 733, 44 N. E. 80.

Any agreement, declaration, or course of action on the part of the insurance company which leads the party insured to believe that, by conforming thereto, a forfeiture of his policy will not be incurred, will estop the company from insisting upon the forfeiture.

Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30, 27 L. ed. 65, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Hartford Life Annuity Ins. Co. v. Unsell, 144 U. S. 439, 36 L. ed. 496, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Eggleston, 96 U. S. 572, 24 L. ed. 841.

If the answer was not complete, or imperfectly answered, the issuance of the policy without further inquiry, especially when the insurance company had been put on notice, as in the case at bar, amounts to a waiver of the objection, and makes the omission immaterial.

Digitized by Google

Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183, 30 L. ed. 644, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500.

Medical consultation or attendance for merely slight or temporary indisposition need not be disclosed, the insured being entitled to a liberal construction of the language of the application.

McClain v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. 49 C. C. A. 31, 110 Fed. 80; Hubbard v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 40 C. C. A. 665, 100 Fed. 719.

Questions and answers as to whether or not insured had ever had certain specified diseases, or any other serious ailment, are held to be representations though called warranties.

Minnesota Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Link, 230 Ill. 273, 82 N. E. 637.

Misstatements by way of representations or warranty, which are made through fraud of the company's agent, cannot be relied on by it to defeat the policy, and especially is this so where the insured is misled by the agent into making the false statements.

Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Fraser, 22 C. C. A. 499, 44 U. S. App. 694, 76 Fed. 705; 25 Cyc. 803.

Statements in the application in the handwriting of the medical examiner of the insurance company will be taken most strongly against the company.

Globe Mut. L. Ins. Asso. v. Meyer, 118 Ill. App. 155.

The statements made in the application by the insured are not warranties, but are mere representations; and the insured was only required to observe the utmost good faith in answering the questions in the application.

Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 335, 28 L. ed. 447, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 402; Hagan v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. 186 U. S. 423, 46 L. ed. 1229, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183, 30 L. ed. 644, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 188 U. S. 726, 47 L. ed. 667, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; First Nat. Bank v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 95 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 563; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Vaughan, 92 U. S. 516, 23 L. ed. 740; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Higginbotham, 95 U. S. 380, 24 L. ed. 499; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Trefz, 104 U. S. 197, 26 L. ed. 708; 25 Cyc. 796–815; Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 38 L.R.A. 33, 19 C. C. A. 286, 37 U. S. App. 692, 72 Fed. 413.

From the testimony of a number of witnesses, the character of the deceased was above reproach; and when the insurance company attempted by the defenses interposed to attack the character of the deceased, and the proof of his character being undisputed, this would be a substantial plea for the trial court to permit the jury to settle the disputed facts in the case.

German-American Mut. Life Asso. v. Farley, 102 Ga. 720, 29 S. E. 615.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action on a life insurance policy for $6,000, issued upon the life of John A. Salgue, the intestate of respondent. It was tried to a jury, resulting in a verdict and judgment for respondent. The judgment was affirmed on writ of error to the circuit court of appeals by a per curiam opinion. This certiorari was then granted.

The questions in the case are based on certain statements made by Salgue, which, it is contended by petitioner (herein called the insurance company), became a part of the policy and constituted warranties.

The following are the material provisions of the policy and the application:

"This policy of insurance witnesseth: That the Ætna Life Insurance Company, in consideration of the statements, answers, and warranties contained in or indorsed [548] upon the application for this policy, which application is copied herein and made a part of this contract, and in further consideration of the annual premium . . . hereby insures the life of John A. Salgue . . .

"This policy is issued and accepted subject to the conditions, provisions, and benefits printed on the reverse of this page, which are hereby referred to and made a part hereof. . . .

"Conditions, provisions, and benefits which are made a part of this policy:

"Section 1. This policy shall not take effect until the first premium hereon shall have been actually paid during the lifetime and good health of the insured. . . .

"Section 7. All agreements by said company are signed by one of its executive officers. No agent or other person not an executive officer can alter or waive any of the conditions of this policy, or make any agreement binding upon said company."

Copy of the application:

"Being desirous of insuring my life with the Ætna Insurance Company, I do hereby declare and warrant that I am in good health, of sound body and mind, and that the following statements signed by me are full, correct, and true; and that I have no knowledge or information of any disease, infirmity, or circumstance not stated in this application which may render insurance on my life more hazardous than if such disease, infirmity, or circumstance had never existed; and I do hereby agree that the declarations and warranties herein made, and the answers to the following questions, together with those signed by me on the second page of this application, shall be the basis and form part of the contract (or policy) between me and the said company, and that if the same be in any respect untrue, said policy shall be void; and I further agree that the insurance hereby applied for shall not be binding upon said company until a policy has been issued, nor until [549] the amount of premium as stated therein has been received by said company, or its authorized agent, during my lifetime and good health, and a receipt given therefor, signed by an executive officer of said company; and I further agree that no statement or declaration made to any agent, examiner, or other person, and not contained in this application, shall be taken or considered as having been made to or brought to the notice or knowledge of said company, or as charging it with any liability by reason thereof; and I understand that all policies and agreements made by the said Ætna Life Insurance Company are signed by one or more of its executive officers, and that no other person can grant insurance or make any agreement binding upon said company."

Digitized by Google

The application also contained questions addressed to the insured by the examining physician, and the answers by him, among others, as follows:

"14. What are the names and residences of all the physicians whom you have personally employed or consulted during the last five years?"

Answer: "Dr. James T. Ross, Macon, Georgia."

"16. Has any proposal or application to insure your life been made to any company, association, or agent on which a policy of insurance is now pending? Or has any such proposal or application ever been made for which insurance has not been granted, or on which a policy or certificate of insurance was not issued in full amount, and of the same kind as applied for? If so, state particulars and the names of all such companies, associations, or agents."

Answer: "None."

"19. Has any physician expressed an unfavorable opinion upon your life with reference to life insurance?"

Answer: "No."

"21. Have you ever had any of the following diseases? Answer 'yes' or 'no' opposite each. If 'yes,' state the [550] date, duration, and severity of illness. . . . Disease of the heart?"

Answer: "No."

"23. Are you subject to dyspepsia, dysentery, or diarrhœa?"

Answer: "No."

"24. Have you had during the last seven years any disease or severe sickness? If so, state the particulars of each case and the names of the attending physicians."

Answer: "No."

There was discussion between Salgue and the examining physician in regard to the condition of Salgue's heart. His first statement was that he did not have heart disease, though he had been told he had. The physician explained to him the symptoms of the disease, and he replied that he did not have any of them and never had been treated for heart trouble. He had, he further said, consulted two doctors, Little and Winchester, and one of them told him he had heart disease "and scared him so." The other told him that he did not have any signs of it. And the recollection of the physician was that Salgue referred to Dr. Ross as having treated him for something several years previously. At the end of the discussion the physician put down the answer "No." He also reported that Salgue's respiration was "full, easy, and free. O. K., and that "auscultation" did not "indicate enlargement or disease of the heart of any kind."

There was testimony to the effect that about June 15, 1905, and prior to the application to the Ætna, Salgue applied to the local agent of the Penn Mutual Insurance Company at Macon for a policy of $6,000. The company's medical examiner refused to pass him, telling him that he had heart disease, and advising him to see his family physician, Dr. McAfee. Salgue consulted Dr. McAfee, and was informed by him that he had heart disease.

The contentions of the insurance company are based (1) upon a request for the direction of a verdict in its [551] favor; (2) the denial of requests for special instructions. We may confine our consideration to the special requests.

There was controversy as to whether Salgue had heart disease. We have seen the various opinions of the examining physicians. Salgue was a strong man physically and his strength was illustrated by instances. At one of his examinations he easily picked up and removed a large box of melons without any effect on his heart action. An effort of strength on another occasion was immediately detrimental, causing an aneurism which progressively developed and produced a rupture of the blood vessel and his death. By the advice of his physician he had quit work and had gone to a resort called Indian Springs. He remained there about ten days, and on his way home died suddenly on the cars.

Digitized by Google

It is not necessary to give at length the charges requested. They embrace the propositions (1) that the application and its statements, warranties, and covenants became part of the contract of insurance, and that any variation from them whereby the nature, extent, or character of the risk was changed, would affect the policy, whether the statements were made by the applicant in good faith, not knowing they were untrue, or made wilfully or fraudulently. And so also as to the answers to the questions put to Salgue as to his health, freedom from heart disease, the physicians he had consulted, the applications for insurance which he had made which were rejected or not accepted. (2) Under the terms of the policy the application constituted part of it, the answers to the questions were covenanted and warranted, and Salgue was bound thereby without regard to his good faith in making them; or that they were representations material to the risk by which he was bound without regard to his good faith, and that therefore the answers, if untrue, would make the policy void. (3) The provisions of the policy that no statement or declaration made to an agent, examiner, [552] or any other person, and not contained in the application, shall be taken or construed as having been made to or brought to the knowledge of the company, or as charging it with any liability by reason thereof, was binding on Salgue. So also the limitations on the powers of the agents and of what may have been said to them or by them. And further, that if the answers in the application were incorrect, it was Salgue's duty to report them as incorrect to the company, and, failing to do so, he was presumed to have accepted his policy upon the faith of them. It was therefore immaterial what may have been said by or to the agent or to the medical examiner which was not reduced to writing and presented to the officers of the company at the home office.

The charge of the court was very long,—too long even to attempt to condense. It was antithetical to the special requests made by the insurance company. Applying certain general principles which it expressed, the court said:

"To make them distinctly applicable to your duty, you are instructed that you must determine from all the facts, first, did Salgue make a misrepresentation or concealment of a fact of which he had knowledge? If he did not, the defense on this point must fail. Second, if he did, was such misrepresentation or concealment so material that it would have influenced one or both of the defendants not to issue the policy of insurance upon the respective applications? And third, in connection with this your inquiry will be, if such material misrepresentation or concealment as would have caused the defendants or either of them to withhold insurance was made, was it by Salgue wilfully or fraudulently done? In the absence of wilful or fraudulent misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact, the policy stands good and the insurance company must pay what it promised to pay by its policy, when it accepted the premium of the applicant."

We may note here that Salgue declared in his application [553] that he was "in good health;" that the statements made by him were "full, correct, and true;" and that he had no knowledge of "any disease, infirmity, or circumstance" which might "render insurance on his life more hazardous than if such disease, infirmity, or circumstance had never existed." He also agreed that "the declarations and warranties" therein made, and the answers to the questions, "should be the basis and form part of the contract (or policy)" between him and the company, "and that if the same be in any respect untrue" the policy should be "void."

The policy is conceded to be a Georgia contract. The character of its covenants, therefore, depends upon the law of that state, declared in § 2479 of its Code, as follows:

"Application, good faith.—Every application for insurance must be made in the utmost good faith, and the representations contained in such application are considered as covenanted to be true by the applicant. Any variation by which the nature or extent or character of the risk is changed will void the policy."†

But who is to decide—the court or jury—whether a variation be of the quality described? We have seen [554] how explicit the policy is, and this court in Jeffries v. Economical Mut. L. Ins. Co. 22 Wall. 47, 22 L. ed. 833, and Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. France, †Sec. 2480. Effect of misrepresentation.—Any verbal or written representations of facts by the assured to induce the acceptance of the risk, if material, must be true, or the policy is void. If, however, the party has no knowledge, but states on the representation of others, bona fide, and so informs the insurer, the falsity of the information does not void the policy.

Sec. 2481. Concealment.—A failure to state a material fact, if not done fraudulently, does not void; but the wilful con-

Digitized by Google

91 U. S. 510, 23 L. ed. 401, held that the parties to the contract may make the inquiries and answers material, and that therefore their materiality is not open to be tried by a jury.

These cases recognize the right of the insurer and the insured to make their own contract and determine for themselves what representations shall be material.

How far has this simple rule and the right of the parties been changed by the Georgia Code? In German-American Mut. Life Asso. v. Farley, 102 Ga. 720, 733, 29 S. E. 615, it was decided to be the established law of that state that mere immaterial matters, though incorporated in an application for insurance and declared to be warranties, do not avoid the policy, and that this was so imperatively the law of the state under the provisions of the Code that the parties could not contract to make immaterial matter material. The court, however, said: "Of course, what is in any degree material should be allowed its due effect; but the absolutely immaterial should count for nothing."

In Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 328, 47 S. E. 940, the Code again came up for construction and the statements of the insured were declared to be representations, not warranties, and that it was the purpose of the Code to get away from what the court denominated the "finer distinctions and strained constructions" of the cases. It was therefore held that under the Code of the state "a policy cannot now be avoided upon the ground of the falsity of the representation, though warranted, unless the representation be material and the variations from truth be such as to change the nature, extent, or character of the risk." But the court further held that if the representations have such variation, although the applicant may have made them in good faith, not knowing that they were untrue, if they were made the basis of the contract, [555] such contract is void. "It is therefore immaterial," the court declared, "whether the warrantor acted in good faith in making them."

The facts of the case were very much like those of the case at bar. The applicant represented himself, in answer to a question, as not having heart disease. Of this representation the court said that it "was certainly a material one, and doubtless the company acted upon it." And further: "It is scarcely conceivable that the company would have issued the policy if the applicant had answered that he was or had been afflicted with heart disease, or even if he had answered doubtfully. We think that if the answer made was untrue, the plaintiff below cannot recover."

The judgment in the case was reversed upon the ground, among others not necessary to be considered, of error in the instruction of the court, "that if Wood had heart disease and did not know it, the failure on his part to disclose it could not avoid the policy." There was dispute as to the fact, but the court did not pass upon it, remitting it as a question for the jury to decide at the next trial.

In Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 53 Ga. 535, 549, 550, after commenting on the difference the cases made between warranties and representations, the peremptory character of the former, their truth being the only question, the effect of the latter being determined by their materiality to the risk, the court said the Code of the state determined the character of the statements. The court quoted § 2479 which we have given, and § 2480, which provides that "any verbal or written representation of facts by the assured to induce the acceptance of the risk, if material, must be true or the policy is void," and said that "the proper construction is that if there be any variation in them from what is true, whereby the nature or extent or character of the risk is changed, the policy, if it makes them the basis of the contract of assurance, [556] will be void, and that this will be so whether they are or are not wilfully or fraudulently made."

It is, however, contended by respondent that the questions asked in the application were truthfully answered, or, at any rate, whether they were truthfully answered was a question for the jury. And it is insisted that the answers of Salgue in regard to other insurance and the action thereon by other companies were correct.

But granting that the truthfulness of the answers was a question for the jury, the testimony was conflicting; and, as the verdict was general, it is not possible to say what view the jury took of the conflict, or that it was necessary to resolve it in view of the charge of the court, or how they would have resolved it if instructions requested by the insurance company had been given.

We think there was error also in refusing concealment of a fact which would enhance the risk will void the policy.

---

Sec. 2483. Wilful misrepresentation voids policy.—Wilful misrepresentation by the assured or his agent, as to the interest of the assured, or as to other insurance, or as to any other material inquiry made, will void the policy.

Sec. 2499. Law of fire insurance applicable.—The principles before stated as to fire insurance, wherever applicable, are equally the law of life insurance.

Digitized by Google

other requests for instructions. We have seen questions were addressed to Salgue as to the names and residence of the physicians he had employed or consulted, and whether any physician had expressed an unfavorable opinion upon his life with reference to life insurance, and also whether any proposal or application to insure his life was pending in another company, or, if made, had not been granted. To the first question he gave the name of only one physician. There was testimony that he had consulted others. To the second question he answered, "No." There was testimony that the answer was untruthful. To the third question he answered, "None." The truthfulness of the answer is asserted notwithstanding it appeared from the testimony that he had made application to the Penn Mutual Company, which application had not been granted. The evidence was that the medical examiner had refused to pass him because he was of opinion that he, Salgue, had heart disease, and so reported to the agent of the company. The agent told Salgue if he, Salgue, would pay the doctor's fee to the company, he, the agent, would withdraw the [557] application before it reached the company, and that Salgue "could answer in the future that he had never been rejected by any company;" and the agent testified "that it is customary entirely with agents to stop examinations that way."

It is contended by respondent that this testimony shows that Salgue's application to the Penn Mutual was not rejected but was withdrawn; and, besides, whether it was rejected or withdrawn was a question for the jury. We are unable to concur with either contention. The question was a very broad one. It was whether any proposal or application had been made for which insurance had not been granted, and particulars were asked for, "and the names of all such companies, associations, or agents." Regarding the sense of the question—indeed, if not its letter—the answer was untruthful. The question certainly called for something more than an absolute negative. Its purpose was to ascertain the conduct of Salgue with reference to life insurance in order to judge of him as a risk. If it had been answered according to the facts, the company would have received information of circumstances certainly material for it to consider.

This conclusion is supported, as we have seen, by the cited Georgia cases, and is not opposed by Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 335, 28 L. ed. 447, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466, or Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183, 30 L. ed. 644, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500. In the Moulor Case it was held that the statements made by an applicant would be considered as representations rather than warranties, the policy leaving it in doubt which they were contracted to be, and that they could not be considered either by the company or the applicant as covering diseases which the latter was not conscious of having. It was said that what the company desired of the applicant was the utmost good faith toward it, making "full, direct, and honest answers to all questions, without evasion or fraud, and without suppression, misrepresentation, [558] or concealment of facts with which the company ought to be made acquainted; and that by so doing, and only by so doing, would he be deemed to have made 'fair and true answers.'"

In Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, there is a clear definition of principles. Answers to questions propounded to an applicant, it was held, will be considered representations unless clearly intended by both parties to be warranties, as to which substantial truth in everything material to the risk is all that is required of the applicant. And it was decided: "Whether there is other insurance on the same subject, and whether such insurance has been applied for and refused, are material facts; at least, when statements regarding them are required by the insurers as part of the basis of the contract. . . . Where an answer of the applicant to a direct question of the insurers purports to be a complete answer to the question, any substantial misstatement or omission in the answer avoids a policy issued on the faith of the application."

The medical examiner, as we have seen, put down the answer "No" to the question asked Salgue as to whether he had heart disease, after being informed by Salgue, that he, Salgue, had been told by physicians that his heart was affected. It appears from the evidence that the other answers of Salgue in his application were written down by the agent of the company; and there is testimony for and against the fact that Salgue informed the agent of the opinion entertained of him by his physicians, and that he also informed the agent of other applications for insurance. It is hence contended that the agent, not Salgue is responsible for the positive character of the answers, and that the insurance company is estopped by this action of the agent and by his knowledge of the actual conditions and circumstances. It is therefore further contended that the case comes within the principle of the cases which [559] establish that where the agent of the company prepares the application or makes representations to the insured as to the character and effect of the statements of the application, he will be regarded in so doing as the agent of the company, and not the agent of the insured. Among the cases cited to sustain the principle are the following in this court: Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 222, 20 L. ed. 617; American L. Ins. Co. v. Mahone, 21 Wall. 152, 22 L. ed. 593; New Jersey Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Baker, 94 U. S. 610, 24 L. ed. 268; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Chamberlain, 132 U. S. 304, 33 L. ed. 341, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; German-American Mut. Life Asso. v. Farley, supra, is also cited, and, being a Georgia case, its authority is especially urged.

Digitized by Google

There are, however, later cases which enforce the provisions of a policy, and we have seen that it was agreed in the policy under review "that no statement or declaration made to any agent, examiner, or other person, and not contained in" the application, should "be taken or construed as having been made to or brought to the notice or knowledge of" the company, "or as charging it with any liability by reason thereof." And he, Salgue, expressed his understanding to be that the company or one or more of its executive officers, and no other person, could grant insurance or make any agreement binding upon the company.

The competency of applicants for insurance to make such agreements, and that they are binding when made, is decided by Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 183 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 213, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133; Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 203 U. S. 106, 51 L. ed. 109, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Penman v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 216 U. S. 311, 54 L. ed. 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312.

To the contention that German-American Mut. Life Asso. v. Farley is determinative, we answer that the principle which it is cited to support is one of general jurisprudence, and therefore the case is not controlling. Kuhn v. Fairmont Coal Co. 215 U. S. 349, 54 L. ed. 228, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

[560] This case was consolidated by the court, against the objection of the insurance company, with the trial of the case of the same plaintiff against the Prudential Insurance Company. This action of the court was based on § 921 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 685), which provides that "causes of a like nature, or relative to the same questions," may be consolidated "when it appears reasonable to do so." The action of the court is assigned as error. We doubt if it was reasonable to consolidate the cases. We need not, however, pass definitely on that point, as we direct a new trial on other grounds.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded to the District Court for a new trial.

Mr. Justice Pitney dissents.

PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA, Petitioner,
v.
JOHN T. MOORE, Administrator of John Andrew Salgue, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 560-568.)

Insurance — untrue statements in application — good faith of insured.

1. Variations from the truth in the statements made by the insured in his application for life insurance, which are by the policy expressly made the basis of the insurance contract, will, under the construction given to Ga. Code, §§ 2479, 2480, by the courts of that state, avoid the policy if such untruths are such as change the nature, extent, or character of the risk, whether they are made in good faith, without knowledge of their untruth, or are made fraudulently or wilfully.

[For other cases, see Insurance, V. a, 3; V. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Insurance — untrue answers of insured — other applications for insurance.

2. Untrue answers material to the risk which, under Ga. Code, §§ 2479, 2480, as construed by the courts of that state, avoid the policy, were given by the insured in his application made a part of the insurance contract, where he answered "no" to the question whether "any company or association ever declined to grant insurance" on his life, failed to answer the further question "If 'yes,' give name of company or

---

NOTE.—As to what constitutes failure or refusal to issue life insurance which will falsify representations as to previous applications—see note to Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Moore, ante, 356.

On the general subject of forfeiture of life insurance by false representations with respect to previous applications for insurance—see note to Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 122.

On the effect of knowledge by insurance agent of falsity of statements in application—see note to Clemans v. Supreme Assembly, R. S. G. F. 16 L.R.A. 33.

As to the character of insurance or company covered by question in application as to other insurance or as to previous rejection of application—see note to Wright v. Fraternities Health & Acci. Asso. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 461.

On the effect of nonwaiver agreement upon conditions existing at inception of insurance policy—see note to Gish v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 826.

Digitized by Google

companies and when," and mentioned but one other company in answer to the question whether application for insurance was then pending in any other company, while in fact he then had applications in two other companies pending, and where, having made an application for insurance to the local agent of another company whose medical examiner refused to pass him, he had withdrawn such application upon the advice of the agent, before it reached the insurance company.

[For other cases, see Insurance, V. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Insurance — estoppel of insurer — knowledge of agent.

3. No knowledge of the local agent who prepared the application for a policy of life insurance can estop the insurance company from insisting that the policy is void because of material untrue statements in such application, which is made a part of the insurance contract, where the policy provides that "no agent has power in behalf of the company to make or modify this or any contract of insurance, extending the time for paying a premium, to waive any forfeiture, or to bind the company by making any promise, or making or receiving any presentation or information."

[For other cases, see Insurance, VII. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 47.]

Argued November 6, 1913. Decided December 22, 1913.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Georgia in favor of plaintiff in an action on a policy of life insurance. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Eugene R. Black argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Sanders McDaniel and Edward D. Duffield, filed a brief for petitioner:

A rejection by another company is a material matter.

American Union L. Ins. Co. v. Judge, 191 Pa. 484, 43 Atl. 374; Finn v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 70 N. J. L. 255, 57 Atl. 438; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 122, 45 C. C. A. 648, 106 Fed. 808; 3 Cooley, Briefs on Ins. p. 2071.

Where an applicant for life insurance has been rejected by the medical examiner of a company upon the ground of unsound health, he cannot thereafter deny such rejection in applications made by him to other companies, upon the ground that the first company has never acted upon his application, its failure to act being due solely to the applicant having, for the purpose of concealment, prevented its transmission to the home office.

Edington v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 564, 100 N. Y. 536, 3 N. E. 315; Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 646, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Ferris v. Home Life Assur. Co. 118 Mich. 485, 76 N. W. 1041; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Nichols, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 24 S. W. 910; Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Webb, 55 L.R.A. 122, 45 C. C. A. 648, 106 Fed. 808, affirmed in 61 C. C. A. 383, 126 Fed. 635.

An answer to a question, where warranted, as in this case, must not only be true, but must be complete; and any substantial omission in the answer voids a policy issued on the faith of the application.

Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 646, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500.

This question as to the pendency of other applications in other companies had reference to a material matter.

Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 38 L.R.A. 33, 19 C. C. A. 286, 37 U. S. App. 692, 72 Fed. 417; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Myers, 50 C. C. A. 544, 112 Fed. 846; Supreme Lodge, K. P. v. Few, 138 Ga. 785, 76 S. E. 91.

The questions "When were you last attended by a physician?" and "For what complaint?" were as to a material matter.

3 Cooley, Briefs on Ins. p. 2166; Aloe v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 147 Mo. 561, 49 S. W. 557.

Such a question calls for important information which the insured is bound to give truthfully.

McCollum v. New York Mut. L. Ins. Co. 124 N. Y. 642, 27 N. E. 412; Cobb v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Asso. 153 Mass. 176, 10 L.R.A. 666, 26 N. E. 230; United Brethren Mut. Aid Soc. v. O'Hara, 120 Pa. 256, 13 Atl. 932; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. McTague, 49 N. J. L. 587, 60 Am. Rep. 661, 9 Atl. 766; Cummings v. Kennebec Mut. L. Ins. Co. 89 Me. 37, 35 Atl. 1032; Mengel v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 176 Pa. 280, 35 Atl. 197.

Heart disease is a serious illness, and the question and answer in reference to it are material.

Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 336, 47 S. E. 940.

Where, as in this case, the facts are uncontradicted, the materiality of the representation is a question for the determination of the court, and not of the jury.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Miller, 34 C. C. A. 211, 63 U. S. App. 717, 92 Fed. 63; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Myers, 50 C. C. A. 544, 112 Fed. 846.

If, as in this case, the misstatements re-

Digitized by Google

lite to facts within the knowledge of the assured, and these misstatements relate to facts material to the risk, the motive of the applicant in making the misstatements is immaterial, and the policy is voidable.

Finn v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 70 N. J. L. 255, 57 Atl. 438; Fletcher v. Bankers' L. Ins. Co. 135 App. Div. 295, 119 N. Y. Supp. 801; Northwestern L. Ins. Co. v. Montgomery, 116 Ga. 805, 43 S. E. 79; Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 334, 47 S. E. 940.

While this is the general law, it is especially important in this cause in considering the effect of these false answers that it be borne in mind that this insurance policy was a Georgia contract. The application was taken in Georgia, the premium paid, and the policy delivered in that state. This makes it a Georgia contract.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Jeffords, 53 L.R.A. 193, 46 C. C. A. 377, 107 Fed. 408; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements (Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus) 140 U. S. 226, 35 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

A false answer made by an applicant for insurance to a question contained in the application involving a material matter, which false answer was warranted to be true, would void the policy, whether such false answer was or was not made with fraudulent intent.

Southern L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 53 Ga. 550; Northwestern L. Ins. Co. v. Montgomery, 116 Ga. 805, 43 S. E. 79; Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 335, 47 S. E. 940; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Conway, 11 Ga. App. 557, 75 S. E. 915.

In the case at bar the language of insured's warranty imports a warranty, but under the law of Georgia, whether the language imports a warranty or not, representations are covenanted to be true and are warranties.

Supreme Conclave, K. D. v. Wood, 120 Ga. 335, 47 S. E. 940.

In determining whether a false statement in respect to other insurance was made innocently or not, it is competent to show that in answers to similar questions in applications for other policies, the assured made answers equally untrue.

Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 38 L.R.A. 33, 19 C. C. A. 286, 37 U. S. App. 692, 72 Fed. 413.

There is fraud in law if a man makes a representation which he knows to be false, with the view to induce another to act on the faith thereof, who does so accordingly, and by so doing sustains damages, although he may have had no dishonest purpose in making the representation. If a man knowingly and wilfully makes a false representation whereby another is misled to his prejudice, it is immaterial that there may have been no intention on his part to benefit himself, or to injure the person to whom the representation was made.

Northwestern L. Ins. Co. v. Montgomery, 116 Ga. 808, 43 S. E. 79.

An applicant for a policy of insurance has no right to fence with the truth in answering such an inquiry. He should meet it in good faith and according to its letter and spirit. Nor will good faith excuse him if the answer is untrue.

Webb v. Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. 61 C. C. A. 383, 126 Fed. 635.

All of the facts on which the admitted misstatements of the insured in this case were made were clearly material to the risk. They related to the rejection by the Penn Mutual Company, to recent treatment by a physician for a serious illness, to the pendency of an application to the Sun Life Insurance Company, and to the condition of the applicant's health; they were all facts peculiarly within the knowledge of the insured, and of which the insuring company had no knowledge, relying entirely upon the truth of the statements made by the insured. They were all of such recent occurrence as must have impressed themselves upon the insured's mind. In this situation the false answers as to these matters peculiarly within the insured's knowledge necessarily voided the policy.

Henn v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 67 N. J. L. 310, 51 Atl. 689; Dimick v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 69 N. J. L. 384, 62 L.R.A. 774, 55 Atl. 291; Silcox v. Grand Fraternity, 79 N. J. L. 502, 76 Atl. 1018.

Where the application contains an agreement to the effect that the policy shall not take effect until delivery has been made while the insured is in good health, delivery of the policy while the insured is in good health constitutes a condition precedent to the liability of the company on the policy.

Reese v. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. 111 Ga. 482, 36 S. E. 637; Few v. Supreme Lodge, K. P. 136 Ga. 181, 71 S. E. 130; Clark v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 129 Ga. 571, 59 S. E. 283.

No obligation is assumed by the company until the first premium has been paid; and none even then unless upon this date the insured is in good health.

Gallant v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 167 Mass. 79, 44 N. E. 1073; Barker v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 188 Mass. 542, 74 N. E. 945; Packard v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 72 N. H. 1, 54 Atl. 287; McClave v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 55 N. J. L. 188, 26 Atl. 78; Anders v. Life Ins. Clearing Co. 62 Neb. 585, 87 N. W. 331; Ormond v. Fidelity Life Asso. 96 N. C. 158, 1 S. E. 796; Oliver v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 97 Va.

Digitized by Google

134, 33 S. E. 536; Volker v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 1 Misc. 374, 21 N. Y. Supp. 456; 25 Cyc. 719.

Mr. Minter Wimberly argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Akerman and Jesse Harris, filed a brief for respondent.

For contentions of counsel, see their brief as reported in Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Moore, ante, 356.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action upon a policy of insurance for $5,000, issued by petitioner, herein called the insurance company, upon the life of John Andrew Salgue. It was consolidated and tried with the case against the Ætna Company, and resulted in a verdict for the amount of the policy, upon which judgment was entered. It was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals and the case was then brought here. Though consolidated in the district court with the other case, it is here upon a separate record and submitted upon a separate argument. It, however, involves some of the same fundamental questions.

Salgue, in his application for insurance, declared and warranted that he was in good health and that all the statements and answers to the questions put to him were complete and true, and that the declaration should constitute a part of the contract of insurance applied for. He further agreed that the policy should not take effect [562] until the same should be issued and delivered by the company while his health was in the same condition as described in the application.

Certain provisions were made part of the policy, among others, that "no agent has power in behalf of the company to make or modify this or any contract of insurance, extending the time for paying a premium, to waive any forfeiture, or to bind the company by making any promise, or making or receiving any presentation or information."

On the medical examination he declared as follows: "I hereby warrant that the answers to these questions are true and correct, and that they shall form a part of the contract of insurance applied for." The questions in the application and the answers thereto were as follows:

"Has any company or association ever declined to grant insurance on your life, or issue a policy of a different kind, or for a sum less than that applied for?"

Answer: "No."

"If 'yes,' give name of company or companies and when."

(No answer was given to this question.)

"Is application for insurance on your life pending at this time in any other company; if so, give the name of the company."

Answer: "Yes; Provident Savings Life."

"When were you last attended by a physician?"

Answer: "Early spring of 1905."

"For what complaint?"

Answer: "Bilious fever, two days."

"Have you ever had any serious illness?"

Answer: "No."

"Are you in good health?"

Answer: "Yes."

There was testimony in the case tending to show that these answers were untrue; that he had chronic acid [563] gastritis and heart disease, and that other applications for insurance were pending, and others not granted. And it is urged that, the answers to the questions above stated being in the negative, he omitted to answer other questions which were material to be answered in order to make his statement complete and truthful; that therefore his omission to answer amounted to a fraudulent concealment.

Error is assigned on the ruling of the court refusing to direct a verdict for the insurance company and refusing certain special instructions.

The policy is conceded to be a Georgia contract, and it is contended that the warranties contained in the application were all material to the risk, and that they were all broken (1) because the evidence showed that the answers to the questions were false, thereby avoiding the policy; (2) the policy was not delivered to Salgue while he was in good health, that being a condition precedent to its taking effect; and (3) the policy was void by reason of incomplete and untruthful answers. This, it is urged, is the effect of the Georgia law, which, while it modifies the imperative character of statements by an applicant for insurance as warranties, yet provides that any variation from the facts stated "by which the nature or extent or character of the risk is changed will void the policy" Code of Georgia, § 2479.

The insurance company, therefore, to sustain its contention that a verdict should have been directed for it, must establish that the representations were material to the risk, and that they were untrue. Whether they were untrue is a question of fact; and as the proposition of law which the insurance company relies upon is exhibited by the special request, we shall pass to the consideration of the latter. It presents the question of the materiality of Salgue's statements to the risk as one of law. The court submitted it to the jury as a question of fact, and [564] made as elements of decision Salgue's motive, his good or bad faith, his mistake or fraud in making the representations. This, we think, is the sense conveyed by the charge of the court, as we said in Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Moore, just decided [231 U. S. 543, ante, 356, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186], notwithstanding there are here and there qualifying words and a distinction made between misrepresentation of facts and the concealment of them. A few excerpts from the charge will illustrate this. After defining a warranty the court said: "On the other hand, representations are statements made to give information to the insurer, and otherwise induce it to enter into the insurance contract, and unless distinctly material, and made with fraudulent purpose (italics ours) do not avoid the policy. . . . Substantial integrity of conduct on the part of both insurer and insured is the prime object the law seeks to obtain. . . . The law of Georgia, while requiring that every application for insurance must be made in the utmost good faith, and that representations are considered as covenanted to be true, otherwise the policy will be voided, also provides that a failure to state a material fact, if not done fraudulently, does not void the policy. On the other hand, the wilful and fraudulent concealment of such a fact which would enhance the risk of the company will have the effect to void it. What is here stated to be true of wilful concealment is also true of wilful misrepresentation by the applicant to his agent as to any material inquiry made. It follows that under the law of Georgia, a misrepresentation in statement or a concealment of fact must first be material, or must be wilfully or fraudulently made in order to annul the insurance."

Digitized by Google

After further explanation, the court said: "These are the general principles. To make them distinctly applicable to your duty, you are instructed that you must determine from all the facts, first, did Salgue make a misrepresentation or concealment of a fact of [565] which he had knowledge? If he did not, the defense on this point must fail. Second, if he did, was such misrepresentation or concealment so material that it would have influenced one or both of the defendants not to issue the policy of insurance upon the respective applications? And, third, in connection with this your inquiry will be, if such material misrepresentation or concealment as would have caused the defendants or either of them to withhold insurance was made, was it by Salgue wilfully or fraudulently done? In the absence of wilful or fraudulent misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact, the policy stands good and the insurance company must pay what it promised to pay by its policy, when it accepted the premium of the applicant."

This being the charge of the court, wherein did it militate against the special request, which is as follows:

"The defendant, The Prudential Insurance Company of America, requests the court to charge as follows:

"Question 4-B of the application of said John A. Salgue to the said the Prudential Insurance Company of America is as follows: 'Has any company or association ever declined to grant insurance on your life, or issued a policy of a different kind, or for a sum less than that applied for? (Answer "Yes" or "No.")' The answer to this question is 'No.'

"The defendant insists that this answer is false, and says that the said Salgue, in the month of June, 1905, prior to the time of making this application, applied to the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company for a policy, and was declined. If you believe from the evidence that the said Salgue made application to Anderson Clark, the agent for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, for insurance, and that this application was signed by the said Salgue, and that this application was handed by the said Anderson Clark, as agent for the Penn Mutual Insurance Company, to Dr. Little, examiner for the said [566] Penn Mutual Company, for examination, and that Dr. Little, as said examiner, examined the said Salgue, and stated to the said Salgue that he had heart trouble, and that for this reason he could not pass him, then I charge you that this would amount to a declination by the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of the application for insurance made to it by the said Salgue, and if you believe from the evidence that such application was made and that such declination was made, then I charge you that the answer of Salgue to this question was false, and that it was warranted to be true, and that it was as to a material matter which would tend to change the nature, extent, and character of the risk assumed, and that in this event plaintiff could not recover."

It is contended that the instruction was "legal and pertinent" to the issue, and was not incorporated in the charge of the court. The court, we have seen, did not incorporate the instruction in its charge, and that the instruction was legal and pertinent to the issue between the parties is shown by the opinion in the Ætna Case.

The instruction based on the facts stated was peremptory of the right of the insurance company to recover. But respondent contends that the requirement was either void, or that the agent of the company wrote down and reported the answer, knowing the facts, and therefore the company is estopped to dispute the correctness of the answer or its completeness. There was testimony in the case upon which the contention could be based. But the case was not submitted to the jury in that view. This phase of the case, as its other phases, was made to turn upon the good faith of Salgue, not upon the materiality of the fact or the action of the agent of the insurance company. The court stated to the jury that the contention of the insurance company was that the transaction with the Penn Mutual showed a rejection of Salgue's application [567] by that company, "to be determined by the court as a matter of law." With the contention the court said it was unable to agree, "and leaves the question to the jury, it being a mixed question of law and fact."

Digitized by Google

The testimony in regard to the application to the Penn Mutual is the same as in the Ætna Case. We need not repeat it. It may be that it cannot be literally said that any company or association had rejected an application by Salgue. If that had been the question, and regarding sense, rather than form, it could be contended that the answer was untruthful. But the question asked Salgue was broader. He was asked "if any company or association ever declined to grant insurance" on his life, and the further question was put: "If so, give the name of the company or companies," to which he gave no answer. He was also asked, "Is application for life insurance on your life pending at this time in any other company; if so, give the name of the company?" To the latter question he answered, "Yes; Provident Savings Life." At that time he had an application pending with the Sun Life Insurance Company of Canada. The answers were, therefore, not true, and we think that they were material to the risk within the meaning of the Georgia Code. Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Moore.

It is contended here, as in the Ætna Case, that the company is estopped by the knowledge of the agent, and the same cases are cited as were cited there. We answer here, as we answered there, that the terms of the policy constituted the contract of the parties and precluded a variation of them by the agent. We may, however, observe that Salgue did not inform the medical examiner in this case, as he did in the Ætna Case, that he was told he had heart disease. In other words, he made no communication to the examiner which modified in any way the positive character of his answers to the questions put to him. The testimony is conflicting as to the information [568] he gave to the agent of the company, who, the evidence shows, prepared the application.

We think, therefore, that the court erred in refusing the special request.

It is also contended, as it was in the Ætna Case, that the District Court erred in consolidating the causes, and it must be admitted that petitioner here has more ground of complaint of the ruling than the Ætna Company. We are, however, not required to pass upon the contention, though, as we said in the other case, there are grounds for it.

Judgment reversed and cause remanded to the District Court for a new trial.

Mr. Justice Pitney dissents.

SEATTLE, RENTON, & SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF WASHINGTON EX REL. A. G. LINHOFF.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 568-570.)

Error to state court — Federal question — due process of law.

Something more than a mere possible misconstruction of a municipal ordinance by the highest court of a state is necessary to present a question of due process of law which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1124-1132, 1898-1913, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 107.]

Argued and submitted December 9, 1913.
Decided December 22, 1913.

Note.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On writs of error to state courts in cases involving questions of due process of law—see note to Burt v. Smith, 51 L. ed. U. S. 121.

Digitized by Google

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of King County, in that state, granting a mandamus requiring a street railway company to issue and accept transfers to and from another street railway company on the basis of an equal division of the fares. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 62 Wash. 544, 114 Pac. 431.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James A. Kerr submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Mr. Howard A. Hanson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William B. Allison, James E. Bradford, and Ralph S. Pierce, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The appellate jurisdiction of this court cannot be invoked merely because the state court has erroneously construed a contract; the impairment of a contract cannot be said to result by judicial construction thereof, but only by some subsequent legislation which impairs such contract.

Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 382, 20 L. ed. 415; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 390, 30 L. ed. 1060, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 44, 45 L. ed. 417, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. ed. 381; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 19 L. ed. 997; Delmas v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. ed. 757; Northwestern University v. Illinois, 99 U. S. 309, 25 L. ed. 387; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The state supreme court decided no Federal question, nor was any Federal question necessary to its decision; but it disposed of the case entirely on non-Federal grounds sufficient to support its judgment. The franchise contracts in question were before the court for construction, and all the court did in its decision was to ascertain the real intent and meaning of these contracts under well-known rules of construction.

State ex rel. Linhoff v. Seattle, R. & S. R. Co. 62 Wash. 544, 114 Pac. 431.

There is no color for a contention that a man is deprived of property without due process of law by enforcing against him a decree for alimony rendered in another state in a proceeding in which he appeared and was heard.

Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555.

A party who seeks and is given the opportunity to litigate the rights claimed by it cannot have the judgment reversed in the Supreme Court of the United States on the ground that due process of law was denied because the litigation did not result successfully.

Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

The judgment or decree of a state court cannot be re-examined in the Supreme Court of the United States simply because a Federal question was presented to the state court for determination. That court must also decide it.

Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458; Israel v. Arthur, 152 U. S. 355, 38 L. ed. 474, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583.

If the decision of a Federal question is rendered unnecessary by the view which the state court properly takes of the rest of the case within the scope of the pleadings, the judgment is not open to review in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Wells v. Goodnow, 150 U. S. 84, 37 L. ed. 1007, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

Where the state court disposes of the case upon non-Federal grounds sufficient to support its judgment, it is obvious that the Supreme Court of the United States cannot review such judgment on the theory that a decision of the Federal question was necessarily involved.

McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578, 23 L. ed. 390; Note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 42.

It is necessary that the decision of the state court upon a Federal question be controlling in the disposition of the case.

Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation (Louisiana ex rel. Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation) 98 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 114.

The only questions which will be considered are those which are involved in the record, and which received the consideration of the state court.

First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904; Marsh v. Nichols, S. & Co. 140 U. S. 344, 35 L. ed. 413, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798.

Even though the state court reached a wrong conclusion or placed an erroneous construction upon such contracts, yet the plaintiff in error having had its day in court, it cannot be said that such decision would deprive it of its property without due process of law.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 112, 40 L. ed. 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80;

Digitized by Google

Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 369, 48 L. ed. 1023, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. ed. 845, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 9, 28 L. ed. 889, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678.

If a Federal question be involved, it was not seasonably and sufficiently raised and presented in the lower courts.

Farney v. Towle, 1 Black, 350, 17 L. ed. 217; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 41, 45 L. ed. 415, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709.

It is well settled that a real, and not a fictitious, Federal question, is essential to the exercise of jurisdiction by this court.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

As the due process clause of the Constitution was not designed to interfere with the power of the states to regulate the forms and modes of procedure, so neither was it designed to interfere with the state courts in administering the process provided by the law of the state. A state cannot, therefore, be deemed guilty of a violation of this clause because one of its courts makes a wrong decision.

5 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 621, 622.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error seeks to reverse a judgment in mandamus requiring the plaintiff in error, a street railway, to issue and accept transfers to and from the Seattle Electric Company, another street railway, redeemable by payment of 2½ cents for the ordinary 5 cent fares, and of 1½ cents and for school childrens' tickets costing 2½ cents. 62 Wash. 544, 114 Pac. 431. The Seattle Electric Company was made a defendant, but did not appeal from the judgment of the court of first instance, affirmed by the supreme court. The plaintiff in error contends that its property is taken without due process of law by the construction given to the ordinance under which it was operating its line when the suit was brought. That ordinance requires a division "on the basis of settlement that the transfer is to be redeemed at or for such a proportionate part of the fare paid as the run or local route of the car on which transfer is received bears to the sum of the runs of the local route of the cars from which the transfer is issued and on which the transfer is received." The supreme court construed the words "or local route" as meaning "the entire distance the passenger may travel upon that system of railway as if he had paid the ordinary [570] fare, whether he changes cars upon that system or not." 62 Wash. 549. Noting that the Electric Company had not appealed, it decided for an equal division of the fares. At every point of intersection between the two roads, the line of the Electric Company is longer than that of the plaintiff in error. In some cases a single car is routed over the entire length, in others the routes are divided, but a passenger is entitled to a transfer that will take him the whole length in the same general direction. Whether there shall be a continuous single route or a divided one is determined by each company for itself.

The possibility of a different construction and the grounds for the one adopted both are obvious, but this court does not sit to revise the construction of documents by state courts, even if alleged, as this ordinance is not alleged, to be contracts protected by the Constitution of the United States. Fisher v. New Orleans, 218 U. S. 438, 54 L. ed. 1099, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57. There is no impairment of rights by later legislation, and it takes more than a possible misconstruction by a court to make a case under the 14th Amendment. Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club v. Louisiana, 224 U. S. 632, 638, 56 L. ed. 924, 927, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Ross v. Oregon, 227 U. S. 150, 162, 57 L. ed. 458, 463, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; McGovern v. New York, 229 U. S. 363, 370, 371, 57 L. ed. 1228, 1231, 1232, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 391, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

The plaintiff in error put forward suggestions of want of jurisdiction of the supreme court, etc., on the ground that since this suit was begun the ordinance referred to has been superseded by another. The supreme court, not we, is the judge of its own jurisdiction, but the later ordinance does not appear in the record. It was held not to affect the case when brought up at an earlier stage. 62 Wash. 124, 113 Pac. 260. In short, while the railway seems to have brought the case here under a strong conviction as to what were its rights, and although it refers to the Constitution in its answer, it discloses no grievance for which it is entitled to any remedy in this court.

Writ of error dismissed.

Digitized by Google

[571] PULLMAN COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
A. C. CROOM, Comptroller of the State of Florida. (No. 28.)

PULLMAN COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
A. C. CROOM, as Comptroller of the State of Florida, and W. V. Knott, as Treasurer of the State of Florida. (No. 158.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 571-577.)

Appeal — abatement — death of party.

1. The death of the state comptroller and the succession of another person to that office abates appeals to the Federal Supreme Court, taken under the Judicial Code, § 266, from orders of a Federal circuit court denying applications before three judges for interlocutory injunctions restraining such comptroller from levying and collecting certain taxes under the authority of certain state statutes whose validity under the Federal Constitution is challenged, there being no statutory authority for bringing in his successor; nor does it matter that the state treasurer was also brought in with a view to the recovery back from him of taxes alleged to have been wrongfully collected, where no injunction was asked against him.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. c; Abatement, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — judgment — vacating after term.

2. An order of substitution erroneously made upon suggestion of the death of the state official who was the only party appellee involved in the inquiry open on the appeal may be vacated by the Federal Supreme Court at a subsequent term, where there has been no final judgment in the case.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. b, 5; IX. k; Judgment, XII. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 28 and 158.]

Argued October 31 and November 3, 1913.
Decided December 22, 1913.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida to review orders denying interlocutory injunctions to restrain the enforcement of a state tax law as in violation of the Federal Constitution. Dismissed because of death of appellee.

NOTE.—On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

On parties to appellate proceedings in the Federal Supreme Court—see note to Amadeo v. Northern Assur. Co. 50 L. ed. U. S. 723.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

These are appeals from orders of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Florida.

The Pullman Company, appellant herein, in its complaint filed in the court below, in the first case (No. 28 [572] of this term), alleged that it was an Illinois corporation, engaged in furnishing to railroad companies under contract, parlor, dining, and sleeping cars in Florida and other states, and had complied with the laws of Florida requisite to engaging in that business; that the defendant, A. C. Croom, was the duly qualified comptroller of the state of Florida, charged with the collection of all taxes due from such companies. It averred that chapter 5597 of the laws of Florida for the year 1907 provides for the payment of license taxes to the state, and that it had paid such taxes; that § 46 of chapter 5596 provides for the collection of an ad valorem tax upon the cars of sleeping and parlor car companies, and that it had satisfied such tax. The appellant further averred that by the provisions of an act approved June 1, 1895, which by sundry amendments had been re-enacted and incorporated into chapter 5596, being § 47, sleeping and parlor car companies operating their cars in the state were required to annually report, under oath, the total amount of the gross receipts of business done between points in the state to the comptroller of the state, and to pay into the state treasury $1.50 upon each $100 of such gross receipts, and in event of failure to make the report and pay the tax, the comptroller was authorized to estimate the amount of such gross receipts from the information he might obtain, and to add a penalty of 10 per cent of the tax, and to collect it, with costs and penalties, the same as other delinquent taxes.

The appellant stated that since the passage of the act in 1895, and up to 1907, no property tax had been levied upon it, and that it had therefore taken the act of 1895 to impose a tax upon its property, and had paid the amount required by it; but it asserted that the act of 1907, § 46 of chapter 5596, contained an ad valorem tax, and it stated that it had not made a report of its business on January 1, 1910, or January 1, 1911, as required by the act, and had not paid the tax provided for, and that the defendant had demanded [573] by wire that the reports be sent in at once. It assailed the constitutionality of the law, and pleaded allegations to support its claim to jurisdiction of the case by the court in equity. It prayed that the defendant be restrained and enjoined from estimating the gross receipts of the company and adding the pen-supreme court, will accept the construction placed by that court upon Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1901, ¶¶ 2764–2766, giving a right of action for death, as not requiring plaintiff to allege or prove the existence of beneficiaries or the amount of damages suffered by them, —especially as this ruling of the territorial court was but a reaffirmance, upon the eve of statehood, of a construction theretofore deliberately established and followed.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 994, 995; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — prejudicial error — inconsistent instructions.

2. The inadvertent use of the word "beneficiaries" in instructing the jury as to damages in an action for death, tried throughout upon the correct theory that the damages to be awarded were such as were suffered by the decedent's estate, is not prejudicial error where, in view of the course of the trial and of the instructions given just prior to and immediately following the one in question, it cannot be said that the language complained of might have confused or misled the jury.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5071–5126, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to territorial supreme court — scope of review — weight of evidence — damages.

3. An objection that the verdict is against the weight of evidence, or that the damages allowed are excessive, cannot be considered in the Federal Supreme Court on a writ of error sued out under the act of April 7, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 80), § 2, to review a judgment of a territorial supreme court, where there was some evidence to go to the jury.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. e; VIII. 1, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — error in instructions — failure to point out objection.

4. Charging the jury in an action for death that it might "take into consideration the income and earning capacity of the deceased, his business capacity, experience, and habits, his health, physical condition, energy, and perseverance during what would probably have been his lifetime if he had not received the injuries from which death ensued," is not open to the objection in an appellate court that it failed to specify particularly what habits the jury was authorized to consider, where there was no request for an instruction referring to such habits with greater particularity.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5071–5126, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review — objection not raised below.

5. An objection to the charge of the trial court upon the subject of damages comes too late when raised in the Federal Supreme Court for the first time.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4731–4739, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review of territorial decision — local practice.

6. The refusal of a territorial supreme court, following its established practice, to scrutinize the reporter's transcript for the purpose of discovering the objections said to have actually been made to the action of the trial court in permitting answers to certain hypothetical questions addressed to physicians, where the objections disclosed by the abstract of record before the court were too general to be availing, will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 61.]

Argued November 12, 1913. Decided December 22, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Yavapai County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action for death. Affirmed.

See same case below, 13 Ariz. 80, 108 Pac. 247; on rehearing, 13 Ariz. 279, 112 Pac. 844.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles Cowles Tucker argued the cause, and Messrs. Louis H. Chalmers, Edward Kent, A. B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and Evans Browne filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The act in question was taken from the statutes of Wyoming.

Southern P. Co. v. Wilson, 10 Ariz. 162, 85 Pac. 401.

The practice in that state is to allege and prove the existence of persons dependent upon the deceased, and the damage sustained by them through loss of support, etc.

Mestas v. Diamond Coal & Coke Co. 12 Wyo. 414, 76 Pac. 567; Burton v. Union P. Coal Co. 18 Wyo. 362, 107 Pac. 391; Thorpe v. Union P. Coal Co. 24 Utah, 475, 68 Pac. 145; Utah Sav. & T. Co. v. Diamond Coal & Coke Co. 26 Utah, 299, 73 Pac. 524; Re Lowham, 30 Utah, 436, 85 Pac. 445; Kelley v. Union P. R. Co. 141 Mo. App. 490, 125 S. W. 818; Tiffany, Death by Wrongful Act, 2d ed. § 24.

The damages recoverable under a similar Michigan statute are such as the next of kin sustain through loss of support, etc.

Van Brunt v. Cincinnati, J. & M. R. Co. 78 Mich. 530, 44 N. W. 321; Hurst v. Detroit City R. Co. 84 Mich. 539, 48 N. W. 44; Rouse v. Detroit Electric R. Co. 128 Mich. 149, 87 N. W. 68.

Likewise the supreme court of Nebraska has construed the statute of that state, allowing recovery for injuries resulting in death, which resembles the Arizona act very closely in its language, as providing for the assessment of damages on the basis of the loss sustained by persons dependent upon deceased.

Digitized by Google

Orgall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 46 Neb. 4, 64 N. W. 450; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Bond, 58 Neb. 385, 78 N. W. 710.

The authorities cited by the supreme court of Arizona in the Wilson Case hardly justify the conclusion there reached with respect to the proper interpretation of the Arizona act.

Roach v. Imperial Min. Co. 7 Fed. 698; Hedrick v. Ilwaco R. & Nav. Co. 4 Wash. 400, 30 Pac. 714; Madden v. Chespeake & O. R. Co. 28 W. Va. 610, 57 Am. Rep. 695; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Wightman, 29 Gratt. 442, 26 Am. Rep. 384; James v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 92 Ala. 231, 9 So. 335; Holmes v. Oregon &c. R. Co. 6 Sawy. 275, 5 Fed. 523; Perham v. Portland General Electric Co. 33 Or. 451, 40 L.R.A. 799, 72 Am. St. Rep. 730, 53 Pac. 14; Andrews v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 86 Iowa, 677, 53 N. W. 399; Givens v. Kentucky C. R. Co. 89 Ky. 231, 12 S. W. 257.

In only nine states and territories does the law, either by express enactment or by judicial construction, provide that the damages in cases of injuries resulting in death shall be such as deceased's estate sustains.

Tiffany, Death by Wrongful Act, 2d ed. § 25.

In the great majority of the states and territories the damages recoverable are such as the persons dependent upon deceased sustain.

Tiffany, Death by Wrongful Act, § 24.

If this court adopts the construction of the Arizona act here contended for, then, it is submitted, the judgment below should be reversed. The mere fact that the evidence may have disclosed the existence of beneficiaries entitled to take under the statute does not remedy the fatal omission of the complaint to allege the existence of such beneficiaries and the quantum of damage suffered by them, on the general principle that a complaint that fails to state a cause of action will not support a judgment for the plaintiff.

Consolidated Canal Co. v. Peters, 5 Ariz. 80, 46 Pac. 74; McPherson v. Hattich, 10 Ariz. 104, 85 Pac. 731; Sandoval v. Randolph, 11 Ariz. 371, 95 Pac. 119.

The giving of inconsistent instructions constitutes reversible error as a matter of law.

11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 145–147; District of Columbia v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 29 L. ed. 946, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884.

The failure of the court to charge that deceased's habits of thrift and economy were the gauge of plaintiff's recovery was not an omissive error, but an error of positive misdirection.

11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 224, 227; Ward v. Cochran, 150 U. S. 597, 609, 610, 37 L. ed. 1195, 1198, 1199, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Johnson, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 420, 66 S. W. 72; International & G. N. R. Co. v. McVey, 99 Tex. 28, 87 S. W. 328; Evans v. George, 80 Ill. 54; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 118 U. S. 545, 30 L. ed. 257, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, 10 Am. Neg. Cas. 574.

The supreme court of Arizona is in the habit of referring to the reporter's transcript for enlightenment on any point that is not made clear by the abstract.

Leatherwood v. Richardson, 11 Ariz. 280, 94 Pac. 1110; Copper Belle Min. Co. v. Costello, 11 Ariz. 350, 95 Pac. 94.

Mr. J. M. Jamison argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Mason Ross, filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court will ordinarily follow the decision of the supreme court of a territory on matters of local statutory construction.

Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 479, 51 L. ed. 1143, 1146, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 363, 53 L. ed. 1030, 1033, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Clason v. Matko, 223 U. S. 646, 653, 56 L. ed. 588, 593, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392.

The conclusion deliberately reached in the Wilson Case, and subsequently re-affirmed in the De Amado Case and the case at bar, is obviously sound.

Southern P. Co. v. Wilson, 10 Ariz. 172, 85 Pac. 401; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hawkins, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 309, 98 C. C. A. 443, 174 Fed. 597; Turner v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 40 W. Va. 675, 22 S. E. 83; Matthews v. Warner, 29 Gratt. 570, 26 Am. Rep. 396.

An instruction which is only defective for nondirection, and not for misdirection, which properly mentions some of the elements to be considered, but omits others which might properly be mentioned, is not ground for reversal.

Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Henrie, 87 Ark. 443, 112 S. W. 967; Galveston Oil Co. v. Malin, 60 Tex. 645; Warren & O. Valley R. Co. v. Waldrop, 93 Ark. 127, 123 S. W. 792; Sharon v. Winnebago Furniture Mfg. Co. 141 Wis. 185, 124 N. W. 299.

If it might have been improved by greater particularity, plaintiff in error should have requested an instruction fully covering the subject in accordance with its view of the law. Having failed to do so, it may not now complain.

A. Backus Jr. & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853.

Digitized by Google

18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Volk, 151 U. S. 73, 38 L. ed. 78, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Isaacs v. United States, 159 U. S. 487, 40 L. ed. 229, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51.

This court will not now interfere with the rulings of the lower court in its oft-repeated holding that under its rules and the laws of the now state it will not go back and inspect the reporter's transcript to determine what objections have been made and the rulings thereon, and holding to the law and rules in conformity thereto that counsel must be confined to the abstract of record as made by them. The inquiry in this court will be limited to the matters presented and considered by the lower court.

Montana R. Co. v. Warren, 137 U. S. 348, 34 L. ed. 681, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Robinson v. Belt, 187 U. S. 41, 50, 187 L. ed. 65, 69, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Hegeman v. Springer, 189 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 921, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by the administrator of the estate of George W. Sanders against the Phœnix Railway Company to recover damages for negligence causing the death of the intestate. Judgment in favor of the administrator was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory. 13 Ariz. 80, 108 Pac. 247, 13 Ariz. 279, 112 Pac. 844.

The first assignment of error is to the effect that the court below misconstrued the statute under which the action was brought. Rev. Stat. (Ariz.) 1901, ¶¶ 2764–2766. The ruling was upon the sufficiency of the complaint, and the court followed Southern P. Co. v. Wilson (1906) 10 Ariz. 162, 85 Pac. 401, and De Amado v. Friedman, (1907) 11 Ariz. 56, 89 Pac. 588, which held that the action was for the benefit of the estate, and that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to allege or prove the existence of beneficiaries, or the amount of damages suffered by them.

In the first case cited, the history of the legislation was reviewed and the conclusion was rested upon the terms of the statute of 1901, as compared with the earlier act. This court has frequently stated that it is disposed to accept the construction which the territorial court has placed upon a local statute. Sweeney v. Lomme, 22 Wall. 208, 213, 22 L. ed. 727 728; Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 679, 39 L. ed. 576, 578, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hambly, 154 U. S. 349, 361, 38 L. ed. 1009, 1014, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 479, 51 L ed. 1143, 1146, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695; Lewis v. Herrea, 208 U. S. 309, 314, 52 L. ed. 506, 508, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; English v. Arizona, 214 [580] U. S. 359, 361, 53 L. ed. 1030, 1032, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Santa Fe County v. New Mexico, 215 U. S. 296, 305, 54 L. ed. 202, 207, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Albright v. Sandoval, 216 U. S. 331, 339, 54 L. ed. 502, 508, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Clason v. Matko, 223 U. S. 646, 653, 56 L. ed. 588, 593, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392. The applicable considerations gain in force where, as in this case, the construction of the statute, deliberately established and followed, has been reaffirmed upon the eve of statehood, and we are of the opinion that the ruling of the supreme court of the territory of Arizona should not be disturbed.

The next contention is that the court below should have reversed the judgment of the trial court because of inconsistent instructions to the jury. After charging the jury that if they found for the plaintiff they should award such damages as should fairly compensate the estate of the deceased for the loss sustained by reason of his death, not exceeding the amount fixed by the statute, the trial court gave a further instruction that it was "not necessary on the part of the plaintiff to show the precise money value of the life of the deceased, or the exact amount of damages suffered by the beneficiaries, in order to sustain a recovery for substantial damages." It is urged that the latter instruction was inconsistent with the former, and impliedly submitted a distinct basis of recovery; that is, the loss to beneficiaries. It appeared in evidence that the decedent left a wife and two adult children, and that his wife, at least, had enjoyed the benefit of his support. The court below, while conceding that the term "beneficiaries," in the light of its construction of the statute, was "technically inappropriate," was of the opinion that the action was tried throughout upon the theory that the damages to be awarded were such as were suffered by the estate, and that, on considering the course of the trial and the instructions given to the jury just prior to, and immediately following, the one in question, it could not be said that the language complained of might have confused or misled the jury. We concur in this view and find in this assignment of error no ground for reversal.

[581] It is said further that the court erred in holding that the plaintiff was entitled to recover substantial damages for the benefit of the estate "without evidence showing or tending to show that deceased had ever saved or would have saved any portion of his earnings." We have not been referred to any ruling to this effect. No such instruction was given to the jury, and the record does not disclose any request for an instruction which was refused by the trial court. The argument, in substance, is that the verdict was without sufficient basis in the evidence. It cannot be said, however, that there was no evidence to go to the jury, and, as we are limited to those questions which may be appropriately raised on writ of error, an objection that the verdict is against the weight of evidence, or that the damages allowed were excessive, cannot be considered in this court. Act of April 7, 1874, chap. 80, § 2, 18 Stat. at L. 27; Wilson v. Everett, 139 U. S. 616, 35 L. ed. 286, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Ward, 140 U. S. 76, 91, 35 L. ed. 371, 376, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Winter, 143 U. S. 60, 75, 36 L. ed. 71, 80, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356, 8 Am. Neg. Cas. 600; Herencia v. Guzman, 219 U. S. 44, 45, 55 L. ed. 81, 82, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135.

Digitized by Google

The trial court charged the jury that it might "take into consideration the income and earning capacity of the deceased, his business capacity, experience, and habits, his health, physical condition, energy, and perseverance during what would probably have been his lifetime if he had not received the injuries from which death ensued." The court below granted a rehearing upon the question whether there was error in giving this instruction because of a failure to specify particularly what habits the jury was authorized to consider. 13 Ariz. 279, 112 Pac. 844. It was concluded that if the appellant desired an instruction with greater particularity upon this point it should have made a suitable request; and, having failed to do so, was not entitled to complain of the omission. This ruling is assigned as error. It is urged that the instruction as given by the trial court was wrong in itself, in that it directed the jury, in effect, to find for the plaintiff [582] the amount the deceased would have earned during the years of his life expectancy. But this is manifestly a misconstruction of the charge. It was not erroneous to instruct the jury, as did the court, with respect to what might be taken into consideration in determining the damages sustained by the estate, and the court below was right in saying that, if the plaintiff in error desired explicit reference to particular habits, an instruction to that effect should have been requested. Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. 1, 15, 7 L. ed. 327, 332; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Edgar, 99 U. S. 645, 659, 25 L. ed. 487, 491, 1 Am. Neg. Cas. 375; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Volk, 151 U. S. 73, 78, 38 L. ed. 78, 80, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239. A further objection to the charge of the trial court upon the subject of damages, with respect to the number of years which should be deemed to constitute the deceased's expectation of life, concededly was not presented to the court below, and, being raised in this court for the first time, comes too late. Clark v. Fredericks (Davis v. Fredericks) 105 U. S. 4, 26 L. ed. 938; Robinson v. Belt, 187 U. S. 41, 50, 47 L. ed. 65, 69, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16.

The remaining assignments of error involve a question of appellate practice in the supreme court of the territory. That court held, with respect to the action of the trial court in permitting answers to certain hypothetical questions addressed to physicians, that the mere general objections disclosed by the abstract of record filed under its rules were unavailing, and it declined to scrutinize the reporter's transcript for the purpose of discovering the objections said to have been actually made. On this course, the court but applied its rule that "abstracts of record, as filed, will be treated by the court as containing such portions of the record as the parties deem sufficient upon which to try the assignments of error." Rule I., subdiv. 6, 8 Ariz. iv., 71 Pac. vi. It is urged that the refusal to examine the reporter's transcript was in violation of the act of 1907 (Laws of Arizona, 1907, chap. 74, p. 122). But the statute has not been thus construed, and we find no ground upon which we should be justified in holding [583] that the court committed error in following the established practice to which the court alludes in its opinion. 13 Ariz. 80, 84, 108 Pac. 247, 248; Laws of Arizona 1907, chap. 74, pp. 130, 131; Liberty Min. & Smelting Co. v. Geddes, 11 Ariz. 54, 90 Pac. 232; Donohoe v. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. 11 Ariz. 293, 94 Pac. 1091; Title Guaranty & Surety Co. v. Nichols, 12 Ariz. 405, 100 Pac. 825; Sanford v. Ainsa, 13 Ariz. 287, 114 Pac. 560, 228 U. S. 705, 707, 57 L. ed. 1033, 1035, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

HAGON JOHN, Guardian, etc., Plff. in Err.,

v.

LEWIS PAULLIN et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 583-587.)

Error to state court — decision of Federal question — dismissal below.

1. A judgment of the supreme court of the state of Oklahoma, dismissing for a

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme

Digitized by Google

defect in the parties a writ of error sued out to review a judgment of the district court of that state in a case transferred to the latter court from a Federal court for the Indian territory, under the combined operation of the enabling act of June 16, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 3335), and of the state Constitution, turned upon a question of local law, and is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1351–1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

States — relation to Federal government — appellate procedure.

2. The state laws and practice relative to the jurisdiction of its appellate courts, the mode and time of invoking that jurisdiction, and the rules of practice to be applied in its exercise, are no less applicable when Federal rights are in controversy than when the case turns entirely upon questions of local or general law.

[For other cases, see States, IV. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

States — admission — appellate procedure.

3. The regulations governing appeals from the Federal courts in the Indian territory prescribed by the act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1081, chap. 1479), § 12, did not and could not govern an attempt to secure a review in the Oklahoma supreme court of a judgment of a district court of that state in a case which had been transferred to the latter court from a Federal court in the Indian territory, upon the admission of Oklahoma into the Union.

[For other cases, see States, XI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 105.]

Argued and submitted December 8 and 9, 1913. Decided December 22, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a judgment dismissing, for a defect in the parties, a writ of error to the District Court of Bryan County, in that state, bringing up for review a judgment in an action to remove a cloud on title. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 24 Okla. 636, 104 Pac. 365; on rehearing, 24 Okla. 642, 106 Pac. 838.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward F. Colladay argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Napoleon B. Maxey also filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. T. Sprowls submitted the cause for defendants in error. Messrs. V. B. Hayes and Robert Crockett were on the brief.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

Our jurisdiction in this case is challenged by a motion to dismiss. The case was begun in the United States court for the central district of the Indian territory, and was pending in that court when the territory of Oklahoma and the Indian territory were admitted into the Union as the state of Oklahoma. Under the combined operation of the Oklahoma enabling act (34 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 3335; Id. 1286, chap. 2911) and the state constitution (see Benner v. Porter, 9 How. 235, 246, 13 L. ed. 119, 124), the case was then transferred to the district court of Bryan county, where a trial resulted in a judgment determining the matters in controversy, which turned in part upon the validity, under the laws of the United States, of certain deeds and leases executed by an Indian allottee, since deceased. The guardian of two minor heirs of the allottee had intervened in the cause, had asserted the invalidity of all the deeds and leases, and [585] had set up a claim to the property in question as against the other parties; but this claim was rejected, and the guardian sought to have the judgment reviewed and reversed by the supreme court of the state. That court held that some of the parties below, whose presence in the appellate proceeding was essential, had not been brought into that proceeding, or voluntarily appeared therein, in accordance with the law of the state, and upon that ground dismissed the proceeding, 24 Okla. 636, 104 Pac. 365, 106 Pac. 848. The guardian then sued out the present writ of error.

As the supreme court of the state did not pass upon the merits of the case or upon the correctness of any of the rulings below, but, on the contrary, held that it was powerless to do so because its appellate jurisdiction was not invoked in accordance with the laws of the state, we do not perceive

Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

Digitized by Google

any theory upon which its judgment of dismissal may be reviewed by us consistently with the familiar limitations upon our authority. See Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575; Judicial Code, § 237 [36 Stat. at L. 1156, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 227]. Certainly no Federal right was denied by that court, and if, as was held by it, its appellate jurisdiction was not properly invoked, no Federal question was before it for decision.

Without any doubt it rests with each state to prescribe the jurisdiction of its appellate courts, the mode and time of invoking that jurisdiction, and the rules of practice to be applied in its exercise; and the state law and practice in this regard are no less applicable when Federal rights are in controversy than when the case turns entirely upon questions of local or general law. Callan v. Bransford, 139 U. S. 197, 35 L. ed. 144, 11 Sup. Ct Rep. 519; Brown v. Massachusetts, 144 U. S. 573 36 L. ed. 546, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275. 281, 50 L. ed. 1026, 1028, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Newman v. Gates, 204 U. S. 89, 51 L. ed. 385, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. McDonald, 214 U. S. 191, 195, 53 L. ed. 963, 965, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546.

But it is said that the proceedings by which it was attempted to secure a review of the judgment of the trial court should have been tested by the act of Congress of [586] March 3, 1905, 33 Stat. at L. 1081; chap. 1479, § 12, and that the supreme court of the state erred in holding otherwise. We cannot accede to the contention. The act of 1905, § 12, related to the review of judgments rendered in the courts temporarily established by Congress in the Indian territory, and had no application to judgments rendered after statehood in the courts of the state. Besides, the mode of subjecting the judgments of the state's subordinate courts to review in its supreme court was a matter of local concern only, and not within the control of Congress. See Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

The state Constitution provided (art. 7, § 8) that the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court should be invoked in the manner prescribed by the laws of the territory of Oklahoma, until the state legislature should provide otherwise, and also (art. 25, § 2) that the laws of the territory of Oklahoma, not repugnant to the state Constitution or locally inapplicable, should be extended over the new state which embraced the Indian territory as well as the territory of Oklahoma. When the state was admitted into the Union the territory of Oklahoma had a full complement of laws regulating appellate proceedings. Wilson's Rev. & Anno. Stat. 1903, §§ 4732 et seq. It was by these constitutional provisions and laws that the supreme court tested the appellate proceedings in this instance, with the result that they were adjudged inadequate because they had not brought before the court within the time prescribed (Wilson's Stat. §§ 4736, 4748), parties whose presence was essential to enable it to review the judgment below.

Thus it appears that nothing was decided but the preliminary question of the court's jurisdiction to pass upon the controverted matters shown in the record, and that this question was resolved according to what the court deemed to be the true construction and effect of applicable provisions of the Constitution and laws of the state. In [587] short, the judgment of dismissal turned entirely upon a question of local law.

As particularly apposite, we quote the following from the opinion in Newman v. Gates, 204 U. S. 89, 51 L. ed. 385, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220, a case in which this court declined to review a like judgment of dismissal by a state court:

"Had the appeal been properly taken, it would have been the duty of the supreme court of Indiana to pass upon the questions presented by the record before it, including, it may be, a Federal question, based upon the due faith and credit clause of the Constitution, which, on various occasions, was pressed upon the attention of the trial court. In legal effect, however, the case stands as though no appeal had been prosecuted from the judgment rendered by the trial court. As the jurisdiction of this court to review the judgments or decrees of state courts when a Federal question is presented is limited to the review of a final judgment or decree, actually or constructively deciding such question, when rendered by the highest court of a state in which a decision in the suit could be had, and as for the want of a proper appeal, no final judgment or decree in such court has been rendered, it results that the statutory prerequisite for the exercise in this case of the reviewing power of this court is wanting."

Writ of error dismissed.

Digitized by Google

[588] DANIEL W. BAKER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BRAINERD H. WARNER. (No. 41.)

DANIEL W. BAKER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
BRAINERD H. WARNER. (No. 42.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 588–594.)

Libel — of public official — publication not libelous per se.

1. A newspaper communication from a candidate for public office in which, after referring to the district attorney's attendance at a conference of the candidate's enemies to determine "what ammunition was needed to defeat him," he inquires, "Where does the money come from in the contest?" following such inquiry immediately with the question, "How about the race track?" is not libelous per se of the district attorney.

[Matters as to libel and slander, see Libel and Slander, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — arrest — construction of pleadings.

2. The pleadings will be liberally construed on a motion in arrest of judgment entered on a verdict in favor of plaintiff in an action for libel, and the plaintiff be given the benefit of every implication that can be drawn therefrom in his favor, and for that purpose sentences and paragraphs may be transposed and the allegations in one part of the complaint be aided by those in another, and if, taken together, they show the existence of facts constituting a good cause of action, defectively set forth or improperly arranged, the motion in arrest will be denied.

[For other cases, see Judgment, XII. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — defect in pleadings — curing by verdict.

3. General statements in the innuendo in the complaint in an action for publishing a statement concerning a public official which was not libelous per se, that defendant, who was put on notice of the extrinsic facts surrounding the publication, meant to charge plaintiff with corruption in office, will, after verdict in the latter's favor, be treated as substantive allegations of fact, given by transposition their proper position in inducement or colloquium.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. k, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from intermediate appellate court — scope of review — rendering proper judgment.

4. The Federal Supreme Court is not limited to a consideration of the points presented by plaintiff in error on a writ of error to the District of Columbia court of appeals to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the supreme court of the District, but must enter the judgment which should have been rendered by the court below on the record then before it.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. e; IX. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — province of court and jury — meaning of ambiguous language in libel.

5. Whether words not libelous per se import a defamatory meaning is a question of fact for the jury where, in the light of the extrinsic facts averred, the words are susceptible of such a construction.

[For other cases, see Trial, VI. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 41 and 42.]

Argued November 5, 1913. Decided December 22, 1913.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in favor of plaintiff in an action for libel. Also

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in arrest of the original judgment. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

See same case below, 36 App. D. C. 493.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The plaintiff, Baker, United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, sued the defendant, Warner, for libel. Briefly stated, the complaint charges that:

The Washington Jockey Club owned a race track in [589] the District where races were run and bets were made and in January, 1908, the plaintiff, as district attorney, had obtained from the grand jury an indictment charging one Walters with betting at this race track, contrary to the statute against gaming in the District. A demurrer was filed, which was sustained on March 11, 1908,—the court holding that the laying of bets on horse races, at this track, was not a violation of the act of Congress, which, as appears by reference to the statute (D. C. Code, § 869, 31 Stat. at L. p. 1331, chap. 854), only prohibited such betting and bookmaking within 1 mile of the boundaries of the cities of Washington and Georgetown. The plaintiff immediately took an appeal from this judgment in order that the court

NOTE.—On libel by charging the raising or disbursing of campaign funds—see note to Scofield v. Milwaukee Free Press Co. 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 691.

On amendment of record to cure defect for which motion in arrest of judgment has been made—see note to State v. Marsh, 67 L.R.A. 179.

On the effect of provision that jury shall determine the law and the facts in libel cases—see note to Oakes v. State, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 207.

Digitized by Google

of appeals might determine whether such betting at such place was a violation of the gaming law of force in the District.

Shortly after the appeal, the Spring Meet of the Jockey Club began, being advertised to continue until April 14th. On the opening days of the Meet there were bookmaking and betting; but the complainant alleges that the plaintiff, "conforming himself, as it was his duty to do, to the law as judicially construed by the supreme court of the District, did not issue warrants for the arrest of or present to the grand jury any persons for betting on the horse races."

It is further alleged that at this time Warner was a candidate against Pearre for the nomination for Congress from Maryland, and, on March 28th, Warner composed and published, of and concerning the plaintiff, and of and concerning the office of the plaintiff, in a Washington newspaper, a certain false and defamatory libel. The article need not be set out at length, but the communication, after characterizing a speech by his opponent as undignified, proceeded to say that it was not wanting in dignity so much as for a judge of the District.

"who, with the United States district attorney (meaning the [590] plaintiff), went to Rockville (meaning the town of Rockville, county of Montgomery, state of Maryland) last Saturday (meaning Saturday, the 21st day of March A. D. 1908) to attend a conference of Mr. Warner's (meaning defendant's) enemies, and determine what ammunition was needed to defeat him.

"The question now is, Where does the money come from in the contest against Mr. Warner? (meaning the defendant.)

"How about the race track?

Lawyer."

"meaning thereby, . . . that the said plaintiff entered into a conference with others for the purpose of determining what funds were necessary, and how same should be raised, to be used in the campaign in behalf of Pearre, and meaning . . . that the plaintiff was and is corrupt, in not presenting to the grand jury and prosecuting before the courts of the District, persons laying bets upon the contests at the race track, in consideration of contributions of money in the contest against the defendant from some company or person interested in the race track or the contests carried on thereon."

The defendant filed a general denial, and, after a trial, there was a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. Motions for a new trial and in arrest of judgment were overruled and the case taken to the court of appeals, which held not only that reversible error had been committed, but that the judgment should have been arrested. In No. 41 the case is here on a writ to review that ruling. To avoid any question as to the finality of that judgment of the court of appeals plaintiff sued out another writ of error (No. 42) after the judgment had been arrested in the trial court.

Messrs. Frank J. Hogan and Henry E. Davis argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The questions for consideration in this case are those, and those only, which are presented by the plaintiff's assignment of errors, since the defendant has sued no writ of error, and can therefore be heard only in support of the judgment below.

Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 268, 44 L. ed. 156, 158, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Landram v. Jordan, 203 U. S. 56, 62, 51 L. ed. 88, 90, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17; Fitchie v. Brown, 211 U. S. 321, 53 L. ed. 202, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Southern Pine Lumber Co. v. Ward, 208 U. S. 126, 52 L. ed. 420, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Green County v. Thomas, 211 U. S. 598, 601, 602, 53 L. ed. 343, 345, 346, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168.

Conceding, as it must be and has been conceded, that the declaration contains within its four corners all the facts that are necessary to the statement of a good cause of action based upon the instant libel, the defects pointed out by the court and counsel below, assuming for the moment that such defects actually existed, were cured by the verdict.

Tuttle v. Bishop, 30 Conn. 80; Alcorn v. Bass, 17 Ind. App. 502, 46 N. E. 1024; Nestle v. VanSlyck, 2 Hill, 282; Schwartz v. Reesch, 2 App. D. C. 440; Washington & G. R. Co. v. Hickey, 5 App. D. C. 436; Chandler & T. Co. v. Norwood, 14 App. D. C. 357.

The alleged defects in the present declaration do not warrant the arrest of the judgment of the trial court.

Canadian P. R. Co. v. Elliott, 70 C. C. A. 242, 137 Fed. 904; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Voelker, 70 L.R.A. 264, 65 C. C. A. 226, 129 Fed. 522; Stockton v. Bishop, 4 How. 155, 11 L. ed. 918.

A motion to direct a verdict for the defendant touches only the evidence in the case as a demurrer thereto, and does not touch any defects of pleading.

Cort v. Birkbeck, 1 Dougl. K. B. 218; Bank of United States v. Smith, 11 Wheat. 172, 6 L. ed. 443; Van Stone v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 142 U. S. 134, 35 L. ed. 903, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; McAfee v. Huidekoper, 9 App. D. C. 39, 34 L.R.A. 720; Ubhoff v. Brandenburg, 26 App. D. C. 3.

The record expressly shows that the defendant waived or abandoned his motion in arrest, and consented to the entry of a judgment from which he appealed.

Digitized by Google

Ganss v. Goldenberg, 39 App. D. C. 597.

The question of the sufficiency of that motion was not properly or at all presented to the trial court, and hence could not be raised for the first time on appeal, since the appellate court cannot be substituted for the trial court.

Eaton v. Brown, 20 App. D. C. 459; Norman v. United States, 20 App. D. C. 497.

The instant declaration appears to contain all of the essential elements of a declaration in libel properly drawn under the rules of special pleading.

White v. Nicholls, 3 How. 285, 286, 11 L. ed. 600; Culmer v. Canby, 41 C. C. A. 302, 101 Fed. 197; Chaloner v. Washington Post Co. 36 App. D. C. 233; Bailey v. Holland, 7 App. D. C. 184; Washington Gaslight Co. v. Lansden, 9 App. D. C. 508; Norfolk & W. S. B. Co. v. Davis, 12 App. D. C. 306; Washington Times Co. v. Downey, 26 App. D. C. 258, 6 Ann. Cas. 765; Raymond v. United States, 25 App. D. C. 555.

The motion in arrest is simply a postponed demurrer; that is, a demurrer interposed after verdict instead of during the pleadings, and applying to substantial errors appearing on the face of the declaration.

Perry, Pl. 212.

A motion in arrest will not lie for formal objections; formerly this was otherwise, and judgments were constantly arrested for errors of mere form; but this abuse has long since been removed by the statute of amendments and jeofails, by the effect of which a judgment at the present day cannot generally be arrested for any objection of form.

Perry, Pl. 211.

Treating the motion in arrest as a postponed demurrer, we invoke the rule that a demurrer to a declaration in libel admits the allegations in so far as it tests the actionable quality of the words used in the publication, and it admits the charges of falsity, publication, and malice, and the correctness of the innuendoes alleged, unless they attribute a meaning to the words that is not justified by the language itself, or by extrinsic facts with which they are connected.

Chaloner v. Washington Post Co. 36 App. D. C. 233.

Any question of privilege or permissible criticism is laid out of the case by the admission of the truth of the charges of malice, falsity, and want of probable cause.

Nalle v. Oyster, 230 U. S. 165, 57 L. ed. 1439, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1043.

A demurrer—and a motion in arrest is only a postponed demurrer—can only be sustained where the court can affirmatively say that the words are incapable of any reasonable construction which will render them defamatory.

Culmer v. Canby, 41 C. C. A. 302, 101 Fed. 197.

If from the undisputed facts in evidence all reasonable and fair-minded men must draw the same conclusion, then the question at issue is one of law for the court, and not of fact for the jury, and it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the conclusion which must be drawn. If, on the other hand, on the question at issue, from the facts in evidence, with all the fair inferences that may be drawn therefrom, reasonable men might fairly differ as to the conclusion to be arrived at, then the determination of the fact in issue is for the jury. Where the undisputed evidence is so conclusive that the court would be compelled to set aside a verdict returned in opposition to it, it may withdraw the case from the consideration of the jury and direct a verdict.

Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 150 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 1068, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 35 L. ed. 213, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Marande v. Texas & P. R. Co. 184 U. S. 173, 46 L. ed. 487, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Bowditch v. Boston, 101 U. S. 16, 25 L. ed. 980; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 41 L. ed. 186, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 116, 22 L. ed. 780; Commercial Pub. Co. v. Smith, 79 C. C. A. 410, 149 Fed. 704.

And the rule is the same respecting directing a verdict in favor of plaintiff as it is respecting the directing of a verdict in favor of defendant. If the facts in favor of the plaintiff are clearly established, and are sufficient and undisputed, it is the duty of the court to charge the jury to find for the plaintiff.

Hutchins v. Langley, 27 App. D. C. 234; Marshall v. Hubbard, 117 U. S. 415, 29 L. ed. 919, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 806; Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 404; Macon County v. Shores, 97 U. S. 272, 24 L. ed. 889; North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 123 U. S. 727, 31 L. ed. 287, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

Stated with specific reference to libel and slander cases, the rule is:

(1) Where the words complained of are not susceptible of the defamatory meaning attributed to them by the plaintiff, and this must be the view of all, it is the duty of the court to direct a verdict for the defendant; in such case, the question is one of law for the court.

Digitized by Google

(2) Where the words complained of are fairly capable of two meanings, one harmless and the other defamatory, it is a question for the jury in what sense the readers may have understood them; in such case, the question is one of fact for the jury.

(3) Where the words complained of either by themselves or in the light of surrounding circumstances shown by the evidence are reasonably and fairly capable of only one construction, and that one gives to them a libelous meaning, then it is the duty of the court to so instruct the jury. And in reaching a true conclusion as to what interpretation is to be placed upon the words complained of, the court, no less than the jury, is to read the publication in its entirety, construe every part thereof with reference to all of its parts, and with reference to the conceded conditions in the community where it was circulated, and to understand it as it would generally be understood by the rest of mankind.

Adams v. Lawson, 17 Gratt. 256, 94 Am. Dec. 455; Rex v. Lambert, 2 Campb. 403, 11 Revised Rep. 248; 25 Cyc. 355, 361; Waters v. Jones, 3 Port. (Ala.) 442, 29 Am. Dec. 261; Odgers, Libel & Slander, 97, 98: Newell, Slander & Libel, 291; Negley v. Farrow, 60 Md. 158, 45 Am. Rep. 715; Mattice v. Wilcox, 147 N. Y. 626, 42 N. E. 270; Hanchett v. Chiatovich, 41 C. C. A. 648, 101 Fed. 744; Freisinger v. Moore, 65 N. J. L. 288, 47 Atl. 432; Kilgour v. Evening Star Newspaper Co. 96 Md. 16, 53 Atl. 716; Post Pub. Co. v. Hallam, 8 C. C. A. 201, 16 U. S. App. 613, 59 Fed. 530.

Defendant's article of March 28, 1908, cannot fairly be construed as constituting "fair comment" on the failure of the district attorney to institute new prosecutions against race track betters.

Hallam v. Post Pub. Co. 55 Fed. 456; Com. v. Wardwell, 136 Mass. 164; Democrat Pub. Co. v. Jones, 83 Tex. 306, 18 S. W. 652; Post Pub. Co. v. Moloney, 50 Ohio St. 71, 33 N. E. 921; Royce v. Maloney, 58 Vt. 437, 5 Atl. 395; More v. Bennett, 48 N. Y. 474; Lauder v. Jones, 13 N. D. 525, 101 N. W. 907; Montgomery v. New Era Printing Co. 229 Pa. 165, 78 Atl. 85, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 375; Pickford v. Talbott, 211 U. S. 199, 53 L. ed. 146, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75, affirming 28 App. D. C. 498; Hetherington v. Sterry, 28 Kan. 426, 42 Am. Rep. 169; Mattice v. Wilcox, 147 N. Y. 624, 42 N. E. 270; White v. Nicholls, 3 How. 266, 11 L. ed. 591; Mann v. Dempster, 104 C. C. A. 110, 181 Fed. 81; State v. Norton, 89 Me. 290, 36 Atl. 394.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington and W. C. Sullivan argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The inducement and colloquium must state the cause of action without the aid of the innuendo.

25 Cyc. 449, 450; 13 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 54, 55; Van Vechten v. Hopkins, 5 Johns. 220, 4 Am. Dec. 339, 1 Chitty, Pl. 400, 401, 406, 407; Barnes v. State, 88 Md. 354, 41 Atl. 781; Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225, 233, 234, 23 L. ed. 308, 312, 313; Gaither v. Advertiser Co. 102 Ala. 458, 14 So. 788; Fry v. Bennett, 5 Sandf. 65; Grand v. Dreyfus, 122 Cal. 58, 54 Pac. 389; Bloss v. Tobey, 2 Pick. 320; Carter v. Andrews, 16 Pick. 1; Goldstein v. Foss, 2 Younge & J. 146, 4 Bing. 489, 1 Moore & P. 402, 29 Revised Rep. 610; Dodge v. Lacey, 2 Ind. 212; Hays v. Mitchell, 7 Blackf. 117; Edgerley v. Swain, 32 N. H. 478; Bowdish v. Peckham, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 144; Merritt v. Dearth, 48 Vt. 65; Sayre v. Jewett, 12 Wend. 135; Dyer v. Morris, 4 Mo. 214; Posnett v. Marble, 62 Vt. 491, 11 L.R.A. 162, 22 Am. St. Rep. 126, 20 Atl. 813; Peterson v. Sentman, 37 Md. 140, 11 Am. Rep. 534; McCuen v. Ludlum, 17 N. J. L. 12; Greenwood v. Cobbey, 26 Neb. 449, 42 N. W. 413.

The objection now under consideration was raised by motion at the trial, when, under the rules of the trial court, it might have been obviated by amendment, but the plaintiff elected to stand upon his declaration, without curing it. It was raised again by motion in arrest, as is held proper in 1 Chitty, Pl. 406, 407, and was the practice pursued in Bloss v. Tobey, 2 Pick. 320; Posnett v. Marble, 62 Vt. 481, 11 L.R.A. 162, 22 Am. St. Rep. 126, 20 Atl. 813; Carter v. Andrews, 16 Pick. 8; Goldstein v. Foss, 2 Younge & J. 146, 4 Bing. 489, 1 Moore & P. 402, 29 Revised Rep. 610; Atkinson v. Scammon, 22 N. H. 40; Bowdish v. Peckham, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 144; Ryan v. Madden, 12 Vt. 51; Merritt v. Dearth, 48 Vt. 65; Sayre v. Jewett, 12 Wend. 135, and perhaps a majority of the other cases cited supra.

The objection, namely, that the declaration is insufficient to state a cause of action, would have been good if made, in the first instance, in the appellate court.

Slacum v. Pomery, 6 Cranch, 221, 225, 3 L. ed. 205, 206; Bank of United States v. Smith, 11 Wheat. 171, 6 L. ed. 443; Cragin v. Lovell, 109 U. S. 194, 199, 27 L. ed. 903, 905, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Cort v. Birkbeck, 1 Dougl. K. B. 224; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Sklar, 61 C. C. A. 281, 126

Digitized by Google

Fed. 302; Clement v. Fisher, 7 Barn. & C. 459, 1 Moody & R. 281, 6 L. J. K. B. 39.

The trial court erred in taking altogether from the jury the determination of the meaning of the article, on which depended the question whether or not it was libelous per se.

Barnes v. State, 88 Md. 351, 41 Atl. 781; Avirett v. State, 76 Md. 522, 25 Atl. 676, 987; Commercial Pub. Co. v. Smith, 79 C. C. A. 410, 149 Fed. 704; Gaither v. Advertiser Co. 102 Ala. 458, 14 So. 788.

An appellate court will not by too technical a construction preclude itself from correcting manifest error.

Dunlap v. Northeastern R. Co. 130 U. S. 653, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647.

The motion to direct was not at all directed to the evidence, but was presented specifically upon the ground that the declaration, under the well-established rules relating to actions of slander and libel, did not state a cause of action. The proposition that, where this is the case, the court may nevertheless validly proceed to verdict and judgment against the defendant, over his objection and exception, is incapable of being sustained.

Bank of United States v. Smith, 11 Wheat. 171, 6 L. ed. 443.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff, who was United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, sued the defendant in an action for libel, and recovered a verdict for $10,000. The court of appeals (36 App. D. C. 493) held that the judgment should have been arrested, for the reason that the publication was not libelous per se, and was not shown to be defamatory by any averment of fact in the inducement or in the colloquim.

The publication was not libelous per se. The meaning of the article and person to whom it referred was so ambiguous that, in order to constitute a cause of action, it was necessary to set out extrinsic facts, which, when coupled with the words, would show that the writer charged the plaintiff with corruption in office. Accordingly, the plaintiff, in the inducement, averred that he was district attorney, charged with the duty of prosecuting violators of the law against gaming, and had procured an indictment against one for betting at the Washington Jockey Club, which indictment had been quashed, and, pending the appeal, and conforming to the ruling of the court, he had instituted no other prosecutions: That, under these circumstances, the defendant had published of and concerning the plaintiff, the article which is set out in the complaint.

There were general allegations that the article was written concerning the plaintiff in his office as district attorney, together with general statements in the innuendo that the defendant meant to charge him with corruption in office. There was, however, no distinct averment as to the meaning of those particular phrases in the publication [592] on which the cause of action was really based. The court of appeals thereupon sustained the defendant's contention that the complaint was defective because of the failure specifically to allege what, as a fact, the words meant, and to whom they referred. It further held that the absence of such specific averments was not supplied by the general statement in the innuendo that the defendant meant to charge the plaintiff with a crime. This was based on the rule that it is not the office of the innuendo to set out facts, but rather to explain what is ambiguous, or to state a conclusion which, to be effective, must be supported by averments, definitions, references, or other facts alleged in traversable form in inducement and colloquium. It is, however, unnecessary to discuss the sufficiency of the complaint, which, even if defective, was amendable. The defendant did not demur, but joined issue, the case was tried by a jury, a verdict for the plaintiff was rendered, judgment was entered, and the defendant then moved in arrest.

Such motions are not favored. In considering them, courts liberally construe the pleadings, giving the plaintiff the benefit of every implication that can be drawn therefrom in his favor. Sentences and paragraphs may be transposed. The allegations in one part of the complaint may be aided by those in another, and if taken together, they show the existence of facts constituting a good cause of action, defectively set forth or improperly arranged, the motion in arrest will be denied.

In the present case the defendant was put on notice of the extrinsic facts surrounding the publication. The statements in the innuendo, even if misplaced, may, after verdict, be treated as substantive allegations of fact, given by transposition their proper position in inducement or colloquium. The verdict cured the defects, if any, in the complaint, and made it improper to arrest the judgment. Stanley v. Brit, Mart. & Y. 222; M'Claughry [593] v. Wetmore, 6 Johns. 82, 5 Am. Dec. 194; Brittain v. Allen, 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 124; Tuttle v. Bishop, 30 Conn. 80; Nestle v. Van Slyck, 2 Hill, 282. In answer to these decisions the defendant cites Ryan v. Madden, 12 Vt. 55, and other cases, to support his contention that the motion in arrest should have been granted. But those decisions announce what, in Bloss v. Tobey, 2 Pick. 330, was admitted to be a hard and technical rule,—one which, we think, has been modified by modern and more liberal rules of pleading and practice in the Federal courts and in those of most of the states.

Digitized by Google

The plaintiff, Baker, had a judgment in the trial court. The defendant, Warner, took the case to the court of appeals on various grounds, most of which were sustained. The plaintiff then brought the case here, assigning error on some of those rulings, but not on others. We are not limited, however, to a consideration of the points presented by the plaintiff, but, this being a writ of error from an intermediate appellate tribunal, must enter the judgment which should have been rendered by the court below on the record then before it.

While we reverse the order to arrest the judgment, we affirm the ruling of the court of appeals that there was an erroneous instruction on a matter material to the case and harmful to the defendant. The trial judge, summarizing the facts, charged that if the jury found from the evidence that plaintiff was district attorney; that in the District there was a race track where races were run and bets were made, which some claimed could have been prevented by prosecutions instituted by the plaintiff, and that he did not, in fact, prosecute such persons; if Warner was a candidate for Congress, and the plaintiff supported Pearre, his opponent, and the defendant, Warner, wrote and procured the publication of the article set out in the complaint,

"then you are instructed, as matter of law, that the said article is libelous and your [594] verdict should be for the plaintiff, and the only question for your determination is what amount of damages the plaintiff is entitled to recover by reason of the publication of said article."

This was error, since it was for the jury, and not for the court, to determine the meaning of ambiguous language in the published article. Where words are libelous per se the judge can so instruct the jury, leaving to them only the determination of the amount of damages. Where the words are not libelous per se, and, in the light of the extrinsic facts averred, could not possibly be construed to have a defamatory meaning, the judge can dismiss the declaration on demurrer, or, during the trial, may withdraw the case from the jury. But there is a middle ground where, though the words are not libelous per se, yet, in the light of the extrinsic facts averred, they are susceptible of being construed as having a defamatory meaning. Whether they have such import is a question of fact. In that class of cases the jury must not only determine the existence of the extrinsic circumstances, which it is alleged bring to light the concealed meaning, but they must also determine whether those facts when coupled with the words, make the publication libelous. Van Vechten v. Hopkins, 5 Johns. 219, 4 Am. Dec. 339. The meaning of the words was in dispute, and as that issue of fact was not submitted to the triers of fact, a new trial must be ordered.

This conclusion makes it unnecessary to consider the other questions in the case. The judgments of the Court of Appeals are reversed and the cases are remanded to that court with directions to reverse the judgments of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and to remand the case to that court, with directions to grant a new trial, and for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

---

[595] JAMES H. WORK, Appt.,
v.
UNITED GLOBE MINES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 595-600.)

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — reversible error — statutory construction — limitation of actions.

1. A territorial supreme court commits no reversible error in holding that a foreign corporation may avail itself of the statute of limitations as a defense in a suit to quiet title, where it found that during the whole of the statutory time such corporation had complied with the local laws, was in possession of the property, paying taxes thereon, and conducting business by means of its use, and was subject there to be sued, having, under the territorial law, an agency for that purpose.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from territorial supreme court — reversible error — adverse possession — color of title.

2. A ruling of a territorial supreme court that a reference by way of mere recital to an earlier defective deed in the deed relied upon as color of title in support of a claim of adverse possession did not render the lat-

---

NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

On the right of foreign corporation to plead the statute of limitations—see note to Winney v. Sandwich Mfg. Co. 18 L.R.A. 524.

Digitized by Google

ter deed insufficient for the purpose, where, in every other respect, it is adequate, is not so manifestly erroneous as to require reversal in the Federal Supreme Court on appeal.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1; Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 46.]

Argued November 6, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Gila County, in that territory, in favor of defendant in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 339, 100 Pac. 813.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. L. Piucoffs argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The defendant, being a foreign corporation, cannot set up the statute of limitations.

Larson v. Aultman & T. Co. 86 Wis. 281, 39 Am. St. Rep. 893, 56 N. W. 915; Williams v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 68 Kan. 17, 64 L.R.A. 794, 104 Am. St. Rep. 377, 74 Pac. 600, 1 Ann. Cas. 6; State v. National Acci. Soc. 103 Wis. 208, 79 N. W. 223; Robinson v. Imperial Silver Min. Co. 5 Nev. 44, 10 Mor. Min. Rep. 370; State v. Central P. R. Co. 10 Nev. 47; Barstow v. Union Consol. Silver Min. Co. 10 Nev. 386; Olcott v. Tioga R. Co. 20 N. Y. 210, 75 Am. Dec. 393; Clarke v. Bank of Mississippi, 10 Ark. 516, 52 Am. Dec. 248, 256, note.

A deed founded on a sale for taxes which on its face is absolutely void does not support adverse possession under a statute of limitations.

Redfield v. Parks, 132 U. S. 239, 33 L. ed. 327, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Den ex dem. Saxton v. Hunt, 20 N. J. L. 493; Bradshaw v. Ashley, 180 U. S. 59, 45 L. ed. 423, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

The ten years statute of limitations does not apply: (a) because its operation is restricted to the recovery of lands held without deed; and (b) because no such limitation was in existence when plaintiff's cause of action accrued, and the statute must be given a prospective operation.

Redfield v. Parks, supra.

If the statute is intended to have a retrospective effect, it is unconstitutional.

Gilbert v. Ackerman, 159 N. Y. 118, 45 L.R.A. 118, 53 N. E. 753; Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318.

Mrs. Sarah H. Sorin argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

A foreign corporation which had complied with the laws of Arizona governing such corporations, and was continuously engaged in doing business therein during the entire period required to bar this action, and during all that time had a resident agent there upon whom process could be served, can avail itself of the statute of limitations of Arizona and acquire title to real estate therein by adverse possession.

Sidway v. Missouri Land & Live Stock Co. 187 Mo. 673, 86 S. W. 150; Thompson v. Texas Land & Cattle Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 24 S. W. 856; United States Exp. Co. v. Ware, 20 Wall. 543, 22 L. ed. 422; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 17 Ann. Cas. 1247; Volivar v. Richmond Cedar Works, 152 N. C. 656, 68 S. E. 200, 21 Ann. Cas. 623; Southern R. Co. v. Mayes, 51 C. C. A. 70, 113 Fed. 84; Wehrenberg v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 124 App. Div. 205, 108 N. Y. Supp. 704; McCabe v. Illinois C. R. Co. 4 McCrary, 492, 13 Fed. 827; Turcott v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 101 Tenn. 102, 40 L.R.A. 768, 70 Am. St. Rep. 661, 45 S. W. 1067; O'Connor v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 67 Neb. 122, 93 N. W. 137, 99 N. W. 845; Wall v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 69 Iowa, 501, 29 N. W. 427; Tiller v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 189 Fed. 994; Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258; Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. v. Northwest Thresher Co. 14 N. D. 147, 70 L.R.A. 814, 116 Am. St. Rep. 642, 103 N. W. 915, 8 Ann. Cas. 1160; 25 Cyc. 1243.

The construction of this statute by the supreme court of the territory of Arizona is of great, if not controlling, weight.

Lewis v. Herrera, 208 U. S. 309, 52 L. ed. 506, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412.

Paragraph 2299 of the Civil Code of 1887, which was the statute in effect in Arizona in 1893, when defendant's adverse possession commenced, and which was re-enacted as ¶ 2937 of the Revised Statutes of 1901, the statute in effect at the time this action was commenced, was adopted from Texas, and is identical with article 3342, Revised Statutes of Texas. This statute had been interpreted by the supreme court of Texas prior to its adoption in Arizona. Our legislature is therefore presumed to have adopted such interpretation, and the Texas decisions construing the statute control.

Goldman v. Sotelo, 8 Ariz. 85, 68 Pac. 558; Henrietta Min. & Mill. Mfg. Co. v. Gardner, 173 U. S. 123, 43 L. ed. 637, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed.

Digitized by Google

759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558, 30 L. ed. 1022, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1334.

The facts establish a performance of every requisite of the five-years statute of limitations. It appears therefrom that the deed from James and Dodge to appellee was recorded February 17, 1893, and that for more than five years prior to the institution of plaintiff's suit defendant held peaceable and adverse possession of the lands in dispute, working, using, and enjoying the same, claiming title thereto under that duly recorded deed, and paying all taxes due thereon. This was sufficient to vest the title in the defendant.

Stubblefield v. Hanson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 94 S. W. 406; Long v. Thompson & T. Lumber Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 140 S. W. 501; Clark v. Asbury, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 134 S. W. 286.

Any instrument in the form of a deed, and not void upon its face, is sufficient as the basis of the five-years statute of limitation. It is entirely immaterial on a question of limitations and for the purpose of the defense of the five-years statute or the assertion of title by adverse possession thereunder what title appellee's grantors had to the land, or whether they owned any interest in it at all.

Hunton v. Nichols, 55 Tex. 230; Fry v. Baker, 59 Tex. 404; Harris v. Bryson, 34 Tex. Civ. App. 532, 80 S. W. 105; Brown v. O'Brien, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 459, 33 S. W. 267; Midkiff v. Stephens, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 411, 29 S. W. 54; Harris v. Wells, 85 Tex. 312, 20 S. W. 68; McDonough v. Jefferson County, 79 Tex. 535, 15 S. W. 490; Goldman v. Sotelo, 8 Ariz. 85, 68 Pac. 558.

The bar of the statute will not be prevented because a deed is inoperative by reason of extraneous circumstances.

Schleicher v. Gatlin, 85 Tex. 270, 20 S. W. 120.

The nature of the instrument as a conveyance of the land is not changed by the subsequent reference to the supervisor's deed.

Kirby v. Pitchfork Land & Cattle Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 129 S. W. 1151.

Good faith is never essential under the five or ten years statutes of limitation.

McDonough v. Jefferson County, 79 Tex. 535; Kinney v. Vinson, 32 Tex. 126; Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. 137, 22 L. ed. 331.

The facts are sufficient to establish appellee's title by adverse possession under the ten-years statute of limitations.

Kinney v. Vinson, 32 Tex. 126; Bruce v. Washington, 80 Tex. 368, 15 S. W. 1104; Carlock v. Willard, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 149 S. W. 363; Ball v. Filba, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 153 S. W. 685; MacGregor v. Thompson, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 32, 26 S. W. 649; Cox v. Sherman Hotel Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 47 S. W. 808; Link v. Bland, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 519, 95 S. W. 1110; Wiess v. Goodhue, 46 Tex. Civ. App. 142, 102 S. W. 793.

The ten-years statute of limitations of Arizona took effect September 1, 1901, and operated on causes of action then existing.

Cummings v. Rosenberg, 12 Ariz. 327, 100 Pac. 810; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 175; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, 489; Russell v. H. C. Akeley Lumber Co. 45 Minn. 376, 48 N. W. 3; Osborne v. Lindstrom, 9 N. D. 1, 46 L.R.A. 715, 81 Am. St. Rep. 516, 81 N. W. 72.

The legislature may prescribe a limitation for the bringing of suits where none previously existed that will operate upon rights of action which accrued before it became effective, provided only that a reasonable time be given by the new law for the commencement of suit before the bar takes effect.

Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 34 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 632, 24 L. ed. 365, 366; Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. ed. 886; Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 28 L. ed. 279, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170, 312; Soper v. Lawrence Bros. Co. 201 U. S. 359, 50 L. ed. 788, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Bigelow v. Bemis, 2 Allen, 496; Smith v. Morrison, 22 Pick. 432; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Braithwaite, 7 N. D. 358, 66 Am. St. Rep. 653, 75 N. W. 244; Hill v. Townley, 45 Minn. 167, 47 N. W. 653.

The period between the passage of the act and its going into effect may be considered in determining the question of reasonable time.

Cummings v. Rosenberg, 12 Ariz. 327, 100 Pac. 810; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 707, and notes; Russell v. H. C. Akeley Lumber Co. 45 Minn. 376, 48 N. W. 3; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Braithwaite, 7 N. D. 358, 66 Am. St. Rep. 653, 75 N. W. 244; Wrightman v. Boone County, 82 Fed. 412; Osborne v. Lindstrom, 9 N. D. 1, 46 L.R.A. 715, 81 Am. St. Rep. 516, 81 N. W. 72.

Adverse possession of land for the period fixed by the statute of limitations confers title thereto which may be quieted in an action brought for that purpose by the party asserting such title.

Pacheco v. Wilson, 2 Ariz. 411, 18 Pac. 597; Moody v. Holcomb, 26 Tex. 714; Smith v. Montes, 11 Tex. 24; Jones v. Creech, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 108 S. W. 975; Glasscock v. Dimmitt, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 141 S. W. 822; Ball v. Filba, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 153 S. W. 685; Independent Dist. v. Fagen, 94 Iowa, 676, 63 N. W. 456; Lougee v. Shuhart, 127 Iowa, 173, 102 N. W. 1125; Quinn v. Quinn, 76 Iowa, 565, 41 N. W. 316; Sharon

Digitized by Google

v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 532, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620, 29 L. ed. 483, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

The title acquired by adverse possession under the statute of limitations is title in fee. The statute of limitations invests the possessor with title as fully and effectually as if the title had been acquired by patent or by absolute conveyance from the holder in fee.

Bridges v. Johnson, 69 Tex. 717, 7 S. W. 506; Moody v. Holcomb, 26 Tex. 719; Hall v. Law, 102 U. S. 461, 466, 26 L. ed. 217, 219; Harpending v. Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, 16 Pet. 455, 492, 10 L. ed. 1029, 1043; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 605, 17 L. ed. 261, 263; Echols v. Hubbard, 90 Ala. 309, 7 So. 817; Murray v. Hoyle, 97 Ala. 588, 11 So. 797.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

We confine our statement to so much of the case as is necessary to develop the matters for decision.

Work, the appellant, who was plaintiff in the trial court, sued the United Globe Mines, the appellee, to quiet his title to certain described mining property, averring that he had the fee-simple title to the same, and although defendant asserted some adverse right, it had no title or interest in the property. The defendant, averring itself to be a New York corporation having its principle place of business in Globe, Gila county, Arizona, in its answer, besides traversing the averments of the complaint, alleged that it was entitled to the possession of the property sued for, and was the owner, because for more than five years before the commencement of the suit it had been "in the actual, continuous, uninterrupted, peaceable, exclusive, open, notorious, hostile, and adverse possession of said premises, and has been cultivating, using, enjoying, and working the same, paying taxes thereon, and holding and claiming the same and the title thereto adversely to plaintiff and all the world, under a deed from William E. Dodge and D. Willis James, conveying said premises to [598] this defendant, which deed is dated January 31st, A. D., 1893, and which said deed was duly recorded on the 17th day of February, A. D., 1893, in the office of the county recorder of Gila county, said territory, in book 3, Deeds of Mines, at page 299;

"And defendant alleges that the cause of action, if any, stated in the complaint herein, did not accrue within five years next before the commencement of this action."

In addition, as a second ground, the ownership of the property was asserted to have been acquired by a period of ten years' limitation, the benefit of which was expressly pleaded. The prayer of the answer was not only that the claim of the plaintiff be rejected, but that there be affirmative relief adjudging the title of the property to be in the mining company.

The case was submitted to the trial court upon an agreed statement of facts, and was decided in favor of the defendant, and a judgment of affirmance followed in the supreme court of the state to which the case was taken, that judgment being the one to which this writ of error is directed. The court, for the purpose of its consideration of the case, adopted the statement of facts acted upon by the trial court.

Three principal questions were decided: (a) That the United Globe Mines, although a foreign corporation, was entitled to avail itself of the statute of limitations; (b) that the deed which the United Globe Mines asserted as the basis of its claim to a right of ownership resulting from the five years' limitation under § 2937 of the Revised Statutes of Arizona for 1901 was adequate, and hence the United Globe Mines was the owner of the property by limitation; and (c) besides that, the facts proven as the basis of the ten year limitation under § 2938 of the Revised Statutes of Arizona for 1901 were adequate to bring the United Globe Mines within the embrace of the statute, and therefore to additionally sustain its claim of ownership [599] on such ground. For the purposes of this appeal a number of grounds of error were asserted, but we content ourselves with the mere statement that we think they are without merit because, in the argument at bar for the appellant, only the rulings of the court below concerning the three propositions to which we have referred are discussed and insisted upon as a basis for reversal. We come, then, briefly to consider those propositions.

At the outset it is to be observed that the questions are inherently and in the strictest sense local in character, depending as they do upon the right to have the benefit in the territory of the statutes of limitation concerning real estate, and the application of such statutes to the case as made by the defendant, the United Globe Mines. But as to questions of such character the settled rule is that this court "accepts the construction which the territorial court has placed upon a local statute;" in other words, will not disregard or reverse the same unless constrained to do so by the clearest conviction of serious error. Phœnix R. Co. v. Landis, where a full list of the applicable cases is collected, decided December 22 last [231 U. S. 578, ante, 377, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179]. With our duty thus defined the case is readily disposed of. As to the first question, the court below expressly found that during the whole of the statutory time the United Globe Mines, although a nonresident in the sense that it was a corporation of foreign organization, had complied with the laws of Arizona, was in possession of the property, paying taxes thereon and conducting business by means of its use, and was subject there to be sued, having under the law of the territory, an agency for that purpose. It is manifest under these conditions, if there be any ground for a different conclusion, which we do not intimate, there is no possible room for holding that such serious error was committed as to constrain us to reverse. As to the second proposition, —the five years' statute,—the only contention is that the court erred in holding that [600] a reference in the deed which was relied upon to the origin of title did not operate to render the deed relied on insufficient for the purposes of the statute, although it was in every other respect adequate. That is to say, the contention is that the sufficiency of the deed should have been tested not by its own adequacy, but by the insufficiency of another deed, not involved in the case, simply because such other deed by way of mere recital was referred to in the deed which was relied on, and upon which deed the application of the bar of the statute solely depended. We do not test the accuracy of the reasoning upon which the contention must rest, nor comprehensively review the authorities, since in our opinion it cannot be said, either from the point of view of reason, or from a consideration of the decided cases,† that there is ground for holding that there was such manifest error committed as to justify reversal. In saying this we intimate no doubt as to the correctness of the ruling below made; our sole purpose is to abstain from deciding a purely local question in the absence of those conditions which render it necessary for us to do so,—that is, the existence of plain error of so serious a nature as to require correction at our hands.

Digitized by Google

Affirmed.

†Jackson ex dem. Bradstreet v. Huntington, 5 Pet. 402, 447, 8 L. ed. 170, 186; Clarke v. Courtney, 5 Pet. 319, 354, 8 L. ed. 140, 152; Pillow v. Roberts, 13 How. 472, 14 L. ed. 228; Wright v. Mattison, 18 How. 50, 15 L. ed. 280; Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 37 L. ed. 459, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

[601] ADA E. H. VAN SYCKEL, in Her Own Right, and Margaret Ethel Van Syckel et al., by Ada E. H. Van Syckel, Their Next Friend, Appts.,

v.

JUAN JOSE ARSUAGA et al., Partners under the Firm Name of Sobrinos de Ezquiaga, and Paul A. English.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 601-615.)

Appeal — scope of review — findings of fact.

1. The findings of fact may be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court on an appeal from the district court of the United States for Porto Rico so far as is necessary to pass upon the objections that such findings were, on the face of the record, manifestly based solely upon inferences drawn from parol proof, conflicting with the declarations of the parties contained in notarial acts, and which, under the local law, were not lawfully susceptible of being overthrown by parol proof, and that the necessary effect of such findings was to give effect to the parties' own fraud and deceit, since these propositions in their final analysis challenge the adequacy of the findings to sustain the legal conclusions based upon them.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — parol and extrinsic proof concerning writings — ambiguity.

2. Intrinsic ambiguity in a document or contract justifies by the express terms of Porto Rico Laws 1905, p. 73, § 28, the right to resort to extrinsic proof to dispel it.

[For other cases, see Evidence, VI. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — parol and extrinsic proof concerning writings — ambiguity.

3. There is such ambiguity in articles of copartnership concerning the method of carrying on the business for which the partnership was organized as to justify the admission of explanatory proof, where the partnership agreement is silent on the subject, and the property, one half of which was bought from one partner by the others, and the whole of which was then put by the joint owners into the firm as its sole capital in trade, appears on the face of the agreement to be an inventory of the assets and property of a pre-existing dairy and cattle business, and where, included in the property bought, was a sum of money stated to be "value of working capital," suggesting

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rican courts—see note to Garrozi v. Dastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369.

Generally, on parol evidence to vary written contract—see notes to Durkin v. Cobleigh, 17 L.R.A. 270, and Atkinson v. Cummins, 13 L. ed. U. S. 223.

As to coming into equity with clean hands —see notes to Pittman v. Pittman, 11 L.R.A. 458, and Medford v. Levy, 2 L.R.A. 368.

Digitized by Google

a present purpose to continue an existing business.

[For other cases, see Evidence, VI. i, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — parol and extrinsic proof concerning writings — ambiguity.

4. Including in an agreement to form a firm to continue the dairy and cattle business previously conducted on leased land by one of the partners a paramount mortgage debt on the leased land as part of the plant and assets transferred by him to the partnership in itself creates ambiguity as to whether, by the transfer of the paramount right, it was not intended also to pass to the firm the subordinate lease right, which ambiguity becomes so apparent as to justify the admission of explanatory proof when it is considered that the established business was carried on by means of the leased property, and that the possession of that property was a necessary prerequisite to the continued conduct of the business, and that the interdependence of the lease and mortgage was so great that a transfer of the mortgage to the lessee, because he was the owner of the lease, had been judicially ordered, and that the partnership agreement required the transfer of the mortgage to a third person by legal subrogation if the mortgagor should so exact.

[For other cases, see Evidence, VI. i, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Equity — clean hands — estoppel by wrongful act.

5. The surviving members of a partnership to which the deceased partner had transferred, by the partnership agreement, a lease of the land on which the firm business was to be conducted, together with a paramount mortgage thereon, are not precluded, on the theory that they are attempting to profit by their own fraud and wrongdoing, from insisting in equity, as against his widow and heirs, that such lease was extinguished by the purchase of the land by the firm at a sale on foreclosure of the mortgage, although, prior to the foreclosure proceedings, the firm and such partner, who still appeared upon the public records to be the owner of the lease, had entered into an agreement which they placed on record, whereby the lease was to have priority over the mortgage, since this was but the exercise of a right which the firm had as holder of both lease and mortgage, to prevent the deprivation of the one right by the enforcement of the other.

[For other cases, see Equity, 311–315, Estoppel, 226–232, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 69.]

Argued November 13, 1913. Decided January 5, 1014.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a decree in a suit for the dissolution of a partnership which finds a lease to have been extinguished by a purchase of the leased property at a foreclosure sale. Affirmed.

See same case below on interlocutory hearing, 4 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 222.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill argued the cause, and, with Mr. George H. Lamar, filed a brief for appellants:

Equity will never relieve parties from the consequences of their contracts unless they have been induced to enter into such contracts by fraud, deception, accident, or mistake. Nothing resembling either of these things is alleged in this cross bill; on the contrary, it is averred and insisted that both parties to the contract knew just what they were doing and the exact purpose to be accomplished; that that purpose affected only third persons, and as between the parties themselves it was to be simply as so much waste paper. Courts will not hear parties so stultify themselves.

Walden v. Skinner, 101 U. S. 577, 584, 25 L. ed. 963, 966; Brown v. Slee, 103 U. S. 828, 838, 26 L. ed. 618, 622; Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 183 U. S. 308, 318, 46 L. ed. 213, 218, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133; Simpson v. United States, 199 U. S. 397, 398, 50 L. ed. 245, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

Where a party assumes a certain position in a legal proceeding and succeeds in maintaining that position, he may not thereafter, simply because his interests have changed, assume a contrary position, especially if it be to the prejudice of the party who has acquiesced in the position formerly taken by him.

Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 680, 689, 39 L. ed. 578, 584, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555.

The principle underlying our law of estoppel is also broadly recognized in the system of law governing Porto Rico,—in fact, it is one of the maxims of the Spanish law. It has been described by the supreme court of Porto Rico as "the moral and juridical principle that no one can deny his own acts."

Fernández v. Gutiérrez del Arroyo, 3 Castro Dec. de P. R. 37, 42, 10 P. R. R. 59.

In the case of each document it is attempted to set up a contemporary verbal agreement, vitally modifying—in the case of the document of July 27, 1901, even annulling—the solemn writing. We had supposed it to be elementary that such allegations could not be a basis for such action, unless it were averred that such contemporary matter would show fraud or mistake in securing complainant's signature to the written document.

Seitz v. Brewers' Refrigerating Mach. Co. 141 U. S. 510, 35 L. ed. 837, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46.

Canceling an executed contract is an exertion of the most extraordinary power of a court of equity. The power ought not to be exercised except in a clear case, and never for an alleged fraud, unless the fraud be made clearly to appear; never for alleged false representations, unless their falsity is certainly proved, and unless the complainant has been deceived and injured by them.

Digitized by Google

Atlantic Delaine Co. v. James, 94 U. S. 207, 24 L. ed. 112.

The cross bill showed that complainants therein did not come into court with clean hands.

Creath v. Sims, 5 How. 192, 204, 12 L. ed. 111, 117; Sample v. Barnes, 14 How. 70, 73, 14 L. ed. 330, 332; Randall v. Howard, 2 Black, 585, 17 L. ed. 269; Wheeler v. Sage, 1 Wall. 518, 17 L. ed. 646; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 23 L. ed. 99; Wolf v. Stix, 99 U. S. 7, 25 L. ed. 312; Ballard v. Searls, 130 U. S. 55, 32 L. ed. 848, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Dent v. Ferguson, 132 U. S. 50, 66, 33 L. ed. 242, 248, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

Mr. Charles F. Carusi argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

Evidence is always admissible to prevent the fraudulent use of a written instrument by showing that it was not intended to be operative between the immediate parties.

Michels v. Olmstead, 157 U. S. 198, 39 L. ed. 671, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Burke v. Dulaney, 153 U. S. 228, 38 L. ed. 698, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 187 U. S. 467, 47 L. ed. 261, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

When the court below delivered its opinion and made [602] a statement of facts, it did not enter a final decree, but directed a restatement of certain accounts to be made, and ordered a survey and report as to the condition of certain real estate, to the end that thereafter the case might be finally disposed of. Fixing their attention upon the controlling force of the reasons which the court had stated in its opinion, and the decisive character of the findings embodied in the statement of facts, the parties who believed themselves aggrieved at once appealed, but their appeal was dismissed for want of a final judgment. 220 U. S. 601, 55 L. ed. 603, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716. The case is now here on an appeal from a final judgment, and the contentions previously relied upon to secure a reversal are applicable, and now require to be decided.

This suit was begun by the widow and heirs of Paul Van Syckel to liquidate and distribute the assets of two partnerships of which he was a member, viz., P. Van Syckel & Company and the Santa Cruz Sugar Company. The defendants were the other members of the firms. From the petition and the documents annexed, from the answer, and a cross petition filed by the defendants to construe and limit a document referred to as an agreement for "postponement of rights," as also from the issues taken on the cross petition, and from the opinion of the court and the statement of facts which it made, it is beyond question that the only controversy between the partners arose from an assertion by the widow and heirs of Van Syckel that they were the holders of a subsisting lease covering an important piece of partnership real estate.

The solution of this controversy depended upon the answers proper to be made to the following questions: 1st. Did the lease which was owned by Van Syckel prior to the formation of the partnership of P. Van Syckel & Company pass to that firm as the result of its organization and the stipulations contained in the articles of partnership? 2d. If the firm became the owner of the lease, was such lease extinguished by confusion (Civil Code, § 1192) [603] as the result of the purchase by the firm of the leased property under a foreclosure sale? and 3d, even although, as a general rule, the lease was extinguished under the conditions stated, could the surviving members of the firm be heard to deny the existence of the lease as against the widow and heirs of Van Syckel, in view of the public record concerning the lease, of the stipulations of the agreement styled "postponement of rights," of the foreclosure proceedings, and of other declarations made in other notarial acts to which the partnership and the partners were parties?

Concluding that these questions required an affirmative answer, the court below rejected the claim based upon the existence of the alleged lease. The reasons which led to this conclusion were stated in an elaborate opinion, and the facts which were deemed controlling were enumerated in a statement of facts. While conceding that there is no power to review the facts, and while further conceding that if effect be given to the facts found, the judgment is clearly right, it is yet insisted by the appellants that there should be a reversal upon the following grounds: (a) Because the ultimate findings made by the court as to the nonexistence of the lease were, on the face of the record, manifestly alone based upon inferences drawn from parol proof conflicting with the declarations of the parties contained in notarial acts, and which, under the local law, were not lawfully susceptible of being overthrown by parol proof; and (b) because, moreover, error is manifest on the face of the findings as well as in the legal conclusions based on the findings, because it was impossible to conclude that the lease had no existence without permitting the defendants to repudiate their declarations made in notarial acts, to base a claim of right upon their deceit and fraud, and to discharge themselves and their property from an obligation by giving efficacy to their wrongdoing. As these propositions in their final analysis challenge the adequacy of the findings made to sustain the legal conclusions [604] based on them, it is our duty to consider and to decide them. As a prelude to doing so, we make a statement of the case as established by the findings, and as elucidated by the opinion of the court and the documents therein referred to.

Digitized by Google

In June, 1897, by notarial act, Paul Van Syckel leased from one Montilla, the Santa Cruz plantation except a small portion previously leased to someone else. The rent was payable monthly and the term was indeterminate; that is, was to last as long as Van Syckel chose to pay rent. The property when leased was encumbered by mortgage. Van Syckel used the leased property for the business of raising cattle and carrying on a dairy. The registration officer refusing to record the lease because of the uncertainty of the term, Van Syckel, in October 1899, made a notarial statement, fixing a term of six years, and reserving the right, at will, to fix future terms. The registering officer refusing to record this statement, Van Syckel sued to compel its registry, and was successful, the supreme court of Porto Rico (or the chief justice thereof) having affirmed an order directing the registry to be made. The holder of the mortgage on the leased property having commenced executory proceedings to foreclose, Van Syckel sued in the provisional court created by the American military authority to enjoin on the ground of an alleged fraudulent combination between the debtor and creditor by foreclosure of the paramount mortgage to wipe out the lease and impliedly, on the further ground that, having an interest, as lessee, in paying the paramount mortgage debt, he was entitled to do so and take a creditor's legal subrogation. Civil Code, §§ 1203, 1210, and 1211. The foreclosure proceeding as perpetually enjoined. The mortgage creditor acquiescing in the result, in March, 1900, transferred the debt to Van Syckel. During these proceedings there were pending in the local courts, suits in one or another [605] form, brought by Montilla, assailing the rights of Van Syckel. The exact character of these suits is not disclosed, but they are referred to in the findings, and a statement on the subject is contained in Montilla v. Van Syckel, 8 P. R. R. 153, 162.

In June, 1900, before a notary, Van Syckel and the firm of Sobrinos de Ezquiaga, an established and reputable commercial firm, formed a partnership styled P. Van Syckel & Company. The act recited that Van Syckel was the owner of enumerated property, viz.: a small farm, a lot of cattle "as per inventory," a lot of personal property, constituting the plant of a dairy, such as cans, bottles, milk straining apparatus, carts, milk wagons, etc., etc., and besides a mortgage paper secured on the Santa Cruz plantation, inventoried at about 11,000 pesos; and lastly, a sum of money stated in the inventory as "value of working capital," amounting to 1111 pesos. These various items gave a total value of 30,000 pesos, and one half, 15,000 pesos, was paid in cash by Sobrinos de Ezquiaga to Van Syckel as the purchase of one half the property which thus became jointly owned, and was by the joint owners, Van Syckel and Sobrinos de Ezquiaga, established as the capital of the new firm. The duration of the firm was two years, and the purpose of its organization was declared to be the carrying on of a dairy business and the purchase of cattle. There were careful provisions as to the keeping and rendering of the accounts of the firm, as to the equal power of management by the partners, and an equal division between them of profits. There was a stipulation relating to the mortgage debt on Santa Cruz, providing that if the debtor, Montilla, paid the same, the sum received should take the place of the debt as firm capital, and the firm should not be dissolved thereby, and the same result, it was expressly provided, would follow in case Montilla should "recuperate the debt" and require an assignment of the same; that is, in case [606] Montilla, by operation of legal subrogation, compelled a transfer of the debt to another.

The year following, in July, 1901, the firm of P. Van Syckel & Company and P. Van Syckel individually were parties to a notarial act styled "postponement of right," by which the firm, after reciting its ownership of the mortgage claim on the Santa Cruz property and the paramount character of the mortgage as to a lease on the property held by Van Syckel, waived the priority of the mortgage, gave precedence to the lease, and expressly renounced all right of the mortgage creditor "to rescind the lease" as against Van Syckel and his "causa habientes." This act was placed on the public records. In September, 1901, Van Syckel & Company commenced executory proceedings against Montilla to enforce their mortgage debt, and in due course, in November, 1911, the property was adjudicated to them for two thirds of its estimated value, and, as was customary under the local law, the state of the record was referred to, and the priority of the recorded lease was recited.

Digitized by Google

In May, 1902, the firm of P. Van Syckel & Company was, by notarial agreement, extended for a period of four years to the 1st day of June, 1906. The articles of extension recited the original organization, the purchase from Van Syckel of the property which constituted the capital of the firm, including the debt secured by mortgage upon Santa Cruz. It then recited the foreclosure and the purchase of the property at less than the face value of the mortgage debt, and stipulated that the capital of the new firm should not be thereby diminished as the property took the place of the debt as a partnership asset. It would seem that after the foreclosure and probably after the extension of the firm, the suits brought by Montilla in the local courts, to which we have previously referred, were decided against him; but in December, 1902, a new suit in the Porto Rican courts was by him [607] commenced against Van Syckel individually and the firm of Van Syckel & Company and its members to rescind the lease and to vacate the foreclosure proceedings, and to recover the Santa Cruz property. Speaking generally, as to the lease, the ground of attack was that it was void for uncertainty, that the notarial declaration of Van Syckel as to the six-year term was unilateral and created no obligation, and that his reservation of future right to fix terms at his will was purely protestative and void for uncertainty. As to the mortgage debt, the assertion was that the transfer by which Van Syckel had acquired it, consequent on the decree of the provisional court, had extinguished the mortgage by payment, as no subrogation was expressed in the transfer or could, by operation of law, have resulted therefrom. In the meanwhile and before the extension of the partnership, Van Syckel removed from Porto Rico with his family to reside in Cuba, but left a power of attorney with his partners to carry on the business of the firm, he returning at intervals to Porto Rico to supervise and participate in the business. Subsequently, in leasing a portion of the Santa Cruz property, the lease was made to conform to the state of the public records, and therefore was so drawn as to pass not only the rights of the firm, but the right of Van Syckel under his apparently existing lease. In 1905, in conjunction with one English, the firm of Van Syckel & Company formed an agricultural partnership called the Santa Cruz Sugar Company, for the purpose of developing the sugar industry on the Santa Cruz property, and in that contract also the parties so acted as to make their agreement conform to the public records; that is, so as to recognize the lease apparently existing in the name of Van Syckel, as also the rights of the partnership in and to the property.

During the interval, the suit last referred to, brought by Montilla, was decided against him in the lower court, and on his appeal in March, 1905, the judgment of the lower [608] court was affirmed by the supreme court of Porto Rico, Montilla prosecuting an appeal to this court; but shortly thereafter the appeal was dismissed because of a compromise effected with Montilla by which the firm of Van Syckel & Company paid a small sum in cash, thus terminating the long controversy. Shortly prior, however, to this being done, Van Syckel died in Cuba, and the partnership having terminated not only as the result of his death, but by lapse of time, a controversy concerning the lease supervened and this suit followed.

Dealing with the facts which we have recited and the other proof before it, the court found that the sale made by Van Syckel to the firm of Sobrinos de Ezquiaga consisted of one half the plant and assets of a dairy establishment and cattle farm by him carried on in part, at least, on the leased property, and that not only as the result of implications necessarily arising from the provisions of the articles of partnership, but from the proof as to the situation of the parties and the manner in which they gave effect to the articles of partnership, it clearly resulted that the lease passed to the firm as a part and parcel of the contract by which the firm became the holder of the assets and plant.

Thus the court said:

"It is our opinion that Mr. Van Syckel sold a full half interest in his dairy business and all that constituted it, which included every right he had to all property concerned, for 15,000 pesos to respondents Sobrinos de Ezquiaga." [4 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 241].

And again, speaking on the same subject:

"We fail to see the force of the claim that Van Syckel put in a mere 'credit' or mortgage debt as an asset of this firm, the business of which was to carry on a dairy, and it looks ridiculous to say that these respondents simply invested in half of an interest-bearing mortgage. Van Syckel himself had been using this ranch for some time [609] previous for this same purpose as a dairy ranch, and the firm continued to use it for the same purpose for some time thereafter. The firm could not ordinarily promote a dairy business by simply owning a mortgage which might be paid off any moment, so it seems to us to be plain that Van Syckel intended to include the possession which included the lease in the assets of the firm."

Digitized by Google

And this conclusion as to the ownership of the lease by the firm as the result of the formation of the partnership was reinforced by the following statements as to the conduct of the partners, their knowledge of the business, their participation therein, the accounts rendered concerning the same, and the profits distributed. The court said:

"There is not a word of evidence in the case which shows that P. Van Syckel & Company ever paid any rent to Paul Van Syckel for this lease, or have ever given him any credit for any such rent, or that Van Syckel ever asked the firm to so give him credit for any rent, although it is in evidence that Sobrinos de Ezquiaga sent Van Syckel numerous statements of their accounts of the firm's business while he was then living in Cuba."

And again:

"The overwhelming weight of the evidence in the case shows that Paul Van Syckel was just as prominent and even a much more active party than Sobrinos de Ezquiaga where in all defenses against or attacks upon Montilla. A reading of the correspondence that is in the evidence will convince anyone of this."

Indeed, the conclusive effect of the comprehensive findings of the court concerning the ownership by the partnership of the alleged lease is fully illustrated by finding 14, a portion of which we quote, and finding 17.

"14.

"The said Paul Van Syckel during his lifetime agreed with Sobrinos de Ezquiaga by the terms of his partnership [610] in the firm of P. Van Syckel & Company and otherwise, that said firm of P. Van Syckel & Company should be the sole and exclusive owners of the said farm "Santa Cruz," free and clear of any claims upon the part of said Paul Van Syckel by reason of said lease of June 23, 1897. . . .

"17.

"The evidence in this case is clear, unequivocal, and convincing that this lease of June 23, 1897, was to have no life or effect as between the parties in their accounting during or after the date of the partnership, but that the same was merged in the fee at the time of the adjudication thereof to said partnership of P. Van Syckel & Company, if not before."

Absolutely demonstrating, as these findings do, the want of merit in the contention that there was error in holding that the lease had no existence, if there was power to make and give effect to the finding, we come to consider those questions which, at the outset, we pointed out, are the only issues in the case.

Passing whether the face of the notarial acts to which we have referred do not, in and of themselves, fully establish the transfer of the lease by Van Syckel to the firm, and its extinguishment by confusion as the result of the purchase at the foreclosure sale, but without intimating any opinion whatever to the contrary, let us consider the subject in a somewhat narrower aspect.

Undoubtedly, under the local law (Laws of Porto Rico 1905, p. 73) if there was intrinsic ambiguity, the right to resort to extraneous proof to dispel it obtained; that is, proof, to use the words of § 28 of the statute, showing "the circumstances under which it (the document or contract) was made, including the situation of the subject of the instrument, and of the parties to it . . . so that the judge be placed in the position of those whose language he is to interpret."

[611] Was there, then, such ambiguity in the articles of partnership concerning the method of carrying on the business for which the partnership was organized as to justify the admission of explanatory proof?

The articles leave no doubt concerning what the business of the partnership was to be; that is, the carrying on of a dairy and the purchase of cattle; but there is nothing in the articles which expressly shows where and how the proposed business of the firm was to be conducted, and when light on this subject is sought from the implications of the text, to say the least, such a state of mental uncertainty is engendered as plainly justifies the resort to proof to clear up the ambiguity. We say this because in the first place the property, one half of which was bought from Van Syckel by Sobrinos de Ezquiaga, and the whole of which was then put by the joint owners into the firm as its sole capital in trade, on the face of the paper appeared to be an inventory of the assets and property of a pre-existing business, which, from the nature and character of a large part of the tangible property sold, was a dairy and cattle business. In the second place because, included in the articles bought, was a sum of money stated to be "value of working capital," which so persuasively suggests the present purpose to continue an existing business as beyond all doubt to justify proof as to the situation of the parties and of the subject-matter to which the contract related. The proof, then, being admissible, and establishing that Van Syckel was engaged in a dairy and cattle business upon the Santa Cruz property, and that the assets and capital, one half of which he sold, constituted the plant and assets of such business, which the firm continued to conduct, the question is, Was there such ambiguity in the contract as to the transfer of the lease as to again justify proof beyond the terms of the instrument to clear up that situation? Of this also we think there can be no doubt, for the following reason: The inclusion among the [612] transferred assets of the debt secured by mortgage upon the Santa Cruz property, and the dominancy of that debt as to the lease, in and of itself creates obscurity as to whether, by the transfer of the paramount right, it was not contemplated to also pass to the firm the subordinate lease right, and that ambiguity becomes more apparent when it is considered that the established business was carried on by means of the Santa Cruz property, and that possession of that property was necessarily a prerequisite to the continued conduct of the business. Indeed, this ambiguity becomes all the more marked when it is borne in mind that the interdependence of the lease and the mortgage was so great that the judicial power had compelled a transfer to Van Syckel of the mortgage because he was the owner of the lease. Certainly, as the possession of the Santa Cruz property for the purpose of the business was essential, and that possession could only be enjoyed by the firm as a consequence of the right to the lease or the rights to be possibly acquired as the result of the foreclosure of the mortgage, the inquiry as to whether one or both rights were intended to be embraced was essential to a comprehension of the contract, and its solution was made so ambiguous by particular provisions of the contract as to justify proof for its clarification. This arises from the provision requiring the transfer of the mortgage to a third person by legal subrogation in the event Montilla should so exact. The resulting ambiguity is apparent since in such event, unless the mortgage was subordinated by agreement or by operation of law to the lease, the destruction or impairment of the rights which it was the obvious intention of the partnership to create becomes self-evident. So, also, unless the firm owned the lease, it would have no interest to subordinate the mortgage to the lease, and in the event the right of legal subrogation was exercised and the mortgage, by operation of law, passed to a third person, such person, unless the partnership [613] owned the lease, would hold the mortgage as paramount to the lease, and therefore have the power to destroy it. Indeed, the duty to admit the proof, we think, would equally result if attention be not confined to the articles of partnership, but be extended to those articles in conjunction with "the postponement agreement," the foreclosure sale, the extension of the partnership, and the other notarial documents to which we have referred. But we do not deem it necessary to elaborate this view, as what we have said is adequate to demonstrate the want of merit in the contention that the controlling findings of fact made by the court below were, as a matter of law, void because of a want of power in the court to consider the proof upon which the findings were based.

Digitized by Google

This leaves only for consideration the contention that the action of the court was erroneous because it gave effect to fraud and deceit, and enabled the defendants to recover by alleging their own turpitude. Before we approach that subject, however, we dispose of another matter to which considerable attention was devoted in the argument at bar.

During the course of the trial Señor Vacuna, who had been the attorney of Sobrinos de Ezquiaga, of Van Syckel, and of the partnership, was offered as a witness to prove that "the postponement agreement" was advised by him and was executed as a mere precautionary measure to protect the interest of the firm in the lease; that is, to preserve the lease in case, by an adverse decision in the Montilla suits, the foreclosure proceedings were annulled and the firm deprived of its resulting ownership of the property. In other words, that the purpose was to leave the lease in such a position upon the public records that if it should result from the Montilla suits that the title resting upon the foreclosure was destroyed, the lease would not be treated as having been extinguished by confusion because on the records the ownership of the property and [614] the ownership of the lease had been in one and the same person. The court heard the witness over objection based upon the privileged character of the matter sought to be proved, and the form in which it was attempted to be elicited. But we do not think we need consider the subject because we are clearly of opinion, in view of the findings of the court concerning the sale of the lease to the partnership and its other findings of fact, that it is wholly immaterial to pass upon the objection because, even if it be assumed, for argument's sake, to have been well taken, prejudicial error under the circumstances did not result. The weight of the contention as to deceit, fraud, and wrongdoing is placed upon the postponement agreement.

Digitized by Google

but, in view of the ownership by the partnership of the lease and the fact that Van Syckel, although he had disposed of the lease, still remained upon the public records as its owner, we fail to perceive the slightest foundation for the contention as to fraud or wrong or deceit, resulting from the postponement agreement, as applied to those who were parties to it. As the holder of both the lease and the mortgage, the firm had the right to seek to prevent the destruction of the one right by the enforcement of the other,—a destruction which would have been threatened by a resort to foreclosure if the agreement to postpone the mortgage to the lease had not been put upon the records. This is obvious for this reason: If, upon the records, the mortgage had continued to occupy a dominant position as to the lease, it would have resulted that the lease would have been extinguished by a sale to foreclose the mortgage; and therefore, if at such a sale, a third person had bought the mortgaged property, such purchaser would have taken the property free from the lease, and the firm, by the act of enforcing its mortgage, would necessarily have extinguished its lease. Under these circumstances there is no ground for charging fraud and wrongdoing, simply because the parties sought in a lawful mode to protect their legal rights. [615] In its last analysis the whole argument rests upon the assumption that because the parties to the contracts did not change the public records so as to cause them to conform to their contracts, they lost the right as between themselves to enforce their contract obligations,—a proposition which is refuted by its mere statement. Looking at all the transactions from first to last,—the silence of the articles of partnership as to the lease, the act of postponement, the foreclosure proceedings, the extension of the partnership, and the subsequent dealings, we can discover no ground by which it can be justly said that the parties were guilty of wrongdoing. The existence of the Montill.. suits assailing the title to the property as well as the validity of the lease suffices to explain the constant purpose to retain on the public records divergent ownership of the two—when in fact they were united in one person—lest the loss of one, th title, might carry with it by confusion the loss of the other, the lease, because both had been on the record in the name of the same person. Admitting that if the title had been vacated, the benignity of the law, by the application of the principle of restitutio in integrum would have prevented the loss of the lease by confusion, and therefore the fear of the partners was unnecessary, that fact does not justify treating them as wrongdoers or characterizing their acts as fraudulent.

Indeed, when it is considered that the controversy is between partners, and concerns acts in which they all bore an equal part, and that the charge of fraud is advanced to sustain the asserted right of one partner to recover, to the detriment of the other partners, property which he sold to the partnership, and for which he was paid without a return of the price, the want of merit in the contention becomes apparent.

Affirmed.

---

[616] STATE OF WISCONSIN UPON THE RELATION OF HARRY W. BOLENS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JAMES A. FREAR, Secretary of State of the State of Wisconsin, Andrew H. Dahl, State Treasurer, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 616–622.)

Error to state court — who may bring error — relator in behalf of state.

A decree of the Wisconsin supreme court, dismissing a petition filed in the name of the state by a private citizen as relator, asking that court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction under Wis. Const. art. 7, § 3, to enjoin certain state officials from putting in force the state income tax law, cannot, without the consent of the state, be brought up to the Federal Supreme Court by writ of error, because (a) the suit being one which, under the state law, could only be brought by the permission of the state and for the protection of its governmental authority, the state was the only real plaintiff below; (b) the suit having been brought by the consent of the state, in its behalf, the relator had no power to prosecute error and thus to implead the state without its consent; (c) there was no

---

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On parties to appellate proceedings in the Federal Supreme Court— see note to Amadeo v. Northern Assur. Co. 50 L. ed. U. S. 723.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

Digitized by Google

assertion of individual right or grievance on behalf of the relator.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2050–2069; States, IX. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 447.]

Submitted December 15, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin to review a decree dismissing a petition filed in the name of the state by a private citizen as relator, asking that court, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, to enjoin certain state officials from putting in force the state income tax law. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 148 Wis. 456, 134 N. W. 673, 135 N. W. 164, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 1147.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Paul D. Carpenter submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

In the course of the opinion below questions involving the Federal Constitution, and necessary to be decided, were decided adversely to plaintiff in error, and under the Wisconsin practice the decision of the state supreme court makes a precedent binding on all of the courts of Wisconsin on those questions concerning the Federal Constitution in whatever form new actions may be brought.

Atty. Gen. ex rel. Cushing v. Lum, 2 Wis. 507.

The learned Chief Justice of Wisconsin, having presided at the hearing in this case and written the exhaustive opinion in which the state court assumed jurisdiction, must be presumed to have known what that court meant by that decision. His allowance of the writ says in effect to this honorable court that, in his opinion, the decision involves a question within the appellate jurisdiction of this court, and that, in his opinion, the case on the face of the record justifies the allowance of the writ.

Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604; Twitchell v. Pennsylvania, 7 Wall. 321, 19 L. ed. 223; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22.

The statute, even as amended, violates constitutional guaranties by grotesque classifications, by taxing certain people for the incomes of other people, by its system of double taxation; it impairs the obligation of various contracts; by radically reducing the taxing power of municipalities it impairs the obligation of municipal bond contracts, and it is unconstitutional on other grounds. The seriousness of these propositions can hardly be overstated, and we urge this court to deny the motions to dismiss in order that this case may be heard on the merits.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257.

The record affirmatively shows that there are involved Federal questions necessary to the determination of the cause, and that the cause could not have been decided as it was without such decision concerning the the Federal question; for in determining the ground upon which a judgment in a state court was rendered, this court may refer to the opinion of that court.

Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Skinner, 139 U. S. 293–295, 35 L. ed. 193, 194, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528.

Mr. E. C. Brandenburg submitted the cause in behalf of Messrs. Walter C. Owen, George G. Greene, and J. E. Dodge for defendants in error.

Messrs. George G. Greene and J. E. Dodge filed a brief for defendants in error:

The writ of error should be dismissed because obtained without the authority or consent of plaintiff in error.

Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. 103, 11 L. ed. 514; Anonymous, 11 Ill. 488; 7 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 802, 804.

There should be dismissal of the writ because all the parties request it.

7 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 906; Latham v. United States, 9 Wall. 145, 146, 19 L. ed. 771, 772; United States v. Young, 94 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 153; Birch v. Brown, 5 Mich. 31; Hancock County v. Marsh, 3 Ill. 491.

The writ should be dismissed because plaintiff in error is not injured by the decision of the state court.

Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; The Winnebago (Iroquois Transp. Co. v. Delaney Forge & Iron Co.) 205 U. S. 354, 360, 51 L. ed. 836, 839, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Red River Valley Nat. Bank v. Craig, 181 U. S. 548, 45 L. ed. 994, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 419, 48 L. ed. 1046, 1050, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 51 L. ed. 415, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188, 9 Ann. Cas. 736; Hampton v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 227 U. S. 456, 468, 57 L. ed. 596, 599, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Darnell v. Indiana, 226 U. S. 390, 57 L. ed. 267, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Jackson Vinegar Co. 226 U. S. 217, 57 L. ed. 193, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Lee v. New Jersey, 207 U. S. 67, 52 L. ed. 106, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 443, 54 L. ed. 832, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Standard Stock Food Co. v. Wright, 225 U. S. 540, 56 L. ed. 1197, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Williams v. Walsh, 222

Digitized by Google

U. S. 415, 56 L. ed. 253, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Keeney v. New York, 222 U. S. 525, 537, 56 L. ed. 299, 305, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1139, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Rosenthal v. New York, 226 U. S. 260, 57 L. ed. 212, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

Mr. Walter C. Owen, Attorney General of Wisconsin, and Mr. J. E. Dodge also filed a brief for defendants in error:

Without its consent, given either by the legislative branch, or perhaps by the executive, no sovereign government can be made a party to an action in court.

Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. ed. 448, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Christian v. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co. 133 U. S. 233, 243, 33 L. ed. 589, 593, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 842, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504; Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; Louisiana v. Texas, 176 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 347, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Hopkins v. Clemson Agri. College, 221 U. S. 636, 55 L. ed. 890, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 243, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Porto Rico v. Rosaly y Castillo, 227 U. S. 270, 57 L. ed. 507, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 352; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. State, 53 Wis. 509, 10 N. W. 560; Houston v. State, 98 Wis. 481, 42 L.R.A. 39, 74 N. W. 111; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Frost, 113 Wis. 629, 89 N. W. 915; Troy & G. R. Co. v. Com. 127 Mass. 43.

The legislative authority of any person instituting any action in behalf of a state is always a necessary question.

State v. Duff, 83 Wis. 291, 53 N. W. 446; State v. Pederson, 135 Wis. 31, 114 N. W. 828; People v. Navarre, 22 Mich. 1; Benalleck v. People, 31 Mich. 200; Babcock v. Hanselman, 56 Mich. 27, 22 N. W. 99; D'Aquin's Succession, 9 La. Ann. 400; New Orleans & C. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 34 La. Ann. 429; Ex parte Dunn, 8 S. C. 230; Day Land & Cattle Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526, 4 S. W. 865; Henry v. State, 87 Miss. 1, 39 So. 856; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 280, 284, 31 L. ed. 747, 749, 751, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

The officer attempting to appeal must have due legislative delegation, express or necessarily implied, to decide upon this question of state policy, or his attempt is ineffectual.

State v. Duff, 83 Wis. 291, 53 N. W. 446; Babcock v. Hanselman, 56 Mich. 27, 22 N. W. 99.

Nowhere in the Constitution nor in the decisions by which is declared this power of authorizing suits in the name of the state is there any suggestion that the supreme court may declare the consent of the state to be made a litigant in any other forum—in any other court, either of Wisconsin or any other jurisdiction—which is an important difference.

Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 441, 44 L. ed. 1140, 1143, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919.

There is no hint in the record that refusal or dismissal of the writ could in any way prejudice plaintiff in error. Nor is he in any wise aggrieved or injured in any of his legal rights by the judgment sought to be reviewed, which is essential to his recognition in this court.

Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206.

It must not be overlooked that the state court, passing upon mere questions of jurisdiction and practice under state law, refused to entertain the cause with Bolens as a party. Its rulings on the subject entirely eliminated him. His name should have disappeared, even as relator, from all subsequent proceedings. It only lingered through clerical anxiety for identification of the cause. Not being a party, he, of course, could not maintain a writ of error.

Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 14, 24 L. ed. 49; Ex parte Cockcroft, 104 U. S. 578, 26 L. ed. 856; South Carolina v. Wesley, 155 U. S. 542, 39 L. ed. 254, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The attorney general of the state of Wisconsin, by direction of the governor of the state, moves to dismiss on the ground that the state is the real party in interest, because Bolens, the relator, personally, was in the court below the mere agent of the state, devoid of all authority to prosecute this writ of error and thereby to implead the state in this court without its consent. Indeed, the motion to dismiss in a strict sense is a motion to quash the writ of error on the ground that no writ was ever sued out, and that in effect there is no judgment below to which the writ could be directed, since the state, who was the party plaintiff, and the officers of the state, who were the defendants, both acquiesced in and have executed the judgment.

The decree to which the writ of error is directed was rendered on a demurrer to the petition filed in the supreme court of Wisconsin by Bolens, as relator, asking the court as a matter of original cognizance to enjoin the putting in force of a state law creating a new system of state taxation described as "progressive income taxation." 148 Wis. 456, 134 N. W. 673, 135 N. W. 164,

Digitized by Google

Ann. Cas. 1913 A, 1147. We accept a statement contained in the argument of the plaintiff in error concerning the nature of the original jurisdiction of the court below:

"The Constitution of the state of Wisconsin confers original jurisdiction upon the supreme court of the state to issue writs of injunction and other original and remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same. Art. 7, [618] § 3. This clause gives full jurisdiction to the state supreme court over any question quod ad statum reipublicae pertinet, affecting the 'sovereignty of the state, its franchises or prerogatives, or the liberties of the people.' Such action is to be brought originally in the state supreme court, and may be instituted by the attorney general acting on his own initiative, or acting on the petition of a citizen; or, if he refuses to act on the petition of a citizen, then the citizen may, on notice, apply to the supreme court for permission to bring the action for the state in the name of the attorney general, and the court may refuse or grant such permission."

Further, we adopt a statement in the argument for the plaintiff in error as to the grievances which it was deemed required judicial redress and the steps taken which were exacted by the state statute as prerequisite to obtain an exertion by the court of its original jurisdiction:

"Harry W. Bolens presented his petition to the then attorney general of Wisconsin, setting up that the Wisconsin income tax law, chapter 658 of the Laws of Wisconsin for 1911, is wholly null, void, and of none effect, for that it violates numerous sections of both state and Federal Constitutions, most of these objections being set out in detail, followed by an omnibus allegation; and praying that for the wrongs complained of and for the protection of himself and all others similarly situated, and for the protection of all the taxpayers of the state against the threatened invasion of their rights and liberties, and forasmuch as all said persons are remediless in the premises without the interposition of the state supreme court, that the attorney general move the court for leave to bring the action designed 'so as fully to protect and secure the said rights and privileges guaranteed to the people of this state by the Constitution of the United States and the Amendments thereto, and the Constitution of the state of Wisconsin and the amendments thereto.'"

[619] The attorney general, refusing to comply with the request, the supreme court, on motion of the relator, ordered the petition to be filed without prejudice to thereafter considering whether there was jurisdiction to entertain it. Subsequently the court overruled a demurrer challenging its original jurisdiction, and moreover held on a demurrer addressed to the merits that the petition stated no ground for the relief which was prayed. The court, in so doing, defined the nature of the power possessed by it as a matter of original jurisdiction to hear and determine the case made by the petition.

It said:

"This transcendent jurisdiction is a jurisdiction reserved for the use of the state itself when it appears to be necessary to vindicate or protect its prerogatives or franchises or the liberties of its people. The state uses it to punish or prevent wrongs to itself or to the whole people. The state is always the plaintiff, and the only plaintiff, whether the action be brought by the attorney general, or against his consent, on the relation of a private individual, under the permission and direction of the court. It is never the private relator's suit. He is a mere incident. He brings the public injury to the attention of the court, and the court, by virtue of the power granted by the Constitution, commands that the suit be brought by and for the state. The private relator may have a private interest which may be extinguished (if it be severable from the public interest), yet still the state's action proceeds to vindicate the public right." Contrasting the authority thus possessed by virtue of its original jurisdiction with the ordinary processes for the redress of private wrongs, the court said: "These propositions, if correct, and we believe they are, demonstrate very clearly that there can be no such thing as a taxpayer's action (as that action is known in the circuit courts) brought in the supreme court within the original jurisdiction."

[620] Referring to such a taxpayer's suit, the court observed:

"The taxpayer himself is the actual party to the litigation, and represents not the whole public, nor the state, nor even all the inhabitants of his municipality, but a comparatively limited class; namely, the citizens who pay taxes. In short, he sues for a class. No such thing is known in the exercise of the original jurisdiction of this court. In actions brought within that jurisdiction, the state is the plaintiff, and sues to vindicate the rights of the whole people."

Applying these doctrines, it was said:

"The Bolens Case [this case] cannot, therefore, be held to come within the original jurisdiction of this court, if it be a mere taxpayer's action."

After further pointing out the distinction between the right of an individual to sue

Digitized by Google

in a trial court to enforce an individual right or redress a wrong, and, if aggrieved, to prosecute error or appeal, and the difference between the exertion on such error or appeal of authority to review, and the extraordinary power exerted when original jurisdiction was invoked, the court came to consider the merits of the petition. In doing so it declared that because of the public nature of the controversy, it would confine attention solely to those matters which were addressed to the invalidity of the statute as a whole. In passing upon questions of that character, propositions which asserted the statute to be repugnant to both the United States and state Constitutions were analyzed and held to be without merit. The petition was dismissed.

From this statement it is apparent that the motion of the state to dismiss is well-founded for the following reasons: (a) Because accepting the interpretation affixed by the court below to the state Constitution, and the resulting ruling as to the scope of its own original jurisdiction, it follows that the state was the only real plaintiff below, [621] since the relator had no authority to sue but by the consent of the state, and as its mere agent for the purpose of calling into activity judicial authority, not for the redress of individual wrong, but for the protection of general public rights; (b) because the suit, having been brought by the consent of the state, in its behalf, the relator had no power, without the consent of the state, to prosecute error, and thus to implead the state without its consent; (c) because, as the relator did not resort to the methods provided by law for the enforcement of his individual rights, if any, but elected solely to resort, by the consent of the state, to a jurisdiction given only for the redress of general public wrongs, he may not, by means of a writ of error, directed from this court, transform the nature of the proceedings, and secure at the hands of this court, under the guise of an appellate proceeding, the exertion of authority to originally determine alleged grievances which were not passed upon by the court below and are not within the scope of Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575. The argument that if, asserting his individual grievances, the case had been brought in a trial court, and had been carried to the supreme court of the state from an adverse decision upon a Federal question, the judgment or decree of the supreme court would be here reviewable, hence the decision in this case, to save circuity of action, should be now reviewable, amounts but to saying that because there is authority to decide a legal question in a case where there is jurisdiction, there must also be power to pass upon the same question when it arises in a case over which there is no jurisdiction. Under the ruling below no individual right of the relator was denied, and because it may be inferred that if, in the future, a case asserting individual rights in due course of procedure comes to the court below, that court will be controlled or persuaded by the opinions expressed in this case, furnishes no ground for the exertion by this court in the [622] present case of a jurisdiction which it does not possess. Indeed, whether the case be considered in the light of the absence of any assertion of individual right or grievance on behalf of the relator, or be looked at from the point of view that the suit was one under the state law which could only be brought by the permission of the state and for the protection of its governmental authority, the state being therefore the real party plaintiff, or if it be tested by the want of authority on the part of the relator by means of a writ of error to implead the state under the circumstances disclosed without its consent in this court, the want of jurisdiction is so conclusively shown by previous decisions as to leave no room for controversy (Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 436, 44 L. ed. 1140, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919.)

Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

WYANDOTTE COUNTY GAS COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF KANSAS, ON RELATION OF JOHN MARSHALL, Attorney for the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Kansas.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 622–630.)

Gas rates — municipal regulation — contracting away power to fix.

1. A municipality was not authorized to limit its power by contract to fix reasonable gas rates for the future by Kan. Laws 1903, chap. 122, §§ 2, 51, 169, 176, empowering cities of the first class to "make all contracts and do all other acts in relation to the property and concerns of the city necessary to the exercise of its corporate or administrative powers," to "prescribe and fix" maximum gas rates which shall "at all times be reasonable and just," to make contracts and grant franchises, etc., concerning light, heat, and power, and to "fix a reasonable schedule" of maximum gas rates, "at all times during the existence of any such grant, contract, or privilege."

[Regulation of gas rates, see Gas, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

Gas rates — municipal regulation — contracting away power to fix.

2. The limitations imposed upon first-class cities by Kan. Laws 1903, chap. 122,

Digitized by Google

§§ 2, 51, 169, 176, rendering it impossible to contract away governmental power to fix reasonable rates for manufactured gas for the future, were made applicable to natural gas by § 170a, providing that nothing in that act should be construed to forbid the granting of a franchise for natural gas, including the right to lay and maintain mains and pipes on such terms and conditions as might be agreed upon between the city and the gas company.

[Regulation of gas rates, see Gas, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

[No. 472.]

Argued December 2, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a decree which, with a modification, affirmed a decree of the District Court of Wyandotte County, in that state, enjoining a gas company from charging domestic consumers of natural gas in excess of the statutory rate. Affirmed.

See same case below, 88 Kan. 165, 127 Pac. 639.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. W. Dana argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. F. Douthirt, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

This court will determine for itself whether or not a contract in law exists the obligations of which may not be impaired by legislation in contravention of the contract clause of the Federal Constitution.

Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683–697, 29 L. ed. 510–515, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club v. Louisiana, 224 U. S. 632, 56 L. ed. 924, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The governmental power of rate regulation of public utilities, whether by the state or its agencies, may be suspended by contract of the state or by its authority.

Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 L. ed. 176, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 1155, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 224 U. S. 649, 56 L. ed. 934, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253; Minneapolis v. Minneapolis Street R. Co. 215 U. S. 417, 54 L. ed. 259, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The power to fix and regulate rates is governmental, inherent in the state, and does not inhere in the subordinate subdivisions of the state; and such power, if exercised by a municipality, must be conferred by the state, and cannot be assumed.

Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 L. ed. 176, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

The authority to suspend by contract the state's power of rate regulation may be conferred by necessary implication.

Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 211 U. S. 265, 53 L. ed. 176, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Minneapolis v. Minneapolis Street R. Co. 215 U. S. 417, 54 L. ed. 259, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 1155, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

An analysis of the decisions discloses a clear distinction between a delegation of authority to contract or agree and a delegation of authority to grant a franchise or to legislate. The one is the mutual meeting of the minds of two negotiating parties, the other is the sole sovereign act of a single party. The one authorizes consent, the other command. Any language of the legislature sufficient to denote an intent on the part of the legislature to authorize a consent, not a command, is sufficient authority from the state for an inviolable contract.

Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. supra; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 736, 77 C. C. A.

Digitized by Google

267, 147 Fed. 1, 8 Ann. Cas. 614; Minneapolis v. Minneapolis Street R. Co. 215 U. S. 417, 54 L. ed. 259, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

Kansas decisions are a part of the contract, and estop the state from denying its validity.

Territory v. Reyburn, McCahon (Kan.) 552; Jones v. State, 1 Kan. 273; Dudley v. Reynolds, 1 Kan. 285; Leavenworth v. Rankin, 2 Kan. 357; Hines v. Leavenworth, 3 Kan. 186; Leavenworth v. Laing, 6 Kan. 287; Atchison Street R. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 31 Kan. 661, 3 Pac. 284; Wood v. National Waterworks Co. 33 Kan. 597, 7 Pac. 233; Wyandotte v. Corrigan, 35 Kan. 24, 10 Pac. 99; Winfield v. Winfield Gas Co. 37 Kan. 24, 14 Pac. 499; Manley v. Emlen, 46 Kan. 655, 27 Pac. 844; Burlington Waterworks Co. v. Burlington, 43 Kan. 725, 23 Pac. 1068; Columbus Waterworks Co. v. Columbus, 48 Kan. 99, 15 L.R.A. 354, 28 Pac. 1097; Winfield v. Winfield Water Co. 51 Kan. 70, 32 Pac. 663; State v. Hiawatha, 53 Kan. 478, 36 Pac. 1119; Watkins v. Glenn, 55 Kan. 417, 31 L.R.A. 82, 40 Pac. 316; Mills v. Osawatomie, 59 Kan. 463, 53 Pac. 470; State ex rel. Godard v. Topeka Water Co. 61 Kan. 561, 60 Pac. 337; Baxter Springs v. Baxter Springs Light & P. Co. 64 Kan. 591, 68 Pac. 63; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L.R.A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; Wyandotte County Gas Co. v. Spaeth, 83 Kan. 195, 109 Pac. 785; Columbus Waterworks Co. v. Columbus, 46 Kan. 666, 26 Pac. 1046; Potwin Place v. Topeka R. Co. 51 Kan. 609, 37 Am. St. Rep. 312, 33 Pac. 309; Atchison Street R. Co. v. Nave, 38 Kan. 744, 5 Am. St. Rep. 800, 17 Pac. 587; Kansas City v. Wyandotte Gas Co. 9 Kan. App. 325, 61 Pac. 317; Galena Water Co. v. Galena, 74 Kan. 644, 87 Pac. 735; Brown v. Atchison, 39 Kan. 37, 7 Am. St. Rep. 515, 17 Pac. 465.

All ambiguity must be resolved against the city's right to contract, and if its authority is balanced in doubt, such doubt must be resolved in favor of the state; but it is not the province of the court to contract or clip the legislative grant.

Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L.R.A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 282.

The "balanced doubt" should not arise in the mind of this court from the mere denial of such power by the state, nor from the judgment of the court below, but the rule adopted by Chief Justice White should apply, to wit: "The rule, then, to be applied when the matter is balanced in doubt, is this, and nothing more; that if, in using its independent judgment, as it is its duty to do, a serious doubt arises in the mind of the court, then the interpretation by the state court, acting upon a serious doubt created by the existence of independent judgment, will cause such judgment to preponderate in favor of the construction given by the state court to its own statute."

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The Freeport Case was referred to and greatly limited, if not in fact reversed, by this court, in Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Water Co. 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 1155, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

The case of Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 224 U. S. 649, 56 L. ed. 934, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572, gives a clear view of the right rule of construction applicable to the case at bar.

The imposition of such enormous fines and penalties in rate regulation acts has been quite recently held by this court to be a denial of due process of law, contrary to the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Tucker, 230 U. S. 340, 57 L. ed. 1507, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961.

Mr. Richard J. Higgins argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henderson S. Martin and A. E. Helm, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The power to control rates is retained by the city or state, unless the statute specifically authorizes the city to grant a franchise in which rates are fixed for the life of the franchise, or for a certain definite period.

2 Wyman, Public Service Corp. 1424; Re Pryor, 55 Kan. 724, 29 L.R.A. 398, 49 Am. St. Rep. 280, 41 Pac. 958; Leavenworth v. Norton, 1 Kan. 432; Wyandotte v. Corrigan, 35 Kan. 24, 10 Pac. 99; Leavenworth v. Rankin, 2 Kan. 357; Leavenworth v. Laing, 6 Kan. 287; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587–618, 45 L. ed. 679–696, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 180 U. S. 624, 45 L. ed. 702, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Owensboro v. Owensboro Waterworks Co. 191 U. S. 358, 48 L. ed. 217, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 82; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Water, Light & Gas Co. v. Hutchinson, 207 U. S. 385, 52 L. ed. 257, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135; 6 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; 9 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; 11 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 990.

No irrepealable contract can be made if that is the declared policy of the state.

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 593, 45 L. ed. 686, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Digitized by Google

Any ambiguity or doubt must be resolved in favor of the public.

Ibid.

The Federal courts will lean toward an agreement of views with the state courts, if the question seems to them balanced with doubt.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The state of Kansas cannot make an irrepealable contract fixing rates; neither can it authorize a municipality to make such a contract.

Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 211, 48 L. ed. 412, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Atchison v. Bartholow, 4 Kan. 125; Gray v. Crockett, 30 Kan. 143, 1 Pac. 50; People ex rel. Jackson v. Suburban R. Co. 178 Ill. 594, 49 L.R.A. 650, 53 N. E. 349; Grosse Pointe v. Detroit & L. St. C. R. Co. 130 Mich. 363, 90 N. W. 42; Lansing v. Lansing City Electric R. Co. 109 Mich. 127, 66 N. W. 949; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Madison Street R. Co. 72 Wis. 612, 1 L.R.A. 771, 40 N. W. 487; Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 34 L. ed. 898, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; Clinton v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 199 Mass. 285, 85 N. E. 507; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517–534, 48 L. ed. 1102–1107, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Fath v. Tower Grove & L. R. Co. 105 Mo. 548, 13 L.R.A. 74, 16 S. W. 913; Detroit v. Ft. Wayne & B. I. R. Co. 95 Mich. 461, 20 L.R.A. 79, 35 Am. St. Rep. 580, 54 N. W. 958; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 56 Fed. 880; Worcester v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 192 Mass. 106, 78 N. E. 222; Allegheny v. Millville, E. & S. Street R. Co. 159 Pa. 415, 28 Atl. 202; Citizens' Horse R. Co. v. Belleville, 47 Ill. App. 388.

It may be said to be elementary that, in conferring a franchise to use the streets, in the exercise of its delegated authority from the legislature, a city's common council acts on behalf of the state as its agent, and not as the agent of the municipal corporation. The duty of protecting the public streets for public travel is a public, and not a corporate, duty.

Schultz v. Milwaukee, 49 Wis. 259, 35 Am. Rep. 779, 5 N. W. 342; Little v. Madison, 49 Wis. 605, 35 Am. Rep. 793, 6 N. W. 249; Williams v. Yorkville, 59 Wis. 119, 17 N. W. 546; Kittredge v. Milwaukee, 26 Wis. 50; Griggs v. Foote, 4 Allen, 195; Manners v. Haverhill, 135 Mass. 165; McCarthy v. Boston, 135 Mass. 197; People ex rel. Loomis v. Board of Town Auditors, 75 N. Y. 316; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336; Smith v. Washington, 20 How. 135, 15 L. ed. 858.

The state may fix in the company's charter the rates to be charged by it, and the rates thus fixed will be binding upon the company (i. e., the company cannot exceed those rates), though the state may reserve the power to reduce the rates.

Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 193 U. S. 17, 29, 48 L. ed. 598, 604, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 310; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Ashley v. Ryan, 153 U. S. 436, 38 L. ed. 773, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 664, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

Under the powers granted, the state, as principal, authorized the city, as its agency, to permit the gas company to lay its pipes in the streets and alleys. This right may not be taken away from the gas company.

The city at that time had the right to regulate the rates to be charged by public utilities. The taking of this right from the city does not affect the gas company. Even the city would not be heard to complain, and clearly, if it cannot, then the company cannot.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; 9 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; 6 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 854; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Motley, 219 U. S. 467, 55 L. ed. 297, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 671, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

The rates in the franchise are maximum rates, therefore, subject to regulation and reduction.

Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 389, 46 L. ed. 608, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

Messrs. John Marshall and Richard J. Higgins filed a brief in support of a motion to dismiss or affirm.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The supreme court of the state of Kansas, with a modification to which it is not necessary to refer, affirmed a decree of the district court of Wyandotte county, Kansas, enjoining the plaintiff in error, the Wyandotte County Gas Company, from charging domestic consumers in the cities of Kansas City, Kansas, and Rosedale, Kansas, for natural gas furnished, any sum in excess of 25 cents per thousand cubic feet. To such decree this writ of error is directed, and the Federal ground relied upon for reversal is the existence of contract rights in favor of the Gas Company, which it is insisted were impaired by the action of the court below.

Digitized by Google

[626] The price which the court below sustained was lower than the rate charged by the Gas Company, and was in effect a statutory rate, since a state law fixed the rate, and forbade the charging of a higher rate without the consent of the State Utilities Commission, which consent the Gas Company, under the theory that its contract relieved it from doing so, had not sought to obtain.

The court below rested its conclusion upon the grounds, first, that the company had no contract rights fixing rates which were impaired by enforcing the lower rate fixed in the subsequent state law, and second, that if the city had agreed with the company to fix contract rates, the action of the city was void, since the city possessed no authority to make a contract limiting its power to fix reasonable rates for the future. As the question of power, which the last proposition involves, lies at the foundation of the case, we come first to consider it, indulging, for the sake of argument, in the hypothesis that the city contracted with the company for fixed rates during a stated period, which contract would be impaired if the subsequent legislation here complained of was enforced.

At the outset it is certain that the determination of the question of power involves a consideration and construction of the law of the state from which the city derived its authority. While, indeed, that fact does not relieve us from the duty of determining for ourselves the scope and character of the asserted contract, it is yet elementary doctrine that, in the discharge of such duty, it is incumbent upon us not to lightly disregard the construction put by the court below upon the statutes of the state, but to seek to uphold such construction as far as it can be done consistently with the obligation to independently determine whether a contract exists which, in disregard of the Constitution, has been impaired by subsequent legislation.

The alleged contract arises from the passage in 1904 by the city of ordinance 6051, and action taken thereunder. [627] The question of power is to be determined by a consideration of a comprehensive state law adopted in 1903, regulating cities of the first class, of which Kansas City was one. This law was incorporated in the general statutes of Kansas for 1905, and in referring to it we quote the section numbers as found in the act of 1905, putting in brackets the section numbers of the law of 1903, as originally adopted. Under the heading of "General Provisions" in the 4th paragraph of § 734 (2) cities of the first class were empowered "to make all contracts and do all other acts in relation to the property and concerns of the city necessary to the exercise of its corporate or administrative powers."

Under the heading of "Legislative Department, Powers of the Mayor and Council," it was provided in § 784 (51):

"Rates for Water, Light, etc. § 51.—To prescribe and fix maximum rates and charges, and regulate the collection of the same, for all water, electric light, heat, power, gas, telephone service, or any other commodity or service furnished to such city or to any of the inhabitants thereof by any person or corporation now authorized by such city by virtue of a franchise ordinance, or that may hereafter be authorized by virtue of a franchise ordinance to furnish water, electric light, heat, power, gas, or telephone service, or any other commodity or service, to such city or to its inhabitants. The rates and charges so prescribed shall at all times be reasonable and just; and if any city shall fix unreasonable and unjust rates and charges, the same may, at the instance of any producer or consumer, be reviewed and determined by the district court of the county in which such city is situated."

Under the heading of "Public Utilities," § 902 (167), authority was given for the securing of an adequate supply of water and the granting of franchises to that end, as well as of contracting for laying pipes, etc., etc. The section contained the following provision as to rates:

[628] "Provided further, that . . . the mayor and council of any such city shall at all times during the existence of any such grant, contract, or privilege have the right by ordinance to fix a reasonable schedule of maximum rates to be charged for water for public and private purposes by any such person, company, or corporation. Provided, however, That said mayor and council shall at no time fix a rate which will prohibit such person, company, or corporation from earning at least 8 per cent on its capital invested over and above its operating expenses and expenses for maintenance and taxes. In establishing and fixing such rates, the value of the plant and property of any such person, company, or corporation shall be taken into consideration, but the value of such franchise, contract, and privilege given and granted by the city to such person, company, or corporation shall not be taken into consideration in ascertaining the reasonableness of the rates to be charged to the inhabitants of such city."

Digitized by Google

Moreover, the section, after directing that a contract should be reduced to writing, contained the following:

"and any attempt to evade, directly or indirectly, the requirements of this act as to such consideration, or the obligations and conditions of such contract, shall render such contract and franchise absolutely null and void and inoperative."

By § 904 (169) the same general power was given to make contracts and grant franchises, etc., concerning heat, light, power, and street railway franchises, as was conferred, as above stated, for the purpose of obtaining a water supply; but as to the authority to fix rates by contract, the power was limited by a restriction in substance the same as that which was imposed upon the right to contract for rates for the purposes of a water supply, since by § 905 (170) the right of the city in that respect was expressly reserved to

"at all times during the existence of any such grant, [629] contract, or privilege . . . to fix a reasonable schedule of maximum rates to be charged for public and private purposes, including street lighting by any such person, company, or corporation, to the inhabitants of any such city, for gas light, electric light, electric power, or heat, and the rates of fare on any street railway."

Section 906 (170a) contained regulations as to the period of the contract which might be made and other general regulations, and closed with the provision which is inserted in the margin.†

Considering these statutory provisions, the court below (88 Kan. 165, 127 Pac. 639) decided that they did not authorize the city to devest itself by contract of its duty to see that nothing but reasonable rates were enforced, however much the statute might have as to other subjects conferred upon the city an authority to contract in the complete sense. Looking comprehensively at the provisions in question, in the light of the duty resting on us to which at the outset we referred, not lightly to disregard the construction which the state court of last resort has given to the statutes of the state, we can see no ground for holding that the court erred in its conclusion. Conceding that there are forms of expression used in the statute which, taken isolatedly, might be considered as having conferred the power to fix a contract rate, such concession is not decisive, since we must consider the statute as a whole. And [630] when we do so, we think, to divorce the expressions referred to from the context, would be not to interpret and apply, but to distort the statute. Especially is this conclusion necessary when the broad scope of the provisos which we have quoted is taken into view, since they in effect forbid the making of contract rates as to both water and gas by commanding that the governmental power to see to it that only reasonable rates are exacted shall be perpetually preserved and exerted. In face of such a plain manifestation of the legislative will, it would be a departure from the obvious intent and purpose of the lawmaker to hold that the statute conferred the power to do that which the text makes it apparent there was a dominant and fixed purpose of the legislature to forbid. This conclusive view also applies to the special provision concerning natural gas. We say this because, as obviously the prior sections of the statute embraced only manufactured gas, the provision as to natural gas was rendered necessary in order to give the same power to deal with that subject as was conferred concerning manufactured gas. In other words, on its face, the purpose of the provision was to bring natural gas within the statute, subject to the regulations and limitations which the statute imposed, and it could not therefore have been intended to cause dealings concerning natural gas to be for the purpose of power conferred within the statute, and at the same time to exclude the conferred authority from the safeguards and regulations which the statute exacted. The bringing of natural gas within the power, therefore, caused it to be subject to the limitations which the statute imposed, and which, as we have seen, rendered it impossible to contract away the governmental power to forbid unreasonable and secure reasonable rates.

Affirmed.

---

†Nothing in this act shall be construed as prohibiting any city governed and controlled by the provisions of this act from granting, and the mayor and council of any such city are hereby authorized to grant, to any person, company, or corporation, a franchise to construct, maintain, and operate a natural gas plant for the purpose of furnishing to said city and its inhabitants natural gas for lights, fuel, and all other purposes, with authority to lay and maintain all necessary mains and pipes in the streets, avenues, alleys, and public grounds of said city on such terms and conditions as may be agreed to by said mayor and council and such person, company, or corporation: Provided, That such franchise shall not continue for a longer period than twenty years.

Digitized by Google

[631] ALEXANDER C. M. PENNINGTON, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 631–638.)

Claims — executive allowance — following court decisions — proviso.

Claims against the United States not enumerated in the provision of the sundry civil appropriation act of March 4, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1356, chap. 2918, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 58), making an appropriation for the payment in certain classes of cases of the amounts that may be certified to be due by the accounting officers of the Treasury, cannot be deemed to be embraced by the further clause, "provided, that in all cases hereafter so certified the said accounting officers shall, in stating balances, follow the decisions of the United States Supreme Court or of the court of claims of the United States after the time for appeal has expired, if no appeal be taken, without regard to former settlements or adjudications by their predecessors," whether this clause be regarded technically as a proviso or not.

[For other cases, see Claims, I. d, 1; Statutes, II. t, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 582.]

Submitted December 15, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment which dismissed the petition of an Army officer for the recovery of additional rations and longevity pay. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George A. King, William B. King, and William E. Harvey submitted the cause for appellant:

The proviso was not restrictive.

White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 48 L. ed. 295, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney) 5 Wall. 107, 110, 111, 18 L. ed. 518, 519; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 181, 32 L. ed. 377, 380, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47: Henry v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 144; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 36, 37, 48 L. ed. 860, 865, 866, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; United States v. Falk, 204 U. S. 143, 51 L. ed. 411, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Carroll v. State, 58 Ala. 401.

"All" excludes the idea of limitation.

McLean v. United States, 226 U. S. 383, 57 L. ed. 264, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Moore v. Virginia, F. & M. Ins. Co. 28 Gratt. 516, 26 Am. Rep. 373; Kellett v. Kellett, 94 Tex. 206, 59 S. W. 809; Prindle v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 8; United States v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508, 25 L. ed. 631.

The words "so certified" are not a qualification of the character of the cases, but of the manner of certification.

Blanton v. State, 1 Wash. 269, 24 Pac. 439.

The word "so" is an adverb of manner, qualifying "certified." It cannot be converted into an adjective, "such," qualifying "cases." To do this would imply the legislator's ignorance of both the meaning of words and rules of grammar.

United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102, 42 L. ed. 394, 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

If possible, effect must be given to every clause, section, and word of the statute.

United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 143, 145, 27 L. ed. 885, 886, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 48, 58, 25 L. ed. 424, 427.

No decision of this court authorizing "payment of amounts for arrears of pay of two and three year volunteers," etc., as provided for in the clause preceding the proviso, has been made since the decision in United States v. Hosmer, 9 Wall. 432, 19 L. ed. 662, at December term, 1861, under which all pending claims were settled up soon after its recommendation, leaving no ground for complaint.

On the other hand, this court at nearly every term has made some decision in a test case of some class or other, to which this provision is applicable, if construed in a general sense. The most recent case was Plummer v. United States, 224 U. S. 137, 56 L. ed. 697, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467.

The mischief to be remedied was this: If the accounting officers of the Treasury decide against claims of a class, a test case is often brought in the court of claims to reverse this decision. If the final judicial decision is in favor of the claimant, the accounting officers will follow the judicial decision as to cases not once decided by them.

See 13 Comp. Dec. 707; 14 Comp. Dec. 151, 802; 15 Comp. Dec. 124; Meigs v. United States, 20 Ct. Cl. 181.

The mischief which existed when this act was passed is general, and the remedy must be general to reach the evil.

Leigh v. United States, 43 Ct. Cl. 374.

The application of this statute to this claim is to give a remedy to a long denied right.

United States v. Watson, 130 U. S. 80, 32 L. ed. 852, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430.

NOTE.—On provisos in statutes—see note to United States v. Dickson, 10 L. ed. U. S. 689.

Digitized by Google

Assistant Attorney General Thompson submitted the cause for appellee:

A proviso modifies or restrains the generality of the previous provisions.

Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227-236, 22 L. ed. 80, 81.

[632] Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

By the judgment appealed from the court below dismissed the petition in which recovery was sought by the appellant, of a stated sum charged to be due him because of the extra per diem ration for each five years' service allowed by the act of July 5, 1838, § 15, 5 Stat. at L. 258, chap. 162, and the 10 per centum increase of yearly pay given for each term of five years' service by Rev. Stat. § 1262, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896. To develop the questions to be decided, we chronologically arrange the facts alleged and somewhat abbreviate their statement, omitting nothing, however, relevant to the issues.

Stating the petitioner to be a brigadier general on the retired list, the petition alleged the period of his military service from 1855, when he entered the Military Academy, up to and including 1899, when, as a brigadier general, he was placed upon the retired list. The arms of the military establishment in which the services of the petitioner were rendered, during the period stated, as well as the various grades through which, by promotion, he passed, were enumerated, the whole period embracing service in the regular Army except a brief time between the 1st of October, 1864, and the 1st day of August, 1865, when it was alleged he served as an officer of the volunteer service. It was charged that:

"During the entire period of his service as second lieutenant, first lieutenant, and captain aforesaid, the practice of the War Department and of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department was not to count service as a cadet in the United States Military Academy in reckoning the term of five years of service for purposes of the additional ration provided by the act of July 5, 1838, or for longevity increase of pay under § 1262 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896)."

[633] The following averments were then made:

"It was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States on the 27th day of October, 1884, in the case of United States v. Morton, 112 U. S. p. 3, 28 L. ed. 613, 5 Sup Ct. Rep. 1, and on the 11th day of March, 1889, in the case of United States v. Watson, 130 U. S. p. 80, 32 L. ed. 852, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430, that officers of the United States Army were entitled, in computing their rations under said act of July 5, 1838, and in computing their longevity pay under § 1262 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), to be credited with their service as cadets in the United States Military Academy.

Notwithstanding said decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Second Comptroller of the Treasury, on June 20, 1890, decided that he would not allow any claim for additional rations under § 15 of the act of July 5, 1838, aforesaid, and for increase of longevity pay under § 1262 of the Revised Statutes on account of any service not theretofore admitted as forming a proper subject of credit by the previous practice of the Treasury Department as aforesaid."

Although the date when the claim was presented was not stated, it was averred that "after the decisions of the Supreme Court aforesaid in the Morton and Watson Cases, a claim was presented by this claimant to the Second Auditor of the Treasury for additional rations and longevity pay due under the acts aforesaid in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court aforesaid, and said claim was disallowed [on December 13, 1890] by the Second Auditor in accordance with the decision of the Second Comptroller of the Treasury of June 20, 1890, as hereinbefore set forth, and no consideration was given by said Auditor to the interpretation of said statutes made by the Supreme Court in said cases."

It was alleged that on the 4th day of March, 1907, "a provision of law was passed by Congress as a portion [634] of the annual sundry civil appropriation bill (34 Stat. at L. 1356, chap. 2918, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 58)," which provision was quoted in full in the petition. It was further alleged:

"That on the 18th day of May, 1908, the Comptroller of the Treasury decided . . . that in the future the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases aforesaid would be followed by the accounting officers of the Treasury in claims for additional rations and longevity pay aforesaid, based upon service as a cadet at the Military Academy of West Point, but it was decided by said Comptroller in various cases that . . . the accounting officers of the Treasury would not reopen any claim as aforesaid in which a settlement or adjudication had once been made by their predecessors."

Following the enactment by Congress of the provision above referred to, it was averred:

"Your petitioner applied to the Auditor for the War Department in July, 1909,

Digitized by Google

for all arrears of pay then due on account of his service aforesaid, particularly for additional rations and longevity pay on account of his service aforesaid as a cadet in the Military Academy. The Auditor for the War Department refused to consider said claim because of the settlement aforesaid, dated December 13, 1890, by the Second Auditor then in office, disallowing said claim."

Referring to the provision in the sundry civil appropriation act of 1907, it was then alleged:

"Your petitioner respectfully represents that by said provision of statute, there was granted to your petitioner a right to be paid additional rations under said act of 1838, and additional longevity pay under said § 1262 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), for the reason that the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and of the court of claims of the United States, aforesaid, held that such rations and longevity pay were due in a similar case, and such decisions should have been followed by said [635] accounting officers notwithstanding the former settlement or adjudication by one of their predecessors as aforesaid. The refusal of the accounting officers of the Treasury aforesaid to state a balance in favor of your petitioner on account of the former settlement aforesaid deprived your petitioner of a right granted under said act of Congress, for which there is no remedy except by action in this court."

Plainly, under this pleading the only ground upon which the right to a recovery was based was the provision in the sundry civil appropriation act which was counted upon as conferring a substantive new and independent right. The text of the proviso upon which the case depends is this:

"Back pay and bounty: For payment of amounts for arrears of pay of two and three year volunteers, for bounty to volunteers and their widows and legal heirs, for bounty under the act of July twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six [14 Stat. at L. 322, chap. 296], and for amounts for commutation of rations to prisoners of war in rebel states, and to soldiers on furlough, that may be certified to be due by the accounting officers of the Treasury during the fiscal year nineteen hundred and eight, $200,000: Provided, That in all cases hereafter so certified the said accounting officers shall, in stating balances, follow the decisions of the United States Supreme Court or of the court of claims of the United States after the time for appeal has expired, if no appeal be taken, without regard to former settlements or adjudications by their predecessors."

The complaint that the court below held that this provision does not "include the claim of the appellant" is the single matter assigned as error, and what is urged to be the correct meaning of the provision is thus stated in argument:

"1. That the above proviso in the act of March 4, 1907, is an acknowledgment of the indebtedness of the United States to all persons whose claims are therein described, [636] and, as a new promise, takes their claims out of the operation of the statute of limitations.

"2. That upon the refusal of the accounting officers to allow a claim as directed by this proviso, an action may be maintained upon the claim in the court of claims because it is a claim 'founded upon . . . any law of Congress' (Judicial Code, § 145, ¶ 1st [36 Stat. at L. 1136, chap. 231, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 198])."

It is apparent that the construction which the proposition affixes to the proviso does not confine its operation to the character of claims here involved, but extends it so as to embrace all claims of every nature if hereafter it be asserted that a prior administrative determination against the validity of the claim was reached without following the decisions of this court or of the court of claims. The foundation principle contended for by which the result just stated is brought about is that, by the effect of the proviso, a new cause of action is conferred upon the holder of every claim arising against the government from its foundation, however remote may have been the time when an adverse ruling was made, and however otherwise statutes of limitation would be applicable.

The arguments advanced to sustain the proposition make it clear that such is its scope. For instance, it is insisted that "Congress has by the proviso enacted that in all cases" "the administrative rule of res judicata shall not prevail against a judicial decision," and that the purpose of the provision was to remove the bar of all statutes of limitations as to every case to which the enactment relates. The extreme result of the proposition is thus made apparent. That its assertion is not academic becomes obvious when it is observed that maintaining it is essential to meet the requirements of the case, since without the asserted doctrine of new promise and the contention as to the removal of the bar of statutes of limitation the claim sued on would not be justiciable, and could be barred by limitations.

[637] Coming to test the proposition by the text of the provision it is seen that it consists simply of an item in a general appropriation act applying a designated sum to pay an enumerated class of cases, of which this is not one, accompanied with a proviso concerning the steps to be taken to ascertain and pay the claims appropriated for. This makes it clear that the sole ground upon which the proposition rests is a disregard of all that portion of the provision which precedes the word "provided," thus treating the latter part of the whole clause as distinct and independent legislation.

Digitized by Google

In other words, the only avenue of approach for the proposition is through a gateway created by wrenching the provision asunder. We are of opinion that this may not be done. (White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 48 L. ed. 295, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 181, 32 L. ed. 377, 380, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47. But it is insisted that the words following the word "provided" do not technically amount to a proviso, and therefore the clause must be divided into two independent parts, consisting the one of that portion which goes before the word "provided," and the other, that portion which follows it. And when this is done the argument is that the word "all" in the latter portion renders it necessary to give to that portion the far-reaching significance claimed. Conceding for argument's sake that the latter part of the provision, that is, the portion which follows the word "provided," may not be technically a proviso, nevertheless the fact that the two provisions are united in enactment is one and the same clause, giving no intrinsic manifestation of a legislative purpose to separate them, causes the concession to be without influence in determining the proper construction of the provision. It is, however, urged that at the time of the enactment of the clause there were pending before Congress various bills concerning the action of the executive departments in failing to apply the rulings of this court [638] as to longevity pay, and therefore the provision must have been intended to remedy the evil by the adoption of a general provision accomplishing the results here claimed. The premise, if conceded, serves to refute, instead of to sustain, the proposition based on it, for if it be that the purpose of Congress was to unsettle the entire past administrative action as to all claims against the government, and to confuse the entire administration for the future, it cannot be conceived that such a radical intent would have been expressed in such an obscure and uncertain manner. And this leads us finally to examine the contention that, as in modern practice it has become common to adopt independent legislation on appropriation bills by what is called a "rider," therefore the provision here involved should be treated as having that character, and be accordingly independently interpreted as claimed. But whatever be the new habit, it can in no respect serve to relieve the judiciary, when called upon to consider a statute, of the old duty of correctly interpreting it. Indeed, the very suggestion of the practice of "riders" admonishes that things may not be so associated as one for the purpose of securing the enactment of legislation upon the theory that they are one, and when enacted be disassociated for the purpose of judicial construction so as to cause them to be wholly independent one of the other.

Affirmed.

---

[639] IN RE CITY OF LOUISVILLE, Kentucky, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 639–646.)

Appeal — judgment — subsequent proceedings below.

A decision of the Federal Supreme Court which reversed, "without prejudice," because the evidence of confiscation was not so clear as to dispense with the test of actual experiment, a decree of a district court enjoining the enforcement as confiscatory of a municipal ordinance fixing telephone rates and remanded the cause for further proceedings not inconsistent with its opinion, gives the district court a discretion to retain the case for an actual experiment with the rates, which discretion was not abused by a subsequent order appointing a special master to ascertain and report the gross earnings, gross operating expenses, and net income of the telephone company after the rate ordinance went into effect, where an actual experiment with the ordinance rates had been voluntarily undertaken after the Supreme Court's action, and had been in effect for more than eight months before such order was entered.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 11, Original.]

Argued November 10, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

PETITION for a Writ of Mandamus to compel the judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to vacate a supplemental order retaining the case for an actual experiment after the Federal Supreme Court had reversed without prejudice a decree of the District Court enjoining as confiscatory the enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing telephone rates. Rule discharged.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Pendleton Beckley argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. W. S. Clements and Stuart Chevalier, filed a brief for petitioner:

An appeal is proper where the lower court has misconstrued an opinion of this court.

City Nat. Bank v. Hunter, 152 U. S. 512, 515, 38 L. ed. 534, 536, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 675; Whitaker v. Desfosse, 7 Bosw. 678; Cram v. Bradford, 4 Abb. Pr. 193; St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 136, Gil. 99, 18 Am. Rep. 334; 2 Cyc. 612, 613.

In any event a writ of mandamus is proper to bring before this court the question whether its opinion or mandate has been misconstrued by a lower court.

Perkins v. Fourniquet, 14 How. 328, 14 L. ed. 441; Gaines v. Rugg (Gaines v. Caldwell), 148 U. S. 228, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520.

The district court should retain jurisdiction of this case for the purpose (but for the purpose only) of decreeing restitution to the patrons of the telephone company of the amount of overcharges accruing from the passage of the rate ordinance to the filing of the mandate of this court upholding that ordinance.

Brown v. Detroit Trust Co. 113 C. C. A. 490, 193 Fed. 626; Northwestern Fuel Co. v. Brock, 139 U. S. 216, 35 L. ed. 151, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 435, 51 L. ed. 1125, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709, 11 Ann. Cas. 846, 159 Fed. 555.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and William L. Granbery argued the cause, and, Mr. Hunt Chipley, filed a brief for respondent:

The respondent proceeded in conformity with the mandate of this court.

Aurora & G. R. Co. v. Harvey, 178 Ill. 477, 53 N. E. 331; State ex rel. Broderick v. District Ct. 91 Minn. 161, 97 N. W. 581.

It is certainly no unheard-of thing where a plaintiff has, in the judgment of the appellate tribunal, failed to present sufficient evidence to justify a decision in his favor, for that tribunal to reverse the case and yet allow the plaintiff, upon a new trial, to present sufficient evidence to justify a new verdict. This court has held, in Slocum v. New York L. Ins. Co. 228 U. S. 364, 57 L. ed. 879, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523, that this course of proceeding is obligatory in suits at common law. We do not, of course, contend that it is obligatory in suits in courts of equity; but that it is allowable in courts of equity cannot admit of a doubt.

Nor is it at all a new or unheard-of practice in cases of the character of the one at bar for the court to determine by actual trial during the pendency of a suit whether certain prescribed rates are confiscatory.

Minnesota Rate Cases (Simpson v. Shepard) 230 U. S. 352, 57 L. ed. 1511, 48 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1151, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Petition for a rule on the judge of the district court of the United States for the western district of Kentucky, [642] to show cause why a mandamus should not issue commanding him to vacate the supplemental order of reference entered on March 10, 1913, in the cause entitled Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Louisville, pending in said district court, and to desist from further trying in the cause the question whether the ordinance of March 6, 1909, in litigation in the cause, is confiscatory and void as to the company, and further commanding him to dismiss the bill of complaint, retaining the same on the docket, however, for the purpose of ascertaining the amounts collected by the company from its patrons in the city of Louisville in excess of the rates prescribed in the ordinance, and for the further purpose of distributing the same among the persons entitled thereto.

A rule was issued in accordance with the petitioner, and return thereon duly made by the district judge.

The suit referred to was brought by the Telephone & Telegraph Company against the city in the circuit court, the predecessor of the district court, on the 8th of March, 1909, and sought an injunction enjoining the city of Louisville from enforcing the ordinance referred to on the ground that the rates prescribed by it were confiscatory. Upon the filing of the bill a temporary restraining order was granted. A motion was also made for an injunction pendente lite, but was not passed upon till final hearing on the 25th of April, 1911, when a permanent injunction was decreed, the court adjudging the rates fixed to be confiscatory.

On the 15th of June, 1909, the city moved for an order requiring the company to pay into court all sums collected in excess of those fixed in the ordinance. Thereupon the company agreed that if the court make no order in pursuance of the motion, it would keep an accurate account of the sums collected in excess of the rates fixed in the ordinance, and would, on the final hearing, pay the amounts into court for distribution among those entitled thereto, [643] provided the ordinance was not declared to be confiscatory. In pursuance of the agreement the court refrained from making the order prayed for, and allowed the restraining order to remain in force.

Digitized by Google

An appeal to this court was taken by the city from the decree of perpetual injunction, and the decree was reversed. 225 U. S. 430, 56 L. ed. 1151, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741. This court reviewed the evidence upon which the circuit court decided that the rates were confiscatory, and said:

"We express no opinion whether to cut this telephone company down to 6 per cent by legislation would or would not be confiscatory. But when it is remembered what clear evidence the court requires before it declares legislation otherwise valid void on this ground, and when it is considered how speculative every figure is that we have set down with delusive exactness, we are of opinion that the result is too near the dividing line not to make actual experiment necessary. The master thought that the probable net income for the year that would suffer the greatest decrease would be 8.60 per cent on the values estimated by him. The judge, on assumptions to which we have stated our disagreement, makes the present earnings 5-10.17 per cent, with a reduction by the ordinance to 3-6.17 per cent. The whole question is too much in the air for us to feel authorized to let the injunction stand.

"Decree reversed without prejudice."

A mandate was issued, the material parts of which are as follows:

"On consideration whereof, it is now here ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the decree of the said circuit court in this cause be, and the same is hereby, reversed with costs, without prejudice; and that the said defendant, city of Louisville, recover against the said complainant, $3,945.65, for its costs herein expended, and have execution therefor.

[644] "And it is further ordered that this cause be, and the same is hereby, remanded to the district court of the United States for the western district of Kentucky for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of this court."

On the return of the case to the district court, as successor of the circuit court, in obedience to the mandate, the original decree was set aside and the case restored to the docket. Subsequently, on motion of the city, the court appointed a special master to take proof of and report the amount, with interest, collected by the company in excess of the rates fixed by the ordinance. Power was given to the master to subpœna witnesses and examine the books and records of the company. A motion of the city to require the company to pay the amount into the court was postponed. A motion of A. Englehard & Sons Company for leave to file a bill of intervention was set for hearing November 12, 1912. The master proceeded to the execution of his duties under the order, but had not completed them at the time the petition herein was filed. The sums in excess of the rate will aggregate more than $100,000.

On March 10, 1913, the district court (it is alleged, without any motion being made or any further steps taken by any party to the cause, on its own initiative, entered a supplemental order of reference wherein the clerk of the court was appointed a special master to ascertain and report the gross earnings of the company after the rate ordinance went into effect, the gross expenses incurred in operating its property, and the net income derived by the company from operating its plant since the ordinance was put into effect.

The court justified this order by its interpretation of the opinion and mandate of this court. The city protested against the entry of the order, denying that it was a proper interpretation of the opinion of this court, and insisted [645] that the district court, in response to the bill of complaint, should "adjudge that the ordinance in question was not confiscatory, and that the complainant take nothing by its bill." And it is now alleged that the cause is at an end so far as the rights of the company to have the ordinance adjudged confiscatory and void are concerned, and that the district court has no further jurisdiction; that the trial of the issue cost the city $20,000, and a new trial will cost it the same sum, and that no appeal can be taken until such trial be had; and, having no adequate remedy but mandamus, the petitioner prays that one issue to require the judge to vacate his order and to desist from further trying the issue.

It is alleged that the special master, who was appointed to ascertain the amounts collected by the company, is ready to make his report, and will make it in a short time.

It is further alleged the amounts collected in excess of the ordinance are a trust fund held by it for the benefit of the patrons of the company as their rights may appear, and that they are entitled to have restitution made to them by the district court, and that therefore the litigation between the company and the city should not be dismissed absolutely, but should be retained on the docket for the purpose of having collected and distributed the excessive collections. And this relief is prayed in addition to the mandamus.

Due return to the rule was made. It is, in effect, that the court considered the opinion and decree of this court permitted a discretion to retain the case for an actual experiment of the rates, and, thus considering it, made the order of March 10, 1913.

Digitized by Google

We think the discretion was properly exercised. The terms of the mandate permitted further proceedings, and it is well to recall what had been done. The decree of this court was rendered June 7, 1912. The Telephone Company put the ordinance rates into effect July 1, 1912. [646] On motion of the city a special master was appointed to take proof and report the amount collected by the company between the latter date and March 8, 1909, and subsequently, after an interchange of views between court and counsel, the order of March 10, 1913, was made. It will be observed, therefore, that an actual experiment of the rates had been voluntarily undertaken and had been in effect for more than eight months before the order under review was entered, and the court conceived that observation of the experiment might secure greater accuracy and confidence in the result, and, besides, inform the court of matters as they progressed.

We repeat, we think the court did not exceed the discretion permitted, and the rule is discharged.

IN RE ENGELHARD & SONS COMPANY, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 646–652.)

Mandamus — to control judicial discretion — intervention by representative of class.

The Federal Supreme Court will not revise by mandamus the exercise by a district court of its discretion, when retaining a case for an actual experiment with telephone rates fixed by a municipal ordinance after its decree enjoining the enforcement of such ordinance as confiscatory had been reversed "without prejudice" by the Supreme Court, in refusing to permit a telephone subscriber to intervene as representative of a class under equity rule 38, for the purpose of suing for, representing, and acting for all the other subscribers with respect to the restitution of the sums collected in excess of the rates fixed by the ordinance during the pendency of the injunction.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. c, 3; Parties, I. a, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 12, Original.]

Argued November 10, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

PETITION for a Writ of Mandamus to compel the judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to vacate an order refusing to permit a telephone subscriber to intervene as representative of a class in the proceedings taken after the decree of the District Court, enjoining the enforcement as confiscatory of a municipal ordinance fixing telephone rates, had been reversed by the Supreme Court "without prejudice." Rule discharged.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Clayton B. Blakey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Huston Quin, filed a brief for petitioner:

The city of Louisville is simply acting pro bono publico, and has no real interest in the litigation.

Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co. 12 Pet. 100, 9 L. ed. 1016.

Equity rule 38 only reiterated the recognized principle of equity practice.

Smith v. Swormstedt, 16 How. 302, 14 L. ed. 948.

There is nothing in the rule which indicates that this court intended to leave to the discretion of the district court this right granted to litigants.

Rio Grande Irrig. & Colonization Co. v. Gildersleeve, 174 U. S. 608, 43 L. ed. 1105, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

But even where a court may exercise a discretion, the law requires that it shall not abuse that discretion.

Ibid.; Throckmorton v. Holt, 180 U. S. 565, 45 L. ed. 670, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474; Rucker v. Bolles, 67 C. C. A. 30, 133 Fed. 858; Great Northern R. Co. v. Herron, 68 C. C. A. 599, 136 Fed. 49; Silverman v. Baruth, 42 App. Div. 21, 58 N. Y. Supp. 663; McElroy v. Minnesota Percheron Horse Co. 109 Wis. 116, 85 N. W. 119; Jarrett v. Jarrett, 11 W. Va. 584.

Mandamus is the only appropriate remedy.

Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 20, 24 L. ed. 50; Credits Commutation Co. v. United States, 177 U. S. 311, 44 L. ed. 782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiswall, 23 Wall. 507, 23 L. ed. 103; Re Hohorst, 150 U. S. 663, 37 L. ed. 1215, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; State ex rel. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 103 Wis. 591, 51 L.R.A. 33, 79 N. W. 1081.

The writ is asked in aid of this court's appellate jurisdiction.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 173, 2 L. ed. 72; Ex parte Bradstreet, 7 Pet. 634, 8 L. ed. 810; Re Connaway, 178 U. S. 421, 44 L. ed. 1134, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 951; Ex parte Parker, 120 U. S. 737, 30 L. ed. 818, NOTE.—On mandamus to control inferior tribunal— see note to Ex parte Morgan, 29 L. ed. U. S. 135.

Digitized by Google

7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Re Parker, 131 U. S. 221, 33 L. ed. 123, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708.

It is our contention that the patrons of the Telephone Company have paid $137,000 in excess of what they should have been required to pay, and that that sum was paid under an erroneous order of the district court. That sum, therefore, was wrongfully taken from one party to a litigation and handed over to another party who was not entitled thereto. Under such circumstances a court of equity should reach out its strong arm and restore to the rightful owners the sum so taken.

Northwestern Fuel Co. v. Brock, 139 U. S. 216, 35 L. ed. 151, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Brown v. Detroit Trust Co. 113 C. C. A. 490, 193 Fed. 626; Lincoln Gas & Electric Light Co. v. Lincoln, 223 U. S. 349, 56 L. ed. 466, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Southern R. Co. v. Tift, 206 U. S. 435, 51 L. ed. 1125, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709, 11 Ann. Cas. 846, 159 Fed. 555; Lamb v. Ewing, 4 C. C. A. 320, 12 U. S. App. 11, 54 Fed. 269; Hendryx v. Perkins, 52 C. C. A. 435, 114 Fed. 828; Baltimore Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Alderson, 39 C. C. A. 609, 99 Fed. 493; Robinson v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 67 Fed. 189.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and William L. Granbery argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hunt Chipley, filed a brief for respondent:

In a case like this the city of Louisville represents all the patrons of the Telephone Company.

San Francisco Gas & Electric Co. v. San Francisco, 164 Fed. 884.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This petition was argued and submitted with No. 11, Original [231 U. S. 639, ante, 413, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255], and prays a mandamus issue commanding respondent to vacate the order made March 10, 1913, in the suit then and now pending, brought by the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company against the city of Louisville, in so far as it denied to petitioner the right to sue for all subscribers of the Telephone & Telegraph Company similarly situated with petitioner, who paid the Telephone & Telegraph Company, during the pendency of the injunction against a certain rate ordinance enacted [648] by the city, sums in excess of the rates fixed in the ordinance, and commanding him to enter an order permitting petitioner to sue for and represent and act in behalf of such subscribers with respect to the restitution of the sums so collected.

If this cannot be done, then petitioner prays for a rule on said judge to show cause why a mandamus shall not issue to grant petitioner an appeal prayed for from the order of March 10, 1913, and refused by him.

The petition recites the proceedings in the district court substantially as they are recited in the petition in Re Louisville. It adds these details: That while the injunction was in force at least 8,000 of the subscribers of the Telephone Company paid for its service sums in excess of the amounts fixed by the ordinance; that the amounts paid by them ranged from $5 to $100, the majority of the payments being less than $20. The total amount so paid will exceed $100,000. None of the subscribers were parties to the litigation, and petitioner, on September 28, 1912, presented and asked to have filed a bill of intervention in the cause, and that it might be permitted to sue for and represent all of the subscribers who had so paid the Telephone Company. The petition was refused.

That on February 15, 1913, and after the new equity rules had been promulgated by this court, petitioner again moved for leave to file its bill of intervention and for leave to sue in behalf of all of such subscribers. The motion was denied.

A petition for an appeal was presented and denied on April 18, 1913.

That during the time the Telephone Company collected rates from its subscribers in excess of the new ordinance rates, some of the subscribers had business telephones on a direct line, and some on a party line; some had residence telephones on a direct line and others on a party line. All [649] of the subscribers who paid the excess rates paid them under identically similar circumstances, and in the same situation with respect to their right to have the Telephone Company restore the excess. The petitioner had a telephone on a party line and more than 3,000 of the subscribers of the company had the same kind of telephone.

That the effect of the order of the court is to deny the right of the subscribers to be represented in the cause upon the correctness of the master's report, which will be filed in the next thirty days, and their rights will be finally adjudicated without allowing them to appear or have their day in court. There are 8,000 subscribers thus situated who have no adequate remedy against the action of the court, but mandamus.

A copy of the complaint in intervention is attached to the petition. It sets out the facts as in the petition, but more in detail, with additions in an attempt to show a common interest in all of the subscribers to the right of petitioner to appear for itself and for them. It prays that petitioner be made a party to the cause for itself and the other subscribers; that the Telephone Company, upon the coming in of the master's report, pay into the court the sums collected in excess of the ordinance rates, with interest at 6 per cent to be distributed for the benefit of those concerned. The bill of intervention was permitted to be filed so far as to permit petitioner to assert its own claim, but so far as it prayed to be permitted to act or claim for any other but itself, its prayer was denied, with the privilege, however, to renew the same upon making it appear to the court that it had authority from "other specifically named claimants" to act for them.

Digitized by Google

The basis of petitioner's contention is that it has a common interest with the other subscribers of the Telephone Company, and may therefore intervene for itself [650] and for them. Equity rule 38† is cited to sustain the contention. Petitioner is not seeking, however, as it says, "for itself or for anyone the recovery of a specific portion of the fund." The alternative of this would seem to be the assertion of a right to intervene and become a party to all the controversies upon which the fund may depend, and this may mean either in conjunction with the city or independently of it, and, it may be, in exclusion of it. It is said that the city is acting only for the good of the public, but that that is not "the criterion to determine whether the parties in interest have the representation to which they are entitled." It is further said that however earnest the city may be to obtain restitution to the subscribers of the Telephone Company, it might not appeal from an adverse ruling. Who is going to represent the subscribers, it is asked, upon the question of fees to the master and the costs, and the costs on appeal, and who raise the question of interest? This enumeration presents the purpose of the petition for intervention. In other words, the apprehension is expressed and made a basis of the petition for leave to intervene, that the city, which has so far conducted the litigation—and with success—may or will relax its attention and energy to the detriment of petitioner and the other subscribers of the company. This does not present a very strong plea against the discretion the court exercised, supposing the court had discretion to grant or refuse the petition.

It is contended, however, that the court had no discretion but to grant the petition, and that equity rule 38 was peremptory of the right of petitioner. It recognizes the principle, it is said, "that the rights of persons should not be passed upon unless such persons are before the court, or are represented by someone who is interested similarly [651] with them." And cases are cited which, it is urged, also recognize and illustrate the principle.

We have given due consideration to the cited cases and the argument of counsel, and we are of opinion that the district court did not exceed its discretion in making the order under review. The city was the proper party to make defendant in the suit as representative of all interested, and so throughout the whole proceedings. If we may suppose in a case like the present one there can be a distinction between the public interest and private interest, the subscribers of the company being the public, the representation of both interests was adequately fulfilled. It was in consequence of the motion of the city that the telephone company agreed to keep account of charges in excess of the ordinance rates, and, if they should finally be decided to be illegal, to pay into court the excess sums for distribution among its subscribers. It was the representative of all interests to provide for the creation of the fund; it is properly the representative of all interests to see to its proper distribution. This is a necessary deduction from the cases. It is the universal practice, sustained by authority, that the only mode of judicial relief against unreasonable rates is by suit against the governmental authority which established them or is charged with the duty of enforcing them. As was said by Mr. Justice Miller, in Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 460, 33 L. ed. 970, 982, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 702, it was not competent for each individual having dealings with the regulated company "to raise a contest in the courts over the questions which ought to be settled in this general and conclusive way." The rule has been repeated in subsequent cases.

Indeed, what issue is involved except that of the main suit—the character of the rates—that needs the intervention of petitioner? As to who are subscribers of the company, there can be no controversy, nor as to the amounts to be returned to them. Both names and amounts could be, [652] indeed had been, ascertained by the master, under an order made upon motion of the city. Petitioner, however, was not able to produce authority from any subscriber to appear for him, notwithstanding the order of respondent permitted petitioner to renew its motion whenever it should "be made to appear to the court in any appropriate way that other specifically named claimants" desired petitioner to act for them. And yet, †See 57 L. ed. p. 1643.

Digitized by Google

against these facts, against, as counsel for respondent says, the possibility of a presumption that the other subscribers of the telephone company do not desire petitioner to represent them, it prays a mandamus to compel such representation.

We cannot yield to the prayer.

Rule discharged.

CITY OF LOUISVILLE, Appt.,
v.
CUMBERLAND TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 652, 653.)

This case is governed by the decision in Re Louisville, ante, 413.

[No. 538.]

Argued November 10, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review an order retaining a case for an actual experiment with telephone rates fixed by municipal ordinance after a decree of that court enjoining the enforcement of such ordinance as confiscatory had been reversed by the Supreme Court "without prejudice." Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Pendleton Beckley argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. W. S. Clements and Stuart Chevalier, filed a brief for appellant.

Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and William L. Granbery argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hunt Chipley, filed a brief for appellee.

[653] Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Appeal from the order of March 10, 1913, referred to in Nos. 11 and 12, Original [231 U. S. 639, 646, ante, 413, 416, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, 258], and which order it was the object of the petition for mandamus, passed on in No. 11, to command the judge of the district court to vacate. The appeal also includes certain other orders which preceded the making of that order. The question, which is fundamental of all, is whether the decision and decree of this court set out in No. 11, Original, and the mandate issued thereon, permitted further proceedings in the suit, or necessarily required its dismissal. This is the general basis of the assignments of error, and, as included in it, special objection is made to the instructions given the master in the orders appealed from, to the refusal of the court to order the Telephone Company to pay into court for immediate distribution among those entitled thereto, whatever sums the company collected in excess of the ordinance rates and deciding instead that a bond should be required of the company for the restitution of the amounts if the ordinance rates should ultimately be held not to be confiscatory. These objections are repeated in the usual way of assignments of error.

The discretion vested in the court, we considered in No 11, Original, and repetition would serve no purpose. For the reasons there given the order of the District Court is affirmed.

---

[654] UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plff. in Err. and Appt.,
v.
ANTIKAMNIA CHEMICAL COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 654-668.)

Error to District of Columbia court of appeals — jurisdiction — suit involving validity of Federal authority.

1. A decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia holding invalid a departmental regulation promulgated to carry into effect the provisions of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354), is appealable to the Federal Supreme Court as rendered in a suit in which the validity of an authority exercised under the United States is drawn in question.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1057-1074, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Food and drugs — misbranding — administrative regulations.

2. A regulation promulgated by the Secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture, and Commerce and Labor, requiring the label on a preparation containing a derivative of any of the drugs enumerated in the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, § 8, not only to show the presence of such derivative, but to state the name of the drug from which it is derived, so as to show clearly that the product is a derivative of that particular drug, is a proper exercise of the power of these officials under § 3 of that act to make uniform rules and enact regulations to carry out the statute, and is not invalid as an attempt to add to the provisions of § 8 that a drug shall be deemed to be misbranded if its label shall be false or misleading in any particular, or shall fail to state the quantity or proportion of certain enumerated

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the District of Columbia courts—see note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 51 L. ed. U. S. 269.

Digitized by Google

substances, or any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein.
[Pure food laws, see Food and Drugs, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

Food and drugs — misbranding — drug derivatives.

3. The requirement in the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, § 8, that labels on drugs shall state the quantity or proportion of certain enumerated substances or of any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein necessarily means that the label shall also state the substance from which such derivative is produced, in order to make the warning of the labels complete.
[Pure food laws, see Food and Drugs, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1913 Supp.]

[No. 118.]

Argued December 9, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to, and APPEAL from, the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a libel for the seizure and condemnation of certain drugs under the food and drugs act. Reversed and remanded, with direction to reverse the decree of the Supreme Court, and remand the cause, with direction to overrule the exceptions to the libel.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 343.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Davis argued the cause, and, with Mr. Karl W. Kirchwey, filed a brief for plaintiff in error and appellant:

This court has jurisdiction.

Smoot v. Heyl, 227 U. S. 518, 57 L. ed. 621, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

Debates in Congress may be looked to in order to show the evil which Congress sought to remedy.

American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 48 L. ed. 1087, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Blake v. National City Bank, 23 Wall. 307, 23 L. ed. 119; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 25 L. ed. 240, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 504.

This court will recognize well-known scientific facts upon which Congress acted.

Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412, 52 L. ed. 551, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324, 13 Ann. Cas. 957; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

The act is not penal for purposes of strict construction.

Cliquot's Champagne, 3 Wall. 114, 18 L. ed. 116; 443 Cans of Frozen Egg Product v. United States, 226 U. S. 172, 57 L. ed. 174, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 45, 55 L. ed. 364, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374, 23 L. ed. 47; Taylor v. United States, 3 How 197, 11 L. ed. 559; United States v. 5 Boxes of Asafœtida, 181 Fed. 561; United States v. Hodson, 10 Wall. 395, 19 L. ed. 937; United States v. Stowell, 133 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 555, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

Even penal statutes should be construed to effectuate the legislative intent.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

The only alternative to the construction contended for is that § 8 was left incomplete, and the Secretaries were intended and authorized to fill in the outline.

Pickett v. United States, 216 U. S. 456, 54 L. ed. 566, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 18 L. ed. 830.

The power to make regulations having the force of law may be conferred by general language.

Bong v. Alfred S. Campbell Art Co. 214 U. S. 236, 53 L. ed. 979, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628, 16 Ann. Cas. 1126; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Coopersville Co-Op. Creamery Co. v. Lemon, 89 C. C. A. 595, 163 Fed. 145; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Roughton v. Knight, 219 U. S. 537, 55 L. ed. 326, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297; United States v. Bailey, 9 Pet. 238, 9 L. ed. 113; United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. ed. 718, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

The power delegated to the Secretaries was constitutional.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; United States v. Breen, 40 Fed. 402; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

Digitized by Google

A statement may be misleading under § 8, although literally true.

Brina v. United States, 105 C. C. A. 558, 179 Fed. 373; Frank v. United States, 113 C. C. A. 188, 192 Fed. 864; Schraubstadter v. United States, 118 C. C. A. 42, 199 Fed. 568; United States v. Morgan, 181 Fed. 587; United States v. 100 Cases of Tepee Apples, 179 Fed. 985; United States v. Scanlon, 180 Fed. 485; United States v. 75 Boxes of Alleged Pepper, 198 Fed. 934; United States v. 10 Barrels of Vinegar, 186 Fed. 399.

Section 8 was intended to cover just such deceptions as to identity.

United States v. Johnson, 221 U. S. 488, 55 L. ed. 823, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

Former Solicitor General Lehmann also filed a brief for plaintiff in error and appellant.

Mr. Daniel W. Baker argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph C. Sheehy and Frank J. Hogan, filed a brief for defendant in error and appellee:

The validity of an authority exercised under the United States was not drawn in question.

South Carolina v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 353, 30 L. ed. 207, 209, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Clough v. Curtis, 134 U. S. 361, 370, 33 L. ed. 945, 949, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 285, 286, 34 L. ed. 700, 702, 703, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 352–354, 30 L. ed. 207, 209, 210, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059; Linford v. Ellison, 155 U. S. 503, 39 L. ed. 239, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Ferry v. King County, 141 U. S. 668, 673, 35 L. ed. 895, 898, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169; Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 149, 14 L. ed. 364; Millingar v. Hartupee, 6 Wall. 258, 261, 262, 18 L. ed. 829, 830; District of Columbia v. Gannon, 130 U. S. 227, 229, 32 L. ed. 922, 923, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 203 U. S. 461, 51 L. ed. 269, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Moore v. United States, 216 U. S. 608, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Re Craft, 124 U. S. 370, 373, 374, 31 L. ed. 449, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 536, 36 L. ed. 1077, 1078, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Abbott v. National Bank of Commerce, 175 U. S. 409, 412, 413, 44 L. ed. 217–219, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153.

Messrs. Daniel W. Baker and Wilton J. Lambert also filed a brief for defendant in error and appellee:

The statute creates a new criminal offense.

Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 45–60, 55 L. ed. 364–369, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; United States v. Johnson, 177 Fed. 313; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 667, 668, 669, 36 L. ed. 1127, 1128, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; United States v. Chouteau, 102 U. S. 603, 26 L. ed. 246; Lagler v. Bye, 42 Ind. App. 592, 85 N. E. 36; Diversey v. Smith, 103 Ill. 390, 42 Am. Rep. 14; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 436, 29 L. ed. 684, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Hepner v. United States, 213 U. S. 111, 53 L. ed. 723, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 739, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, 16 Ann. Cas. 960; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 629, 33 L. ed. 1083, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 358, 48 L. ed. 709, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

No prosecution can be had under a statute unless its mandates are so clearly expressed that any ordinary person can determine in advance what he may or what he may not do under it.

Tozer v. United States, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 919; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 282, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 628, 33 L. ed. 1083, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; State v. Mann, 2 Or. 241; Brown v. State, 137 Wis. 543, 119 N. W. 338; United States v. Capital Traction Co. 34 App. D. C. 597, 19 Ann. Cas. 68.

The Department, in formulating this regulation, attempts to add to, alter, and amend the statute.

Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; United States v. 200 Barrels of Whiskey, 95 U. S. 571, 576, 24 L. ed. 491, 492; United States v. 3 Barrels of Whiskey, 77 Fed. 965; United States v. Symonds, 120 U. S. 46, 30 L. ed. 557, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 411; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Payne v. United States, 20 App. D. C. 581.

A violation of a regulation of the Department is not punishable as a crime, unless the act of Congress itself providing for such regulation also provides for a punishment in case of a violation thereof.

United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; United States v. Sandefuhr, 145 Fed. 49; Com. v. Crane, 158 Mass. 219, 33 N. E. 388; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55

Digitized by Google

. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 77, 55 L. ed. 652, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 734; United States v. George, 228 U. S. 14, 57 L. ed. 712, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; United States v. Frank, 189 Fed. 195; United States v. St. Louis Coffee & Spice Mills, 189 Fed. 191; United States v. 11,150 Pounds of Butter, 115 C. C. A. 463, 195 Fed. 667; St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. United States, 110 C. C. A. 63, 188 Fed. 191.

The court will not take judicial notice of the alleged intimate relation of acetphenetidin and acetanilid.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 909; Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37, 23 L. ed. 200; Eclipse Mfg. Co. v. Adkins, 36 Fed. 556; Kaolatype Engraving Co. v. Hoke, 30 Fed. 446.

Taking the definition of "derivative," whether it be the popular or chemical definition, it cannot be said for a moment that any of the parent substance is in such derivative.

Webster's Int. Dict.; Century Dict.; Elberfeld & Co. v. United States, 42 C. C. A. 525, 102 Fed. 603.

The words in a penal statute are to be construed according to their popular definition.

Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 574, 38 L. ed. 557, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Libel for the seizure and condemnation of certain drugs under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 30, 1906, commonly known as the food and drugs act (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354).

The libel alleges that the drugs are in the possession and custody of the Wholesale Drug Exchange, a body corporate, at a numbered place in the city of Washington.

The drugs, it is alleged, are intended to be used for the cure and mitigation and prevention of diseases of man. They are described as follows:

[660] "Twenty packages, more or less, of said drug, labeled and branded as follows: 'Antikamnia Tablets, contain 305 grains of acetphenetidin, U. S. P. per ounce guaranteed by the Antikamnia Chemical Company, under the food and drugs act, June 30, 1906, U. S. Serial Number 10. The Antikamnia tablets in this original ounce package contain no acetanilid, antifebrin, antipyrin, morphin, opium, codein, heroin, [illegible] or beta eucaine, arsenic, [illegible] indica, or grains. One ounce Antikamnia Tablets. Manufactured in the United States of America by the Antikamnia Chemical Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.'

"Also seventy other packages, more or less, of said drug, labeled and branded as follows: 'Antikamnia and Codein Tablets. Contain 296 grains acetphenetidin, U. S. P. per ounce. Contain 18 grains sulp. codein per ounce. Guaranteed by the Antikamnia Chemical Company, under the the food and drugs act, June 30, 1906. U. S. Serial Number 10. The Antikamnia and Codein tablets in this original ounce package contain no acetanilid, antifebrin, antipyrin, morphin, opium, heroin, cocaine, alpha or beta eucaine, arsenic, strychnin, chloroform, cannabis indica, or chloral hydrate. One ounce Antikamnia and Codein Tablets. Manufactured in the United States of America by the Antikamnia Chemical Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.'

"Also ten other packages, more or less, of said drug, labeled and branded as follows: 'Antikamnia and Quinine Tablets. Contain 165 grains acetphenetidin, U. S. P. per ounce. Guaranteed by the Antikamnia Chemical Company under the food and drugs act, June 30, 1906. U. S. Serial Number 10. The Antikamnia and Quinine Tablets in this original ounce package contain no acetanilid, antifebrin, antipyrin, morphin, opium, codein, heroin, cocaine, alpha or beta eucaine, arsenic, strychnin, [661] chloroform, cannabis indica, or chloral hydrate. One ounce Antikamnia and Quinine Tablets. Manufactured in the United States of America by the Antikamnia Chemical Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.'"

The ground of confiscation and condemnation alleged is that all of the packages of the drugs contain a large quantity and proportion of acetphenetidin, which, it is alleged, is a derivative of acetanilid, and that under the provisions of the act of Congress and of the regulations lawfully made thereunder it is provided and required that the label on each of the packages shall bear a statement that the acetphenetidin contained therein is a derivative of acetanilid; and yet it is alleged that each and all of the packages fail to comply with such provisions.

It is also alleged that the packages are further misbranded, in that the labels thereon are false and misleading, for the reason that each and all of them bear the statement that no acetanilid is contained therein, and that the statement imports and signifies that there is no quantity of any derivative of acetanilid contained in the drug.

A warrant of arrest was issued upon which the marshal duly made return that he had arrested twenty packages of Antikamnia tablets, ten packages of Antikamnia quinine tablets, and sixty-three packages labeled "Antikamnia and Codein Tablets," and otherwise duly executed the warrant.

Digitized by Google

The Antikamnia Chemical Company, appellee and defendant in error, alleging itself to be the owner of the drugs, petitioned to be made a defendant in the libel. The petition was granted, and the company thereupon filed the exceptions to the libel. The exceptions negative in detail the charges of the libel, and assert conformity in the labeling of the packages to the act of Congress of June 30, 1906, quoting its 8th section as follows: " . . . or if the package fail to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of [662] any alcohol, morphin, opium, cocaine, heroin, alpha or beta eucaine, chloroform cannabis indica, chloral hydrate, or acetanilid, or any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein." And it is averred that the act does not provide that there should be added to any derivative of any of the substances contained therein the name of the parent substance, and the act cannot be added to or enlarged by requiring the company to add to the name of a known article, the fact that the article is a derivative of any of the substances mentioned in the act. It is averred, therefore, that the packages are not misbranded, and that the statement on the labels that no acetanilid is contained therein is in no way false or misleading, because the libel does not allege that there is acetanilid in the packages, and, therefore, the statement, instead of being false and misleading, is, according to the allegations of the libel, true.

The exceptions were sustained and the libel dismissed.

It was stipulated that Food Inspection Decision No. 112, issued January 27, 1910 by the United States Department of Agriculture, was considered by the court upon the hearing of the cause, and should be included in and be considered part of the record on appeal.

The decision quotes § 8 of the act, states that the Attorney General, in an opinion rendered January 15, 1909, held that a derivative is a substance so related to one of the specified substances "that it would be rightly regarded by recognized authorities in chemistry as obtained from the latter 'by actual or theoretical substitution,' and it is not indispensable that it should be actually produced therefrom as a matter of fact;" further, that the labeling of derivatives, as prescribed by § 8, is a proper subject conferred upon the Department by § 3, and that a rule or regulation requiring the name of the specified substance to follow that of the derivative would be in harmony with the general purpose of the act, and an [663] appropriate method by which to give effect to its provisions.

In conformity to this opinion, Regulation 28 of the Rules and Regulations for the Enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act was amended as follows: " . . . Acetanilide (antifebrine, phenylacetamide). Derivatives—Acetphenetidine, . . . (g) In declaring the quantity or proportion of any of the specified substances the names by which they are designated in the act shall be used, and in declaring the quantity or proportion of the derivatives of any of the specified substances, in addition to the tradename of the derivative, the name of the specified substance shall also be stated, so as to indicate clearly that the product is a derivative of the particular specified substance."

The decree of the supreme court of the District, dismissing the libel, was affirmed by the court of appeals.

The case is not in very broad compass, though the arguments of counsel are somewhat elaborate. The libel is prosecuted for the condemnation of one hundred packages of Antikamnia tablets as being misbranded in violation of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 768, chap. 3915, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1354). The tablets contain acetphenetidin and the labels so state, and the proportion of the substance. It is a derivative of acetanilid, but the labels do not so state, but do state that the tablets contain no acetanilid. And these omissions, it is contended by the government, constitute a violation of the statute and of Regulation No. 28, as amended. The chemical company contends that the first statement is not required by the law, and that the second statement is true, and therefore cannot be false or misleading.

Preceding the discussion of these contentions a question of jurisdiction is presented by the chemical company, and a motion to dismiss is made on the ground that only the construction of the statute is involved in the decision of [664] the court below. The company also moves for an affirmance of the judgment on the ground that the appeal is frivolous. Contra, the government contends that the court of appeals held invalid the regulations requiring the name of the primary substance as well as that of the derivative to be stated on the label; and that there is not only drawn in question, but so far denied, an authority exercised under the United States. We concur in this view. The validity of the regulation was and is denied. Its validity may, indeed, rest on the statute, but so did the validity of the rule of the Patent Office passed on in United States ex rel. Steinmetz v. Allen, 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. ed. 555, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416. We there said of a rule of practice established by the Commissioner of Patents under a section of the Revised Statutes: "It thereby became a rule of procedure and constituted, in part, the powers of the primary examiner and commissioner. In other words, it became an authority of those officers, and, necessarily, an authority 'under the United States.' Its validity was and is assailed by the plaintiff in error. We think, therefore, we have jurisdiction, and the motion to dismiss is denied." United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 203 U. S. 461, 51 L. ed. 269, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, is not in antagonism to this ruling. In that case the relator was dismissed from the public service by an order of the Secretary of War as representative of the President. She sought restoration by mandamus. It was denied and she brought the case to this court on the ground that the validity of an authority exercised under the United States was drawn in question. Dismissing the case, this court said that as she did not question the authority of the President or his representative to dismiss her, but contended only that certain rules and regulations of the civil service had not been observed, the validity of an authority exercised under the United States was not drawn in question, but only the construction and application of regulations of the exercise of such authority. United States ex rel. [665] Steinmetz v. Allen was said not to be contrary, "for there the validity of a rule constituting the authority of certain officers in the Patent Office was drawn in question."

Digitized by Google

Motion to dismiss is denied.

Joined with the motion to dismiss, we have seen, was a motion to affirm on the ground that the question of the authority of the Secretaries to make the regulation is frivolous in view of the decisions in United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, and other cases. How far this contention is tenable will be developed as we proceed with the consideration of the act and the power of the Secretaries under it.

The purpose of the act is to secure the purity of food and drugs, and to inform purchasers of what they are buying. Its provisions are directed to that purpose and must be construed to effect it.

Section 3 gives the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, power to "make uniform rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions" of the act, and the power to collect specimens of foods and drugs offered in interstate and foreign commerce. It adopts the definitions of the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary, and provides (§ 8) that the term "misbranded," as used in the act "shall apply to all drugs . . . the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design, or device regarding such article, or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which shall be false or misleading in any particular." And, further, in case of drugs, an article shall be deemed to be misbranded "if the package fail to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion" of certain enumerated substances "or acetanilid, or any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein."

These are the applicatory provisions. How are they to be construed?

[666] First, as to the power of the Secretaries. It is undoubtedly one of regulation only,—an administrative power only,—not a power to alter or add to the act. The extent of the power, however, must be determined by the purpose of the act and the difficulties its execution might encounter. The fact that a council of three Secretaries of governmental departments was given power to make the rules and regulations for the execution of the law shows how complex the matters dealt with were considered to be, and the care that was necessary to be taken to guard against their defeat or perversion. The composition of drugs is a matter of technical skill, their denomination often by words of scholastic origin, conveying no meaning to the uninformed, their uses and abuses learned only by experience, beneficial or evil. It was this experience that the law sought to avail itself of and to avail itself against the ever-increasing powers of the laboratory or the disguises of a technical nomenclature. Hence the provision of the law that the term "drug," as used in the act, shall include all medicines and preparations recognized in the United States Pharmacopœia or National Formulary for internal or external use, and hence also the provision that a drug or food product is misbranded in case it fails to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of certain enumerated substances, including acetanilid, "or any derivative or preparation of any such substance contained therein." Experience had demonstrated the quality of those substances, their effects had become common knowledge; their names, therefore, were all the warning it was necessary for the law to give. But derivative of them might, probably would, be of their quality, so derivatives of them were to be guarded against, and the law hence further provided that the labels on them should state the "quantity or proportion" of "any derivative or preparation" of them. This much is clear,—there is no obscurity in the words and purpose of the law. The [667] query then occurs, such being the words and purpose, if the quantity or proportion of the substances or any derivative or preparation of them must be stated, is it administrative of the law or additive to it to require by regulation that not only the name of the derivative or preparation be stated, but from what substance derived or of what it is a preparation? It certainly cannot be said that the purpose of the law is not exactly fulfilled by the regulation. If it fulfils the purpose of the law, it cannot be said to be an addition to the law, unless, indeed, it can be contended that the law provided a means for its defeat by the easy device of mysterious names. There is illustration in the present case. What information does the use of the word "acetphenetidin" convey to anybody of its good or evil origin? If it be said that the like question may be asked of any of the primary substances, we reply that they are the precautions of the law, and adopted as such because they had demonstrated themselves, the value of their use, the detriment of their abuse, and it was believed that their names would carry no deception.

Digitized by Google

But let us turn from the power of the Secretaries to the law itself, and inquire if it needs the assistance of a regulation. It is the contention of the government that it does not, that its requirement that the primary substances should be labeled and that their derivatives should be labeled means, necessarily, that it should be stated of what they are the derivatives to make the warning of the labels complete. A great deal of what we have said in discussing the power of the Secretaries applies to this contention and supports it. The purpose of the law is the ever-insistent consideration in its interpretation. The purpose is to prevent the surreptitious sale of certain noxious drugs or their derivatives, the latter supposedly partaking of the quality of parent article and as effective of evil consequences. This being the purpose, did the law leave it unexecuted? We cannot attribute to it such [668] defect, and a serious defect it might be. Nor can we consider as a case of omission that which involves so definitely the mischief which was intended to be redressed and which is fairly within the language of the law. And we say this without regard to the various illustrations contained in the government's brief of the deceptions which can be practised by using the name of the derivative alone, for the chemical company insists that we may not, in the absence of allegations and proof, look for knowledge in the encyclopedias, or medical lexicons, or to trade practices for trade disguises, actual or possible. It is not necessary to enter upon the challenged ground. The law furnishes its own tests of what the labels should reveal, and we may grant, for the argument's sake, as contended, that it has penal character; but this does not mean that it should not be given its reasonable intendment. There is no hardship in this, either to the manufacturer or the seller of drugs. They surely know what they make or vend,—know whether it is primary or of what a derivative,—and the law requires only that they put their knowledge on the labels for the information of purchasers. No serious burden is thereby imposed on honest business. Indeed, it makes the label on the packages an assurance as well as a warning, and benefits all concerned, manufacturer, seller, and purchaser. And this in the interest of the public health.

Decree reversed and cause remanded, with directions to reverse the decree of the Supreme Court and remand the cause, with direction to overrule the exceptions to the libel.

---

[669] HARRY I. MULCREVY and Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 669–675.)

Error to state court — to what court directed.

1. The rule that a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court must not run to the highest court of the state where the latter court has refused to permit a case to be transferred to that court from a lower state court unless it plainly appears on the face of the record by an affirmance in express terms of the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed that the refusal to permit such transfer was the exercise of jurisdiction to review the cause on the NOTE.—As to when writ of error may run to inferior state court—see note to Kentucky v. Powers, 50 L. ed. U. S. 633.

As to when judgment sought to be reviewed is that of highest state court—see merits, having been adopted in Norfolk & S. Turnp. Co. v. Virginia, 225 U. S. 264, 56 L. ed. 1082, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828, to settle an uncertainty in practice, and to take effect after the opening of the October term, 1912, of the Supreme Court, will not be applied to a writ of error allowed before that term.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1147, 1167, 2616–2634, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Clerks — fees — in naturalization proceedings.

2. The county clerk of the city and county of San Francisco cannot retain, as against the city and county, and for his own personal use, that portion of the fees collected by him as clerk of the superior court in naturalization proceedings which the clerk of any court collecting such fees is authorized, by the naturalization act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 596, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 124), § 13, to retain, where his salary is fixed at a specified sum by the charter, which further provides that all salaries shall be "in full compensation for all services rendered," and that "every officer shall pay all moneys coming into his hands as such officer, no matter from what source derived or received, into the treasury of the city and county."

[Fees of clerks of state court, see Clerks, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 133.]

Argued December 12 and 15, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco in favor of said city and county in an action to recover fees in naturalization proceedings, received by one of the defendants in his official capacity as county clerk. Affirmed.

See same case below in District Court of Appeal, 15 Cal. App. 11, 113 Pac. 339.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James F. Tevlin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Samuel M. Shortridge and L. A. Redman, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The question to be argued, with differ-note to Norfolk & S. Turnp. Co. v. Virginia, 56 L. ed. U. S. 1082.

On the practice and procedure governing transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

Right of clerk on salary basis to retain fees in naturalization proceedings.

MULCREVY v. SAN FRANCISCO answers in the negative a question upon which there has been much contrariety of opinion; viz., whether a clerk of a state court on a salary basis, and required to account for all fees, may retain for his personal use one half of the fees collected by him as such clerk in naturalization proceedings which the clerk of any court collecting such fees is authorized by the naturalization act of June 29, 1906, § 13, to retain.

The view of the Federal Supreme Court that this statute is "easily construed and its purpose entirely accomplished by requiring an accounting of one half of the fees to the United States, leaving the other half to whatever disposition may be provided by the state law," had theretofore been adopted in Franklin County v. Barnes, 68 Wash. 488, 123 Pac. 779, and Barron County v. Beckwith, 142 Wis. 519, 30 L.R.A. (N.S.) 810, 135 Am. St. Rep. 1079, 124 N. W. 1030.

Cases like State ex rel. Marion County v. Quill, — Ind. App. —, 102 N. E. 106; Hampden County v. Morris, 207 Mass. 167, 93 N. E. 579, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 815; Passaic County v. Slater, — N. J. L. —, 88 Atl. 213; Re Beyer, 72 Misc. 443, 130 N. Y. Supp. 281; Fields v. Multnomah County, 64 Or. 117, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 322, 128 Pac. 1045, and Eldredge v. Salt Lake City, 37 Utah, 188, 106 Pac. 939, holding the contrary doctrine, must, so far as this question is concerned, be regarded as overruled by the principal case.

Prior to the enactment of the naturalization act of June 29, 1906, it was quite generally held that a clerk under a fixed salary was not entitled to retain as his own the fees received in naturalization cases by virtue of his office. Cowan v. New York, 3 Hun, 632; People ex rel. Whittemore v. Seabury, 23 How. Pr. 121; Eder v. Kreiter, 40 Ind. App. 542, 82 N. E. 552.

But in United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169, 30 L. ed. 627, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510, affirming 25 Fed. 375, which was an action on the official bond of the clerk of a district court for failure to account for fees charged by him in naturalization cases, it was held that such fees are not within U. S. Rev. Stat. § 833, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 642, requiring such clerks to account for all fees and emoluments of their offices of every name and nature, it appearing that for many years it had been the custom of the clerks of the United States for that district to collect the fees incident to naturalization proceedings, without including them in returns of fees and emoluments, which practice was known and approved by the judge and accounting officers. In the opinion of the circuit court it is stated: "It is for services rendered under these rules and as a special officer of the court, and not as clerk, that these fees have been permitted. They were not duties pertaining to the office of clerk. They could as well have been performed by any other person designated by the court for the purpose,—as, by the district attorney, or a commissioner of the circuit court, or an attorney, or any suitable person not an officer of the court."

Digitized by Google

ences as to the local enactments involved, which, it is thought, do not go to the merits, has been presented to the courts of several of the states, and the answers are in conflict. The cases in which it has been passed upon are the following:

Cal.—San Francisco v. Mulcrevy, 15 Cal. App. 11, 113 Pac. 339.

Ind.—State ex rel. Marion County v. Quill, — Ind. App. —, 102 N. E. 106.

Mass.—Hampden County v. Morris, 207 Mass. 167, 93 N. E. 579, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 815.

N. Y.—Re Beyer, 72 Misc. 443, 130 N. Y. Supp. 281.

Or.—Fields v. Multnomah County, 64 Or. 117, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 322, 128 Pac. 1045.

Utah.—Eldredge v. Salt Lake City, 37 Utah, 188, 106 Pac. 939.

Wash.—Franklin County v. Barnes, 68 Wash. 488, 123 Pac. 779.

Wis.—Barron County v. Beckwith, 142 Wis. 519, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 810, 135 Am. St. Rep. 1079, 124 N. W. 1030.

The Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, Oregon, and Utah courts hold that the clerk retains the fees to his own use; the decisions in California, Washington, and Wisconsin are that the clerk must account pursuant to the state statute.

The powers to regulate immigration and naturalization are vested in the political department of the government, and may be exercised by treaty, special act of Congress, or by general laws.

Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Van Dyne, Citizenship, 266.

When these powers are exercised in a general law, the law has an exclusive operation.

Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat. 259, 4 L. ed. 234; Matthew v. Rae, 3 Cranch, C. C. 699, Fed. Cas. No. 9,284; Minneapolis v. Reum, 6 C. C. A. 31, 12 U. S. App. 446, 56 Fed. 576; Levin v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 476, 128 Fed. 826; Re Ramsden, 13 How. Pr. 429; Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. 583; State ex rel. Newman v. Libby, 47 Wash. 481, 92 Pac. 350.

The clauses in state Constitutions, including the Constitution of California, that certain courts shall have the power of naturalization, is not an assertion of inherent state power, but a direction to the state courts to administer the Federal law.

State ex rel. Newman v. Libby, 47 Wash. 481, 92 Pac. 350.

Being vested exclusively in the political department of the government, Congress is independent of the Judicial Department in providing a uniform rule of naturalization; that is: the power vested by the Constitution in the Judicial Department need not be invoked. Nor does the providing a rule of naturalization require the intervention of any judicial tribunal or judicial officer. An act which should ordain that one who makes oath before any officer authorized to administer oaths that he forswears all foreign allegiance and will support the Constitution of the United States shall thereby become naturalized would be a uniform rule. The power to provide the rule being plenary, and the enactment supposed having the note of uniformity, such an act would be within the scope of the power.

Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Levin v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 476, 128 Fed. 826.

In naturalization matters, as in the regulation of immigration, Congress is free to provide or adopt such means of carrying out its power as it may deem appropriate to the accomplishment of the intent, scheme, and purposes of the contemplated enactment.

United States v. Dolla, 100 C. C. A. 521, 177 Fed. 101, 21 Ann. Cas. 665; Levin v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 476, 128 Fed. 826; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 10 L. ed. 1060; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat, 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 39 L. ed. 1082, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967.

Congress has conferred authority to hear and finally determine as to the fact of citizenship, and the facts upon which an asserted claim of citizenship depends, on executive officers.

Chin Bak Kan v. United States, 186 U. S. 193, 46 L. ed. 1121, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; United States v. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 48 L. ed. 917, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

The courts and clerks of courts on whom the naturalization jurisdiction is conferred, having been freely designated by Congress to serve the purposes of the Federal government, and having all their jurisdiction and authority in the premises from the act of Congress, are instrumentalities, or agencies, of the Federal government.

United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 27 L. ed. 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Levin v. United States, 63 C. C. A. 476, 128 Fed. 826; People v. Sweetman, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 358; State ex rel. Marion County v. Quill, — Ind. App. — 102 N. E. 106; Hampden County v. Morris, 207 Mass. 167, 93 N. E. 579, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 815; Fields v. Multnomah County, 64 Or. 117, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 322, 128

Digitized by Google

Pac. 1045; Eldredge v. Salt Lake City, 37 Utah, 188, 106 Pac. 939.

The states cannot exercise control over, nor interfere with, nor in any way affect to their disadvantage, the agencies or instruments of the Federal government, except in so far as Congress may see proper to permit.

Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 31, 23 L. ed. 198.

A statutory provision awarding compensation to persons acting under the authority of the statute and in furtherance of its purposes is always of the substance.

Dobbins v. Erie County, 16 Pet. 435, 10 L. ed. 1022.

Regarded with reference to the source of their authority the acts of clerks of courts cannot be "strictly official," for their authority comes from a source external to and independent of their office, and of the government which creates the office.

Eldredge v. Salt Lake City, 37 Utah, 188, 106 Pac. 939; State ex rel. Clyatt v. Hocker, 39 Fla. 477, 22 So. 721, 63 Am. St. Rep. 174, note, p. 181.

Regarded in their immediate nature the duties performed are not appurtenant to the office of clerk of court.

United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169, 30 L. ed. 627, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Hill v. United States, 40 Fed. 441; United States v. McMillan, 165 U. S. 504, 41 L. ed. 805, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395.

Mr. J. F. English argued the cause, and, with Mr. Percy V. Long, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The act of Congress, properly interpreted, does not require that the clerk keep fees for his own use. In the only four decisions where the question was considered, this theory is sustained.

Wash.—Franklin County v. Barnes, 68 Wash. 488, 123 Pac. 779.

Wis.—Barron County v. Beckwith, 142 Wis. 519, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 810, 135 Am. St. Rep. 1079, 124 N. W. 1030.

Cal.—San Francisco v. Mulcrevy, 15 Cal. App. 11, 113 Pac. 339.

N. Y.—Re Beyer, 72 Misc. 443, 130 N. Y. Supp. 281.

Courts will, if possible, construe the act as consistent with the San Francisco charter.

Franklin County v. Barnes, 68 Wash. 488, 123 Pac. 779; Leiws's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d. ed. 464–469; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 211, 36 Cyc. 1146.

Acts allowing fees for public officers are strictly construed.

United States v. Van Duzee, 185 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 909, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; 11 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 168.

The construction of the charter by the supreme court of California is conclusive, and the United States Supreme Court will not review that interpretation.

Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152, 6 L. ed. 289; 4 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 1066, 1067; 2 Lewis's Sutherland Stat. Constr. §§ 22, 314, p. 39.

The charter was construed by the California supreme court in this case, and in Re Dodge, 135 Cal. 512, 67 Pac. 973.

The clerk acts as an officer of the court, the court acting in a judicial capacity and as a state court.

Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, 23 L. ed. 833; United States v. Severino, 125 Fed. 949; Re Loney, 134 U. S. 372, 33 L. ed. 949, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 584; Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. 393, 7 L. ed. 897; Van Dyne Citizenship, pp. 9, 17–19; Re Bodek, 63 Fed. 814; Charles Green's Son v. Salas, 31 Fed. 106; Re Coleman, 15 Blatchf. 420, Fed. Cas. No. 2,980; Prentice v. Miller, 82 Cal. 575, 23 Pac. 189; Franklin County v. Barnes, 68 Wash. 488, 123 Pac. 779; Barron County v. Beckwith, 142 Wis. 519, 30 L.R.A.(N.S.) 810, 135 Am. St. Rep. 1079, 124 N. W. 1032; Rhea v. County Comrs. 12 Idaho, 455, 88 Pac. 89.

Congress cannot compel the state courts to exercise naturalization jurisdiction.

Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 140, 23 L. ed. 840; Hampden County v. Morris, 207 Mass. 167, 93 N. E. 579, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 815; Fields v. Multnomah County, 64 Or. 117, 44 L.R.A.(N.S.) 322, 128 Pac. 1047; 1 Willoughby, Constitution, 282; 2 Cyc. 111.

[670] Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action brought in the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco against plaintiffs in error, to recover from them the sum of $2,972, with interest from certain dates, received by plaintiff in error Mulcrevy in his official capacity as county clerk and ex officio clerk of the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco in certain naturalization proceedings. Judgment was rendered on the pleadings against plaintiffs in error. It was affirmed on appeal.

Mulcrevy was elected county clerk of the city and county of San Francisco at the November election, 1905, for the term of two years, commencing on January 8, 1906. He duly filed his official bond with plaintiff in error the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland, his surety, which was conditioned that he should faithfully perform all official duties which were then or thereafter might be imposed upon him by law, ordinances, or the charter of the city and county. His salary was fixed by the charter at the sum of $4,000, and it was provided as follows: "The salaries provided in this charter shall be in full compensation for all services rendered, and every officer shall pay all moneys coming into his hands as such officer, no matter from what source derived or received, into the treasury of the city and county of San Francisco within twenty-four hours after the receipt of the same."

Digitized by Google

By his election Mulcrevy became ex officio the clerk of the superior court. After he had entered upon the discharge of his duties, on the 29th of June, 1906, Congress passed an act entitled, "An Act to Establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, and to Provide for a Uniform Rule for the Naturalization of Aliens Throughout the United States." [34 Stat. at L. 596, chap. 3592, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 124.] Jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings was conferred by the act on the Federal [671] courts and certain state courts, and the duties of the clerks were set forth. Fees were prescribed, and it was provided that the clerks of the courts collecting them were authorized to retain one half thereof, the other half to be accounted for in their quarterly accounts which they were required to make to the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization. The amount retained by the clerk, however, it was provided should not exceed in any one fiscal year the sum of $3,000. If fees in excess of $6,000 be collected in any one year, the clerk might be allowed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor additional compensation for additional clerical assistance out of the moneys received by the United States.†

Under the provisions of the act as clerk of the superior court in naturalization proceedings, Mulcrevy collected $5,944, [672] and accounted for one half thereof, as required by the act. The other half he kept for himself, his contention being that it was intended for himself by the act of Congress as pay for his extra work and clerical assistance, the fees not having been received by him in his official capacity, but merely as an agent designated by the act of Congress to perform services in naturalization proceedings.

It appears from the opinion of the district court of appeal that the total salary list fixed and allowed to Mulcrevy's office amounts to $58,600. And it is provided by the charter that when an officer shall require additional deputies, clerks, or employees, the same may be allowed by supervisors if, upon investigation, the mayor determines the same to be necessary.

A question of jurisdiction is raised. From the judgment of the superior court the case was taken by appeal to the supreme court of the state, and properly taken, the latter court having jurisdiction, the amount involved being over $2,000. The supreme court, exercising the power given to it by the Constitution of the state, ordered the cause to be heard by the district court of appeal of the first appellate district of the state. The record was accordingly transmitted to the latter court, three printed copies, however, being retained in the supreme court. Upon the rendition of the judgment of the district court of appeal, affirming the judgment of the superior court, a petition was filed in the supreme court for transfer of the cause to it. The petition was denied as follows:

By the court: The petition to have the above-entitled cause heard and determined by this court after judgment in the district court of appeal for the first appellate district is denied.

Beatty, C. J.

A petition for writ of error was then presented to the chief justice of the supreme court which recited that that court was the highest court of the state in which †" Sec. 13. . . . The clerk of any court collecting such fees is hereby authorized to retain one half of the fees collected by him in such naturalization proceeding; the remaining one half of the naturalization fees in each case collected by such clecks, respectively, shall be accounted for in their quarterly accounts, which they are hereby required to render the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization . . .

"Provided, That the clerks of courts exercising jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings shall be permitted to retain one half of the fees in any fiscal year up to the sum of three thousand dollars, and that all fees received by such clerks in naturalization proceedings in excess of such amount shall be accounted for and paid over to said Bureau as in case of other fees to which the United States may be entitled under the provisions of this act. The clerks of the various courts exercising jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings shall pay all additional clerical force that may be required in performing the duties imposed by this act upon the clerks of courts from fees received by such clerks in naturalization proceedings. And in case the clerk of any court collects fees in excess of the sum of six thousand dollars in any one year, the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may allow to such clerk from the money which the United States shall receive additional compensation for the employment of additional clerical assistance, but for no other purpose, if, in the opinion of said Secretary, the business of such clerk warrants such allowance."

Digitized by Google

a [673] decision of the cause could be had. The writ was allowed by the chief justice. A question was raised at the time as to which court the writ should run, and it seemed to be the opinion of the chief justice, as it was of counsel, that by the petition for transfer of the cause from the district court of appeal to the supreme court, the order of the latter court made the judgment final in that court. Though both counsel concur in this view, its correctness may be doubted. However, as this writ of error was allowed before the October term, 1912, of this court, the case is brought within Norfolk & S. Turnp. Co. v. Virginia, 225 U. S. 264, 56 L. ed. 1082, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828. In that case, under like circumstances, we did not dismiss the writ on our own motion, but entertained jurisdiction.

On the merits the case presents no difficulty. It involves only the construction of the act of Congress already referred to above. We accept the state court's construction of the charter of the city and county of San Francisco. Indeed, its clearness leaves no room for construction. The salary it provides is declared to be "in full compensation for all services rendered." And it is provided that "every officer shall pay all moneys coming into his hands as such officer, no matter from what source derived or received, into the treasury of the city and county." The provisions are complete and comprehensive, and express Mulcrevy's contract with the city, the performance of which his office imposed upon him; and, of course, the fees received by him in naturalization proceedings, because he was clerk of the superior court, were in compensation for official acts, not personal acts.

But it is contended by plaintiffs in error that the fees having been received officially is not of importance, that nevertheless he acted as the representative of the United States, in execution of the policies of the United States, and being by the act of Congress invested with his powers, he is entitled for himself to the compensation prescribed [674] by the act for their execution without any liability to account for them to the city. The last proposition, however, does not follow from the others, and the others are but confusing. If it be granted that he was made an agent of the national government, his relations to the city were not thereby changed. He was still its officer, receiving fees because he was,—not earning them otherwise or receiving them otherwise, but under compact with the city to pay them into the city treasury within twenty-four hours after their receipt.

Under the contention of plaintiffs in error a rather curious situation is presented. Mulcrevy was elected to an office constituted by the municipality under the authority of the state. He was given a fixed salary of $4,000 with the express limitation that it should be his complete compensation. He agreed that all other moneys received by him officially should be paid into the treasury of the city. He was given office accommodations, clerks to assist him, and yet contends that notwithstanding such equipment and assistance, notwithstanding his compact, he may retain part of the revenues of his office as fees for his own personal use. We cannot yield to the contention. Nor do we think the act of Congress compels it. The act does not purport to deal with the relations of a state officer with the state. To so construe it might raise serious questions of power, and such questions are always to be avoided. We do not have to go to such lengths. The act is entirely satisfied without putting the officers of a state in antagonism to the laws of the state,—the laws which give them their official status. It is easily construed and its purpose entirely accomplished by requiring an accounting of one half of the fees to the United States, leaving the other half to whatever disposition may be provided by the state law. Counsel cite some state decisions which have construed the act of Congress as giving a special agency to the clerks of the state courts, and as receiving [675] their powers and rights from the national enactment. The reports of the Department of Commerce and Labor are quoted from, which, it is contended, exhibit by their statistics and recommendations the necessity of national control. State decisions expressing a contrary view are frankly cited. This contrariety of opinion we need not further exhibit by a review of the cases. We have expressed our construction of the act, and it is entirely consonant with the purpose of the act and national control over naturalization.

Judgment affirmed.

MARY GENEVIEVE PENNELL, Administratrix of the Estate of Jay Allen Pennell, Deceased, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PHILADELPHIA & READING RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 675-680.)

Safety appliances — automatic coupler between engine and tender.

An automatic coupler between engine and

NOTE.—What are "cars" within the meaning of safety appliance acts.

A steam-shovel car is a "car" within the meaning of the act of Congress of March tender is not required by the safety appliance act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), making it unlawful for any railway carrier engaged in interstate commerce to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars, nor by the provisions of the amendatory act of March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1314), making the earlier act applicable to "all cases" and to "all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars," etc., since these provisions do not destroy the integrity of the locomotive and tender, and are entirely satisfied if there is an automatic coupler at the rear end of the tender.

Digitized by Google

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, 36-40, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 469.]

Argued December 3, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in favor of defendant in an action for death by wrongful act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 77, 203 Fed. 681.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George Demming argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In construing these so-called "safety appliance acts," this court has frequently held that these acts are mandatory, and that the duty to have an automatic coupling is an absolute duty, and can be evaded in no way, shape, or form.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, 21 Am. Neg. Rep. 464; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 220 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 582, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Delk v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 580, 55 L. ed. 590, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617.

2, 1893, § 2, requiring any car used in moving interstate traffic to be equipped with an automatic coupler. Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407, reversing 207 Pa. 198, 56 Atl. 417, 15 Am. Neg. Rep. 419.

But a locomotive crane or derrick built upon car trucks, and equipped with a boiler and engine furnishing the power to operate the crane and to move the machine about upon railroad tracks, which is being operated by a railway company for the purpose of unloading heavy materials to be used in the construction of docks, and is not employed by the railway company in its business as a common carrier in moving state traffic, is not, while being so operated, a locomotive, car, tender, or similar vehicle used in moving state traffic," required by Ohio Code, §§ 8950, and 8952, to be equipped with an automatic coupler, and provided with drawbars of standard height, notwithstanding it is used in shifting cars loaded with materials to be used in the construction of such docks, and deposited by the railway company on the temporary tracks built thereon. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Benson, 85 Ohio St. 215, 41 L.R.A. (N.S.) 49, 97 N. E. 417, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 945. The court said: "In this case the evidence shows conclusively that this machine is not one that comes within the ordinary equipment of railroads, and is not one designed for railroad use, but, on the contrary, that it is an instrumentality provided and used by the company, not on the line of its road, or upon any part of its system, not in any connection whatever with its railroad business, or its duties as a common carrier, but solely and exclusively for the construction of its dock not then a part of the railway system, and not then being used for any railroad purpose whatever. The use for which this machine was constructed and the one that gives character to it, was that of a crane or derrick used for handling heavy materials in construction work, and there can be no reasonable contention that while it was used as a crane or derrick that it would come within either the language or the meaning of these sections; nor can it reasonably be contended that the fact that a railway company used this machine for construction work—work entirely separate and apart from its business as a common carrier, and entirely separate and apart from its railway system—would bring this machine within the purview of these sections. On the other hand, it is equally apparent that the railway company might have made such use of this machine that both of these sections would apply."

A locomotive (i. e., engine and tender considered as an entirety, PENNELL v. PHILADELPHIA & R. R. Co.) is a "car" which must, under the safety appliance act of March 2, 1893, § 2, be equipped with an automatic coupler which will both couple and uncouple without the necessity of men going between locomotive and car. Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412, reversing 54 C. C. A. 508, 117 Fed. 462, 12 Am. Neg. Rep. 398.

The tender of a switch engine (here again apparently regarding engine and tender as a unit) is also held in Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Winkler, 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, 56 Atl. 112, affirming 4 Penn. (Del.) 80, 53 Atl. 90, to be a car within the meaning of the automatic coupler requirement of the Federal safety appliance act.

Digitized by Google

To have held the defendant railroad company guilty of negligence upon the evidence in this case would have been the reasonable construction of the statute, and one in line with the object aimed at by Congress.

United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

A tender is a car, distinct in itself, the same as any other car in a train.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Winkler, 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, 56 Atl. 112; Fleming v. Southern R. Co. 131 N. C. 476, 42 S. E. 905; East St. Louis Connecting R. Co. v. O'Hara, 150 Ill. 580, 37 N. E. 917, 11 Am. Neg. Cas. 416; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Crocker, 95 Ala. 412, 11 So. 262; Thomas v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 38 Ga. 222; New York v. Third Ave. R. Co. 117 N. Y. 404, 646, 22 N. E. 755; Benson v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 75 Minn. 163, 74 Am. St. Rep. 444, 77 N. W. 798, 5 Am. Neg. Rep. 182.

There is no perplexity as to the definition of the word "car" used in the safety appliance statutes, and it has but one signification.

Standard Dict.; Chamber's 20th Century; Century Dict.; Murray's New English Dict.; Webster's New Int. Dict.

Mr. William Clarke Mason argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles Heebner, filed a brief for defendant in error:

A tender and engine are to be considered as one for the purposes of operation.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412; Blanchard v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 139 Mich. 694, 103 N. W. 170, 18 Am. Neg. Rep. 142.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action for $50,000 damages brought by plaintiff in error, herein called plaintiff, against defendant in error, the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, herein called defendant, in the district court of the United States, eastern district of Pennsylvania. It was tried to a jury which, under the direction of the court, rendered a verdict for defendant. Judgment was duly entered upon the verdict and it was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals.

Defendant is a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce. The intestate of plaintiff was employed by it in the capacity of fireman on one of its locomotives, and, it is alleged, came to his death by the failure of defendant to comply with the requirements of the safety appliance acts of

---

And engine and tender are said to be embraced within the definition "car" as used in the provision of the Federal safety appliance act respecting grab irons and hand holds. United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (U. S. D. C. N. D. W. Va.) reported in Thornton, Federal Employers Liability, 2d ed. 608.

But "locomotive" and "car" are said in Wabash R. Co. v. United States, 97 C. C. A. 284, 172 Fed. 864, not to be synonymous terms in every respect, the court holding that a locomotive need not have an automatic coupler at both ends.

See, however, Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. v. United States, 116 C. C. A. 444, 196 Fed. 882, where the use of a locomotive in switching interstate freight cars without a drawbar of standard height on the front end of such engine was held to violate the requirement of the safety appliance act of March 2, 1893, that "freight cars" shall have drawbars of standard height, although after an unsuccessful attempt to use the front drawbar for the transfer of cars, the locomotive was sent to the roundhouse and reversed, and thereafter the other end only was used.

Locomotives are not "cars" within the meaning of the Iowa statute requiring automatic couplers. Bryce v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 119 Iowa, 274, 93 N. W. 275.

A locomotive tender is not a "car" within the meaning of the Massachusetts act forbidding any car to be used or hauled which is not equipped with automatic couplers. Larabee v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 182 Mass. 348, 66 N. E. 1032.

Locomotive tenders are not "freight cars" within the meaning of the Michigan statute requiring automatic couplings on such cars. Blanchard v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 139 Mich. 694, 103 N. W. 170, 18 Am. Neg. Rep. 142.

But the caboose attached to a freight train comes within the meaning of the words "freight cars" in the provision of the Federal safety appliance act requiring a standard height of drawbars. Chicago, M. & P. S. R. Co. v. United States, supra.

And a state statute requiring brakes to be placed upon freight cars other than four-wheeled cars applies to a gondola car used for hauling lumber, which has eight wheels. Mew v. Charleston & S. R. Co. 55 S. C. 90, 32 S. E. 828.

A state statute requiring cars to be equipped with automatic couplers does not apply to electric cars nor to cars used in railway construction. Cleveland & E. R. Co. v. Somers, 24 Ohio C. C. 67.

The Federal act applies to empty as well as loaded cars (Luken v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 248 Ill. 377, 140 Am. St. Rep. 220, 94 N. E. 175, 21 Ann. Cas. 82), and to passenger as well as freight cars (Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 249, 177 Fed. 623; United States v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 184 Fed. 99).

Generally as to duty and liability under Federal and state railway safety appliance acts—see notes in 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 473, and 41 L.R.A.(N.S.) 49.

Digitized by Google

Congress and the rules and directions of the Interstate Commerce Commission formulated and proclaimed thereunder, in that defendant failed to affix between the locomotive and its tender an automatic coupling device. The action is prosecuted under the act of April 22, 1908 [35 Stat. at L. 66, chap. 149], as amended April 5, 1910 [36 Stat. at L. 291, chap. 143, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1324], relating to the liability of common carriers by railroad engaged in interstate commerce to their employees while so engaged.

The train was composed of forty-four cars, some loaded and some empty, and the engine, tender, and caboose. The coupling between the cars was automatic, that between the engine and the tender was a drawbar and pin. The pin broke in consequence of the air hose breaking or parting between the first and second cars from the caboose, thereby setting the brakes on the whole train. By the [677] breaking of the coupling between the tender and the engine, Pennell, plaintiff's intestate, was thrown from the train upon the track and killed on December 31, 1911. The train at the time of the accident was going about 15 miles an hour.

The act of Congress provides: "It shall be unlawful for any such common carrier [railroad engaged in interstate commerce] to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic, not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars." [27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, § 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174.]

The first contention of plaintiff is that the primary object of the act is, quoting from its title, "to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads;" and that therefore the language of the act "should be so applied and construed in matters relating to the protection of railroad workmen as to specific railroad accidents." In other words, the purpose of the act, it is contended, is to protect all employees, of whatever class, and the mere absence of an automatic coupler, if accident and injury result to an employee, is enough for liability. But plaintiff does not quote all of the title. The complete title is, "An Act to Promote the Safety of Employees and Travelers upon Railroads by Compelling Common Carriers Engaged in Interstate Commerce to Equip Their Cars with Automatic Couplers and Continuous Brakes, and Their Locomotives with Driving-Wheel Brakes, and for Other Purposes." The provisions of the act correspond to the purpose declared in the title, and may be applied distributively to the protection of employee or traveler, or to employees, according to their employment.

But even if the act has the broad purpose asserted, which we need not decide, we are brought to the question, Is the tender of a locomotive a car within the meaning of the statute?

[678] Plaintiff asserts the affirmative of the question and cites Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158, 17 Am. Neg. Rep. 412, and a number of state decisions. The case does not so decide. It does decide that the locomotive is a car within the meaning of the act. No distinction was made between it and the tender; the latter was deemed integral with the locomotive. In other words, tender and engine were considered as constituting the locomotive. Necessarily a locomotive thus constituted was decided to be a "car" within the meaning of the act, and necessarily had to be coupled with the cars, which constituted the train. And in this necessity the dangers to employees would occur which the act was intended to prevent. Any other construction would have left the act denuded of some of its value. In other words, there would have been only a partial enforcement of its protection in instances where protection was oftenest needed. To omit the locomotive, composed of engine and tender—and it was considered as so composed in the cited case—was to omit part of a train which was within all the mischiefs of the act, and therefore covered by its remedies. No such conditions exist in the present case. Engine and tender are a single thing; separable, it may be, but never separated in their ordinary and essential use. The connection between them, that is, between the engine and tender, it was testified, was in the nature of a permanent coupling, and it was also testified that there was practically no opening between the engine and tender, and that attached to the engine was a drawbar which fitted in the yoke of the tender, and the pin was dropped down to connect drawbar and yoke. The necessary deduction from this is that no dangerous position was assumed by an employee in coupling the engine and tender for the reason that the pin was dropped through the bar from the tank of the tender. The case at bar, therefore, is not brought either within the mischief or the remedy of the act.

[679] The evidence established that it is not the custom of railroads to use an automatic coupler between the engine and tender. Some roads, however, use two additional or supplemental drawbars, called radial bars, one on each side of the main bar, while on other roads it is almost the standard practice, instead of the supplemental bars, to use chains secured to the back heads of the locomotive and hooked to the tender on each side of the center. The record does not disclose whether there were either such bars or chains connecting the engine and tender. But even if their absence may be inferred, it is not relied on as a ground of negligence.

Digitized by Google

It is further contended by plaintiff that the necessity of an automatic coupler between engine and tender is determined by the amendment of the act of 1893, enacted in 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat Supp. 1911, p. 1314). It may be necessary, it is said, under the statute of 1893, to "bring the word 'tender' within the definition of the word 'car,'" but that this "is totally unnecessary when we come to consider and apply the subsequent statutes, because here we find the word 'tender' specifically used, and used, too, in evident contradistinction to the words 'locomotives' and 'cars.'" The amendment repeats the title of the prior acts, provides that their provisions "shall apply in all cases, whether or not the couplers brought together are of the same kind, make, or type," and that their provisions and requirements, including automatic couplers, "shall be held to apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and smaller vehicles on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce." But this act does not destroy the integrity of the locomotive and tender. It is entirely satisfied by requiring the automatic coupler between the tender and the cars constituting the train, that is, to the rear end of the tender. And this requirement fulfils the purpose of the statute, which, we have seen, does not regard the [680] strength of the connections between the cars, even if it may be supposed that an automatic coupler is the stronger, but does regard safety in making and unmaking the connections. This being kept in mind, the construction of the statute is not difficult. And the construction of the statute is the main concern. If it is not mandatory, as we think it is not, of an automatic coupler between the engine and the tender, the contentions of plaintiff are without foundation. We need not refer to them with further detail except to say that the custom of the railroads could not, of course, justify a violation of the statute, but that custom, having the acquiescence of the Interstate Commerce Commission, is persuasive of the meaning of the statute.

Under the various safety appliance acts the Commission is charged with the duty of prosecuting violations of them which come to its knowledge, and by the sundry civil appropriation act of June 28, 1902 [32 Stat. at L. 419, chap. 1301], the Commission was authorized to employ inspectors to execute and enforce the requirements of the acts. It is of special significance, therefore, that in its order under the act of April 14, 1910 [36 Stat. at L. 298, chap. 160, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1327], which was supplemental of the other acts, designating the number, dimensions, location, and manner of application of certain appliances, it provided as follows: "Couplers: Locomotives shall be equipped with automatic couplers at rear of tender and front of locomotive." That is, couplers were required where danger might be incurred by the employees.

The state decisions cited by plaintiff to sustain her definition of a car, we do not think it is necessary to review. They are all cited in Johnson v. Southern P. Co. supra. They applied the principle which we have applied, and construed the statutes passed on according to the objects which the statutes were intended to secure.

Judgment affirmed.

---

[681] GEORGE E. TINKER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
MIDLAND VALLEY MERCANTILE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 681-683.)

Evidence — burden of proof — validity of consideration for Indian note.

A licensed trader upon the Osage Indian reservation, suing upon a note given to him by an Indian, to which a defense is set up based upon the act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 325, chap. 3504), making it unlawful for such a trader to give credit to any individual Indian to an amount greater than 75 per cent of the next quarterly annuity to which such Indian will be entitled, is charged with the burden of proving that the note represented lawful credits.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 13.]

Submitted October 30, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court for Pawnee County in that state in favor of plaintiff in an action on an Indian note. Reversed.

See same case below, 25 Okla. 160, 105 Pac. 333.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Charles H. Merillat submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The case is controlled by the principle laid down in United States v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 191 U. S. 85, 48 L. ed. 107, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. ed. 210; Northern P. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 366, 40 L. ed. 1002, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

The case was analogous to one where the defendant not being a banking corporation, the acceptance of a bill was not within the apparent authority with which the agent was invested, in which case it is for the payee to prove that the acceptance was authorized by the charter, by-laws or resolutions of the corporation.

Mather v. Union Loan & T. Co. 26 N. Y. S. R. 58, 7 N. Y. Supp. 213; Olcott v. Tioga R. Co. 27 N. Y. 546, 84 Am. Dec. 298.

The fact that the decision of the state courts was adverse to the plaintiff in error on the effect of the evidence does not prevent the rights of the plaintiff in error under the applicable statutes and the evidence adduced being fully considered in this court on the merits.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 11 L. ed. 1038.

No appearance for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action on a promissory note for $922.50, dated September 1 1906, against an Osage Indian residing on [682] the Osage Reservation. By the Indian appropriation act of June 21, 1906, chap. 3504, 34 Stat. at L. 325, 366, it was made "unlawful hereafter for the traders upon the Osage Indian Reservation to give credit to any individual Indian, head of a family, to an amount greater than seventy-five per centum of the next quarterly annuity to which such Indian will be entitled." This amended the previous act of March 3, 1901, chap. 832, 31 Stat. at L. 1058, 1065, by which the limit was 60 per centum. The defendant demurred, and the demurrer having been overruled, answered that the note was given for a debt in excess of 75 per cent of the next quarterly annuity due to him after the credit was extended, and that the note exceeded that amount. It appeared in evidence that the plaintiff, the defendant in error, was a licensed trader with the Indians, and the defendant testified that he received as his quarterly payment $46 for each of the seven members of his family, which would be $322,—in any event, much less than $922.50. It was not shown when the credits were given. The plaintiff demurred to the evidence, and the demurrer was sustained by both courts below. 25 Okla. 160, 105 Pac. 333.

The supreme court of the state put its decision on the burden of proof, following the analogy of illegal consideration. We hardly need consider whether proof that the note was so largely in excess of the percentage then allowable, especially when coupled with the improbability that the defendant ever had received in the past an annuity so much larger as to warrant such a credit, did not constitute at least a prima facie case. The court is of opinion that, in view of the policy of the statute, the relative position of the parties, and the protection necessarily extended to Indians, the burden was on the plaintiff not only to bring his claim within the permission of the statute in fact, as he was warned by its letter that he must, but also to prove that he had done so, in case of dispute. He occupied [683] the position of advantage, and that, rather than formal logic, determines the burden of proof. It may be that it lay on the defendant to plead the defense. That is a question of convenience. Burnet v. Desmornes y Alvarez, 226 U. S. 145, 147, 57 L. ed. 159, 160, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63. But the order of pleading does not always determine the burden of proof. Generally it is not considered necessary for the payee of a promissory note to allege a consideration in declaring upon it, but if there is conflicting evidence, he has the burden of proof. Delano v. Bartlett, 6 Cush. 364; Burnham v. Allen, 1 Gray, 496.

Judgment reversed.

WILLIAM P. TRIMBLE and Cannie F. Trimble, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF SEATTLE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 683-690.)

Error to state court — impairment of contract obligations — construction of lease from state.

1. A ruling of the highest court of a state that, under the policy of the state law, the common-law doctrine of an implied covenant in a lease that the lessor shall pay the taxes is inapplicable to leases of tide lands, will not be disturbed by the Federal Supreme Court in determining on writ of

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On writs of error to state courts in cases presenting questions of impairment of con-

Digitized by Google

error to the state court whether the contract obligations of the state toward its lessees are unconstitutionally impaired by the subsequent enactment of statutes authorizing the assessment of such leaseholds for local improvements specially benefiting them, and the inclusion of them within local improvement districts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4994, 4995; Courts, VII. c, 8, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws —local assessments.

2. Lessees of state tide lands are not denied the equal protection of the laws, contrary to U. S. Const., 14th Amend., by state statutes authorizing the assessment of such leaseholds for local improvements specially benefiting them, and the inclusion of them within local improvement districts.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 108.]

Argued and submitted December 9, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of King County, in that State, confirming an assessment of certain leasehold interests in tide lands. Affirmed.

See same case below, 64 Wash. 102, 116 Pac. 647.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. C. W. Corliss submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. George McKay was on the brief:

The lands of the state, in the absence of the state's consent, are not subject to special assessment for local improvements.

St. Louis v. Brown, 155 Mo. 545, 56 S. W. 298; State v. Hartford, 50 Conn. 89, 47 Am. Rep. 622.

At the time the leases involved in this action were made no consent had been given by the state to the levying of special assessments on its land; the making of the leases did not subject the land to special assessment.

Daugherty v. Thompson, 71 Tex. 192, 9 S. W. 99; Davis v. Burnett, 77 Tex. 3, 13 S. W. 613.

In the absence of a covenant or condition to the contrary, it is an implied covenant in every lease that the lessor, not the lessee, shall pay all taxes and assessments levied on the leased land during the term.

Wood, Land. & T. pp. 683, 684, § 417; Taylor, Land. & T. 7th ed. chap. 8, p. 289, ¶ 341, § 6; 18 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law, 2d ed. 650–652.

The state, as a lessor, is bound by the general rule, the same as a private person, that, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the landlord is bound by an implied covenant to discharge all assessments levied on the land during the term.

Western & A. R. Co. v. State, — Ga. —, 14 L.R.A. 455.

Where the state contracts, it is bound by the same rules of law as are applied to private persons.

Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 445, 34 L. ed. 760, 763; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5, 26 L. ed. 302; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Daggett v. Bonewitz, 107 Ind. 279, 7 N. E. 900; Lessieur v. Price, 12 How. 59, 13 L. ed. 893; Gray v. State, 72 Ind. 567; Bond Debt Cases, 12 S. C. 200; United States v. Bank of Metropolis, 15 Pet. 392, 10 L. ed. 779; Floyd Acceptances (Pierce v. United States) 7 Wall. 666, 19 L. ed. 169.

The rule that the state as lessor is bound by the same obligations as a private lessor is not qualified or overthrown by the well-settled rule that a legislative grant is construed most strongly in favor of the state, and against the grantee.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 437, 28 L. ed. 329, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 380, 17 L. ed. 153; Missionary Soc. v. Dalles, 107 U. S. 343, 27 L. ed. 547, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Hancock v. McKinney, 7 Tex. 445; Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Litchfield, 23 How. 88, 16 L. ed. 509.

In Coast-Line R. Co. v. Savannah, 30 Fed. 646, the city had granted a street railroad franchise requiring the grantor to pave between the rails; the agreement to pave between the rails was held to imply an agreement that the grantee should not be required to pave elsewhere, and an attempt to compel it to do other paving or pay for it was in violation of this implied agreement.

As a matter of law, special assessments are against the land.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Phillips, 111 Iowa, 377, 82 N. W. 787; Macon v. Patty, 57 Miss. 386, 34 Am. Rep. 451.

In New England Mortg. Secur. Co. v. Vader, 12 Sawy. 74, 28 Fed. 274, the court held that a contract by a mortgagor to pay the taxes on the mortgaged premises, and if he did not the mortgagee might pay the tract obligations—see note to Osborne v. Clark, 51 L. ed. U. S. 619.

---

As to the validity of class legislation, generally, see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621, and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection, generally, see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

Digitized by Google

same and add the amount to his mortgage, would be impaired by a subsequent statute apportioning the tax between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, and that the statute would be invalid for that reason.

The assessments take plaintiff's property without due process of law.

Coast Land Co. v. Seattle, 52 Wash. 383, 100 Pac. 856.

Mr. Howard A. Hanson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William B. Allison and James E. Bradford, filed a brief for defendant in error:

No Federal question is involved.

Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Rabel v. Seattle, 44 Wash. 482, 87 Pac. 520; Trimble v. Seattle, 64 Wash. 102, 116 Pac. 647; Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458; Israel v. Arthur, 152 U. S. 355, 38 L. ed. 474, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Wells v. Goodnow (Wells v. Crane) 150 U. S. 84, 37 L. ed. 1007, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578, 23 L. ed. 390; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 42, note; Allen v. Southern P. R. Co. 173 U. S. 479, 43 L. ed. 775, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation (Louisiana ex rel. Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation) 98 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 114; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904; Marsh v. Nichols, S. & Co. 140 U. S. 344, 35 L. ed. 413, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Yesler v. Washington Harbor Line, 146 U. S. 646, 36 L. ed. 1119, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. 569, 12 L. ed. 1201; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

If a Federal question is involved, it has not been properly raised in the lower courts.

Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 15 L. ed. 506; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Hoyt v. Shelden (Hoyt v. Thompson) 1 Black, 518, 17 L. ed. 65; Farney v. Towle, 1 Black, 359, 17 L. ed. 216; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Messenger v. Mason, 10 Wall. 507, 19 L. ed. 1028.

The leases in question are subject to taxation and assessment.

New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 Ann. Cas. 381; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665, 29 L. ed. 770, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Wells v. Savannah, 181 U. S. 531, 45 L. ed. 986, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 47 L. ed. 641, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. ed. 595; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 279, 36 L. ed. 972, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Ford v. Delta & P. Land Co. 164 U. S. 662, 41 L. ed. 590, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 549, 9 L. ed. 773, 824; Moeller v. Gormley, 44 Wash. 465, 87 Pac. 507; Rabel v. Seattle, 44 Wash. 483, 87 Pac. 520; Coast Land Co. v. Seattle, 52 Wash. 380, 100 Pac. 856.

The state is under no obligation to pay taxes or assessments imposed upon the leaseholds under consideration.

Moeller v. Gormley, 44 Wash. 465, 87 Pac. 507; Rabel v. Seattle, 44 Wash. 482, 87 Pac. 520; Coast Land Co. v. Seattle, 52 Wash. 380, 100 Pac. 856; Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 47 L. ed. 641, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386.

Such leases are state grants.

20 Cyc. 1358; Downs v. United States, 51 C. C. A. 100, 113 Fed. 147; Estes Park Toll Road Co. v. Edwards, 3 Colo. App. 74, 32 Pac. 549; Moeller v. Gormley, 44 Wash. 469, 87 Pac. 507; Reilley v. Anderson, 33 Wash. 58, 73 Pac. 799; Chicago Attachment Co. v. Davis Sewing Mach. Co. 142 Ill. 171, 15 L.R.A. 754, 31 N. E. 438; Sanford v. Johnson, 24 Minn. 172; McKee v. Howe, 17 Colo. 538, 31 Pac. 115.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an attempt to reverse a judgment confirming an assessment on certain leaseholds of tide lands. The leases were executed by the state in 1899. Subsequent statutes of 1905 and 1907, respectively, authorized the assessment of such leaseholds for local improvements specially benefiting them, and the inclusion of them within local improvement districts by cities of the first class. The city of Seattle made a plank roadway, created an improvement district, levied an assessment which failed (Coast Land Co. v. Seattle, 52 Wash. 380, 100 Pac. 856), and then in due form levied the reassessment that is in question here. The plaintiffs in error argue that the leases contained an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment, and that the subsequent laws that authorized the assessment impair their constitutional rights. Art. 1, § 10, 14th Amend. § 1. The supreme court of Washington, admitting the general rule as to leases, held that, so far as concerns taxation, it did not apply to leases made by the state. 64 Wash. 102, 116 Pac. 647.

Digitized by Google

The concession of the court was that in private contracts, "in the absence of a covenant or condition to the contrary, it is an implied covenant in every lease that the lessor shall pay all taxes and assessments levied on the leased land during the term." Stated in this form, the rule appears to be a rule of policy to which special considerations may set a limit. But it might be suggested that if the state should expressly covenant against such [688] assessments, it could not impair the obligation of its contract by a subsequent law. The words used in these leases are "lease, demise, and let;" and from Spencer's Case, 5 Coke, 16*a*, 17*a*, 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 52, 15 Eng. Rul. Cas. 233, down to the present day, these words have been said to imply a covenant. 1 Wms. Saund. 322, note 2; Mostyn v. West Mostyn Coal & I. Co. [illegible] R. 1 C. P. Div. 145, 152, 45 L. J. C. P. N. S. 401, 34 L. T. N. S. 324, 24 Week. Rep. 401; Mershon v. Williams, 63 N. J. L. 398, 406, 44 Atl. 211. Words express whatever meaning convention has attached to them; and so it may be argued that the state has covenanted against this tax in express terms.

Nevertheless it is obvious that the supposed meaning was not reached by simple interpretation. There is no suggestion of warranty in dedi or demisi by any usage of speech alone. The warranty was what Lord Coke called a warranty in law (2 Co. Litt. 384*a*),—an institution, not depending upon an expression of intent, not arising because the words mean warrant, but imposed from without by the law. In Butler's note to this page the lessor's obligation is put as reciprocal to the tenant's obligation to pay rent (compare 5 Coke, 17*a*), just as the warranty in dedi in some cases was a consequence of tenure. One may wonder whether in fact the warranty incident to a sale in early law before the machinery of implied contracts was thought of (Glanv. VII., chap. 2; X., chap. 15; Lex. Sal. chap. 47; 1 Löning, Vertragsbruch, 103; 2 Co. Inst. 274, 275) was not given a scholastic turn, extended, limited, and embodied in sacremental words,—whether Glanville's donatores, grantors, did not suggest the special effect of dedi in the Statute de Bigamis, as interpreted by Lord Coke. (The statute itself says that the feoffor is held ratione doni proprii. 4 Edw. I., chap. 6.) But whatever may be the history, it is plain, as we have said, that the rule is not the result of interpretation, but of doctrine; and hence it is that very commonly the rule is stated as expressing the general operation of a lease, and not as depending upon the use of a particular word. 64 Wash. 102, 104, 116 Pac. 647; J. W. Perry [689] Co. v. Norfolk, 220 U. S. 472, 477, 55 L. ed. 548, 550, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Duncklee v. Webber, 151 Mass. 408, 411, 24 N. E. 1082; and cases cited in 24 Cyc. 1057; 18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 650. It has come back to what it started as being,—a construction of the law; and since, notwithstanding its age, the special effect of demisi has not entered into speech so far as to reach popular understanding, the rule still may be construed as extending no further than reason dictates. Indeed, warranties in law always have been dealt with on this principle. See e. g., Brett v. Cumberland, Cro. Jac. 521, 523. Therefore we may consider the question before us on the footing upon which it was discussed by the supreme court of the state.

The question is, then, whether our duty requires us to overthrow a decision that the policy of the state law excludes a constructive obligation to indemnify against the exercise of the sovereign power of taxation from leases by the state. Put in this form, it is not hard to answer. When the law creates an obligation outside of the expressed intent of the parties, it must consider all the circumstances, and the effect with reference to them. In ordinary cases the whole property is taxed, and which party shall bear the burden is not a matter of public concern. But when the state makes the lease, the supposed obligation would be an obligation not to tax,—a restriction of public import not lightly to be imposed. Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 561, 7 L. ed. 939, 955; Wells v. Savannah, 181 U. S. 531, 539, 540, 45 L. ed. 986, 991, 992, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; St. Louis v. United R. Co. 210 U. S. 266, 273, 274, 52 L. ed. 1054, 1057, 1058, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630. J. W. Perry Co. v. Norfolk, 220 U. S. 472, 480, 55 L. ed. 548, 551, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465. It is urged that to deny the state's obligation discriminates unconstitutionally against this class of lessees, since all others are free from the burden. But that is not true. Whether landlord or tenant shall pay a tax is a matter of private arrangement, and the practice one way or the other has no bearing on the matter. The argument from inequality really works the other way. If these leaseholds are not [690] taxable, they are a favored class of property; for ordinarily leaseholds are taxed even if they are lumped and included in the value of the fee. When an interest in land, whether freehold or for years, is severed from the public domain and put into private hands, the natural implication is that it goes there with the ordinary incidents of private property, and therefore is subject to being taxed. See New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 38, 50 L. ed. 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 Ann. Cas. 381.

Digitized by Google

The plaintiffs in error think that thus far there has been a failure to understand their contention that these assessments are against the land, and therefore are met by the supposed contract of the state, that the lessees should have the land free of all charges. The court below appears to us to have decided in direct response to that argument that the contract of the state did not go so far, and we are of opinion that we ought not to pronounce the decision wrong. There was some subsidiary discussion of the meaning and operation of the statutes, but upon those matters we do not go behind the judgment of the supreme court of the state.

Judgment affirmed.

PIZA HERMANOS S. en C., Appt.,
v.
RICARDO A. GANDIA CALDENTEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 690–692.)

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings below.

1. The Federal Supreme Court will not go behind the well-warranted concurrent findings of fact by the two lower courts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4931–4959, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — judgment — affirmance without prejudice.

2. An affirmance of a decree in a suit for an accounting, upon suggestion that such decree charges some items twice, will be without prejudice to the reopening of the account for the purpose of correcting errors of calculation if permitted upon application to the court below.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 134.]

Submitted December 15, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of San Juan, in favor of plaintiff in a suit for an accounting. Affirmed without prejudice to reopening the account for the correction of errors of calculation.

See same case below, 17 P. R. R. 780.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frederic R. Coudert and Paul Fuller submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. Frederic R. Coudert and Charles B. Samuels also filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Charles F. Carusi submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. A. Sarmiento was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit by the appellee to recover the sum alleged by him to be due upon a correct account between the defendants and himself. The facts as found are that the appellee was employed by the defendants, copartners, at a monthly salary and 10 per cent of the net profits, to be credited in his private account; that after about seven years and a half he left the firm on March 11, 1910; that the points of difference as to accounting concern the valuation of an estate bought by the firm and of some unharvested and unsold crops. The firm credited the estate at cost, $20,584.67, but the courts below found that it was worth $80,000, charged the difference, $59,415.33, as profit, and credited the appellee with $5,941.53. They likewise found that the profit on the crops was much greater than the appellee's estimate, and therefore allowed him the $2,000 claimed in his complaint.

It may be that we should adopt a different rule from that followed by the courts below if the question came here as a pure question of law. But it appears that the opinion of both courts that they found the appellants to have admitted the propriety of charging an increase in [692] the value of the estate as a profit, so that the question was narrowed to one of amount. The principle being settled in this way, it was applied to the unsold crops. We do not go behind these well-warranted findings of fact, and really there is nothing else before us. The assignment of errors raised some other points, but these were the only matters that were pressed in the final argument, or that could have been pressed with any hope of success. It is suggested that, if otherwise right, the judgment charged the appellants with some items twice over. We do not see it, but if there has been any oversight in this respect, our affirmance of the judgment will be without prejudice to reopening the account for the single purpose of correcting errors of calculation if permitted upon application to the Supreme Court.

Judgment affirmed.

Digitized by Google

NATHANIEL W. HOBBS, Trustee, Appt.,
v.
HEAD & DOWST COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 692–701.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals — bankruptcy case.

1. A decree of a circuit court of appeals which affirmed a decree of a district court, dismissing the petition of a trustee in bankruptcy to prevent the enforcement in a state court of a lien for labor and materials, is appealable to the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 804, 805, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review of facts — findings of master.

2. A master's finding, followed by both the district court and the circuit court of appeals, that a building contractor was justified in stopping work before putting on the final touches, will not be disturbed on appeal where there is evidence that such contractor only stopped work when told by the owner of the latter's insolvency, and informed that it must look to its lien to support its claim.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4920–4930, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — avoiding mechanics' lien.

3. Failure to take the proper steps to secure a hearing on the merits in the highest state court of the exceptions to a judgment enforcing a mechanics' lien against a bankrupt estate does not constitute an equitable ground for going behind the state court's judgment at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy, in order to defeat the lien, on the ground that the building contract on which the lien was based was entire, and that whatever justification there may have been for stopping work, or ground for a quantum meruit, nothing short of complete performance would earn the contract price as such, or establish a lien for the same, where the failure to get the exceptions considered was due to no fault of the lienor, but solely to the conduct of those then representing the estate.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 148.]

Argued December 18 and 19, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court in bankruptcy cases—see note to James v. Stone & Co. 57 L. ed. U. S. 573.

On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

As to excuse for nonperformance of contract generally, see notes to United States v. Peck, 26 L. ed. U. S. 46, and Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 40 L. ed. U. S. 515.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the District of New Hampshire, dismissing the petition of a trustee in bankruptcy to prevent the enforcement in a state court of a lien for labor and materials. Affirmed.

See same case below, 106 C. C. A. 519, 184 Fed. 409; on rehearing, 107 C. C. A. 663, 185 Fed. 1006.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry F. Hollis argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

However the authorities may differ upon the question whether a lien may be created upon an implied contract, they all agree that, in case there is an express contract, there can be no lien unless the claimant shows one of three things:

1. That he has performed the contract.

Rochford v. Rochford, 192 Mass. 232, 78 N. E. 454; General Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Chaplin, 183 Mass. 375, 67 N. E. 321; Rome Hotel Co. v. Warlick, 87 Ga. 34, 13 S. E. 116; Thomas v. Illinois Industrial University, 71 Ill. 310; Bohem v. Seabury, 141 Pa. 594, 21 Atl. 674; Moritz v. Larsen, 70 Wis. 569, 36 N. W. 331; John Pritzlaff Hardware Co. v. Berghoefer, 103 Wis. 359, 79 N. W. 564; Cahill v. Heuser, 2 App. Div. 292, 37 N. Y. Supp. 736; Paturzo v. Shuldiner, 125 App. Div. 636, 110 N. Y. Supp. 137; Gunther v. Bennett, 72 Md. 384, 19 Atl. 1048; Maryland Brick Co. v. Spilman, 76 Md. 337, 17 L.R.A. 599, 35 Am. St. Rep. 431, 25 Atl. 297; Derrickson v. Edwards, 29 N. J. L. 468, 8 Am. Dec. 220; McGraw v. Godfrey, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 358.

Or 2. That he has been prevented from doing so by the other party.

Howes v. Reliance Wire-Works Co. 46 Minn. 44, 48 N. W. 448; Knight v. Norris, 13 Minn. 473, Gil. 438; Dennistoun v. McAllister, 4 E. D. Smith, 729; Kinney v. Sherman, 28 Ill. 523; Charnley v. Honig, 74 Wis. 163, 42 N. W. 220; Hutchins v. Bautch, 123 Wis. 394, 107 Am. St. Rep. 1014, 101 N. W. 671; Catlin v. Douglass, 33 Fed. 569; Sproessig v. Keutel, 17 N. Y. Supp. 839.

Or 3. That performance has been waived.

Cahill v. Heuser, 2 App. Div. 292, 37 N. Y. Supp. 736; Floyd v. Rathledge, 41 Ill. App. 370; McCue v. Whitwell, 156 Mass. 205, 30 N. E. 1134; Stewart v. McQuaide, 48 Pa. 191; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 366.

Breach by one party is no excuse for failure to perform by the other party.

Geary v. Bangs, 33 Ill. App. 584; Kinney v. Sherman, 28 Ill. 523; West v. Bechtel, 125 Mich. 144, 51 L.R.A. 791, 84 N. W. 69; Winchester v. Newton, 2 Allen, 492; Dox

Digitized by Google

v. Dey, 3 Wend. 361; M'Grath v. Horgan, 72 App. Div. 152, 76 N. Y. Supp. 415; Osgood v. Bauder, 75 Iowa, 558, 1 L.R.A. 655, 39 N. W. 887; Myer v. Wheeler, 65 Iowa, 390, 21 N. W. 692; Hanson v. Consumers' Steam Heating Co. 73 Iowa, 79, 34 N. W. 495; Bianchi v. Hughes, 124 Cal. 27, 56 Pac. 610; 3 Page, Contr. § 1490 (7); Mersey Steel & Iron Co. v. Naylor, L. R. 9 App. Cas. 434; Cox v. McLaughlin, 54 Cal. 605; Campbell v. McLeod, 24 N. S. 66; Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. 435; Howe v. Howe & O. Ball Bearing Co. 83 C. C. A. 536, 154 Fed. 826; Kauffman v. Raeder, 54 L.R.A. 247, 47 C. C. A. 278, 108 Fed. 181; Paturzo v. Shuldiner, 125 App. Div. 636, 110 N. Y. Supp. 139; Boon v. Eyre, 1 H. Bl. 273, 2 Revised Rep. 768, 18 Eng. Rul. Cas. 609.

Insolvency of one party is no excuse for abandoning work by the other party.

Phenix Nat. Bank v. Waterbury, 197 N. Y. 161, 90 N. E. 435; Insurance Commission v. People's F. Ins. Co. 68 N. H. 52, 44 Atl. 82; Bank Comrs. v. New Hampshire Trust Co. 69 N. H. 623, 44 Atl. 130; New England Iron Co. v. Gilbert Elev. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 153; Devlin v. New York, 63 N. Y. 8; Merchant v. Rawson, Clarke, Ch. 123; Underhill v. North American Gaslight Co. 31 How. Pr. 34; Re Carter, 21 App. Div. 118, 47 N. Y. Supp. 383; Hobbs v. Columbia Falls Brick Co. 157 Mass. 112, 31 N. E. 756; C. F. Jewett Pub. Co. v. Butler, 159 Mass. 520, 22 L.R.A. 253, 34 N. E. 1087; Southern Lumber Co. v. Mercantile Lumber & Supply Co. 89 Mo. App. 144; Re Edwards, L. R. 8 Ch. 293, 42 L. J. K. B. N. S. 37, 28 L. T. N. S. 325, 21 Week. Rep. 349; McConnell v. Hewes, 50 W. Va. 33, 40 S. E. 436; Brassel v. Troxel, 68 Ill. App. 133; Boorman v. Nash, 9 Barn. & C. 145, 7 L. J. K. B. 150; Wald's Pollock, Contr. 3d ed. 355, note 88; Page, Contr. § 1449, p. 2243; Benjamin, Sales, p. 808; Withrow Lumber Co. v. Glasgow Invest. Co. 101 Fed. 868.

Nothing is due under the contract.

Robinson v. Crowninshield, 1 N. H. 76; Currier v. Boston & M. R. Co. 34 N. H. 498; Danforth v. Freeman, 69 N. H. 469, 43 Atl. 621; Wadleigh v. Sutton, 6 N. H. 15, 23 Am. Dec. 704; Dame v. Woods, 73 N. H. 222, 70 L.R.A. 133, 60 Atl. 744.

Nothing being due under the contract, no recovery can be had in the lien suit.

20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 520; Kendall v. Pickard, 67 N. H. 473, 32 Atl. 763; Kihlburg v. United States, 97 U. S. 398, 24 L. ed. 1106; Martinsburg & P. R. Co. v. March, 114 U. S. 549, 29 L. ed. 255, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; Palmer v. Clark, 106 Mass. 373; Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185, 34 L. ed. 917, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Harmon v. Ashmead, 60 Cal. 439; Pitt v. Acosta, 18 Fla. 270; Thomas v. Turner, 16 Md. 105; Lauer v. Dunn, 115 N. Y. 405, 22 N. E. 270; Kinney v. Hudnut, 3 Ill. 472; Preusser v. Florence, 4 Abb. N. C. 136; Schroth v. Black, 50 Ill. App. 168.

As a general rule, if there has been an honest endeavor to complete the contract, and substantial compliance with its terms, a lien may be enforced.

20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 366, 367; 27 Cyc. 85–87.

But the authorities are equally clear that a wilful omission in the performance of the contract, unless trivial, will preclude the assertion of a lien.

20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 367; 27 Cyc. 85, note 27; Van Clief v. Van Vechten, 130 N. Y. 579, 29 N. E. 1017; Elliott v. Caldwell, 43 Minn. 357, 9 L.R.A. 52, 45 N. W. 845; D'Amato v. Gentile, 173 N. Y. 596, 65 N. E. 1116, 54 App. Div. 625, 66 N. Y. Supp. 833; Weeks v. O'Brien, 27 Jones & S. 28, 12 N. Y. Supp. 720; May v. Menton, 18 Misc. 737, 41 N. Y. Supp. 650; Fox v. Davidson, 36 App. Div. 159, 55 N. Y. Supp. 524; Spence v. Ham, 27 App. Div. 379, 50 N. Y. Supp. 960; Anderson v. Todd, 8 N. D. 158, 77 N. W. 599; Federal Trust Co. v. Guingues, 76 N. J. Eq. 495, 74 Atl. 654; Braseth v. State Bank, 12 N. D. 486, 98 N. W. 79; Wade v. Haycock, 25 Pa. 382; Gillespie Tool Co. v. Wilson, 123 Pa. 19, 16 Atl. 36; Sherry v. Madler, 123 Wis. 621, 101 N. W. 1095; Roane v. Murphy, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 96 S. W. 782; Hahn v. Bonacum, 76 Neb. 837, 107 N. W. 1001, 109 N. W. 368; Gillis v. Cobe, 177 Mass. 584, 59 N. E. 455; Burke v. Coyne, 188 Mass. 401, 74 N. E. 942; Schindler v. Green, 7 Cal. Unrep. 229, 82 Pac. 341; Smith v. Ruggiero, 173 N. Y. 614, 66 N. E. 1116; King v. Moore, 61 App. Div. 609, 70 N. Y. Supp. 6; Kohl v. Fleming, 21 Misc. 690, 47 N. Y. Supp. 1092.

This appeal was properly taken.

Hutchinson v. Otis, 190 U. S. 552, 47 L. ed. 1179, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Burleigh v. Foreman, 60 C. C. A. 109, 125 Fed. 217; Mason v. Wolkowich, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 765, 80 C. C. A. 435, 150 Fed. 699; Remington, Bankr. §§ 2870, 2871, 2882, 2900, 2912, 2918, 2923; Hewit v. Berlin Mach. Works, 194 U. S. 296, 48 L. ed. 986, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709; Re Friend, 67 C. C. A. 500, 134 Fed. 778; Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, 194 U. S. 311, 48 L. ed. 992, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; Re First Nat. Bank, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Liddon v. Smith, 67 C. C. A. 517, 135 Fed. 43.

Since the appeal comes within the provisions of § 24a, this court will review both questions of law and questions of fact.

Digitized by Google

Elliott v. Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 47 L. ed. 200, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133; First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 198 U. S. 280, 49 L. ed. 1051, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Remington, Bankr. § 2881.

Messrs. George H. Warren and Robert L. Manning argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The correctness of the conclusions of fact below cannot successfully be questioned further in this court.

Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 577, 53 L. ed. 332, 333, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; United States v. Clark, 200 U. S. 601, 608, 50 L. ed. 613, 616, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; United States v. Stinson, 197 U. S. 200, 207, 49 L. ed. 724, 726, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426; The Germanic (Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Aitken) 196 U. S. 589, 595, 49 L. ed. 610, 613, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317; Illinois v. Illinois C. R. Co. 184 U. S. 77, 98, 46 L. ed. 440, 449, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Furrer v. Ferris, 145 U. S. 132, 36 L. ed. 649, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Brainard v. Buck, 184 U. S. 99, 104, 46 L. ed. 449, 452, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Schwartz v. Duss, 187 U. S. 8, 26, 47 L. ed. 53, 59, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Hy-Yu-Tse-Mil-Kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 412, 48 L. ed. 1039, 1045, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676.

When the contract is substantially completed, the contractor is entitled to his lien. This is an application of a rule of common law to suits for the enforcement of mechanics' liens.

Bergfors v. Caron, 190 Mass. 168, 76 N. E. 655; Hobart v. Reeves, 73 Ill. 527; Hankee v. Arundel Realty Co. 98 Minn. 219, 108 N. W. 842; Nolan v. Whitney, 88 N. Y. 648; Phillip v. Gallant, 62 N. Y. 256; McCue v. Whitwell, 156 Mass. 205, 30 N. E. 1134; Dyer v. Lintz. 76 N. J. L. 204, 68 Atl. 908; Sherry v. Madler, 123 Wis. 621, 101 N. W. 1095; Kane v. Stone Co. 39 Ohio St. 1; Rockel, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 49, 127; Horn v. Batchelder, 41 N. H. 86; 27 Cyc. 85; Spence v. Ham, 27 App. Div. 379, 50 N. Y. Supp. 960; Hall v. Long, 34 Misc. 1, 68 N. Y. Supp. 524; Moore v. Carter, 146 Pa. 492, 23 Atl. 243; Moore v. Dugan, 179 Mass. 153, 60 N. E. 488.

While insolvency of itself is not a breach of contract, and does not authorize recission, there may be such an admission of the insolvency as amounts to a declaration of intention not to abide by the contract, and it may operate as a renunciation.

3 Elliott, Contr. p. 226; Re Phœnix Bessemer Steel Co. L. R. 4 Ch. Div. 108, 46 L. J. Ch. N. S. 115, 35 L. T. N. S. 776, 25 Week. Rep. 187; Ex parte Stapleton, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 586, 40 L. T. N. S. 14, 27 Week. Rep. 327; McKenzie v. Weineman, 116 Ala. 194, 22 So. 508; Freeman v. Topkis, 1 Marv. (Del.) 174, 40 Atl. 948; Dorman v. Weekly, — Tenn. —, 39 S. W. 890; Hallacher v. Henlein, — Tenn. —, 39 S. W. 869; Re Neff, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 349, 84 C. C. A. 561, 157 Fed. 61; Lovell v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 264, 28 L. ed. 423, Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Bank Comrs. v. New Hampshire Trust Co. 69 N. H. 623, 44 Atl. 130.

Failure to pay instalments due under the contract may amount to a renunciation by the defendant, and justify cessation of work under the contract.

Freeto v. Houghton, 58 N. H. 101; South Fork Canal Co. v. Gordon, 6 Wall. 561, 569, 18 L. ed. 894, 895; Thomas v. Stewart, 132 N. Y. 582, 30 N. E. 577; Woolf v. Schaefer, 103 App. Div. 567, 93 N. Y. Supp. 184; Holl v. Long, 34 Misc. 1, 68 N. Y. Supp. 522; Huetter v. Redhead, 31 Wash. 320, 71 Pac. 1016; Eastern Forge Co. v. Corbin, 182 Mass. 593, 66 N. E. 419; Johnson Forge Co. v. Leonard, 3 Penn. (Del.) 342, 57 L.R.A. 225, 94 Am. St. Rep. 86, 51 Atl. 305; Vandegrift v. Cowles Engineering Co. 161 N. Y. 443, 48 L.R.A. 685, 55 N. E. 941.

If the defendant repudiates or abandons the contract before its completion, that "dispenses" the contractor from his part of the agreement. (Holt v. United Security L. Ins. & T. Co. 74 N. J. L. 801, 11 L.R.A. (N.S.) 100, 67 Atl. 118, 12 Ann. Cas. 1105). This, of course, is elemental. The conflict—or rather discussion, for the doctrine is settled—comes when a remedy is sought by the contractor.

In Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 El. & Bl. 678, 6 Eng. Rul. Cas. 576, Lord Campbell enunciated the doctrine that is now accepted almost universally:

"If it should be held that, upon a contract to do an act upon a future date, renunciation of the contract by one party dispenses with the condition to be performed in the meantime by the other, there seems no reason for requiring the other to wait until the date arrives before seeking his remedy by action, and the only ground upon which the condition can be dispensed with seems to be the renunciation which may be treated as breach of contract."

It is the firmly established law of the Federal forum that in such a case the injured party may, if he desires, sue at once upon the contract and recover damages for the breach.

Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S 1, 44 L. ed. 953, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; 3 Elliott, Contr. § 2030; O'Neill v. Supreme Council, A. L. H. 70 N. J. L. 410, 57 Atl. 463, 1 Ann. Cas. 422; The Eliza Lines, 199 U. S. 119, 50 L. ed. 115, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8, 4 Ann. Cas. 406; McBath v. Jones Cotton Co. 79 C. C. A.

Digitized by Google

203, 149 Fed. 383; Michigan Yacht & Power Co. v. Busch, 75 C. C. A. 109, 143 Fed. 929; Re Stern, 54 C. C. A. 60, 116 Fed. 604; Lovell v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 264, 28 L. ed. 423, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Carr v. Hamilton, 129 U. S. 253, 32 L. ed. 669, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Re Swift, 50 C. C. A. 264, 112 Fed. 315; Re Pettingill, 137 Fed. 143; Re Neff, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 349, 84 C. C. A. 561, 157 Fed. 57.

That in case of breach of an executory contract, the injured party may at his election bring an action on the contract to recover damages for its breach, or recover the value of the consideration furnished on a quantum meruit, is the law in New Hampshire.

Drew v. Claggett, 39 N. H. 433; Bank Comrs. v. New Hampshire Trust Co. 69 N. H. 623, 44 Atl. 130.

The company had performed labor and furnished materials by virtue of a contract with the owner, i. e., the Club, and was properly adjudged a lien in accordance with the statute for an amount determined by the contract itself as a measure of the value of the services performed and materials or supplies furnished. The damages were in the nature of a debt due under the contract.

McCue v. Whitwell, 156 Mass. 207, 30 N. E. 1134.

The measure of recovery is the contract price, less a deduction for the work undone. The rule is the same wherever the contractor is the righteous party.

3 Sutherland, Damages, p. 2179; 2 Sedgw. Damages, p. 1316; Rockel, Mechanics' Liens, p. 127; Hutt v. Hickey, 67 N. H. 417, 29 Atl. 456; Moore v. Dugan, 179 Mass. 153, 60 N. E. 488; Sherry v. Madler, 123 Wis. 621, 101 N. W. 1095; Moore v. Carter, 146 Pa. 492, 23 Atl. 243; Holl v. Long, 34 Misc. 1, 68 N. Y. Supp. 522; McGrath v. Horgan, 72 App. Div. 152, 76 N. Y. Supp. 415; Burke v. Coyne, 188 Mass. 404, 74 N. E. 942; Norwood v. Lathrop, 178 Mass. 210, 59 N. E. 650; McCue v. Whitwell, 156 Mass. 207, 30 N. E. 1134; Wheeden v. Fiske, 50 N. H. 127; Charnley v. Honig, 74 Wis. 163, 42 N. W. 220.

As a general proposition, the laws relating to the enforcement of liens are given liberal construction.

Trask v. Searle, 121 Mass. 229; Shaw v. Young, 87 Me. 271, 32 Atl. 897; Durling v. Gould, 83 Me. 134, 21 Atl. 833; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 277, 373; Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 76 C. C. A. 236, 145 Fed. 472.

Wherever the contractor is justified in ceasing performance of an uncompleted executory contract, by reason of the owner's interference, failure to make payments, waiver, renunciation, or repudiation of the contract, bankruptcy or voluntary disablement, he may cease work and at once bring an action either on the contract for damages or indebitatus assumpsit for the value rendered. In either event he is entitled to a lien judgment.

Freeto v. Houghton, 58 N. H. 100; Howes v. Reliance Wire-Works Co. 46 Minn. 44, 48 N. W. 448; Knight v. Norris, 13 Minn. 473, Gil. 438; Dennistoun v. McAllister, 4 E. D. Smith, 729; Burke v. Coyne, 188 Mass. 401, 74 N. E. 942; Smith v. Wetmore, 167 N. Y. 239, 60 N. E. 419; Brady v. Oliver, 125 Tenn. 595, 41 L.R.A.(N.S.) 60, 147 S. W. 1135, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 376; Baker v. Waldron, 92 Me. 17, 69 Am. St. Rep. 483, 42 Atl. 225; Woolf v. Schaefer, 103 App. Div. 567, 93 N. Y. Supp. 184; Holl v. Long, 34 Misc. 1, 68 N. Y. Supp. 522; Huetter v. Redhead, 31 Wash. 320, 71 Pac. 1016; McCue v. Whitwell, 156 Mass. 205, 30 N. E. 1134; Federal Trust Co. v. Guigues, 76 N. J. Eq. 502, 74 Atl. 652; South Fork Canal Co. v. Gordon, 6 Wall. 561, 18 L. ed. 894; Anderson v. McDonald, 31 Wash. 274, 71 Pac. 1037.

Waiver of completion is a question of fact.

Danforth v. Freeman, 69 N. H. 467, 43 Atl. 621; Fuller v. Brown, 67 N. H. 188, 34 Atl. 463.

Mr. Robert L. Manning also filed a separate brief for appellees:

The case presents a proceeding in bankruptcy rather than a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings.

Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008; Re Jungmann, 108 C. C. A. 380, 186 Fed. 302; Re Rathman, 106 C. C. A. 253, 183 Fed. 918; Whitney v. Wenman, 198 U. S. 539, 49 L. ed. 1157, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 198 U. S. 280, 49 L. ed. 1051, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Re Lee, 105 C. C. A. 117, 182 Fed. 579; Re Farrell, 100 C. C. A. 63, 176 Fed. 505; Re McMahon, 77 C. C. A. 668, 147 Fed. 684; Re Streator Metal Stamping Co. 205 Fed. 280; Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 76 C. C. A. 236, 145 Fed. 466; Re Kellogg, 57 C. C. A. 547, 121 Fed. 333; 1 Loveland, Bankr. 4th ed. p. 91.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case arises upon a petition by a trustee in bankruptcy to prevent the enforcement of a lien for labor and materials in a state court. The proceedings in the state court were begun and had passed to a judgment in the superior court of New Hampshire, subject to exceptions, before the adjudication of bankruptcy. Afterwards the exceptions were overruled on technical grounds not touching the merits, the trustee in bankruptcy being heard at this stage. The action upon the matter in the courts of the United States will be seen in 95 C. C. A. 84, 169 Fed. 586, 175 Fed. 501, and 106 C. C. A. 519, 184 Fed. 409; a rehearing being denied upon the last decision in 107 C. C. A. 663, 185 Fed. 1006, and an appeal to this court allowed in 112 C. C. A. 325, 191 Fed. 811. The allowance of the appeal was correct. Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 216 U. S. 545, 54 L. ed. 610, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; Greey v. Dockendorff, Dec. 15, 1913 [231 U. S. 513, ante, 339, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166].

Digitized by Google

The Head & Dowst Company had agreed with the bankrupt to erect a grand stand clubhouse, and other buildings and structures, for $187,644, and had completed the work, with the exception of shutters on the grand stand, that would cost about $1,000 to finish. At this point [700] it was told by the bankrupt of the hopeless insolvency of the latter, and was informed that it must look to its lien to support its claim. Thereupon the company stopped work and began its lien suit. When the present attempt was made to reopen the matter, the case was sent to a master, who reported in great detail the facts just summed up, and concluded that the company was entitled to a lien for $45,095.02, exclusive of interest, that being the part of the contract price remaining unpaid, less $1,000 for the shutters, etc., and being also very nearly the same sum that was found due in the state court. The judge of the district court thereupon dismissed the trustee's petition, and his decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 175 Fed. 501, supra.

We shall consider such questions only as are sufficient to decide the case, omitting others that would have to be considered before the decree below could be reversed. The trustee argues that the failure to take the proper steps to get exceptions heard by the supreme court of the state on the merits constitutes an equitable ground for going behind the state judgment in order to defeat it by an objection of the most narrowly technical sort. The objection, of course, is that the contract was entire, and that whatever justification there may have been for stopping work, or ground for a quantum meruit, nothing short of complete performance would earn the contract price as such, or establish a lien for the same. It is argued in the same connection that the facts did not justify the company in stopping work, but we shall not go behind the finding of the master in this respect, followed as it has been, or say more than that, as we construe the facts and finding, it was quite right, and that putting on the last touches was waived.

We are of opinion that the decision was equally right. The case was tried upon its merits and decided in favor of the lien by the state court. The failure to get the [701] exceptions considered was due to no fault of the appellee, but solely to the conduct of those then representing the interests of the estate. It is a doubtful suggestion that an equity could be founded upon this. Certainly it is an inadequate ground for the intervention of equity to enforce forfeiture of a claim that could not be defeated, if at all, except by a most technical application of the law, and on the assumption that the state court did not know the law of the state. We shall not speculate upon that point, beyond saying that we see no reason to doubt that the state court was right (Bergfors v. Caron, 190 Mass. 168. 76 N. E. 655, and cases in 27 Cyc. 85, 87, and 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 366-368), as we are satisfied that substantial justice has been done. Some subordinate matters of detail were argued, but they do not seem to us to need mention; the whole strength of the case lay in the matter of which we have disposed.

Decree affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
SAMUEL E. MOIST.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 701-703.)

Appeal — review by government in criminal case — jurisdiction.

A judgment of a Federal district court sustaining a demurrer to an indictment under the Criminal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. at L. 1130, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1653), § 215, for placing a letter in the postoffice for delivery by the postoffice establishment for the purpose of executing a scheme to defraud, cannot be reviewed in the Supreme Court by writ of error, where it does not appear from the record upon what ground the court below acted.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 378.]

Submitted October 22, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District

NOTE.—On review by government in criminal case—see note to United States v. Stevenson, 54 L. ed. U. S. 153.

Digitized by Google

of Illinois to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment for using the mails to defraud. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Denison submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Roy D. Keehn submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an indictment under § 215 of the Criminal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. at L. 1130, chap. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1653), for placing a letter in the postoffice for delivery by the postoffice establishment for the purpose of executing a scheme to defraud. The scheme alleged was to send out puzzle pictures, advertising as a prize for the neatest correct answer a credit order for $350 on a certain piano, one for $300 for the next neatest, and others for $200 for correct answers. Persons answering were to be told that they were entitled, for instance, to an order for $200 on a piano sold the world over for $300, which would cost them $75 cash with the order. The credit was to be a pretense, as the piano to be delivered was to be one of a retail price not exceeding the cash received. It was not alleged that the piano was to be worth less than the cash paid, but, as is manifest, people were to be led into the dealing by the delusive apparatus of a promise known to be false when made (Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 40 L. ed. 709, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508), and false statements as to the value of the piano bought. The indictment was demurred to and the demurrer was sustained.

It will not be necessary to decide whether the facts alleged show a scheme to defraud, since it does not appear on what ground the court acted. As was said in United States v. Carter (Dec. 15, 1913 [231 U. S. 492, ante, 330, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173]): "There is nothing in the record showing any request made to the trial court for an expression of opinion in such form as to manifest clearly whether its action proceeded upon a construction of the statute, or merely upon the meaning which was given to the indictment." As it does not appear that the judgment [703] turned upon any controverted construction of the statute, the writ of error must be dismissed in this case as in that. It is unnecessary to consider whether every determination concerning the common law of fraud taken for granted by the act would be a decision based upon the construction of the statute, within the meaning of the act of March 2, 1907, chap. 2564, 34 Stat. at L. 1246.

Writ of error dismissed.

MARY F. RAINEY, as Administratrix of the Estate of David L. Rainey, Deceased,
v.
W. R. GRACE & COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 703–709.)

Appeal — clerk's fees for printing record.

The clerk of a Federal circuit court of appeals can make no charge for preparing for the printer the record on an appeal from a final decree of the district court, or for indexing the same, or for supervising the printing and distributing the copies, by virtue of the fee bill prescribed for such services by the Federal Supreme Court under the authority of the act of February 19, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 536, chap. 263, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 557), where, conformably to the act of February 13, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 901, chap. 47, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 275), the appellant has caused the transcript of record to be printed and indexed, under a rule of the district court, and has caused to be filed with the clerk of the circuit court of appeals twenty-five printed copies thereof, since this later statute by implication sets aside the fee bill authorized by the former statute, so far as it fixes the fee which the clerk of the circuit court of appeals may charge for such services.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IV. n, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 119.]

Submitted December 9, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit presenting questions as to whether the fee of the clerk of a circuit court of appeals for preparing the record on appeal or writ of error for the printer, and for indexing the same, supervising the printing, and distributing the copies, was abolished by the act of February 13, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 901, chap. 47, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 275), permitting the printing of the transcript under the rules of the court below. Answered in the affirmative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William H. Gorham submitted the cause for Mary F. Rainey.

Mr. Frank D. Monckton, clerk of the circuit court of appeals, submitted a memorandum in reply.

No appearance for W. R. Grace & Company.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is here on certificate from the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit. The facts stated show that the appellant caused fifty or more copies of the apostles on appeal in an admiralty case to be printed under the 1st section of the act of Congress of February 13, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 901, chap. 47, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 275). The appeal was taken from the district court of the United States for the western district of Washington, and the copies of the apostles were printed and indexed under a rule of that court adopted June 13, 1911, in pursuance of the act of February 13, 1911. In due time the appellant filed one of the printed copies, certified by the clerk, and under the seal of the court below, in the circuit court of appeals, and moved that court to hear the case without the payment by the appellant of the fees of the clerk of the circuit court of appeals for indexing the record, as prescribed by § 9 of rule 23 of that court, and without the payment by the appellant of the fees of the clerk for indexing the record and distributing copies, as provided in that section. Section 9 provides:

"In all cases, including cases in which the record may have been printed under the act of Congress approved [705] February 13, 1911, or otherwise, the fee of the clerk of this court for performing the services herein required shall be twenty-five cents for each printed page of the record and index, as provided by law."

On this statement the circuit court of appeals certifies to this court two questions, namely:

"1. When the appellant in a cause in admiralty causes to be printed and presented to this court under said act of February 13, 1911, printed copies of the apostles on appeal, each of which copies contains a printed index of the contents thereof, and is prepared and printed under a rule of the lower court adopted in pursuance of said act, is this court authorized to hear and determine the cause on such copies, and to dispense with the requirement of the payment of fees to the clerk of this court by the appellant, as prescribed by § 9 of rule 23 of this court, which is the fee bill prescribed on February 28, 1898, by the Supreme Court under the act of Congress of February 19, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 536, chap. 263, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 557), which provides as a fee for 'preparing the record for the printer, indexing the same, supervising the printing and distributing the copies, for each printed page of the record and index, twenty-five cents'?

"2. Does the 1st section of the act of Congress of February 13, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 901, chap. 47, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 275), set aside by implication said fee bill so prescribed by the Supreme Court, which is referred to in the first question herein certified?"

The answer to these question requires a construction of the act of Congress of February 13, 1911, which is, in part, as follows:

"That in any cause or proceeding wherein the final judgment or decree is sought to be reviewed on appeal to, or by writ of error from, a United States circuit court of appeals, the appellant or plaintiff in error shall cause to be printed under such rules as the lower court shall prescribe, and shall file in the office of the clerk of such circuit [706] court of appeals at least twenty days before the case is called for argument therein, at least twenty-five printed transcripts of the record of the lower court, and of such part or abstract of the proofs as the rules of such circuit court of appeals may require, and in such form as the Supreme Court of the United States shall by rule prescribe, one of which printed transcripts shall be certified under the hand of the clerk of the lower court and under the seal thereof, and shall furnish three copies of such printed transcript to the adverse party at least twenty days before such argument: Provided, That either the court below or the circuit court of appeals may order any original document or other evidence to be sent up in addition to the printed copies of the record, or in lieu of printed copies of a part thereof; and no written or typewritten transcript of the record shall be required."

And a construction of the act requires a consideration of prior statutes on the subject. On February 19, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 536, chap. 263, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 557), Congress passed an act amending the circuit court of appeals act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 547), providing:

"'The costs and fees in each circuit court of appeals shall be fixed and established by said court in a table of fees, to be adopted within three months after the passage of this act: Provided, That the costs and fees so fixed by any court of appeals shall not, with respect to any item, exceed the costs and fees now charged in the Supreme Court.' Each circuit court of appeals shall, within three months after the fixing and establishing of costs and fees as aforesaid, transmit said table to the Chief Justice of the United States, and within one year thereof the Supreme Court of the United States shall revise said table, making the same, so far as may seem just and reasonable, uniform throughout the United States. The table of fees, when so revised, shall thereupon be in force for each circuit."

Digitized by Google

[707] On February 28, 1898, this court, by order, fixed a table of fees and costs in the circuit courts of appeals, one paragraph providing:

"Preparing the record for the printer, indexing the same, supervising the printing and distributing the copies, for each printed page of the record and index .....$0.25"

This is the charge provided for in rule 23 of the circuit court of appeals referred to in the certificate.

Before the passage of the act of February 13, 1911, the clerks of the district and circuit courts charged for a transcript of the record in preparing the case for review in the circuit court of appeals, which transcript was usually written or typewritten, and not required to be printed, the fee for such service being fixed (§ 828, Rev. Stat. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 635). The printing was done under the supervision of the clerk of the circuit court of appeals after the allowance of appeal or writ of error under the regulations above set forth.

In this state of the law, Congess came to deal with the subject in the act of February 13, 1911. The act is entitled: "An Act to Diminish the Expense of Proceedings on Appeal and Writ of Error or of Certiorari;" and especially when read in the light of the report of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House, which accompanied its introduction into that body, shows that its main purpose is to reduce the expense of records upon which cases may be taken to and considered in the circuit courts of appeals and this court. This was to be accomplished by dispensing with a written or typewritten transcript of the record of the lower court, and substituting therefor a certified copy of the printed record, other copies of which should be available for use in the further consideration of the case in the appellate courts. With these ends in view the act provides that the appellant or plaintiff in error shall cause to be printed under such rules as the lower court (the circuit or district court) shall prescribe, [708] and shall file in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of appeals, twenty-five printed transcripts of the record. The form in which the transcript shall be printed, the act provides, shall be prescribed by this court, which, on March 13, 1911, made the following order:

"It is ordered by the court that the provisions of rule 31 of the rules of this court shall apply to all records to be printed as provided in the act of Congress entitled, 'An Act to Diminish the Expense of Proceedings on Appeal and Writ of Error or of Certiorari,' approved February 13, 1911." Rule 31 prescribes:

"All records, arguments, and briefs, printed for the use of the court, must be in such form and size that they can be conveniently bound together, so as to make an ordinary octavo volume; and, as well as all quotations contained therein, and the covers thereof, must be printed in clear type (never smaller than small pica) and on unglazed paper."

Section 2 of the act provides for the use of such printed transcripts of the record, should the case be taken from the circuit court of appeals to this court. The evident purpose of the act is therefore, among other things, to save expenses incurred under the former system in printing records, the clerks' fees for supervising, etc.

In view of this history of the legislation and its manifest purposes we think that, when the court below by its rule had, as in the present case, provided for the printing and indexing of the record, which had been done, and the printed transcript had been filed under the statute with the clerk of the circuit court of appeals, no fee for the like service can be charged by the clerk of the circuit court of appeals. To permit this would be subversive of the purposes of the statute and a continuance of the system which the act was designed to change.

It is true that there is no express repeal of the act of [709] February 19, 1897, granting authority to this court to fix the fees in the circuit courts of appeals, under which the rule referred to in the certificate was adopted, and under which it is contended by the clerk of the circuit court of appeals he is entitled to a fee for indexing, etc., and under which rule, if the clerk performs any of the services designated, he is entitled to the entire fee (Bean v. Patterson, 110 U. S. 401, 28 L. ed. 190, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 23). It is equally true that repeals by implication are not favored, and that it is only in cases of clear inconsistency that a later act will be held to repeal a former one on the same subject. We think that in the present case clear inconsistency exists, and that the rule invoked in the certificate of the circuit court of appeals cannot stand consistently with the act of Congress of February 13, 1911, on the same subject. See King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395, 27 L. ed. 60, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 312.

It may also be true that the supervision by clerks of the circuit courts of appeals will tend to uniformity of printing, better indexing, and consequent greater facility in hearing cases upon appeal and writ of error.

Digitized by Google

But Congress, with full authority, has regulated the matter, and it is the duty of the courts to enforce the legislation with a view to effecting the purposes for which it was enacted.

We are therefore of the opinion that the later act, that of February 13, 1911, repeals the table of fees as to the fees of the clerk of the circuit court of appeals in the case mentioned under the facts certified. It follows that the first question certified by the Circuit Court of Appeals must be answered in the affirmative, and the second question also in the affirmative so far as the fee in question to the clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals is involved.

It is so ordered.

---

[710] ALBERT B. CAMERON, Petitioner,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 710–724.)

Bankruptcy — examination of bankrupt — necessity of adjudication.

1. The examination of a bankrupt under oath could be ordered by a court of bankruptcy upon the application of the receiver, although the adjudication in bankruptcy had not then been made, since the estate must, nevertheless, be regarded as then "in process of administration," within the meaning of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3430), § 21a, empowering a court of bankruptcy to order the examination of a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration, which section must be read in connection with § 7, subd. 9, authorizing the examination of the bankrupt at such other times than the first meeting of creditors as the court may direct.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — privilege — immunity — perjury by bankrupt.

2. The immunity clause in the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898, § 7, subd. 9, that no testimony given by the bankrupt under the command of that section shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding, does not bar a criminal prosecution for perjury for false swearing when giving such testimony.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — self-crimination — statutory immunity — repeal.

3. The repeal of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661, after the incriminating testimony was given, does not deprive the witness of the immunity afforded by that section against the use in evidence of such testimony in any criminal proceeding.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c; Statutes, II. v, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — self-crimination — statutory immunity — perjury.

4. The right to use the previous testimony of the accused for any legitimate purpose in establishing a charge of perjury committed when so testifying was saved by the proviso to the immunity provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661, that "this section shall not exempt any party or witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in discovering or testifying as aforesaid," and the use of such testimony is therefore not limited to proving that it was in fact given.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Witnesses — privilege — immunity — perjury by bankrupt.

5. The immunity afforded by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661, against the offering in evidence against the accused in any criminal proceeding of any previous testimony given by him, provided that "this section shall not exempt any party or witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in discovering or testifying as aforesaid," prevents the introduction in evidence on the prosecution of a bankrupt for having committed perjury both before the referee and before a special examiner and commissioner of the testimony given in one examination which does not tend to establish perjury on that occasion, in order to establish the perjury alleged to have been committed in the other proceeding.

[For other cases, see Witnesses, V. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 165.]

Argued October 21, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of perjury in the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York. Reversed.

Note.—On the constitutional protection against being forced to furnish evidence to be used against one's self in a civil case—see note to Levy v. Superior Ct. 29 L.R.A. 818.

As to the sufficiency of statutory immunity to satisfy constitutional guaranty against self-crimination—see notes to Re Buskett, 14 L.R.A. 407; United States v. James, 26 L.R.A. 416; and Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 48 L. ed. U. S. 860.

As to false testimony given under statute promising immunity against its use in criminal proceedings—see note to Edelstein v. United States, 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 237.

Digitized by Google

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 20, 192 Fed. 548.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Howard S. Gans argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

When U. S. Rev. Stat. § 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661, was enacted, it was deemed to afford a protection as broad as the constitutional guaranty against self-incrimination, and to suffice to render incriminating testimony compellable.

United States v. McCarthy, 21 Blatchf. 469, 18 Fed. 89; Re Counselman, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 326, 44 Fed. 268; People ex rel. Hackley v. Kelly, 24 N. Y. 74.

It was obviously necessary that the immunity extend to every possibility of self-incrimination; and it would surely have been obvious that a statute which, while forbidding the use of testimony for other incriminating purposes, permitted its general use in prosecutions for perjury, would have failed entirely of this primary purpose. For it has never been questioned that where there is any reasonable possibility of incrimination, the witness's claim of privilege must be allowed (Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 565, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1114, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195); and obviously it is always reasonably probable that a witness called in any proceeding may have been interrogated at a prior stage of that proceeding or in some other proceeding with respect to the matter as to which he is then being interrogated, and that a truthful answer to the question may show that his prior testimony was erroneous, and hence furnished an important link in the chain of proof available for his indictment and prosecution on the basis of his prior erroneous evidence.

It is inconceivable that the legislature intended to limit its prohibition against the use of testimony by permitting its general use in perjury prosecutions, or that it intended by the proviso to do more than to make it clear that perjurious testimony was not to be licensed through the process of rendering it impossible to prove that it had actually been given. The proviso was unnecessary, since in no event would the prohibition of the statute have been ultimately construed so as to prevent such use (Glickstein v. United States, 222 U. S. 139, 56 L. ed. 128, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71). But such a construction was possible (Re Marx, 102 Fed. 676), and it was undoubtedly for the purpose of guarding against the possibility, and for that purpose only, that the proviso was inserted.

Manifestly the statute must be read in the light of its history as an attempt to supply a protection which would be coextensive with that guaranteed by the constitutional prohibition of compulsory self-incrimination. And since the earliest authoritative interpretation of that constitutional provision establishes that it protected the witness not only from revealing the facts constituting the criminal act, but from revealing any fact, however slight, which tended to furnish a link in the chain of his conviction (1 Burr's Trial, 243; Ballmann v. Fagin, 200 U. S. 186, 195, 50 L. ed. 433, 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212), it is clear that a statute which was designed to afford a like immunity by compelling testimony and thereafter prohibiting its use must be construed as prohibiting the use of testimony tending to establish the intent as well as the use of that which tends to establish the material elements of the crime.

The right to immunity from the use of this testimony was not affected by the subsequent repeal of § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661).

Lapham v. Marshall, 51 Hun, 41, 3 N. Y. Supp. 601.

Even in the absence of statutory prohibitions the law forbids the reception of admissions secured by deceptive or coercive methods. Thus it has been held that if a police officer or magistrate, through a deceptive offer of immunity, secures an admission from a prisoner, the courts—though no statute prohibits the use of the admission so secured—will not permit it to be used.

Sorenson v. United States, 74 C. C. A. 468, 143 Fed. 820; Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 532, 550, 42 L. ed. 568, 576, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 547.

Every recognized canon of statutory construction requires that the intent to sanction a breach of faith should not be imputed to Congress, that the repeal should be given a prospective effect, that it should not be so interpreted as to destroy a substantial right previously perfected, and that an exception be read into the repealing act, if necessary, in order to avoid the immoral and unjust—if not unconstitutional—results which would otherwise flow from it.

Whitfield v. Ætna L. Ins. Co. 75 C. C. A. 358, 144 Fed. 356; United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482–486, 19 L. ed. 278–280; Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536–554, 28 L. ed. 770–776, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold & S. Min. Co. 93 U. S. 634–638, 23 L. ed. 995, 996, 13 Mor. Min. Rep. 204; United States v. Taylor, 104 U. S. 216, 221, 26 L. ed. 721, 722; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596, 604, 27 L. ed. 251, 254, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 235, 240, 30 L. ed. 173, 175, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038; United States v. Hosmer, 9 Wall. 432, 435, 19 L. ed. 662, 663; United States v.

Digitized by Google

Heth, 3 Cranch, 399, 408, 2 L. ed. 479, 482; White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 552, 48 L. ed. 295, 298, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Twenty Per Cent Cases, 20 Wall. 179, 187, 22 L. ed. 339, 341; Reynolds v. M'Arthur, 2 Pet. 434, 7 L. ed. 476; Davis v. Bohle, 34 C. C. A. 372, 92 Fed. 328; Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 147, 153, 21 L. ed. 426, 429; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 460, 461, 26 L. ed. 226, 228, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 506, 507, 19 L. ed. 476, 479; Taylor v. United States, 207 U. S. 120, 125, 52 L. ed. 130, 133, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 212, 213, 47 L. ed. 1016, 1020, 1021, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465; Society for Propagation of the Gospel v. New Haven, 8 Wheat. 464, 494, 5 L. ed. 662, 669; Moore v. State, 43 N. J. L. 227, 39 Am. Rep. 558; Com. v. Duffy, 96 Pa. 514, 42 Am. Rep. 554; State v. Sneed, 25 Tex. Supp. 66; State v. Keith, 63 N. C. 144.

The examination before the commissioner upon which the first indictment was based was without warrant in law, and it was error to receive any evidence under that indictment, or to submit to the jury any charges presented by it.

Podolin v. McGettigan, 113 C. C. A. 668, 193 Fed. 1021; Skubinsky v. Bodek, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 985, 97 C. C. A. 116, 172 Fed. 332, 19 Ann. Cas. 1035; Re Thompson, 179 Fed. 874; Re Davidson, 158 Fed. 678; Re Crenshaw, 155 Fed. 271.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis H. McAdoo, filed a brief for respondent:

The petitioner has based his argument mainly upon § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661), which was repealed without a saving clause before his testimony was used against him, and therefore afforded no protection.

Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 398, 25 L. ed. 231; Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 150, 27 L. ed. 682, 684, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Twombly, 100 U. S. 78, 81, 25 L. ed. 550; McNulty v. Batty, 10 How. 72, 13 L. ed. 333; Re Hall, 167 U. S. 38, 42 L. ed. 69, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 937; Wilkinson v. Nebraska, 123 U. S. 286, 31 L. ed. 152, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. ed. 287.

The immunity granted by § 7, subd. 9, of the bankruptcy act, does not prevent the government from using the bankrupt's testimony to prove other points of the charge than the mere text of the false statement itself.

Daniels v. United States, 116 C. C. A. 233, 196 Fed. 459; Edelstein v. United States, 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 236, 79 C. C. A. 328, 149 Fed. 636; Glickstein v. United States, 222 U. S. 139, 56 L. ed. 128, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; United States v. Brod, 176 Fed. 165; People v. Cahill, 126 App. Div. 391, 110 N. Y. Supp. 728; United States v. Smith, 47 Fed. 501.

Nor does it prohibit the admission of testimony before the commissioner to sustain the charge before the referee, and vice versa, since both examinations were part of the same proceeding.

Powers v. United States, 223 U. S. 303, 56 L. ed. 448, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281.

The examination by the commissioner as special examiner was duly authorized, and the false testimony there was perjury.

Ex parte Bick, 155 Fed. 908; Ex parte Lee, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 83, Fed. Cas. No. 8,178; Re Fixen & Co. 96 Fed. 749; Re Fleischer, 151 Fed. 81; Re Salkey, 5 Biss. 486, Fed. Cas. No. 12,252; United States v. Wechsler, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; United States v. Liberman, 176 Fed. 161; 10 Columbia L. Rev. 70; 23 Harvard L. Rev. 221; Loveland, Bankr. 3d ed. § 204.

Even under § 21a of the bankruptcy act the examination was authorized because the estate was in process of administration within the meaning of the section as soon as it came into the jurisdiction of the court by the filing of the petition, and certainly as soon as the receiver was appointed.

Re Fleischer, 151 Fed. 81.

Independently of § 21a, an examination of a bankrupt prior to adjudication is within the general equity powers of a bankruptcy court conferred by § 2, subd. 15, and the concluding paragraph of the section.

Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co. 89 Fed. 691; Re Cohen, 136 Fed. 999; Re Lacov, 74 C. C. A. 130, 142 Fed. 960; Re Union Trust Co. 59 C. C. A. 461, 122 Fed. 937: White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007; Re Levi, 74 C. C. A. 132, 142 Fed. 962

This construction, being therefore possible, both under § 21a and under the general equity power, should be accepted, because the other view leads to the result that no witnesses may be examined before adjudication, thus bringing to a standstill the powers of the bankruptcy courts and their representatives during the twenty-day interval between the filing of the petition and the adjudication.

Craddock-Terry Co. v. Kaufman, 175 Fed. 303; Re Fleischer, supra; United States v. Liberman, 176 Fed. 161.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of certiorari to the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit. The case concerns a prosecution [715] commenced in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York by the finding of two indictments against the petitioner herein, charging perjury in a bankruptcy proceeding. Upon trial the defendant, Cameron, was convicted and sentenced, and upon writ of error the judgment of the circuit court was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, 113 C. C. A. 20, 192 Fed. 548.

The first indictment, after setting forth the proceedings in bankruptcy against the Knickerbocker Piano Company, of which the defendant was president and treasurer, alleged that he, upon inquiry, under oath before a special examiner and commissioner, appointed under § 21a of the bankruptcy act, prior to adjudication, testified:

"First. That he, the said Albert B. Cameron, the aforesaid witness, shortly prior to the filing of the aforesaid petition in bankruptcy against the said Knickerbocker Piano Company, had sold a number of pianos to William C. Smith, the petitioner in bankruptcy aforesaid.

"Second. That he, the said Albert B. Cameron, the witness aforesaid, had a conversation with the said William C. Smith, concerning the sale to him of pianos by him, the said Albert B. Cameron.

"Third. That he, the said Albert B. Cameron, the aforesaid witness, had sold to the said William C. Smith, eight pianos for the sum of $668."

And it alleged that the defendant thereby committed perjury.

By the second indictment the defendant is said to have committed perjury in a proceeding before the referee in testifying:

"First. That he, the said Albert B. Cameron, had not been able to obtain the address of the said William C. Smith, and had never known the said address.

"Second. That he, the said Albert B. Cameron, had [716] had a conversation or conversations with the said William C. Smith in regard to his, the said William C. Smith's, buying pianos of and from the said alleged bankrupt."

The two indictments were consolidated, and, the defendant pleading not guilty, trial was had, and a verdict of guilty returned upon which judgment was rendered.

The petitioner contends that the bankruptcy act does not authorize the proceeding before the commissioner prior to the adjudication. The record discloses that a receiver had been duly appointed of the assets and effects of the bankrupt, and that he had applied to the court under § 21a of the bankruptcy act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3430] for an order requiring the bankrupt, its officers and directors, to appear before a special examiner and commissioner, to be examined concerning the property of the bankrupt and the acts and conduct of its officials. The court made the order requested, and appointed the special examiner and commissioner, before whom Cameron appeared and testified, giving, in the course of his examination, the testimony charged in the first indictment to be false. This proceeding was prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy, which followed a few days later. Whether the examination of Cameron upon oath at that stage of the proceedings was authorized by the bankruptcy act depends upon a construction of clause a, § 21, of the act, which provides, in part, as follows:

"A court of bankruptcy may, upon application of any officer, bankrupt, or creditor, by order require any designated person, including the bankrupt and his wife, to appear in court or before a referee or the judge of any state court, to be examined concerning the acts, conduct, or property of a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration under this act." [As amended, 32 Stat. at L. 798, chap. 487, § 7, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1498.]

The controversy is over the meaning of the phrase, "a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration under this act." The construction of this provision differs [717] in the Federal courts, some of them having held that there can be no such examination until after adjudication, as it is only then that the bankrupt can be subjected to such proceeding. Of this class are Skubinsky v. Bodek, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 985, 97 C. C. A. 116, 172 Fed. 332, 19 Ann. Cas. 1035; Podolin v. McGettigan, 113 C. C. A. 668, 193 Fed. 1021; Re Thompson, 179 Fed. 874; Re Davidson, 158 Fed. 678; Re Crenshaw, 155 Fed. 271. To the opposite view are Re Fixen & Co. 96 Fed. 748; Re Fleischer, 151 Fed. 81; Ex parte Bick, 155 Fed. 908; Wechsler v. United States, 86 C. C. A. 37, 158 Fed. 579; United States v. Liberman, 176 Fed. 161. We are of opinion that the estate was in process of administration at the time when the examination before the commissioner was ordered, and the testimony of Cameron given. This court has decided that the filing of the petition in bankruptcy operates to place the property of the alleged bankrupt in custodia legis, and prevents any creditor from attaching it; and, although, by the terms of the act, the estate does not vest in the trustee until the date of the adjudication, it is placed at the time of the filing of the petition under the control of the court with a view to its ultimate distribution among creditors. Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co. 222 U. S. 300, 307, 56 L. ed. 208, 213, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; and see Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 14, 46 L. ed. 405, 411, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Everett v. Judson, 228 U. S. 474, 478, 479, 57 L. ed. 927, 929, 46 L.R.A.(N.S.) 154, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568. And this is true, notwithstanding, as contended by the petitioner, that should the attempt to obtain an adjudication of bankruptcy fail upon the subsequent hearings, the receivership would necessarily be vacated and the property turned back to the alleged bankrupt.

Digitized by Google

In order to arrive at the true meaning of § 21a other provisions as well as the purpose of the act must be had in view. The object of the examination of the bankrupt and other witnesses to show the condition of the estate is to enable the court to discover its extent and whereabouts, and to come into possession of it, that the rights of creditors may be preserved. If such examination is postponed [718] until after adjudication, which may not take place for at least twenty days, within which the bankrupt in involuntary bankruptcy is given leave to appear and plead, the estate may be concealed and disposed of, and the purpose of the act to hold it and to distribute it for the benefit of creditors defeated. The importance of such early examination of bankrupts was emphasized in Re Fleischer, 151 Fed. 81. By subdivision 9 of § 7 of the act, it is provided that the bankrupt shall, "when present at the first meeting of his creditors, and at such other times as the court shall order, submit to an examination concerning the conducting of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and, in addition, all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate." Here is found authority to examine the bankrupt at such other times than the first meeting of creditors as the court may direct. This section should be read with § 21a, and throws light upon its proper construction. In this case the petitioner had invoked the jurisdiction of the court, a receiver had been appointed to take possession of the property, the court was so far in possession of it as to prevent other courts from seizing it, and thus defeating the bankruptcy jurisdiction. We are of opinion that the estate was then in process of administration, and the examination ordered was within the jurisdiction of the court.

Other questions in the case relate to alleged violations of immunity afforded the defendant under statutes of the United States, which were invoked by him at the trial in the circuit court. Records were there offered in evidence showing the testimony given by Cameron before the examiner and before the referee. Cameron claimed that this testimony was incompetent for the purpose of establishing his guilt beyond showing that it was in fact given.

[719] Counsel for petitioner relies upon the immunity clause of § 7 of the bankruptcy act, and upon § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661) in force at the time the testimony was given, but repealed by the act of May 7, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 352, chap. 216, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 272). Section 7, subdivision 9, of the bankruptcy act, cited above, concludes: "But no testimony given by him shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding." This section was before this court, so far as the immunity provided is concerned, in Glickstein v. United States, 222 U. S. 139, 56 L. ed. 128, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71, where it was held not to prevent a prosecution for perjury in the giving of testimony by a bankrupt, and the immunity was held to apply to past transactions concerning which the bankrupt might be examined. In the opinion in that case, Edelstein v. United States (circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit) 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 236, 79 C. C. A. 328, 149 Fed. 636, which had held that the words "any criminal proceeding" in which immunity is provided are limited to such criminal proceedings as arise out of the conduct of the bankrupt's business or the disposition of his property, etc., concerning which he may be examined, was cited with approval. In Ensign v. Pennsylvania, 227 U. S. 592, 600, 57 L. ed. 658, 662, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, it was held that full effect could be given to the immunity provision by confining it to the testimony given under subdivision 9, to which it was immediately subjoined. As the present prosecution was based upon alleged false swearing in the course of the bankruptcy proceedings, § 7 of the bankruptcy act can have no application.

Petitioner also invokes the protection of § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661), which reads:

"No pleading of a party, nor any discovery or evidence obtained from a party or witness by means of a judicial proceeding in this or any foreign country, shall be given in evidence, or in any manner used against him of his property or estate, in any court of the United States, in any criminal proceeding, or for the enforcement of any [720] penalty or forfeiture: Provided, that this section shall not exempt any party or witness from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in discovering or testifying as aforesaid."

Digitized by Google

The government contends that the subsequent repeal of this section deprives the petitioner of the immunity afforded. We cannot agree with this contention. It would be subversive of principles of right and justice to give such effect to a statute upon the protection of which the petitioner had the right to rely at the time when called upon to testify in the bankruptcy court, and in consequence of which he may be presumed to have given his testimony. A retrospective operation of statutes is not to be given except in clear cases, unequivocally evidencing the legislative intent to that effect. Union P. R. Co. v. Laramie Stock Yards Co. 231 U. S. 190, 199, ante, 179, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101, and previous cases in this court, cited in the opinion in that case. Summers v. United States, 231 U. S. 92, ante, 137, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38. In the absence of a clearly expressed legislative intent to the contrary, the court will presume that the law-making power is acting for the future, and does not intend to impair obligations incurred or rights relied upon in the past conduct of men when other legislation was in force. White v. United States, 191 U. S. 545, 552, 48 L. ed. 295, 298, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

The circuit court of appeals in the instant case was of opinion that the petitioner was entitled to the immunity afforded in § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661), but failed to find in the record any instance of its violation. Section 860 by its express terms does not exempt a party from prosecution for perjury committed in testifying in the instances named. It was held in Glickstein v. United States, supra, of § 7 of the bankruptcy act, that this immunity was not intended to put a premium upon perjury by giving protection against the use of the testimony in prosecutions for that crime; and we cannot agree with petitioner's contention that the use of such testimony is limited to proving that [721] it was in fact given. In prosecutions for perjury the statute saved the right to use such testimony for any legitimate purpose in establishing the charge made. While this is true, the statute by its terms protects the party from the use of such testimony in any court of the United States in any criminal proceeding.

The subsequent prosecution of Cameron for perjury in the two bankruptcy proceedings was a criminal proceeding in a court of the United States, and the testimony given in the one bankruptcy proceeding, not tending to establish perjury in that proceeding, should not have been received to establish the crime charged in the other proceeding. In this case it will be noted from the statement already made, that the indictment based upon the testimony before the referee charged that Cameron falsely swore that he had not been able to obtain and had never known the address of William C. Smith, the man with whom it was charged the fraudulent transactions regarding the pianos were had. In the first indictment based upon the testimony before the commissioner, there is no such charge. The government having put in evidence the proceedings before the referee showing that Cameron there testified that he did not know Smith's address, and that he was not acquainted with his friends, and that he did not know anyone who knew him, the record of Cameron's testimony before the commissioner was offered in evidence, and, over specific objections calling attention to the lack of such charge in the first indictment based on the proceedings before the commissioner, the government was permitted to read:

"Q. Did you, shortly prior to the filing of the petition, sell some pianos and realize cash on them?

"A. Yes, I did.

"Q. To whom were they sold?

"A. They were sold to W. C. Smith.

"Q. Where is his place of business?

[722] "A. He is not in business.

"Q. Who is he?

"A. Why, an acquaintance of mine.

"Q. Where does he live?

"A. On St. Nicholas avenue, I don't recall the address.

"Q. What number?

"A. I don't remember.

"Q. Between what streets?

"A. Above 125th.

"Q. Is it an apartment or a private house?

"A. Why, I think just a furnished room, or rooms."

Mr. McManus: I object to this as immaterial and not within the issues. There is no allegation in the indictment, or the assignment of perjury, as to the alleged address of William C. Smith, and in the proceedings before the commissioner—

Mr. Smith: I am reading so the jury will get some sort of a comprehensive idea as to what the man testified to. This is the beginning of this alleged transaction with William C. Smith.

The Court: Cut it down closer.

Mr. Smith: I have cut it down to about two pages.

Digitized by Google

Objection overruled. Exception by defendant.

Mr. Smith (reading):

"Q. How long have you known him?

"A. Oh, three or four years.

"Q. Do you know whether he is employed by anybody?

"A. Yes, sir, but I don't know where.

"Q. You haven't any idea in what capacity he is employed?

"A. No.

"Q. How often do you meet him?

"A. Not very often.

"Q. How often did you meet him before this last transaction?

"A. Oh, two or three times.

[723] "Q. How long do you know him?

"A. Three or four years, I think.

Mr. McManus: This is another line, subject to the last exception.

"Q. Where did you first meet him?

"A. New York.

"Q. Where?

"A. I don't recall that.

"Q. Do you know anybody else other than yourself who knows Mr. Smith?

"A. He has a number of friends.

"Q. Do you know of anybody?

"A. My brothers.

"Q. Outside of your family?

"A. No.

"Q. Is he related to you?

"A. No.

"Q. Is he related to any member of your family?

"A. No.

"Q. Do you know how he can be located?

"A. Why, yes, I could get hold of him.

"Q. How could you get hold of him today?

"A. I'd go and ask my brother.

"Q. You think he could give you the address?

"A. Yes, sir, I think so.

"Q. Did you send to Mr. Smith to come to the place and buy some pianos?

"A. I had to sell some pianos to get some money.

"Q. Where did you send to get him?

"A. I got him through my brother."

The effect of this testimony was to distinctly contradict the testimony which Cameron had given before the referee, and which was the subject-matter of the indictment based on the proceedings before that officer. It did not tend to establish the charge growing out of his testimony before [724] the commissioner, which related solely to the sale of pianos and conversations between Cameron and Smith concerning the sales. The district attorney contended that this testimony was competent in order that the jury might get some sort of comprehensive idea as to what the man testified to, and, in view of that statement and the expressed view of the court that anything that threw light on the event was admissible, the testimony was admitted. It is contended that it was competent as showing the relations of Cameron to Smith and to identify Smith, but there was no question i. the case as to who Smith was. He was a witness called to establish the charge of perjury, and he was the person with whom it was charged the fraudulent dealings in pianos were had by the bankrupt. The testimony offered as to what Cameron swore to before the examiner, while not tending to establish the charge of perjury based upon testimony in that instance, did contradict the testimony which he had given before the referee, and directly tended to establish the charge under that indictment. We think to permit the use of the testimony for that purpose was to permit the testimony given in the one instance to be used in a criminal proceeding based upon testimony given in the other instance, and therefore to violate the immunity given in § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661), then in force.

Other errors are alleged, and it is contended that there was no adequate proof of the charges made, but these questions were submitted to the jury and cannot be re-examined here. We are of the opinion that error was committed in the use given to the testimony taken before the commissioner in the manner we have stated, and for that reason the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals, affirming the conviction of Cameron in the court below, should be reversed.

Reversed and remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

---

[725] GEORGE W. RADFORD, Plff. in Err.,

v.

MARY D. MYERS, Executrix of the Estate of Elijah E. Myers, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 725-733.)

Judgment — res judicata — matters concluded.

An order in an action on a claim under a contract, a one-half interest in which plaintiff had assigned to his attorney by way of security, having previously assigned

---

Note.—On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San. Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v.

Digitized by Google

the other one-half interest to his son, who in turn assigned his interest to such attorney, which upholds the assignment from the son, who had intervened and procured the payment into court of one half of the amount of recovery, and which, dismissing the son's claim, awards to the attorney the fund in court, is not res judicata as between the father and the attorney as to the former's right to the one-half interest assigned by the son, and therefore does not bar a suit by the father to compel the attorney to account for the proceeds of the judgment in his hands, on the theory that such attorney held the same in trust under an agreement to pay over the balance remaining after discharging any indebtedness on account of loans, costs, and services.

[For other cases, see Judgment, III. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 251.]

Submitted December 3, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Wayne County in that state in favor of plaintiff in a suit by a client to compel his attorney to account for the proceeds of a judgment in his hands. Affirmed.

See same case below, 167 Mich. 135, 132 N. W. 550.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Thomas A. E. Weadock submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Matters in issue and decided by the judgment of a court having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter of the suit are conclusively settled, and cannot be litigated again between the parties to that suit or their privies.

23 Cyc. 1215; Hopkins v. Lee, 6 Wheat. 109, 5 L. ed. 218; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 152 U. S. 252, 38 L. ed. 429, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

A right, question, or fact once put in issue and decided is concluded in any future action between the same parties or their privies, whether the subsequent action is for the same or a different cause of action.

New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

A judgment is a bar to any future action between the same parties or their privies upon the same cause of action.

Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 38 L. ed. 463, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Werlein v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 390, 44 L. ed. 817, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 682.

Or, as this last rule has more recently been very aptly stated, a judgment is conclusive as to all the media concludendi.

United States v. California & O. Land Co. 192 U. S. 358, 48 L. ed. 478, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; American Exp. Co. v. Mullins, 212 U. S. 312, 53 L. ed. 526, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, 15 Ann. Cas. 536; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 223 U. S. 565, 56 L. ed. 553, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Troxell v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 227 U. S. 434, 57 L. ed. 586, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; 2 Black, Judgm. 2d ed. p. 808, § 506; 23 Cyc. 1240, 1306; National Foundry & Pipe Works Co. v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Werlein v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 390, 44 L. ed. 817, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 682; Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 526, 40 L. ed. 247, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 83; Nalle v. Oyster, 230 U. S. 165, 57 L. ed. 1439, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1043.

The estoppel covers matters which were actually determined, whether technically put in issue by the pleadings or not.

23 Cyc. 1304; 2 Black, Judgm. 2d ed. § 614.

There need be no pleadings between coparties in order that they may, as between themselves, be bound by the judgment, if they were essentially adversary parties, or their respective rights were in issue.

Baldwin v. Hanecy, 204 Ill. 281, 68 N. E. 560, affirming 104 Ill. App. 84; Kohly v. Fernandez, 133 App. Div. 723, 118 N. Y. Supp. 163; affirmed in 201 N. Y. 561, 95 N. E. 1131; Corcoran v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 94 U. S. 741, 24 L. ed. 190; Louis v. Brown Twp. 109 U. S. 163, 27 L. ed. 892, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

The above is also the Michigan rule.

Waldo v. Waldo, 52 Mich. 93, 17 N. W. 709; Scripps v. Sweeney, 160 Mich. 177, 125 N. W. 72.

The opinion is the repository of the law of the decision.

Corcoran v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 94 U. S. 741, 24 L. ed. 190; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 46 L. ed. 157, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

These rules are fundamental and apply to legal proceedings generally.

23 Cyc. 1223; Hopkins v. Lee, 6 Wheat. 109, 5 L. ed. 218.

No appearance for defendant in error.

Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Elijah E. Myers brought this suit in the circuit court of Wayne county, state of Michigan, against George W. Radford, the plaintiff in error herein, for an accounting and for a decree for the balance due him from a judgment in a suit of the former in which the latter acted as one of his attorneys and received the amount of the judgment. Myers having died during the pendency of the action, it was revived in the name of his executrix, the defendant in error. The decree of the circuit court in favor of the [728] defendant in error was affirmed by the supreme court of the state of Michigan (167 Mich. 135, 132 N. W. 550), and the case comes here on error.

The record discloses that Myers had entered into a contract with the county of Luzerne, state of Pennsylvania, to furnish the plans and specifications for a courthouse, and had certain claims against the county arising therefrom. Counsel had been employed and suit commenced, but little progress made. Myers had assigned a one-half interest in the contract to his son, George W. Myers. In this state of affairs the elder Myers employed the plaintiff in error, who had theretofore been his attorney, and to whom he was indebted, to prosecute the courthouse claim. To secure his indebtedness to Radford, Myers assigned his remaining one-half interest in the claim to the plaintiff in error. Later, April 2, 1900, George W. Myers assigned his one-half interest to the plaintiff in error, the latter to account to him for the proceeds after deducting a $1,000 attorney's fee and one half of the costs, to which assignment Elijah E. Myers gave his written assent; and shortly thereafter, April 11, 1900, George W. Myers, in consideration of $150, transferred his interest in his prior assignment and in the assignment from his father to him to the plaintiff in error.

The plaintiff in error engaged local counsel in Pennsylvania, who commenced suit in the United States circuit court for the middle district of Pennsylvania, and prosecuted the courthouse claim to a successful termination (Myers v. Luzerne County, 124 Fed. 436). Thereupon George W. Myers intervened in that suit, setting up his right to one half of the judgment, claiming that his assignment to Radford had been fraudulently obtained; and one half of the amount of the judgment was paid into court. Upon the petition of the plaintiff in error to remove the money, the jurat of which was signed by Elijah E. Myers, the court decreed that the [729] assignment was valid, and awarded the fund to Radford, and dismissed George W. Myers's claim.

Elijah E. Myers thereafter brought this suit, alleging, among other things, that Radford, on April 11, 1900, acting on his behalf, purchased the one-half interest assigned by him to George W. Myers, and that at that time it was distinctly understood and agreed between the plaintiff in error and himself that the one-half interest so purchased, with the one-half interest assigned by him to Radford, should be held as security for the payment of all his indebtedness to Radford for loans and services, and for the payment of the $150 given by Radford to George W. Myers, and all costs in the litigation of the courthouse claim, and that, after deducting such amounts from the judgment collected, the plaintiff in error should pay the balance to him. The plaintiff in error contended that the judgment in the United States circuit court was res judicata as to his right to the one-half interest in the courthouse claim assigned to him by George W. Myers. He further alleged, however, that, notwithstanding his absolute ownership of the George W. Myers one-half interest, he purchased it with the distinct intention that he would apply for the benefit of Elijah E. Myers the balance, if he succeeded in collecting the claim, after paying expenses and services and all Myers's indebtedness to him. But, he alleged, he did not intend to waive his right as absolute owner, or allow Myers to dictate the amount of expenses, services, or indebtedness. The circuit court entered a decree for the balance due Myers.

The supreme court held that the assignment of April 2, 1900, was merged in the assignment of April 11, 1900, and also held that the Federal decision in Pennsylvania had not determined that the trust relation between the plaintiff in error and Elijah E. Myers had terminated; as to which holdings the plaintiff in error assigns error, upon the failure of the supreme court to give due credit in those [730] respects to the judgment of the United States circuit court.

From the foregoing statement it is evident that the sole Federal question involved arises from the alleged denial in the judgment of the supreme court of Michigan of due effect to the judgment rendered in the United States circuit court in Pennsylvania, which is relied upon by the plaintiff in error as res judicata of the matters in controversy. Whether such effect was given as the former judgment required presents a Federal question for determination. National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 216, 233, 46 L. ed. 157, 169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111. To determine this issue we examine the judgment in the former case, the pleadings filed and the issues made, and, if necessary to elucidate the matters decided, the opinion of the court which rendered the judgment. National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. supra, 234, and previous cases in this court therein cited.

Digitized by Google

As the suit in the Michigan court was not upon the identical cause of action litigated in the United States circuit court, the estoppel operates only as to matters in issue or points controverted and actually decided in that suit. Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 50, 42 L. ed. 355, 377, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Troxell v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 227 U. S. 434, 440, 57 L. ed. 586, 589, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274.

Applying these familiar principles, how stands the present case? The elder Myers brought this suit upon the theory that the amount of the judgment which had been paid over to Radford on August 22, 1903, which the supreme court of Michigan found was $12,711.23, was held in trust and to be accounted for by Radford to him because of the agreement set up in the complaint in the state court, already referred to. The record of the proceedings in the United States circuit court shows that one half of the money due upon the claim of Elijah E. Myers against Luzerne county had been paid into court in the original suit of Myers against Luzerne county. [731] Radford had filed a petition asking for the payment of the money to him as the owner of the judgment. George W. Myers, as respondent, filed an answer, claiming the amount in court, and attacking his assignment to Radford. It was upon that petition and answer and testimony that the case was heard and the following order made:

"In the United States Circuit Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania,

"February Term, 1903.

"No. 3.

"Elijah E. Myers

v.

"County of Luzerne.

"In the Matter of Petition of George W. Radford to Take Money Out of Court.

"At a Session of said Court Held at Scranton, in said district, on the 31st Day of July, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Three.

"Present: Honorable R. W. Archbald, District Judge.

"The above matter having heretofore been heard upon said petition, answers, and proofs, and the same having been argued by counsel for petitioner, as well as for the respondent, respectively, and due consideration had thereon, it is now ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the assignment from respondent to petitioner of the 11th day of April, one thousand nine hundred, is valid, and an absolute assignment of all the interest of said respondent in the said contract between Elijah E. Myers and the county commissioners of Luzerne county of date February 22, 1895, and that the fund in court be awarded to petitioner, George W. Radford; and that the claim of George W. Myers, respondent, be dismissed, with costs to be taxed against said respondent."

A reading of this order, which is said to embody the Federal judgment relied upon by the plaintiff in error as res judicata of the present controversy, shows that the only matter adjudged concerned the assignment from the [732] respondent (George W. Myers) to the petitioner (Radford), of date the 11th day of April, 1900, the court holding that it was an absolute assignment of the interest of the respondent in the contract between Elijah E. Myers and the county of Luzerne, awarding the fund in court (which was one half of that recovery) to the petitioner, and decreeing that the claim of the respondent be dismissed and that he pay all the costs. Certainly there is nothing in that judgment to conclude the present suit in the state court between Elijah E. Myers and Radford. The proceeding in the United States circuit court in Pennsylvania is specifically limited to the controversy between Radford and the respondent in that proceeding, George W. Myers. If there could be any doubt as to the effect of the order, the opinion of Judge Archbald, found in the record, shows how the matter was regarded by him. The opinion recites that, a verdict having been rendered in favor of Elijah E. Myers, because of a controversy with respect to one half of it, leave of court had been given to pay one half of the judgment into court, and that the petitioner, Radford, and George W. Myers, by each of whom ownership was asserted, by pleadings and proof, had submitted the matter to that court, and that it had jurisdiction to determine to whom the fund belonged. After referring to the original contract and the various steps to collect the money from the county of Luzerne and the assignment of a one-half interest from the elder Myers to his son in 1896, Judge Archbald said:

"Col. Myers explained to Mr. Radford that one half the contract had already been assigned to George, and it was recognized that if he held on to the assignment there would be little, if anything, coming to Col. Myers after he had settled with Radford. But it was stated by Col. Myers that the assignment was without consideration, and if he succeeded, as he hoped, in getting George to surrender it, then Radford was to account to him for that [733] interest also, after deducting for expenses and services. The trust relation so established still continues."

Digitized by Google

The opinion then goes on to consider elaborately the claim of George W. Myers to the one-half interest paid into court, as against Radford, and finds that the assignment of April 11, 1900, was a valid sale from George W. Myers to Radford, and that the assignment was absolute in form, and intended by George W. Myers as a complete disposition to Radford for $150 of the one-half interest derived from his father. The judge concludes his opinion by directing that an order be drawn, awarding the fund to Radford, and dismissing the claim of George W. Myers, with costs. Thereupon the order which we have already set forth was made.

The fact that the order was made in an intervention in the original suit of Myers v. Luzerne County, and that Myers verified the petition filed by Radford, asking to have the fund in court paid over to the latter, did not raise any issue between Elijah E. Myers and Radford as to the alleged agreement that Radford should account to Myers for the fund. And the fact that both Elijah E. Myers and Radford were parties in the same suit did not have the effect to submit the controversy made in the present litigation to the decision of the United States circuit court. Judgments become estoppels because they affect matters upon which the parties have been heard or have had an opportunity to be heard, but are not conclusive upon matters not in question or immaterial. Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 268, 269, 35 L. ed. 464, 468, 469, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

It seems very clear that there was nothing in this proceeding, in the issues made or the judgment rendered, that in any wise concluded the right of Elijah E. Myers to bring suit, which he subsequently prosecuted in the state court, calling upon Radford for an accounting concerning the proceeds of the judgment in his hands.

Judgment of the Supreme Court of Michigan affirmed.

Digitized by Google

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF ASSETS COLLECTING COMPANY, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petitions for Writs of Mandamus or Certiorari.

See same case below upon first writ of error, 117 C. C. A. 190, 198 Fed. 82; upon second writ of error, 123 C. C. A. 490, 205 Fed. 362.

Messrs. Ferdinand E. M. Bullowa and Richard S. Harvey for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF YOUNG, SMYTHE, FIELD COMPANY, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for a Writ of Mandamus.

Messrs. A. R. Jackson and Mortimer C. Rhone for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

CHARLES ANDERSON, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM H. MOYER, Warden of the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. [No. —.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and to proceed in forma pauperis.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 175, 203 Fed. 881.

Mr. Lamar Hill for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

CARL OLIVER, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF TEXAS. [No. —.]

Motion for leave to docket cause and proceed in forma pauperis.

Mr. C. H. Smith for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

[735] THE GLENWOOD LIGHT & WATER COMPANY, Appt., v. THE TOWN OF GLENWOOD SPRINGS. [No 575.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 121 C. C. A. 88, 202 Fed. 678.

Messrs. W. H. Bryant, George L. Nye, and William P. Malburn for appellant.

Mr. John A. Rush for appellee.

October 27, 1913. Per Curiam: Appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 111, 112, 41 L. ed. 367, 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Defiance Water Co. v. Defiance, 191 U. S. 184, 191, 48 L. ed. 140, 143, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Shulthis v. McDougal, 225 U. S. 561, 56 L. ed. 1205, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co. 191 U. S. 150, 157, 48 L. ed. 127, 130, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 L. ed. 353, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3, 4, 26 L. ed. 939.

CHINO LEE, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 153.]

Opium—prohibiting possession—due process of law.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

See same case below, 20 Philippine, 596.

Mr. A. D. Gibbs for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Assistant Attorney General Denison for defendant in error.

October 27, 1913. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 659–663, 31 L. ed. 205, 209–211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. F. W. Cook Brewing Co. 223 U. S. 70, 82, 56 L. ed. 355, 358, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Price v. United States, 165 U. S. 311, 41 L. ed. 727, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

Digitized by Google

Henry C. King, Appellant, v. U. B. Buskirk, Trustee, et al. [No. 584.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 116 C. C. A. 119, 196 Fed. 299.

Mr. Maynard F. Stiles for appellant.

Messrs. Frank Cox and W. R. Lilly for appellee.

October 27, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Fay v. Crozer, 217 U. S. 455, 456, 54 L. ed. 837, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Waters-[736] Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 117, 118, 53 L. ed. 431, 434, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227.

M. V. Kirkpatrick, Appellant, v. Wyatt A. Harnesberger, Trustee, etc. [No. 516.]

Appeal—from district court—Federal question.

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia.

Mr. Samuel H. Myers for appellant.

Mr. Wm. H. Fleming for appellee.

November 3, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Merritt v. Bowdoin College, 169 U. S. 551, 556, 42 L. ed. 850, 852, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415.

Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company et al., Appellants, v. United States et al. [No. 539.]

Interstate Commerce Commission—review of order fixing rates—commerce court.

Appeal from the United States Commerce Court.

See same case below, 203 Fed. 56.

Messrs. Robert Dunlap and C. W. Durbrow for appellants.

Messrs. Blackburn Esterline, William E. Lamb, and P. J. Farrell for appellees.

November 3, 1913. Per Curiam: Decree affirmed on the authority of Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 454, 51 L. ed. 1133, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700, and cases cited; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 88, 110, 54 L. ed. 946, 957, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Procter & G. Co. v. United States, 225 U. S. 282, 297, 298, 56 L. ed. 1091, 1096, 1097, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 227 U. S. 88, 91, 57 L. ed. 431, 433, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

[737] John Roney et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. H. J. Van Ness. [No. 688.]

Error to state court—time of allowance.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

See same case below, 160 Cal. 131, 116 Pac. 392.

Mr. A. E. Bolton for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Theodore A. Bell for defendant in error.

November 3, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1008, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 715; Allen v. Southern P. R. Co. 173 U. S. 479, 484, 43 L. ed. 775, 776, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 36, 37 L. ed. 986, 988, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Scarborough v. Pargoud, 108 U. S. 567, 27 L. ed. 824, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877.

Pacific Creosoting Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. United States. [No. 520.]

Error to circuit court of appeals—suit under revenue laws.

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 116 C. C. A. 50, 196 Fed. 35.

Mr. George E. de Skiguer for plaintiff in error.

The Solicitor General for defendant in error.

November 3, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Anglo-Californian Bank v. United States, 175 U. S. 37, 44 L. ed. 64, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 294, 53 L. ed. 801, 802, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

John Zeller, Plaintiff in Error, v. State of New Jersey. [No. 413.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey.

See same case below, 83 N. J. L. 666, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 85 Atl. 237.

Messrs. Gilbert Collins and Marshall Van Winkle for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Edmund Wilson, Robert H. M. Carter, and Pierre P. Garven for defendant in error.

November 3, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 584, 44 L. ed. 597, 598, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 53 L. ed. 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 100, 50 L. ed. 101, 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727.

Digitized by Google

[738] WILLIAM S. LOVELL, as Trustee in Bankruptcy, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. HENRY HEINTZ & COMPANY et al. [No. 221.]

Error to circuit court of appeals—bankruptcy case.

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 113 C. C. A. 48, 192 Fed. 762.

Messrs. H. Generes Dufour and Walker Percy for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Phelan Beale for defendants in error.

November 3, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Lovell v. Newman, 227 U. S. 412, 57 L. ed. 577, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375.

THE MISSOURI, KANSAS & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY OF TEXAS, Plaintiff in Error, v. OLIVER LETOT. [No. 44.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fifth Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas.

See same case below, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 135 S. W. 656.

Messrs. James Hagerman and Joseph M. Bryson for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

November 10, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction on the authority of Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 48 L. ed. 971, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

C. F. EASTON, Receiver, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. CHICAGO HOTEL COMPANY et al. [No. 436.]

Error to circuit court—jurisdiction below.

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington.

Mr. Stephen A. Keenan for [739] plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, Charles W. Dorr, and Evans Browne for defendant in error.

November 17, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction on the authority of United States v. Congress Constr. Co. 222 U. S. 199, 56 L. ed. 163, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Fore River Shipbuilding Co. v. Hagg, 219 U. S. 175, 55 L. ed. 163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF AMERICA CAPO, Petitioner. [No. 8, Original.]

On petition for Writ of Mandamus.

Messrs. F. H. Dexter and F. D. McKenney for petitioner.

Messrs. Malcolm Donald, Charles Hartzell, and M. Rodriguez-Serra for respondent.

November 17, 1913. Per Curiam: The rule to show cause hitherto allowed is discharged, and the petition for the allowance of the Writ of Mandamus is dismissed, and the prayer for writ consequently denied. Ex parte Harding, 219 U. S. 363, 55 L. ed. 252, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 392, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324.

NEW LOUISVILLE JOCKEY CLUB et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. CITY OF OAKDALE et al. [No. 9]; and LENNOX LAND COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. CITY OF OAKDALE et al. [No. 10].

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky.

See same case below, 137 Ky. 484, 125 S. W. 1089, extended opinion, — Ky. —, 127 S. W. 538.

Messrs. William H. Field and Bernard Flexner for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. J. M. Chilton for defendants in error.

November 17, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 531, 25 L. ed. 703; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 80, 26 L. ed. 659; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF THE CITY OF VICKSBURG, Appellants, v. VICKSBURG WATER WORKS COMPANY. [No. 3.]

Appeal—from circuit court—jurisdiction.

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United [740] States for the Southern District of Mississippi.

Messrs. T. C. Catchings, O. W. Catchings, and George Anderson for appellants.

Messrs. Joseph Hirsh and J. C. Bryson for appellee.

December 1, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction, upon the authority of Bayard v. Lombard, 9 How. 530, 13 L. ed. 245; Payne v. Niles, 20 How. 219, 15 L. ed. 895; Indiana Southern R. Co. v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 168, 27 L. ed. 895, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108, and cause remanded to the district court of the United States for the southern district of Mississippi.

Digitized by Google

Jacob Glos et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. William L. O'Connell, County Treasurer, etc., et al. [No. 332.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

See same case below, 255 Ill. 49, 99 N. E. 74.

Jacob Glos, Emma J. Glos, Adam S. Glos, August A. Timke, and D. Arnold, Plaintiffs in Error, pro sese.

Mr. George Gillette for defendants in error.

December 1, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction on the authority of Glos v. Chicago, 226 U. S. 599, 57 L. ed. 375, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112, and the authorities there cited.

William Rabb, Plaintiff in Error, v. State of Louisiana. [No. 48.]

Commerce—in intoxicating liquors—state regulation.

In Error to the Criminal District Court of the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana.

Mr. Paul A. Sompayrac for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Ruffin G. Pleasant for defendant in error.

December 1, 1913. Per Curiam: Affirmed, with costs, upon the authority of Foppiano v. Speed, 199 U. S. 501, 50 L. ed. 288, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 138.

Ex parte: In the Matter of Banco Territorial y Agricola de Puerto Rico and [741] the Banco Commercial de Puerto Rico, trustees, Petitioners. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Certiorari.

See same case below, 7 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. —.

Messrs. Francis H. Dexter and Frederic D. McKenney for petitioners.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

December 1, 1913. Denied.

Joe Darsey, Plaintiff in Error, v. State of Georgia. [No. 94.]

Error to state court—final judgment.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia.

See same case below, 136 Ga. 501, 71 S. E. 661.

Mr. John Randolph Cooper for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas S. Felder for defendant in error.

December 8, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Heike v. United States, 217 U. S. 423, 54 L. ed. 821, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539.

Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. James A. Miller. [No. 588.]

Constitutional law—railway relief—validity of statute forbidding estoppel by accepting benefits.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina.

See same case below, 90 S. C. 249, 73 S. E. 71, 1 N. C. C. A. 447.

Messrs. P. A. Willcox and Frederic D. McKenney for plaintiff in error.

Mr. L. D. Jennings for defendant in error.

December 8, 1913. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed with costs, on authority of Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. McGuire, 219 U. S. 549, 55 L. ed. 328, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

Louis Elie Joseph Henry de Galard de Brassac de Bearn, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. Pierre de Bearn [No. 558]; and Louis Elie Joseph Henry de Galard de Brassac de Bearn, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. François de Bearn [No. 559]; and Louis Elie Joseph Henry de Galard de Brassac de Bearn, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. Odon de Bearn [742] [No. 560]; and Louis Elie Joseph Henry de Galard de Brassac de Bearn, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. Jean Baptiste Chaumet [No. 561.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland.

See same cases below, 119 Md. 418, 86 Atl. 1049.

Mr. Maurice Léon for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. J. Kemp Bartlett and Edgar Allan Poe for defendants in error.

December 8, 1913. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Eustis v. Bowles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Wood v. Chesborough, 228 U. S. 672, 57 L. ed. 1018, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Adams v. Russell, 229 U. S. 358, 57 L. ed. 1226, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846 and authorities there cited; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co. 226 U. S. 102, 57 L. ed. 140, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; De Bearn v. De Bearn, 225 U. S. 695, 57 L. ed. 1261, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 834.

Paris & Great Northern Railroad Company, Plaintiff in Error, v. Mrs. Georgia Boston et al. [No. 272.]

Master and servant—employer's liability to servant—Federal statute.

In Error to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Sixth Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas.

See same case below, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 142 S. W. 944.

Digitized by Google

Messrs. W. F. Evans and Edgar Wright for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Fred B. Rhodes for defendants in error.

December 15, 1913. Judgment affirmed with costs and interest by an equally divided court.

WASHINGTON DREDGING & IMPROVEMENT COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF WASHINGTON, E. V. Bussell, et al. [No. 127.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

See same case below, 53 Wash. 346, 101 Pac. 884.

Mr. W. F. Hays for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Alfred Battle and George B. Cole for defendants in error.

December 15, 1913. Per Curiam: [743] Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Preston v. Chicago, 226 U. S. 447, 450, 57 L. ed. 293, 295, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Wood v. Chesborough, 228 U. S. 672, 677, 57 L. ed. 1018, 1020, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706; Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co. 226 U. S. 102, 57 L. ed. 140, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Standard Oil Co. v. Missouri, 224 U. S. 271, 287, 56 L. ed. 760, 769, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 936.

JOHN E. HEAVNER et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. CITY OF ELKINS. [No. 103.]

Constitutional law—validity of frontage rule of assessment.

In Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia.

See same case below, 69 W. Va. 255, — L. R. A. (N.S.) —, 71 S. E. 184, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 653.

Mr. James A. Bent for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. R. H. Allen for defendant in error.

December 15, 1913. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed with costs. Schaefer v. Werling, 188 U. S. 516, 47 L. ed. 570, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Detroit v. Parker, 181 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 917, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF ADOLPH GRIMSINGER, Petitioner. [No. ——, Original.]

Motion for leave to file a petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Mr. George F. Curtis for petitioner.

The Solicitor General for respondent.

December 15, 1913. Denied.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF JONAS JONES, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Messrs. W. I. Cruce and A. C. Cruce for petitioner.

The Solicitor General for respondent.

[744] December 22, 1913. Denied.

PARKER-WASHINGTON COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. HAROLD CRAMER, a Minor, etc. [No. 449.]

Error to district court—Federal question.

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

Messrs. Henry R. Rathbone, P. H. Cullen, Thomas T. Fauntleroy, and Shepard Barclay for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Michael F. Gallagher for defendant in error.

January 5, 1914. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Union Trust Co. v. Westhus, 228 U. S. 519, 57 L. ed. 947, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593.

JAMES M. COCKINS, Petitioner, v. ADELAIDE MILLER BLICK and Horace J. Miller. [No. ——, Original.]

Petition for a Writ of Error.

Messrs. Samuel S. Mehard and Harvey A. Miller for petitioner.

Messrs. John S. Ferguson and Joseph N. Ulman for respondent.

January 5, 1914. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. NIPISSING MINES COMPANY. [No. 709.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 313, 206 Fed. 431.

[745] The Solicitor General and Mr. Assistant Attorney General Harr for petitioner.

Mr. George F. Hurd for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Granted.

JAMES SIM, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM EDENBORN [No. 711]; and THOMAS P. ALDER, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM EDENBORN [No. 712.]

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Theron G. Strong for petitioners.

Mr. Martin W. Littleton for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Granted.

Digitized by Google

PETER W. REHERD, Receiver, etc., Petitioner v. COAL & IRON RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 578.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 123 C. C. A. 155, 204 Fed. 859.

Mr. Fred O. Blue for petitioner.

Mr. B. M. Ambler for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

TOLEDO, ST. LOUIS, & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ANNA PERENCHIO. [No. 617.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 123 C. C. A. 540, 205 Fed. 472.

Messrs. Clarence Brown and C. E. Pope for petitioner.

Mr. John L. Flannigan for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

CADILLAC MOTOR CAR CO., Petitioner, v. GEORGE W. RAY, Judge, etc. [No. 636.]

Petition [746] for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Otto Kirchner for petitioner.

Mr. Andrew J. Nellis for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

ALLEN H. WALKER, Petitioner, v. IOWA CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 694.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 579, 203 Fed. 685.

Mr. Frank W. Hackett for petitioner.

Mr. W. H. Bremner for respondents.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

PACIFIC LIVESTOCK COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SILVIES RIVER IRRIGATION COMPANY et al. [No. 695.]

Petition for a writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 118 C. C. A. 513, 200 Fed. 487.

Messrs. Edward F. Treadwell, Wirt Minor, Aldis B. Browne, Alex. Britton, and Evans Browne for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

FRANCIS P. B. SANDS, Petitioner, v. HENRIETTA S. ANDERSON. [No. 698.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 40 App. D. C. 447.

Mr. Francis P. B. Sands for petitioner.

Mr. Frank J. Hogan for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

HENRY BAETZ, Petitioner, v. SCHOENLAU-KUCKKUCK TRUNK TOP & VENEER COMPANY et al. [No. 702.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the [747] United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 116 C. C. A. 588, 197 Fed. 40.

Mr. Emil Starek for petitioner.

Mr. Charles Howson for respondents.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

LIBERTY BELL GOLD MINING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SMUGGLER UNION MINING COMPANY. [No. 703.]

Petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 113, 203 Fed. 795.

Mr. Moorfield Storey for petitioner.

Messrs. Joel F. Vaile and Henry McAllister, Jr., for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

DAVID ALLEGAR, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN CAR & FOUNDRY COMPANY. [No. 705.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 319, 206 Fed. 437.

Messrs. Frank W. Hackett and Paul J. Sherwood for petitioner.

Messrs. Fred Keler and C. E. Sprout for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

CHARLES A. DAVEY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 706.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 208 Fed. 237.

Mr. Ward H. Watson for petitioner.

The Solicitor General for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

Digitized by Google

MILLARD F. FIELD, Petitioner, v. HOWARD D. COLMAN. [No. 716.]

Petition for a Writ of [748] Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 40 App. D. C. 598.

Mr. Melville Church for petitioner.

Mr. Lincoln B. Smith for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

WILLIAM W. NILES, Administrator, etc., Petitioner, v. THE LUDLOW VALVE MFG. CO. [No. 718.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 319, 202 Fed. 141.

Messrs. William W. Niles and Hartwell Cabell for petitioner.

Messrs. Samuel Untermyer, Louis Marshal, and Abraham Benedict for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

RIVERSIDE HEIGHTS ORANGE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION et al., Petitioners, v. FRED STEBLER. [No. 719.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 29, 205 Fed. 735.

Messrs. N. A. Acker and J. J. Scrivner for petitioners.

Messrs. Frederick S. Lyon and William W. Dodge for respondent.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

CHEROKEE TANNING EXTRACT COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. GEORGE H. LEONARD et al. [No. 734.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. James H. Merrimon and Thomas S. Rollins for petitioners.

Mr. Alfred S. Barnard for respondents.

October 20, 1913. Denied.

LUMBER UNDERWRITERS OF NEW YORK et al., Petitioners, v. O. C. RIFE et al. [No. 753.]

[749] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Dent Minor and R. Lee Bartels for petitioners.

No counsel appeared for respondents.

October 27, 1913. Granted.

D. J. MCDONALD et al., Petitioners, v. J. W. PLESS et al. [No. 761.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. Julius C. Martin, George H. Wright, and Thomas S. Rollins for petitioners.

Mr. E. J. Justice for respondents.

October 27, 1913. Granted.

ST. PAUL FIRE & MARINE INS. CO., Petitioner, v. HACHIROYEMON MITSUI et al. [No. 497.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 280, 202 Fed. 26.

Mr. William Denman for petitioner.

Mr. Howard S. Harrington for respondents.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

CITY OF ST. LOUIS, Petitioner, v. THE NATIONAL SURETY COMPANY. [No. 594.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 118 C. C. A. 539, 200 Fed. 387.

Mr. William E. Baird for petitioner.

Mr. W. C. Marshall for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CORA E. HAUSER, Administratrix, etc. [No. 602.]

[750] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 211 Fed. 567.

Mr. Theodore W. Reath for petitioner.

Mr. Lindsay Patterson for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

CITY OF ST. LOUIS, Petitioner, v. THE CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING COMPANY. [No. 715.]

Petition for a writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 118 C. C. A. 425, 200 Fed. 239.

Mr. William E. Baird for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

Digitized by Google

PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, & WASHINGTON RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SOUTHERN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY. [No. 723.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 26, 205 Fed. 732.

Mr. Shirley Carter for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

THE PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP COMPANY, LIMITED, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. M. ANDERSON [No. 724]; and THE PACIFIC COAST COMPANY, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. N. JORDAN [No. 725.]

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 214, 206 Fed. 148.

Mr. George W. Towle for petitioners.

Mr. William Denman for respondents.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

J. S. HARRISON et al., Petitioners, v. ELIZABETH FOLEY. [No. 748.]

Petition for a [751] Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 191, 206 Fed. 57.

Messrs. W. S. Cowherd and F. D. McKenney for petitioners.

Mr. William F. Guthrie for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

GRAND TRUNK WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. GERTRUDE GILPIN, Administratrix etc. [No. 754.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 208 Fed. 126.

Messrs. George W. Kretzinger and George W. Kretzinger, Jr., for petitioner.

Mr. James C. McShane for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF DEXTER, NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. EDMUND K. FOX. [No. 756.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 40 App. D. C. 430.

Messrs. A. S. Worthington, Charles L. Frailey, and Henry F. Woodard for petitioner.

Mr. J. J. Darlington for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

BENJAMIN F. EDWARDS, Petitioner, v. EDMUND K. FOX. [No. 757.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 39 App. D. C. 477.

Mr. W. W. Millan for petitioner.

Mr. J. J. Darlington for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

THE GLENWOOD LIGHT & WATER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. THE TOWN OF GLENWOOD SPRINGS. [No. 575.]

[752] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 121 C. C. A. 88, 202 Fed. 678.

Messrs. W. H. Bryant, George L. Nye, and William P. Malburn for petitioner.

Mr. John A. Rush for respondent.

October 27, 1913. Denied.

ELLEN CONNOLLEY, Administratrix, etc., Petitioner, v. PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 764.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 867, 119 C. C. A. 392, 201 Fed. 54.

Mr. Francis Rawle for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Hampton Barnes and Frederic D. McKenney for respondent.

November 3, 1913. Granted, and case placed on the summary docket.

JOHN A. S. BROWN et al., Petitioners, v. AUSTIN B. FLETCHER, etc. [No. 766.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Charles H. Burr for petitioners.

Mr. William P. S. Melvin for respondent.

November 3, 1913. Granted.

Digitized by Google

EMIL T. PALMENBERG et al., Petitioners, v. W. S. BUTLER & COMPANY. [No. 732]; and MORRIS BLACKSTONE et al., Petitioners, v. EVERYBODY'S STORE, INCORPORATED, et al. [No. 733].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, No. 732, 207 Fed. 705, No. 733, 207 Fed. 752.

Mr. Harvey H. Pratt for petitioners.

Messrs. Charles F. Choate, Jr., Frederick H. Nash, and Boyd B. Jones, for respondents.

November 3, 1913. Denied.

---

[753] RUTH KRAMER, Petitioner, v. ERNEST W. KRAMER. [736.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 119 C. C. A. 482, 201 Fed. 248.

Mr. Augustus O. Bacon for petitioner.

Mr. Edgar Watkins for respondent.

November 3, 1913. Denied.

AMERICAN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY et al. [No. 762.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, first appeal 60 C. C. A. 220, 125 Fed. 342, second appeal, 122 C. C. A. 103, 203 Fed. 785.

Messrs. Charles H. Swan, John C. Gray, and Frederick P. Fish for petitioner.

Messrs. J. H. Benton and Rush Taggart for respondent.

November 10, 1913. Denied.

BELVA A. LOCKWOOD, Petitioner, v. FRANK M. RUCKER, Administrator, etc. [No. 585.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 40 App. D. C. 422.

Messrs. Isaac R. Hitt and Richard P. Evans for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

November 10, 1913. Denied.

CITY WATER COMPANY OF CHILLICOTHE, Petitioner, v. CITY OF CHILLICOTHE, MISSOURI. [No. 768.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 207 Fed. 503.

Messrs. James H. Harkless, Clifford Histed, and Morgan M. Mann for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph J. Russell for respondent.

November 10, 1913. Denied.

---

[754] ANNIE F. CRAIG, Administratrix, etc., Petitioner, v. EMILY E. PARISH, Executrix, etc. [No. 769.]

Petition for a writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 40 App. D. C. 138.

Messrs. Frank W. Hackett and Chauncey Hackett for petitioner.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and Leigh Robinson for respondent.

November 10, 1913. Denied.

CARBORUNDUM COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ELECTRIC SMELTING & ALUMINUM COMPANY. [No. 770.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 122 C. C. A. 276, 203 Fed. 976.

Mr. Philander C. Knox for petitioner.

Mr. Francis C. McMillin for respondent.

November 10, 1913. Denied.

SAMUEL B. ARCHER et al., Petitioners, v. IMPERIAL MACHINE COMPANY. [No. 720.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 638, 207 Fed. 81.

Mr. Samuel B. Archer in propria persona for petitioners.

Mr. Ernest Wilkinson for respondent.

November 17, 1913. Denied.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNION RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 779.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 207 Fed. 745.

Messrs. Dent Minor, Charles N. Burch, and Blewett Lee for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

November 17, 1913. Denied.

Digitized by Google

[755] STREET & SMITH, a Copartnership, etc., Appellants, v. ATLAS MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al. [No. 618.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari herein to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1002, 122 C. C. A. 568, 204 Fed. 398.

Mr. Hugh K. Wagner for appellants.

Mr. James Love Hopkins for appellees.

November 17, 1913. Denied.

ELIZABETH S. RUTLAND, Petitioner, v. ST. LOUIS & SAN FRANCISCO RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 780.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 207 Fed. 287.

Mr. Caruthers Ewing for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

December 8, 1913. Denied.

SARA GYE, Widow of John Gye, Petitioner, v. HAMBURG AMERICANISCHE PACKETSAHRT AKTIEM GESELSCHAFFT. [No. 783.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 124 C. C. A. 517, 207 Fed. 247.

Messrs. H. Garland Dupré, Charles F. Consaul, and I. M. Moyers for petitioner.

No counsel appeared for respondent.

December 8, 1913. Denied.

JOHN BARTON MILLER, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 784.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 41 App. D. C. 52.

Messrs. Henry E. Davis and John E. Laskey for petitioner.

The Solicitor General and Mr. Clarence R. Wilson for respondent.

December 8, 1913. Denied.

HERMAN C. H. HEBOLD, Collector, Petitioner, v. MUTUAL BENEFIT LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY. [No. 808.]

[756] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 120 C. C. A. 256, 201 Fed. 918.

The Solicitor General for petitioner.

Messrs. John O. H. Pitney and John R. Hardin for respondent.

December 15, 1913. Denied.

HAMILTON-BROWN SHOE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WOLF BROTHERS & COMPANY. [No. 813.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. H. S. Priest, Morton Jourdan, Joseph W. Bailey, and Luke E. Hart for petitioner.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell, Percy Werner, and Simeon M. Johnson for respondent.

December 22, 1913. Granted.

HANOVER STAR MILLING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. D. D. METCALF. [No. 740.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Henry Fitts for petitioner.

Messrs. John C. Higdon, Edward Everett Longan, and J. F. Gilster for respondent.

January 5, 1914. Granted.

CITY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM SAGE, JR. [No. 807.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Louis C. White for petitioner.

Mr. Edward A. Alexander for respondent.

January 5, 1914. Granted.

ANNIE MYERS, Petitioner, v. PITTSBURGH COAL COMPANY. [No. 816.]

Petition for Writ of [757] Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 121 C. C. A. 427, 203 Fed. 221.

Mr. Edward C. Goodwin for petitioner.

Mr. Charles Marshall Johnston for respondent.

January 5, 1914. Granted.

CHARLES S. INTERMELA et al., Petitioners, v. DAVID PERKINS. [No. 795.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 123 C. C. A. 619, 205 Fed. 603.

Mr. Walter S. Penfield for petitioners.

Mr. Charles E. Shepard for respondent.

January 5, 1914. Denied.

Digitized by Google

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Appellant, v. CITY OF GREELEY et al. [No. 145.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., for appellant.

Messrs. John M. Thurston, E. E. Whitted, W. S. Summers, Joseph C. Helm and W. H. Bryant for appellees.

October 14, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

NORTHWESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 31.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Edward M. Cleary for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

October 14, 1913. Dismissed on motion of Mr. Evans Browne, in behalf of counsel for the [758] plaintiff in error.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Appellant, v. KING COUNTY, Washington et. al. [No. 331.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 116 C. C. A. 143, 196 Fed. 323.

Messrs. C. W. Bunn and A. B. Browne for appellant.

Mr. Hugh M. Caldwell for appellees.

October 14, 1913. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation of counsel, on motion of Mr. Evans Browne for the appellant.

TITLE GUARANTY & SURETY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES TO THE USE OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY. [No. 125.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 106, 187 Fed. 98.

Messrs. Russell H. Robbins and James F. Campbell for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. H. B. Gill and Louis Barcroft Runk for defendants in error.

October 15, 1913. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. KASKELL SOLOMON et al. [No. 132.]

In Error to the Superior Court of the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Charles F. Patterson for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Harry J. Nesbit for defendants in error.

October 15, 1913. Judgment reversed, with costs, per stipulation of counsel, and cause remanded for further proceedings.

JOHN MCKAY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. [No. 428.]

In Error to the District [759] Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota.

Mr. Albert R. Moore for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

October 15, 1913. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

ROSE MCKAY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. [No. 429.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota.

Mr. Albert R. Moore for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

October 15, 1913. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

LUCY GRACE MUSICA, Plaintiff in Error, v. THE STATE OF LOUISIANA. [No. 637.]

In Error to the First City Criminal Court of the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana.

Mr. Henry L. Lazarus for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

October 15, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

LOUISE MUSICA, Plaintiff in Error, v. THE STATE OF LOUISIANA. [No. 638.]

In Error to the First City Criminal Court of the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana.

Mr. Henry L. Lazarus for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

October 15, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

Digitized by Google

GEORGE H. BEDDOW, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 195.]

In Error to the District Court of the [760] United States for the Western District of Michigan.

Mr. M. M. Riley for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

October 15, 1913. Dismissed pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

GEORGE WELSCH, Plaintiff in Error, v. CLEMENT L. RILEY, as Auditor of Licking County, Ohio, et al. [No. 70.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

See same case below, 84 Ohio St. 496, 95 N. E. 1158.

Messrs. R. W. McCoy, Roderic Jones, and J. Howard Jones for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Timothy S. Hogan and Frank Davis, Junior, for defendants in error.

October 20, 1913. Dismissed per stipulation on motion of counsel for the defendants in error.

JOHN W. BROWN, Plaintiff in Error, v. CLEMENT L. V. HOLTZ, as County Treasurer, etc., et al. [No. 222.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

Mr. Fred C. Rector for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Timothy S. Hogan and Frank Davis, Junior, for defendants in error.

October 20, 1913. Dismissed per stipulation on motion of counsel for defendants in error.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Appellant, v. DENVER, LARAMIE, & NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 146.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 571, 189 Fed. 1.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., for appellant.

Mr. W. H. Bryant for appellee.

October 24, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

---

[761] ST. LOUIS GUNNING ADVERTISING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. CITY OF ST. LOUIS et al. [No. 51.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 235 Mo. 99, 137 S. W. 929.

Mr. Morton Jourdan for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. William E. Baird and Lambert E. Walther for defendants in error.

October 24, 1913. Dismissed per stipulation.

JAMES TALCOTT, Appellant, v. ALFRED E. OMMEN, as Trustee, etc. [No. 113]; and ALFRED E. OMMEN, as Trustee, etc., Appellant, v. JAMES TALCOTT [No. 114].

Appeals from the United Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Arthur C. Rounds for Talcott.

Mr. Frederick M. Czaki for Ommen, Trustee, etc.

October 27, 1913. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation of counsel.

SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appellant, v. WIRT ADAMS, State Revenue Agent of Mississippi, et al. [No. 32.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 107 C. C. A. 658, 185 Fed. 768.

Messrs. C. H. Alexander and J. N. Flowers for appellant.

Mr. Edward Mayes for appellee.

October 31, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on joint motion of counsel for both parties.

HENRY C. LOEB, Trustee in Bankruptcy of the Block Mercantile Company, Appellant, v. GERMANIA SAVINGS BANK & TRUST COMPANY. [No. 49.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. W. A. Percy for appellant.

Mr. J. Hirsh for appellee.

November 4, 1913. Dismissed with costs, [762] pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

ELVIRA FERNANDEZ BLANCO et al., Appellants, v. JOSÉ ANTONIO FERNANDEZ Y PEREZ et al. [No. 53.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico.

Mr. Francis H. Dexter for appellants.

Mr. Willis Sweet for appellees.

November 5, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

LENA DUPUIS, Appellant, v. SAMUEL W. BACKUS, Commissioner of Immigration, etc. [No. 387.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

November 6, 1913. Dismissed, with costs and mandate granted, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

Digitized by Google

WILLIAM S. TEVIS et al., Plaintiffs in Error. v. JEFF RYAN et al. [No. 81.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. A. C. Baker for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

November 10, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Evans Browne, on behalf of counsel for the plaintiffs in error, and cause remanded to the Supreme Court of the State of Arizona.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FÉ RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STAR GRAIN & [763] LUMBER COMPANY. [No. 123.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

See same case below, 85 Kan. 281, 116 Pac. 906.

Mr. Robert Dunlap for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Carr W. Taylor for defendant in error.

November 10, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Evans Browne on behalf of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

BOOTH FISHERIES COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS [No. 264]; and BOOTH FISHERIES COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS [No. 265.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

Messrs. John Barton Payne and Silas H. Strawn for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

November 10, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion for the plaintiff in error.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Appellant, v. M. E. TRAPP, as Auditor of the State of Oklahoma, et al. [No. 80.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 226, 186 Fed. 114.

Mr. S. T. Bledsoe for appellant.

Mr. Charles West for respondents.

November 12, 1913. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation of counsel.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA EX RELATIONE GRAND RAPIDS TIMBER COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WALTER L. FISHER, Secretary of the Interior. [No. 143.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. [764] Duane E. Fox for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

November 10, 1913. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

CREAMERY PACKAGE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF MINNESOTA. [No. 88.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Messrs. George C. Fry and Emanuel Cohen for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Lyndon A. Smith for defendant in error.

November 14, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

FRED J. BLISS, Petitioner, v. WASHOE COPPER COMPANY et al. [No. 90.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 133, 186 Fed. 789.

Messrs. Robert Lee Clinton, Hannis Taylor, and Caleb M. Sawyer for petitioner.

Messrs. John Garver, James M. Beck, and L. O. Evans for respondents.

November 14, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

A. EMERSON CROSS, Administrator, etc., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. GRAY'S HARBOR BOOM COMPANY. [No. 91.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

See same case below, 54 Wash. 83, 102 Pac. 1041, 104 Pac. 267.

Mr. Charles W. Needham for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

November 14, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Digitized by Google

ELLEN CONNELLEY, Administratrix, etc., Petitioner, v. PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 764.]

[765] On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 47 L.R.A.(N.S.) 867, 119 C. C. A. 392, 201 Fed. 54.

Mr. Francis Rawle for petitioner.

Messrs. J. Hampton Barnes and Frederic D. McKenney for respondent.

November 17, 1913. Judgment reversed with costs, upon confession of error, on motion of Frederic D. McKenney for the respondent.

YOSHIRO NAKAYAMA, Appellant, v. W. R. MANSFIELD, Immigration Inspector, etc. [No. 493.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado.

Mr. Samuel H. Crosby for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

December 1, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

MARY B. HERBERT, Plaintiff in Error, v. S. R. WAGG et al. [No. 95.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. I. N. Watson for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edward Maher for defendants in error.

December 3, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JOHN H. JONES, Plaintiff in Error, v. DAVID MOULD, Judge, etc., et al. [No. 96.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa.

Mr. Wilbur Owen for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

December 3, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

SELOVER, BATES, & COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. OLE A. FINNES. [No. 101.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the [766] State of Minnesota.

Messrs. Rome G. Brown and Arthur W. Selover for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Otto N. Davies for defendant in error.

December 4, 1913. Judgment affirmed with costs, per stipulation of counsel.

FRED E. EARNHART, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOHN B. SWITZLER. [No. 106.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon.

Mr. Henry H. Gilfoy for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. R. J. Slater and Samuel Herrick for defendant in error.

December 5, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

QUENTIN GARRETT, by William C. Garrett, His Next Friend, Plaintiff in Error, v. AMERICAN BAPTIST HOME MISSION SOCIETY et al. [No. 110.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

Messrs. Joseph C. Stone and Benj. Martin, Jr., for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

December 5, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

KAPIOLANI ESTATE (LIMITED), Plaintiff in Error, v. TERRITORY OF HAWAII, by Marston Campbell, Commissioner of Public Lands. [No. 117.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii.

Messrs. David L. Withington and C. W. Ashford for plaintiff in error.

Mr. C. R. Hemenway for defendant in error.

December 8, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

ISAAC N. BOARTS, Trustee, etc., Appellant, v. J. M. SELDEN & COMPANY. [No. 116.]

Appeal from the United [767] States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. Harry H. Fisher and Joseph Hill Brinton for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

December 9, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

PETER J. O'REILLY, Plaintiff in Error, v. DORA F. NOXON, as Administratrix, etc. [No. 124.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado.

See same case below, 49 Colo. 362, 113 Pac. 486.

Mr. Henry B. O'Reilly for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

December 10, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

Digitized by Google

THEODORE SWENSEN, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN. [No. 129.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell and Joseph S. Graydon for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Franz C. Kuhn and Grant Fellows for defendants in error.

December 10, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

LOUIS F. SWIFT et al., Appellants, v. LUMAN T. HOY, United States Marshal in and for the Northern District of Illinois. [No. 131.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

Messrs. John S. Miller and Levy Mayer for appellants.

The Attorney General for appellee.

December 11, 1913. Dismissed without cost to either party, per stipulation of counsel, and cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

---

[768] JULIO O. ABRIL, Plaintiff in Error, v. SUCRERIE CENTRALE COLOSO, a Corporation. [No. 139.]

In Error to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico.

Mr. Willis Sweet for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendants in error.

December 12, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JAMES C. YANCEY, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 445.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of California.

Mr. Frank Fuller for appellant.

The Attorney General for appellee.

December 15, 1913. Dismissed, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

GRAND LODGE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS, NORTH AMERICA, etc., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. SUPREME LODGE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS et al. [No. 261.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee.

Messrs. Samuel A. T. Watkins, Benjamin F. Booth, and M. T. Bryan for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. John H. DeWitt for defendants in error.

December 15, 1913. Judgment reversed with costs, on confession of error by defendants in error, and cause remanded for further proceedings.

UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Ancillary Administrator, etc., Appellant, v. NATIONAL SAVINGS & TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Administrator, etc., [No. 147.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston for appellant.

Mr. J. J. Darlington for appellee.

[769] December 15, 1913. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

THOMAS C. PERKINS et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. ARTHUR D. COFFIN et al. [No. 587.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut.

Mr. Lucius F. Robinson for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. John R. Buck and John H. Buck for defendants in error.

January 5, 1914. Dismissed, per stipulation of counsel.

W. A. GAINES & COMPANY, Appellant, v. TURNER-LOOKER COMPANY. [No. 778.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. James Love Hopkins for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellee.

January 5, 1914. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

THE RICHMOND, FREDERICKSBURG, & POTOMAC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA. [No. 25.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia.

See same case below, 111 Va. 611, 69 S. E. 1070.

Messrs. A. Caperton Braxton and John S. Eggleston for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Samuel W. Williams for defendant in error.

July 15, 1913. Dismissed pursuant to the Twenty-eighth Rule.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

Vol. 232.

58 L. ed.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1918,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 232,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION

Off. Rep. 232 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Hawley v. Malden	477
8–9	" "	481
9–12	" "	482
12–13	" "	483
14	Barrett v. New York	483
23–28	" "	487
28	" "	488
28–29	" "	489
29–31	" "	490
31–34	" "	491
34–35	" "	492
35	Platt v. New York	492
36–37	" "	493
37	" "	494
37	United States v. Regan	494
40	" "	495
40–43	" "	496
43–46	" "	497
46–48	" "	498
48–50	" "	499
51	Swift v. McPherson	499
51–52	" "	500
52–55	" "	501
55–57	" "	503
57	" "	504
58	National Safe Deposit Co. v. Stead	504
58–60	" "	505
60	" "	506
66–67	" "	509
67–70	" "	510
70–71	" "	511
72–73	United States v. Buchanan	511
73	" "	512
74–75	" "	513
75–77	" "	514
77	" "	515
78	Lapina v. Williams	515
82–84	" "	516
84–86	" "	517
86–88	" "	518
88–91	" "	519
91–93	" "	520
93	Lapina v. Williams	521
94	Gila Valley, G. N. & N. R. Co. v. Hall	521
97	" "	522
97–99	" "	523
99–102	" "	524
102–104	" "	525
104–105	" "	526
106–107	Bank of Arizona v. Thomas Haverty Co.	526
107–110	" "	527
110	Ross v. Day	528
112–114	" "	528
114–116	" "	529
116–117	" "	530
117	Barnes v. Alexander	530
118–120	" "	532
120–122	" "	533
122–123	" "	534
124	Cain v. Commercial Pub. Co.	534
128–130	" "	536
130–133	" "	537
133–134	" "	539
134–137	Bacon v. Rutland R. Co.	538
137–138	" "	539
138	Patsone v. Pennsylvania	539
143–144	" "	543
144–146	" "	544
146	Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Cockrell	544
149–151	" "	546
151–154	" "	547
154–155	" "	548
155	United States v. Young	548
155–158	" "	549
158–160	" "	550
160–162	" "	551
162	Burbank v. Ernst	551
163–165	" "	553
165	" "	554
165	Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Polt	554
167–168	" "	555

Digitized by Google

Off. Rep. 282 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
166	Alabama v. Schmidt	555
172	" "	557
172–174	" "	558
174	Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank	558
179–181	" "	561
181–183	" "	562
183–186	" "	563
186	" "	564
186	Chapman & B. Lumber Co. v. St. Francis Levee Dist.	564
194	" "	566
194–196	" "	567
196–198	" "	568
199	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States	568
200–201	" "	569
201–204	" "	570
204	" "	571
212–213	" "	573
213–215	" "	574
215–218	" "	575
218–220	" "	576
220–221	" "	577
221	Thomas v. Matthiessen	577
232–234	" "	583
234–236	" "	584
236	Miedreich v. Lauenstein	584
241–243	" "	589
243–246	" "	590
246–247	" "	591
248	North Carolina R. Co. v. Zachary	591
254–256	" "	594
256–259	" "	595
259–261	" "	596
261	Billings v. United States	596
278	" "	603
278–279	" "	604
279–282	" "	605
282–284	" "	606
284–287	" "	607
287–288	" "	608
289	United States v. Billings	608
289–290	" "	609
290–291	Pierce v. United States	609
292–293	" "	610
293	United States v. Goelet	610
294–297	" "	611
297–298	" "	612
299	United States v. Bennett	612
300–303	" "	614
303–305	" "	615
305–306	" "	616
306	" "	616
309–310	" "	617
310	Rainey v. United States	617
313–315	" "	619
315–317	" "	620
317	" "	621
318–319	Harrison v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co.	621
319–322	" "	622
322–323	" "	623
327–328	" "	624
328–331	" "	625
331–333	" "	626
333–334	" "	627
334–335	Baccus v. Louisiana	627
335–336	" "	628

Off. Rep. 282 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
337	Baccus v. Louisiana	629
337–338	" "	630
338–339	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission	630
340–342	Leroy Fibre Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.	631
342–343	" "	632
348–349	" "	633
349–352	" "	634
352–354	" "	635
355	Jones v. St. Louis Land & Cattle Co.	635
358–359	" "	636
359–361	" "	637
361–363	" "	638
363	Taylor v. Taylor	638
365	" "	639
365–368	" "	640
368–370	" "	641
370–371	" "	642
371	Calaf y Fugurul v. Calaf y Rivera	642
372–373	" "	644
373–374	" "	645
375	Montoya v. Gonzales	645
376–377	" "	649
377–379	" "	650
379	Mitchell Store Bldg Co. v. Carroll	650
380–382	" "	651
382	" "	652
383	Weeks v. United States	652
386–388	" "	653
388–390	" "	654
390–393	" "	655
393–395	" "	656
395–398	" "	657
398–399	" "	658
399	United States v. Lexington Mill & Elevator Co.	658
404–406	" "	660
406–409	" "	661
409–411	" "	662
411–413	" "	663
413	Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.	663
414–416	" "	665
416–418	" "	666
418–420	" "	667
420–421	Seim v. Hurd	667
421–423	" "	668
423–426	" "	669
426–427	" "	670
428	Woodward Co. v. Hurd	670
428–430	" "	671
430	Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minneapolis	671
436–437	" "	673
437–439	" "	674
439–442	" "	675
442	" "	676
442	United States v. Pelican	676
444–445	" "	677
445–447	" "	678
447–450	" "	679
450–452	" "	680
452	Gauthier v. Morrison	680
456–457	" "	683

Digitized by Google

Off. Rep. 232 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
457–460	Gauthier v. Morrison	684
460–462	" "	685
462	" "	686
463–464	United States v. Beatty	686
464–467	" "	687
467–468	" "	688
469	Thurston v. United States	688
475–476	" "	690
476–478	" "	691
478	Perrin v. United States	691
480–481	" "	693
481–484	" "	694
484–486	" "	695
486–487	" "	696
487	Pronovost v. United States	696
489–490	" "	697
490	Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Cramer	697
492–493	" "	698
494	D. E. Foote & Co. v. Stanley	698
495–497	" "	699
497	" "	700
502–504	" "	701
504–506	" "	702
507–508	" "	703
508	Great Northern R. Co. v. O'Connor	703
509–511	" "	704
511–514	" "	705
514–516	" "	706
516	Farmers & M. Sav. Bank v. Minnesota	706
520–522	" "	709
522–524	" "	710
524–527	" "	711
527–529	" "	712
529–531	" "	713
531	Plymouth Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania	713
532–535	" "	714
535–536	" "	715
539–540	" "	717
540–543	" "	718
543–545	" "	719
545–547	" "	720
547	" "	721
548	Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Goldsboro	721
550–551	" "	723
551–554	" "	724
554–556	" "	725
556–559	" "	726
559–561	" "	727
561–562	" "	728
563	Wilson v. United States	728
565	" "	730
565–568	" "	731
568–570	" "	732
570–571	" "	733
571	Weinman v. DePalma	733
572–574	" "	736
574–576	" "	737
576	Ohio Tax Cases (Ohio River & W. R. Co. v. Dittey)	737
578	" "	738
578–580	" "	739
586–587	" "	743
587–590	" "	744
590–592	" "	745
592–594	" "	746

Off. Rep. 232 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
595	Paine v. Copper Belle Min. Co.	746
595–597	" "	747
597	" "	748
598	United States ex rel. Brown v. Lane	748
599–600	" "	749
600–602	" "	750
602	Young v. Central R. Co. of N. J.	750
603–604	" "	751
604	Priest v. Las Vegas	751
605–606	" "	753
606–609	" "	754
609–612	" "	755
612–614	" "	756
614–617	" "	757
617–618	" "	758
619	Williamson v. Osenton	758
623–625	" "	761
625–626	" "	762
626	Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Kennedy	762
627	" "	763
627	Porto Rico v. Ramos	763
628–631	" "	764
631–633	" "	765
633	Curriden v. Middleton	765
635	" "	766
635–636	" "	767
637	Holt v. Henley	767
638–639	" "	771
639–641	" "	772
642	Garland v. Washington	772
643–644	" "	774
644–647	" "	775
647	" "	776
647	Grant Bros. Constr. Co. v. United States	776
656–657	" "	782
657–659	" "	783
660–662	" "	784
662–665	" "	785
665	" "	786
665	Stewart v. Michigan	786
667–668	" "	787
668–671	" "	788
671	Riley v. Massachusetts	788
678–680	" "	794
680–681	" "	795
682	Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. West	795
683–685	" "	798
685–688	" "	799
688–690	" "	800
690–693	" "	801
693	" "	802
694	Santa Fe Central R. Co. v. Friday	802
698–699	" "	802
699–700	" "	803
700	Eberle v. Michigan	803
702	" "	804
702–705	" "	805
705–707	" "	806
707	Schuyler v. Littlefield	806
710	" "	807
710–713	" "	808
713	" "	809
714–737	Memorandum Decisions	811–838

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1913.

---

[1] TRUMAN R. HAWLEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF MALDEN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1–13.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — taxation of shares in foreign corporation.

The taxation of a resident of the state, under the authority of Mass. Rev. Laws, chap. 12, §§ 2, 4, 23, upon shares of stock held by him in foreign corporations which do no business and have no property within the state, does not take his property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 6; Taxes, I. c, 3, a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 18.]

Argued March 6 and 7, 1913. Decided January 5, 1914.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action to recover back taxes paid under protest, entered pursuant to the direction of the Supreme Judicial Court of that state after a demurrer to the declaration had been sustained by the Superior Court. Affirmed.

See same case below, in Supreme Judicial Court, 204 Mass. 138, 90 N. E. 415.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On personal property having situs for taxation elsewhere as subject of taxation in the state of the owner's domicil—see note to Com. v. West India Oil Ref. Co. 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 295.

Messers. Courtenay Crocker and Nathan Matthews argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The question is still an open one in this court.

Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 195 U. S. 219, 49 L. ed. 167, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Darnell v. Indiana, 226 U. S. 390, 57 L. ed. 267, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

No question can be considered or decided in this court which was not specifically called to the attention of, and decided by, the lower court.

First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 363, 19 L. ed. 701, 704; Edwards v. Elliott, 21 Wall. 532, 557, 22 L. ed. 487, 492; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572, 574, 26 L. ed. 234, 235; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111, 115, 38 L. ed. 927, 929, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 151, 46 L. ed. 847, 849, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 136, 47 L. ed. 106, 103, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 361, 47 L. ed. 214, 216, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 308, 47 L. ed. 480, 484, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 128, 49 L. ed. 413, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 281, 50 L. ed. 1026, 1028, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Cox v. Texas, 202 U. S. 446, 451, 452, 50 L. ed. 1099, 1101, 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Osborne v. Clark, 204 U. S. 565, 568, 569, 51 L. ed. 619, 625, 626, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Kansas

Digitized by Google

City Star Co. v. Julian, 215 U. S. 589, 54 L. ed. 340, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406.

It makes no difference whether the case comes up from a state court by writ of error, or from a lower Federal court. In either case the rule is the same.

Robinson v. Belt, 187 U. S. 41, 47 L. ed. 65, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Insurance Co. v. Mordecai, 22 How. 111, 117, 16 L. ed. 329, 331; Wheeler v. Sedgwick, 94 U. S. 1, 3, 24 L. ed. 31, 32; Clark v. Fredericks (Davis v. Fredericks) 105 U. S. 4, 26 L. ed. 938; Jones v. United States, 103 C. C. A. 142, 179 Fed. 584.

A state law which violates directly, or by necessary operation, some specific provision of the Federal Constitution, is void.

Almy v. California, 24 How. 169, 16 L. ed. 644; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 294, 45 L. ed. 862, 867, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 135; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; New York ex rel. Bank of Commerce v. Tax & A. Comrs. 2 Black, 620, 17 L. ed. 451; Bank Tax Case (New York ex rel. Bank of Commonwealth v. Tax & A. Comrs.) 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793; Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 667, 668, 43 L. ed. 850, 852, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537.

Congress has expressly provided in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502, that shares of stock in national banks, wherever held, shall be taxable in the state, and only in the state, where the bank is located; and this court has sustained the validity of that provision, thus recognizing the propriety of taxing shares of stock in the state where the company is organized and does business.

New York v. Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 244, 18 L. ed. 344; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 668, 43 L. ed. 850, 852, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Third Nat. Bank v. Stone, 174 U. S. 432, 43 L. ed. 1035, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Louisville v. Third Nat. Bank, 174 U. S. 435, 43 L. ed. 1037, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Louisville v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 174 U. S. 436, 43 L. ed. 1037, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; First Nat. Bank v. Louisville, 174 U. S. 438, 43 L. ed. 1038, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Louisville v. Bank of Louisville, 174 U. S. 439, 43 L. ed. 1039, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753; Cleveland Trust Co. v. Lander, 184 U. S. 111, 46 L. ed. 456, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Van Allen v. Assessors (Churchill v. Utica) 3 Wall. 573, 18 L. ed. 229; Bradley v. Illinois, 4 Wall. 459, 18 L. ed. 433.

Independently of the 14th Amendment, a state law which attempts to tax property situated in another state is void on general principles, as that the state can have no jurisdiction over such property.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 429, 430, 20 L. ed. 192, 194; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 476, 478, 21 L. ed. 303–305; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 396, 398, 47 L. ed. 513, 518, 519, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 204, 50 L. ed. 150, 153, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493.

Since the adoption of the 14th Amendment it is well established that for a state to tax property beyond its jurisdiction is to violate the due process clause of that Amendment by depriving the owner of his property without due process of law.

Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 398, 47 L. ed. 513, 519, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 358, 49 L. ed. 1077, 1083, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 209, 210, 50 L. ed. 150, 155, 156, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 51 L. ed. 853, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 38, 54 L. ed. 355, 370, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 74, 56 L. ed. 96, 100, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

Taxes cannot be levied on land belonging to a resident, but situated in another state.

Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 398, 47 L. ed. 513, 519, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 360, 49 L. ed. 1077, 1084, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 204, 50 L. ed. 150, 153, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Keeney v. New York, 222 U. S. 525, 537, 56 L. ed. 299, 305, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1139, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

Taxes cannot be levied on tangible personal property belonging to a resident, but which has acquired a permanent location or situs in another state.

Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 Ann. Cas. 1100; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149, 44 L. ed. 708, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493.

Digitized by Google

Such property may be taxed in the state where it is, although belonging to a nonresident.

Gromer v. Standard Dredging Co. 224 U. S. 362, 56 L. ed. 801, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 156 U. S. 577, 39 L. ed. 538, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 30, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Carstairs v. Cochran, 193 U. S. 10, 48 L. ed. 596, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Thompson v. Kentucky, 209 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 822, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Hannis Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 216 U. S. 285, 54 L. ed. 482, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 22, 23, 35 L. ed. 613, 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 400, 401, 51 L. ed. 1106, 1111, 1112, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 123, 32 L. ed. 94, 96, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 74, 56 L. ed. 96, 100, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

Taxes cannot be levied on corporate franchises belonging to a resident, but granted by the United States (California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 40, 41, 32 L. ed. 150, 157, 158, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073), or by another state (Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 401, 51 L. ed. 1106, 1111, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732).

State taxes upon the property of a resident have been held not to violate the due-process clause when the property consists:

(a) Of tangible personal property which is not permanently located or used in other states. So held as to vessels not permanently operated in other states (Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 68, 69, 56 L. ed. 96, 98, 99, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13), and railroad cars not permanently employed in other states (New York ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Miller, 202 U. S. 584, 596, 597, 50 L. ed. 1155, 1159, 1160, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714); or —

(b) Of debts due from residents of other states, whether secured by mortgage on property in another state (Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558) or not (Bonaparte v. Appeal Tax Ct. 104 U. S. 592, 26 L. ed. 845).

The rule mobilia sequuntur personam is a legal fiction; it must always give way in matters of taxation to the facts of the case; and it does not authorize the taxation at the domicil of the owner of property which, whether tangible or intangible, is actually located and protected in some other state.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 150, 19 L. ed. 109, 113; St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 430, 20 L. ed. 192, 194; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 22, 35 L. ed. 613, 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 224, 41 L. ed. 965, 978, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 581, 582, 46 L. ed. 697, 700, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 208, 50 L. ed. 150, 155, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 400, 51 L. ed. 1106, 1111, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 221 U. S. 346, 354, 55 L. ed. 762, 767, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

Some forms of indebtedness may be subject to taxation in two states.

Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; State Assessors v. Comptoir National D'Escompte, 191 U. S. 395, 48 L. ed. 234, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 51 L. ed. 853, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 221 U. S. 346, 55 L. ed. 762, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

A state cannot reach for taxation property which itself is not subject to taxation by means of a tax upon the documents which represent the property.

Almy v. California, 24 How. 169, 16 L. ed. 644; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 135; Selliger v. Kentucky, 213 U. S. 200, 53 L. ed. 761, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 51 L. ed. 1106, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 402, 51 L. ed. 853, 856, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

If the property cannot be taxed specifically because outside the state, it cannot be reached indirectly, as by a general tax on the capital stock or property of a domestic corporation which would include the property outside the state.

Digitized by Google

Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 204, 50 L. ed. 150, 153, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493.

Some of the decisions which may be relied on by defendant in error relate to points which have no bearing upon the case at bar.

(a) The inheritance tax decisions.

Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 408, 51 L. ed. 1106, 1114, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 Ann. Cas. 732; Keeney v. New York, 222 U. S. 525, 56 L. ed. 299, 38 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1139, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

(b) The taxation of domestic corporations.

State R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Corry v. Baltimore, 196 U. S. 466, 49 L. ed. 556, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

(c) The difference between the property, capital, or stock of a corporation and the shares of stock in the company held by individuals has been the frequent subject of comment by this court. That these differences are many and great may be conceded.

First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Delaware R. Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 503, 22 L. ed. 189, 195; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 24 L. ed. 558; Dewing v. Perdicaries, 96 U. S. 193, 24 L. ed. 654; Gibbons v. Mahon, 136 U. S. 558, 34 L. ed. 527, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1057; Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. 177 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 647, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

The reason why property physically situated in one state is not taxable elsewhere is said to be that taxation and protection are correlative incidents, and that if protection can be furnished only in the state where the property is situated, taxation must be confined to that state.

Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 501, 22 L. ed. 189, 194; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 204, 50 L. ed. 150, 153, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 221 U. S. 346, 356, 55 L. ed. 762, 768, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

Mr. H. L. Boutwell argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

This form of taxation of shares of the stock of foreign corporations owned by individuals has existed under the laws of Massachusetts for more than seventy years. We find substantially the same provision derived from an earlier enactment, in Revised Statutes, chap. 7, § 3, and it has remained in force ever since. Its validity and constitutionality have been sustained by repeated decisions of the courts of Massachusetts, covering a period of many years.

Great Barrington v. Berkshire, 16 Pick. 572; Dwight v. Boston, 12 Allen, 316, 90 Am. Dec. 149; Frothingham v. Shaw, 175 Mass. 61, 78 Am. St. Rep. 475, 55 N. E. 623; Hawley v. Malden, 204 Mass. 138, 90 N. E. 415.

A similar rule has been laid down in the decisions of the courts of many other states.

State v. Kidd, 125 Ala. 413, 28 So. 480; Greenleaf v. Morgan County, 184 Ill. 226, 75 Am. St. Rep. 168, 56 N. E. 295; Seward v. Rising Sun, 79 Ind. 351; Griffith v. Watson, 19 Kan. 23; Appeal Tax Ct. v. Gill, 50 Md. 377; Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 126 Mich. 22, 60 L.R.A. 321, 86 Am. St. Rep. 524, 85 N. W. 307; Ogden v. St. Joseph, 90 Mo. 522, 3 S. W. 25; State, Fish, Prosecutor, v. Branin, 23 N. J. L. 484; State, Vail Prosecutor v. Bentley, 23 N. J. L. 532; Worth v. Ashe County, 82 N. C. 420, 33 Am. Rep. 692; Worthington v. Sebastian, 25 Ohio St. 1; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 28, 38 Am. Rep. 547; Lander v. Burke, 65 Ohio St. 532, 63 N. E. 69; McKeen v. Northampton County, 49 Pa. 519, 88 Am. Dec. 515; Dyer v. Osborne, 11 R. I. 321, 23 Am. Rep. 460; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490; Nashville v. Thomas, 5 Coldw. 600; Whitesell v. Northampton County, 49 Pa. 526.

The Supreme Court of the United States has laid down the same rule, the constitutionality of the tax law, however, not being put in issue.

Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 195 U. S. 219, 49 L. ed. 167, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Darnell v. Indiana, 226 U. S. 390, 57 L. ed. 267, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

The plaintiff's contention implies a broader rule as to the taxation of tangible property than the decisions of this court warrant. The plaintiff apparently deduces his rule from the decisions of this court in cases like Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; but the decision in this case has been explained and the correct rule stated by Mr. Justice Lurton in the case of Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 56 L. ed. 96, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

Digitized by Google

As a general rule, in the absence of a situs elsewhere, the domicil of the owner is the place where personalty is taxable.

Gromer v. Standard Dredging Co. 224 U. S. 362, 376, 56 L. ed. 801, 807, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189.

In order to obtain a taxable situs in a jurisdiction other than that of the domicil of its owner tangible personal property must have become "commingled" or "intermingled" with the property of the taxing authority, or "permanently located there" or "incorporated in" the local property of such other jurisdiction.

Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 Ann. Cas. 1100; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 56 L. ed. 96, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

There seems to be no distinction between tangible and intangible personal property; both follow the domicil of the owner, except that in some cases tangible personal property has obtained a permanent situs in some other state by reason of its having become "commingled" or "intermingled" with the property of such other state.

Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 68, 69, 56 L. ed. 96, 98, 99, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

The property taxed in the case at bar is shares of the capital stock of foreign corporations.

New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265, 277, 30 L. ed. 411, 415, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 205, 50 L. ed. 150, 154, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 731, 47 L. ed. 669, 672, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 129, 136, 29 L. ed. 830, 832, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014; Dyer v. Osborne, 11 R. I. 321, 23 Am. Rep. 460; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 35, 38 Am. Rep. 547.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, a resident of the city of Malden, brought this action to recover the amount of certain taxes which he had paid under protest. The taxes were assessed upon shares which he held in foreign corporations most of which did no business and had no property within the state of Massachusetts. It was alleged that the levy and collection were in violation of the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment. Demurrer to the declaration was sustained by the superior court, and the case was reported to the supreme judicial court of the commonwealth, which directed judgment for the defendant. 204 Mass. 138, 90 N. E. 415.

It is conceded that the objection that the statute authorizing the tax (Rev. Laws [Mass.] chap. 12, §§ 2, 4 23) denies to the plaintiff in error the equal protection of the [9] laws is not well taken; but it is contended that the shares were not within the jurisdiction of the state, and hence that the enforcement of the tax constitutes an unconstitutional deprivation of property.

The power thus challenged, as the state court points out, has been continuously exercised by the state of Massachusetts for more than three quarters of a century. Substantially the same statutory provision, derived from an earlier enactment, is found in Rev. Stat. (Mass.) chap. 7, § 4, and its constitutionality has been sustained by repeated state decisions. Great Barrington v. Berkshire County, 16 Pick. 572; Dwight v. Boston, 12 Allen, 316, 90 Am. Dec. 149; Frothingham v. Shaw, 175 Mass. 59, 61, 78 Am. St. Rep. 475, 55 N. E. 623. And other states through a long period of years have asserted a similar authority. Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. 490; McKeen v. Northampton County, 49 Pa. 519, 88 Am. Dec. 515; Whitesell v. Northampton County, 49 Pa. 526; State, Fish, Prosecutor, v. Branin, 23 N. J. L. 484; State, Vail, Prosecutor, v. Bentley, 23 N. J. L. 532; Worthington v. Sebastian, 25 Ohio St. 1; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 28, 38 Am. Rep. 547; Dyer v. Osborne, 11 R. I. 321, 23 Am. Rep. 460; Seward v. Rising Sun, 79 Ind. 351; Ogden v. St. Joseph, 90 Mo. 522, 3 S. W. 25; Worth v. Ashe County, 90 N. C. 409; Jennings v. Com. 98 Va. 80, 34 S. E. 981; Appeal Tax Ct. v. Gill, 50 Md. 377; State v. Nelson, 107 Minn. 319, 119 N. W. 1058; Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 126 Mich. 22, 60 L.R.A. 321, 86 Am. St. Rep. 524, 85 N. W. 307; State v. Kidd, 125 Ala. 413, 28 So. 480; Com. v. Lovell, 125 Ky. 491, 101 S. W. 970; Stanford v. San Francisco, 131 Cal. 34, 63 Pac. 145; Judy v. Beckwith, 137 Iowa, 24, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 142, 114 N. W. 565, 15 Ann. Cas. 890; Greenleaf v. Morgan County, 184 Ill. 226, 75 Am. St. Rep. 168, 56 N. E. 295. It is well settled that the property of the shareholders in their respective shares is distinct from the corporate property, franchises and capital stock, and may be separately taxed (Van Allen v. Assessors [Churchill v. Utica] 3 Wall. 573, 584, 18 L. ed. 229, 234; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 687, 24 L. ed. 558, 560; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 129, 136, 137, 29 L. ed. 830, 832, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; New Orleans v. Houston, 119 U. S. 265, 277, 30 L. ed. 411, 415, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198); and the rulings in the state cases which we have [10] cited proceed upon the view that shares are personal property, and, having no situs elsewhere, are taxable by the state of the owner's domicil, whether the corporations be foreign or domestic.

Digitized by Google

It is said that the question of the constitutional validity of such taxation has not hitherto been raised definitely in this court and has not been directly passed upon. There is no doubt, however, that the existence of the state authority has invariably been assumed. In Sturges v. Carter, 114 U. S. 511, 29 L. ed. 240, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1014, the action was brought to recover taxes imposed under the law of Ohio upon shares of stock owned by a resident of Ohio in the Western Union Telegraph Company, a New York corporation. The right of the state to tax the shares was not questioned, and as it was found that a statutory exemption which was relied upon in defense did not apply, the recovery of the tax was sustained. Again, in Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401, it was not disputed that the state was entitled to tax shares owned by its citizens in foreign corporations. The argument was that the statute in that case created an unconstitutional discrimination, and this point being found to be without merit, the tax was upheld. In Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 195 U. S. 219, 49 L. ed. 167, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16, the question was whether shares of stock in a railroad corporation of another state which were owned by a Georgia corporation, were taxable under the Constitution and laws of Georgia. The state's power to tax the shares was not denied, so far as the Constitution of the United States was concerned, but it was contended that this power had not been exercised. The Constitution of Georgia provided that all taxation should "be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and ad valorem on all property subject to be taxed within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax," and should be levied and collected under general laws. The general tax act had authorized a tax on all of the taxable property of the state. It was clear that the [11] state had directed shares in foreign corporations to be taxed, provided these could be considered to be "property subject to be taxed within the territorial limits" of the taxing authority. And such shares, when held by a resident, being deemed to fall within this description, it was decided that the state officer was entitled to collect the tax. "Putting the case at the lowest," said the court, "the above-cited section of the Constitution was adopted in the interest of the state as a tax collector, and authorizes, if it does not require, a tax on the stock." So, also, in Darnell v. Indiana, 226 U. S. 390, 57 L. ed. 267, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120, the authority of the state to tax the shares of its citizens in foreign corporations was recognized, the tax being sustained against objections urged under the commerce clause, art. I., § 8, and the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

To support the contention that this familiar state action, hitherto assumed to be valid, is fundamentally violative of the Federal Constitution, the plaintiff in error invokes the doctrine that a state has no right to tax the property of its citizens when it is permanently located in another jurisdiction. Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493. But these decisions did not involve the question of the taxation of intangible personal property (Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, supra, p. 211); nor do they apply to tangible personal property which, although physically outside the state of the owner's domicil, has not acquired an actual situs elsewhere. Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 68, 56 L. ed. 96, 98, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13. When we are dealing with the intangible interest of the shareholder, there is manifestly no question of physical situs, so far as this distinct property right is concerned, and the jurisdiction to tax it is not dependent upon the location of the lands and chattels of the corporation.

[12] The argument, necessarily, is that shares are to be deemed to be taxable solely in the state of incorporation. It is urged that these rights rest in franchise, and that the principle of the decision in Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, supra, holding that a ferry franchise granted by Indiana to a Kentucky corporation was not taxable in Kentucky, is applicable to shares of stock. But that case went upon the ground that the franchise was an incorporeal hereditament, and hence had its legal situs in Indiana, id. p. 398. Shares fall within a different category. While the shareholder's rights are those of a member of the corporation entitled to have the corporate enterprise conducted in accordance with its charter, they are still in the nature of contract rights or choses in action. Morawetz,

Digitized by Google

Priv. Corp. § 225. As such, in the absence of legislation prescribing a different rule, they are appropriately related to the person of the owner, and, being held by him at his domicil, constitute property with respect to which he is under obligation to contribute to the support of the government whose protection he enjoys. Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558; Bonaparte v. Appeal Tax Ct. 104 U. S. 592, 26 L. ed. 845; Covington v. First Nat. Bank, 198 U. S. 100, 111, 112. 49 L. ed. 963, 968, 969, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 562; Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, supra; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 26.

Undoubtedly, the state in which a corporation is organized may provide, in creating it, for the taxation in that state of all its shares, whether owned by residents or nonresidents. Corry v. Baltimore, 196 U. S. 466, 49 L. ed. 556, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297. This is by virtue of the authority of the creating state to determine the basis of organization and the liabilities of shareholders. Id, pp. 476, 477; Hannis Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 216 U. S. 285, 293, 294, 54 L. ed. 482, 485, 486, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326. So, by reason of its dominant power to provide for the organization and conduct of national banks, Congress has fixed the places at which alone shares in those institutions may be taxed. Rev. Stat. § 5219, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502. Whether, in the case of corporations organized [13] under state laws, a provision by the state of incorporation, fixing the situs of shares for the purpose of taxation, by whomever owned, would exclude the taxation of the shares by other states in which their owners reside, is a question which does not arise upon this record and need not be decided. No such provision is here involved, and the present case must be determined by the application of the established principle which has been stated.

The real ground of complaint in this class of cases is not that the shares are taxed in one place rather than in another, but that they are taxed at all, when presumably the property and franchises of the corporation which give to the shares their value are also taxed. As to this we may repeat what was said in Kidd v. Alabama, supra: "No doubt it would be a great advantage to the country and to the individual states if principles of taxation could be agreed upon which did not conflict with each other, and a common scheme could be adopted by which taxation of substantially the same property in two jurisdictions could be avoided. But the Constitution of the United States does not go so far."

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

[14] WILLIAM N. BARRETT, as President of the Adams Express Company, etc., Appt.,

v.

CITY OF NEW YORK et al. (No. 83.)

CITY OF NEW YORK et al., Appts.,

v.

WILLIAM N. BARRETT, as President of the Adams Express Company, etc. (No. 84.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 14-35.)

Commerce — municipal license of express companies — application to interstate business.

